Over in the house, while the senate was having all this undignified pow wow, the members were having all sorts of fun, the principal cause of which was the proposed registration of lobbyists. The famous Gridiron club of Washington had nothing on the house of representatives when this bill was reported out. Amendments by the score, each one more ridiculous than its predecessor, were hung on the bill by unanimous vote, and when Charlie Pierce, veteran clerk of the house, pleaded against cluttering up his journal with the mass of nonsense, the house unmercifully and unanimously voted a resounding "No." The matter was finally settled however on motion of Representative Chas. Culver of Wayne, by moving that further consideration be indefinitely postponed. So it dies in peace and John Lovett won't lose his pelt.

The governor's proposed new contract with the Grand Trunk railroad on the removal of its tracks through Birmingham territory came up for the consideration of the legislature Thursday afternoon when Representative John Espie introduced house bill No. 499, authorizing the governor to contract with the road for the surrender of its special charter and for a change in its right of way in Oakland county. With the rushing through of this important measure it is thought the work of the session may possibly be completed within the next two weeks. In fact a tentative agreement has been made for adjournment May 13, but this has not been agreed upon as a definite date by either house.

The deficiency bill, announced some time ago, was introduced in the senate Monday night by Senator C. Quinlan of Grand Rapids, chairman of the finance committee. It calls for a total of $4,660,072. It is estimated this amout will put all the state institutional funds on a working bnsis and allow the balancing of books long in the red. The largest single item is $1,334,410 for the state prison.

Governor Green, in vetoing the item providing for $5.00 per day expense money for the state legislators, admitted that the pay was shamefully insufficient, but that the proposed method of raising was illegal. He advised submitting an amendment to the people of the

STEAMERS WILL RUN AS USUAL

OPENING SEASON SCHEDULED FOR MAY FIFTEENTH

Manitou and Puritan Will Be Operated on Their Old Schedule Under New Management

The passing of the long established Michigan Transit Company was marked last week by the sale of the steamers, Manitou and Puritan, crack ships of the line under the hammer of United States Marshal Martin Brown of Grand Rapids district at Manistee.

The Central Trust Company of Chicago, which held a quantity of the Transit Company's bonds, was successful bidder for the Manitou, their offer being $175,000. R. Floyd Clinch, holder of a claim against the defuncted organization for coal supplied, secured the Puritan at a figure of $102,000. Mr. Clinch is a director of the Central Trust Company of Chicago, an official of the Cleary-Clinch Coal Company of Chicago and president of the Traverse State Bank.

Besides the price they paid, the purchasers of the two boats must assume $35,000 of outstanding prefered claims against the vessels.

The purchasers announce that the boats will be fitted out at once and probably will start the 1927 season about May 15th, operating between Chicago and Northern Michigan ports, as in previous seasons. Both freight and passengers will be carried. Places served will include Ludington, Manistee, Portage Lake, Charlevoix, Traverse City and Harbor Springs.

It is hinted that the newly formed transportation company will co-operate with the Manistee and Northeastern Railway, this prediction being based on the fact that Louis R. Schraeder, Vice President of the Central Trust Company, is a stockholder in the railroad company and probably will be elected as one of its officials, following its proposed reorganization.

In discussing the purchase of the two steamers, Mr. Clinch, who spends his summers in the north, expressed his confidence in the prosperity of the region and predicted a good 1927 season.

BRADY BUILDING NEW SPEED BOAT

Expect New Craft to Hang Up New Speed Records

M. Roy Braidy has started work on 17 foot 151 cu. inch class hydroplane for C. F. Carter of Danville, Ill.

The boat, which is an exact duplicate of Boots II, by Waugh Brothers of Peoria, Illinois, is designed by Finley Bailey, also of Peoria. The hull is all brass and copper fastened for salt water sailing and construction is of spruce and white pine. She will be powered by a special motor developing 150 h. p., which was designed and built by Mr. Carter and it is expected she will make between 50 and 60 miles an hour.

The boat will be shipped to Danville upon completion.

A musical program will be given by the P. T. A. ways and means committee, on Wednesday evening, May 18, in the high school building. Proceeds will be used to buy uniforms for the high school band.—Adv 18tl.

Capt. Roen Left Tuesday for Montreal to Bring Steamer Craycroft to Local Waters

Capt. John Roen, who has been in the city for the past few days attending to business matters, left Tuesday afternoon for Montreal, Canada, where he will take charge of his new boat, the Craycroft, a recent addition to his fleet.

The new craft, which will make Charlevoix her home port, was built at Ecore, Michigan, in 1918 for the government and was in charge of the shipping board during the war and later put up for sale to private parties. She is 253 ft. 6 inches in length, 43 ft. 6 inches wide, 20 ft. 2 inches depth, with a gross tonnage of 2232 and net tonnage of 1358. She is powered with a 1240 h. p. triple expansion engine.

The ship left Norfolk, Va., where she was placed in commission under the direction of Capt. Roen, on May 19th, in charge of a Capt. Davis, stopping at Philadelphia, and left there April 28th for Montreal, Canada, where the new owner will take charge. She will be brought through the Great Lakes to Milwaukee and Green Bay, Wisconsin, where a load of sugar consigned to those ports will be unloaded. From there the boat will be taken to Muskegon, where two large derricks for loading and unloading gravel will be installed. Capt. Roen states that he has a full season's work ahead of him hauling sand and gravel from South Fox Island to Muskegon and other West Michigan coast ports for road work.

At present the boat has a crew of eighteen men. Ole Jacobson, who was on the J. B. John last season is 1st mate, and Peter Gallagher, 2nd mate. Other Charlevoix members of the crew are Bill Bonk, Knute Svendhal, Jim Genia and Philip Naquam, and Capt. Roen stated that men from the eastern states will be replaced by local men in the near future. He also stated that he had chartered the steel barge, June, from her Chicago owners and will use her to haul cement from Petoskey to the Sloan road job near Muskegon. The boat will be in charge of Allie Ward and Peter Bakke. The steamer, Marquis Roen and convoy, Interlocken, will be in charge of Albert LaBlanc, with Henry Isakksen as chief engineer. she will be used to haul lumber, pulp wood, etc. in northern waters this season.

We extend our congratulations to Capt. Roen, whose business in the past few years has grown rapidly. His present fleet of boats, which will make Charlevoix their home port, represent a large investment and will be a great asset to the town, inasmuch as most members of his crews will make this city their home.

HOUGHTON LAKE TO ENTERTAIN M. P. A.

Resort and Cottages to be Used by Visiting Scribes

Officials of the Michigan Press Association, which was entertained last summer at Harbor Springs on its annual outing-convention, are planning a similar meet for 1927 to be held at Houghton Lake, 128 miles north of Lansing on M-14, on June 16, 17, 18 and 19.

Several weeks ago, the committee on the summer outing consisting of Messrs. L. W. Feighner, H. T. Johnson, D. E. Mathoson, Paul McDonald and O. P. Schuman, went to Houghton Lake and were much surprised with what they found there. They were entertained at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson at their new resort, "Houghton Lake Forest." This project, which was opened for development last year, comprises 1,500 acres of land with two and a half miles of lake frontage.

Their hotel, "Grand View Lodge," of rustic design, both within and without, and equipped with rustic furnishings, is completed and there are 20 cottages with every convenience. There is also a "rustic" dance palace, of log cabin type, 104 x 118 feet in dimension, considered to be one of the finest of its kind in Northern Michigan. This resort is to be turned over to the Michigan Press Association during their stay, including faculties for boating, golfing, tennis playing, trap-shooting, horseback riding, fishing, dancing, etc.

Red Crown Ethyl Puts New Thrill in Driving

Whether you are a city driver, making frequent stops, or a country driver, touring the highways with infrequent stops, RED CROWN ETHYL comes as a boon and a blessing—it "knocks out that knock".

Highways Invite You

1—Northern Forest Park, Wisconsin, located on Highways 10, 26 and 32. Within its 70,000 acres of state owned land are forty-two lakes. Here are old pines scarred with Indian hatchets where the Red men obtained pitch for the cementing of their canoes, and thickets which have probably never been penetrated except by wild game.

2—Scott Field near Belleville, Illinois, on State Highway 13. America's greatest air ship port covering over 600 acres of land. The Scott Field Hangar is three city blocks in length, nearly a block wide and as high as a sixteen story building.

3—Scenic State Park, Minnesota. 1632 acres of virgin pine forest surrounding Sand Lake and Coon Lakes North of Big Fork on State Highway 61.

4—Mt. Clemens, Michigan, known throughout America as the bath city, where 30,000 people sojourn annually to take advantage of the remarkable mineral water baths. State Highway 19.

5—Caruthersville, in the southeastern section of Missouri. Atmosphere of the south—vast fields of snow white cotton—cotton pickers—the rustling of the "gins" as they separate the seed and bale the short staple cotton. Lofty spreading pecan and walnut trees laden with green fruits. Groves of cottonwood. State Highway 84.

6—The Turtle Mountains, ten miles north of Bottineau, North Dakota. Hundreds of wooded lakes ideal for camping and fishing. State Highway 5.

7—Uncle Sam's largest manufacturing Arsenal, located on an island in the center of the Mississippi between Davenport, Iowa, Rock Island and Moline, Illinois. Only inland arsenal in the United States, representing an investment of $350,000,000. One of the finest golf courses in the country. U. S. Highway 52.

8—The Roundup at Belle Fourche, South Dakota, held during the week of July 4th. A fine exhibition of horsemanship—rounding up the cattle for cutting out, dividing and shipping to market. This noted roundup or rodeo attracts people from many states. U. S. Highways 16 and 85.

9—Tippecanoe Battlefield, in the southern end of the town of Battleground, Indiana. Reached by the River Road, running north from Lafayette.

10—Pyramids and Sphinx, near Oakley, Kansas, on State Highway 40. These great natural wonders rise from the level prairie in the shape of great sandstone rocks. One of them bears a startling resemblance to the famous Sphinx of Egypt. The fact that there is such a similarity between the ancient Egyptian tombs and these sandstone rocks on the windswept Kansas plains makes them of great interest to the tourist.

Soils, Fertilizer, Legume Champaign Next Week

During the week of May 9-13, specialists from the Mich. State College will be in this county cooperating with your county agent in putting on an intensive Soils-Fertilizer-Alfalfa Campaign. The meetings will be held in barns and will be informal discussions in which tried and proven methods in soil improvement and alfalfa growing will be emphasized.

Your success depends first of all on the fertility of the land you work. Are you keeping it up? Learn the most effective ways of doing it. Are you using fertilizer? Are you buying the right kinds and applying the proper quantity? Should you use lime? Do you know what it will do to your land?

Are you sure that you have enough alfalfa and sweet clover? These meetings are the most important and beneficial to be held this year. Plan on attending your nearest meeting. Read the following schedule closely:

The RECLUSE of FIFTH AVENUE

by WYNDHAM MARTYN

COPYRIGHT in the UNITED STATES W.N.U. SERVICE

INTRODUCTORY

For many years Sneed, faithful butler to Peter Milman, in the quaint old mansion on lower Fifth avenue, had watched his employer go through all the city's daily papers and carefully clip items and news articles. Later these clippings would be arranged systematically with thousands of others held in the library in steel-lined drawers, securely locked. Sneed and Milman had grown old together. Each was dependent upon the other and apparently as much a part of a past generation as the old house in which they lived was representative of the former aristocracy of its section of the city.

Sneed wondered why his employer, who had withdrawn from the world and seemed to live only among his books, pictures and fine collection of antique objects of art, should have been so eager to keep in touch with active affairs through the newspapers. Had the butler realized the careful and thorough system of Milman's work, he would have known those clippings represented a more complete bureau of the lives, histories, crimes and other statistics of a majority of the citizens of Manhattan island than could have been found within the archives of the police department or any professional detective agency.

The fact is that Peter Milman, gentleman and scholarly recluse, was better equipped for real detective work than almost any other man in the city; so that when his closest friend was ruined and his own fortune about to suffer wreck through the machinations of a man high in the politics and financial affairs of New York, he knew just what course to pursue against the enemy. The favorableness of Milman's position was enhanced by the fact that, to the few of the modern generation who knew him, he was regarded as an eccentric, almost a hermit and about the least dangerous of any individual who could have been found in the metropolis' vast hordes. His strength really existed in his apparent weakness. This is a new and very agreeable sort of mystery story.

CHAPTER I

It was characteristic of Peter Milman that he should bear the shock of the second of his life's tragedies with no visible symptom of emotion.

The first of these blows had been dealt him twenty-five years before. He had suffered it in his same richly furnished room of his house in Lower Fifth avenue. Sneed, the butler, who had just handed him the morning papers, had brought him—a quarter of a century ago—the letter in which his wife told him she had gone away and would not return.

The second blow swept away his comfortable fortune. At fifty, without near relatives and long estranged from old friends, Peter Milman would be compelled to move from the house in which he had been born—the house where he hoped to die—to mix with the world he had forgotten, among people he had grown to mistrust.

The three morning papers Sneed placed before him, although they varied somewhat in their telling of Hazen Brewer's failure, had substantially the same account of it.

Brewer's liabilities were fifteen million dollars. His assets were given as less than five thousand dollars. Somewhere, sandwiched among these vast debts, was Peter Milman's modest million.

The butler, sensing ill news from the hastily read captions, grew relieved when he saw his employer take out his pocket-scissors and begin to clip such extracts from the papers as interested him. Later these clippings would be arranged systematically with the thousands of others which during long years Milman had gathered. In the library, steel-lined drawers, carefully locked, held the harvest of these gleanings.

At three o'clock Peter Milman came down the stairs and selected a cane. He was dressed as though he were going to pay an afternoon call. He was one of those slight, small-boned men so often seen in the dwindling families of races near extinction. His smartly cut coat, his immaculate silk hat and distinguished cane made him seem, from a rear view, a boyish figure. It was when one saw the pale lined face, the tired eyes, and the thin supercilious mouth, that one realized this was a man to whom the world has long since seemed empty vanity. On the whole, Peter Milman presented the appearance of one to whom familiarity would be distasteful and friendship the slow growth of years.

He was on his way to see his lawyer and find out how he stood financially. He felt almost certain that he had fallen with Hazen Brewer. Not for more than twenty years had Peter Milman been so much disturbed. Ruin meant giving up his home. The idea was intolerable.

He entered the private office of Herman Loddon as one assured of his position and certain of his welcome. Assuredly Loddon, who owed so much to the Milmans, would be able to supply him with the information he desired.

The first direct intimation of the difference between a millionaire and a poor man was given him as he entered Loddon's room. Loddon remained seated. Hitherto he had risen clumsily in his feet at sight of his distinguished client and with awkward gestures motioned him to the seat of honor. And his face had been wreathed with smiles. For the first time Peter Milman saw the man Herman Loddon as he really was. Loddon hated him, and had always hated him. There could be no other explanation of his lack of courtesy and the sneering smile with which he greeted his client. For a quarter-century he had worn a disarming smile—Hazen Brewer's failure had swept away the necessity for using it any more. Things, then, were desperate.

Milman's manner was still as loftily courteous as ever.

"I hope you have been able to find out the extent of Mr. Brewer's misfortunes," he said.

"Misfortunes!" Loddon cried. "His crimes, you mean."

"I am not asking you to prejudge my friend," Peter Milman said quietly. "I want to know if the morning papers are correct in stating that his entire fortune has disappeared."

"They are," Loddon answered with an appearance of satisfaction, "and as you wouldn't take my advice about your investments, your money has gone too. I tell you, Milman, you've only got what I prophesied a million times."

Milman! Never before had Herman Loddon presumed so much. Loddon's father had been the Milman coachman at their country place at Hastings years before. When he had been killed in a runaway accident, Peter Milman, the elder, had taken charge of the son's education and had eventually set him up in practice and given him his first case.

"Then nothing is left?" Milman asked.

"Not a cent. You're luckier than Brewer is, because you've got a valuable lot on Fifth avenue, and there are fifty men waiting to make you an offer for it and put a big building where that mausoleum of yours stands."

"Have You Always Hated Me, Loddon?"

Milman said nothing. He allowed Loddon's sneer at his home to pass. Loddon did not know that, when Hazen Brewer incurred the enmity of great financial interests, and was so hardly pressed for money, he had come by night to Milman and begged in utter desperation for a loan. It was Hazen Brewer who had arranged the mortgage on the Milman home. It was Brewer alone who had profited by the affair. And this mortgage was shortly to fall due, and there was no money to pay it.

Peter Milman could have sold the house and had retired to some other place in relative comfort until the end of his life had he been less obstinately desirous of remaining where he had been born.

"You can't stay there, if that's what you're trying to figure out," Loddon said brutally. "The taxes are heavy and you have some outstanding debts. My account, for instance. Sell it and live in Italy is my advice." He yawned suddenly.

Peter Milman's question to send his red face a deeper hue.

"Have you always hated me, Loddon?"

The lawyer did not answer immediately. His hate of his was a complex thing, less the result of a great injury than of a thousand cuts. He were still a part of his life. It is true that he had dined many times in the Milman house, but his wife had never been asked there. He came to understand in the end that he was asked because Peter Milman found it a less tedious business than going to Loddon's office.

It was this fancied slight to his wife which most angered the lawyer. She was a social climber, and the magic of the Milman name was a tradition in New York. Her husband, ashamed of his obscure origin, had claimed to have been at school with Peter Milman, and Mrs. Loddon felt that, were he to insist, she could be a guest in the envied home.

Loddon hated Milman because, despite his unwise boasting, he knew he had never convinced Milman of his importance.

"Always," he said slowly, with a rush of relief at being at last able to voice his emotions. "Yes, I hated you when my father drove you to school and I couldn't get either inside with you or on the box with him. I've hated you for your friends and the way you've expected me to come when you felt like calling." Loddon laughed sneeringly. "But that's all done with. I'm on top and only pity you now."

"I think I prefer the former emotion," Milman murmured.

"In future," Loddon said majestically, "I shall have too many big things to attend to to have time for you. I'll turn your affairs over to my managing clerk."

"Thank you," Milman said, rising. "I shall not come again. Send in your bill at once. You have been loyal to our interests, and that is why we employed you." Peter Milman passed over the Loddon outburst of hate as though it had not ingrested him.

Herman Loddon watched him depart with the feeling that his triumph had not been as assured as he could have wished. He had won no look of fear or apprehension from the man he hated. Perhaps, after all, there was something about men like Milman different from him. Then the thought of his two millions reassured him and he hurried to the window and watched his former client cross the road. The great limousine opposite would presently take Herman Loddon to his lavishly appointed apartment, where he would dine largely. He pictured Milman's solitary and dismal meal. There would not be many more for him in the family home on Lower Fifth avenue. The Patrician age was gone.

Peter Milman reached his home without encountering anyone who knew him. Fashionable New York with her residences and clubs had long passed on her northward way. Those few houses which, like his own, were still owned by their builders' families, were mostly unoccupied save for a few weeks in the year. With these people Milman had now nothing in common. He had rejected their overtures. They spoke of him with pity, almost with contempt. A legend of eccentricity grew up about him and presently gave way to rumors of mental deterioration.

Sneed, who concerned himself greatly with the sudden change in his employer's habits, saw him return with obvious relief. Sneed had read the papers and realized the extent of Hazen Brewer's troubles. He wished he dared ask Mr. Milman if he, too, were badly hit. Peter Milman's face told him nothing. Nor was his customary manner changed.

"I am going over the upper rooms after luncheon," said Milman. "Please see that they are in order."

The upper rooms. It was in these spacious chambers that the old furniture was stored about which experts raved. The six rooms were arranged as a museum. Milman moved from piece to piece. Everything had its definite association. He stopped before an Eighteenth century card table covered with sealskin. On this table, in 1745, a Peter Milman had lost a thousand pounds on a cut of cards with a blue-blood of South Carolina. Those six chairs, called "banister-backed" by their creator, Heppelwhite, had been made to order for a Milman.

There was one room devoted to the Dutch furniture that had come to the Milmans from a marriage with a Van Sluyter heiress. Peter Milman bent down to look at a Dutch church stool which a Van Sluyter servant had carried to a place of worship two hundred years before. It was black in color, and on one side bore a picture of the Last Judgment and some appropriate verses.

"I don't read Dutch," Milman observed, "but I remembered the translation. Listen, Sneed. It may do you good."

"Certainly, sir," said Sneed respectfully.

"The Judgment of God is now prepared:
there is still time, leave unwisdom!
The pious will be separated from the wicked. God's wisdom encircles the Universe."

"Very true, Mr. Peter, sir," said Sneed. There was a look on his employer's face that he did not understand, something hard and ruthless.

"There are some of the wicked I should very much like to separate from the pious without waiting for post-mortem judgments. I am not sure that such an act would not be a logical way of acquiring merit. I take it, Sneed, that in your essence you are law-abiding?"

"Always," said Sneed with conscious rectitude. "In that respect, Mr. Peter, I'm like you."

"A very admirable frame of mind," said Milman.

Sneed had rarely known him command on any of the exhibits before. To day it seemed he had a word for everything.

"On this settle with folding candlestick," he observed, "Benjamin Milman fell asleep in the Revolutionary war and was captured by a red-coat major, who gave him liberty owing to his pretty skill on a six-string bass viol. The viol is in the next room. These three mahogany pieces," he said, pausing before a six-legged high case of drawers, "once belonged to the man whom Aaron Burr speaks of as my friend Hamilton whom I killed.'

"It was my intention to bequeath them to the Metropolitan." Milman frowned a little. "It will seem like breaking faith with the dead."

Sneed did not yet know that the man he served was insolvent and that all these relics which told so much of the Milman history must come under the hammer. "You can leave me," Milman said, after a pause. "I want to remain here some time."

At six o'clock Sneed ventured to disturb Peter Milman. During the hours he had passed downstairs Sneed thought he understood what his employer meant. He had put things together. He believed Peter Milman was cataloguing his treasures. Hazen Brewer's failure had been as complete as the evening papers proclaimed.

Peter Milman's manner vaguely disturbed his butler. There was a smile where usually mild cynicism reigned. Almost it seemed as if the sword which Milman held had imbued him with swashbuckling courage of that hard-drinking, roystering Oliver Milman who had been a notable figure in the Colonial wars.

"I am not sure," Peter Milman observed, "that man made a good exchange when he put aside the sword and depended upon law and its chicaneries."

Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly, is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

Dear Sir

We are great believers in long distance service, especially so during the winter months when our salesmen are unable to travel the territory on account of snow and ice, and, of course, the winter months are our big months, and without Long Distance service, we know our business would suffer materially.

During the time prices are changing, we can cover, at least, twenty-five customers out of town on the Long Distance 'phone, whereas if we were to depend upon personal calls, we would not be able to get in touch with even half this amount.

Yours very truly,
General Manager.

GOLD RESERVES

The gold reserves of note-issuing banks and of the government of the United States in 1913 were $1,931,361,000 and in 1923, $4,547,000,000. This increase of 136 per cent has created much adverse criticism both in the country and abroad. Similar figures for England, Holland, Spain, Norway, Sweden and Denmark all indicate a much larger percentage of increase, but the figures must be read in the light of the knowledge that in the United States much gold was earmarked for storage against the issue of gold certificates, while in England and Germany there was a large amount of gold in current circulation which has now been withdrawn and found lodgment in the banks.

The population of the United States during this period has increased much more rapidly than that of European countries and the gold reserves as now stated ran about $40 per head of population here as against $21 in Great Britain. When one takes into consideration the wide territory over which business is conducted in this country, with its effect on the rapidity of exchange, the high wages paid here (approximately over two and one-half times higher than in England) and the standard of our living (at least twice as high as in England), all of which makes a great demand for the use of money, it would seem that our stock of gold is not very much; after all, out of proportion to that held by other countries.

CO-OPERATE WITH YOUR WARDEN

Citizens are realizing more and more that the conservation department with its corps of wardens intends to persecute nobody, but is trying to benefit all, and if it were possible for all citizens to see the wardens in this light we would be taking a tremendous step forward in the interest of conservation. The Conservation department needs the co-operation of every citizen in the state. It needs the advise and suggestions of veteran sportsmen. It needs the confidence of the people.

Game wardens are not put into the field to see how many people they can arrest for law violation. In fact, a very small part of a warden's duties is centered around arrests. His big work is to watch the wild life of his district. To see if the partridge and other games are thriving. To report any new diseases so that this department may find a way of combating them. To watch angling conditions and to make various surveys that may effect game or fish. Local sportsman's organizations can be of great assistance to game wardens in the performance of their duties. Co-operate with the game wardens and you will be promoting the interests of conservation.

LEGION HELD ENTHUSIASTIC GATHERING

Boxing Matches, Cards and "Eats" Were Among Enjoyments

Leslie T. Shapton Post, American Legion, held a get-together meeting Tuesday evening in the Legion dugout for the purpose of enthusing old members and gaining new ones.

Three boxing bouts were pulled off in regulation style, followed by an hour of cards, after which a committee under the direction of Jim Earle served "eats."

There are thirty-six veterans in the post. Twenty-six were in attendance Tuesday night, which speaks well for the interest of local members in the high aims of the Legion in general. Two new members were elected, namely, Jules Wheeler or the Charlevoix coast guards, and Harry Hammond.

Adjutant Leon Atchison expressed himself as well pleased with the success of the Tuesday evening affair and plans further entertainment for the benefit of the Post.

Joel Johnston Extends Invitation to Visit His Farm Next Friday

Charlevoix flower lovers will have an opportunity on Friday of this week to learn more about the growing and culture of dahlias, according to Joel Johnston who has asked us to announce that on the above mentioned day he will welcome all visitors to his flower farm, located at Godbold's corner on the Petoskey road.

At this time he will answer all questions and show visitors how to separate roots and give other pointers on dahlia culture. The school of instruction will be free to all who care to attend and all interested are welcomed. Mr. Johnston has made the growing of this particular variety of flower a specialty for many years. During a trip south last winter he gathered some new and very rare dahlias and brought them here with him. A very interesting and profitable trip is in store for the one who avail themselves of visiting his farm Friday.

WILL BRING BANDS UNDER ONE LEADER

Better Results Looked For Under New Arrangement

Charlevoix city and high school bands will be brought under the direction of one leader if the plans now contemplated by the city council and city band members are carried through.

It has been felt by those connected and interested in the two organizations that this move would be necessary within a certain time. School students now playing in the high school band will eventually become members of the city organization, and it is thought that their continued instruction under the same leader would give better training and produce better results. We understand that John TerWee, present leader of the school band, is the likely candidate for the position.

PETER RABBIT OPERETTA LAST FRIDAY NIGHT

Youthful Entertainers Won Admiration of All Attending

One of the outstanding entertainments of the past week was the Peter Rabbit operetta, presented last Friday evening at the Palace Theater by children of the kindergarten, first and second grades under the direction of their teachers, Eleanor Finucan and Rocena Wilson.

The children taking part ranged in age from 5 to 7 years, with three of them being 8 years of age. The thoroughness with which they rendered their parts reflected much credit upon their instructors and won the admiration and applause of the packed house.

atate again and pledged his aid in aupport of the amendment. The aenate by unanimous vote, decided to approve the veto.

Among the appropriation bills, whieh aro slipping through on skids, is one which raises the restriction on the mill tax for maintenanee and operation of State college from an even million to $1,100,000, and this inerense of $100,000 is bndly needed by this rapidly growing institution. The Birkholm bill nppropriating $601,500 to the state sanitorium ut Howell passed the senate Monday night and goes to the governor. The Michigan College of Mines gets $521,000, by virtue of the Truettner bill, which now goes to the house for upproval. The senate also approved the Pulver bill appropriating $175,000 for improvements at the Pontiac state hospital, which was proposed early in the session to be junked.

The Okemos prison for women bobbed up again this week when Senator Thomas Read introduced a bill appropriating half a million for its construction.

The Pulver bill providing for establishment of a new psychopathie hospital at Ann Arbor was passed by the senate.

Governor Green has signed the increased compensation bill, which has been a bone of contention all through the session. It increases maximum compensation of disabled workmen from $14 to $18 per week.

The Wood bill, transferring regulation of finance companies from the state banking department to the state treasurer's office, passed the house by a vote of 70 to 18 and goes to the governor.

Names of Central, Western and Northern normal schools nre changed to "Teachers Colleges" under a bill which passed the house Monday.

Representative John Holland of Gogebic can take back home with him again this year his 8-hour bill, which has been his stock-in-trade for lo, these many years. The house Wednesday decided that if the representatives had to work day and night for a salary of $400 a year, the 8-hour day was a dead issue, and they buried it by a vote of 64 to 12.

The senate passed the Pulver bill removing the 35-mile speed limit on autos, outside of cities and villages. Also passed the Baxter bill, which is a bulky document aiming to revise all state laws in regard to traffic. In this bill is a provision which says that an automobile "Shall not move at a speed greater than that which will enable the driver to stop within the assured distance ahead," whatever that means. Guess it means the lid is off entirely.

After a bitter flight of two hours on the floor of the house Wednesday afternoon the Leland 3-cent gas tax bill, an administration measure, went down to defeat by a vote of 50 to 38. The vote was reconsidered and the bill was laid on the table, so that it is possible for it to be taken up again later in the session, if some compromise can be made. Credit for defeat of the measure is laid at the door of the farm bureau, but the defeat was made possible by represenatives from Wayne and other of the metropolitan districts joining with the so-called "farm bloc" in an adverse vote on the measure. Governor Green says it will mean that but little new highway contruction can be done during the coming two years, but many of those who helped to kill the measure claim there will be quite a bit of new construction possible. City members, led by Representative Dykstra of Grand Rapids, succeeded in having the bill amended to grant cities $2,000 per mile for maintenance on trunk line streets, but what price an amendment to a bill that doesn't pass.

The Michigan State college appropriation bill for new buildings and improvements was passed by the house Thursday morning, the amount allowed being $1,114,250. The amount asked for was $2,595,933. Much of the proposed building program will neeessarily have to wait over until the session of 1929, but the most neeessary portion of the construction work can be undertaken. Rep. Walter J. Thomas of Benton Harbor offered a substitute bill allowing but $360,000 for building and improvements for the two years, but this bill aroused such a storm of protest that the bill was withdrawn by Mr. Thomas.

Senator Calvin Campbell of Indian River introduced a bill last week renewing the proposition for a fifth normal school to be located in the northern part of the lower peninsula. Immediately Senator Gansser of Bay City introduces a counter bill, asking for the repeal of the action of the legislature of 1925 making such another normal possible. Senator Gansser's proposition to repeal the whole business is said to have the approval of Governor Green, but almost every town north of Mt. Pleasant has hopes of landing the proposed school, hoping against hope, so there is likely to be some scrap over the two bills.

It is interesting to watch the incidental scraps occasionally stirred up in legislative circles and to discover how small a matter may cause a deuce of a row. Suggested by a committee reporting out a bill this week which makes possible a raise in salary to several state officials. The original proposition was for raises for the health commissioners, the the securities commissioner and the director of conservative commissioner. When the committee report was read it was discovered that the conservation commissioner had been cut out, but after some discussion, which brought out an extremely petty reason for ditching him, the committee restored him to the bill and peace again reigns, as far as Mr. Young is concerned.

Governor Green proposes the refunding of the state's outstanding war and state fair bonds and says a saving a a quarter million dollars can thus be made, because interest rates are now low. Bills to make the refunding possible have been introduced.

The superintendant of public instruction will continue to be elected by the voters of Michigan. The Senate Friday morning killed off the proposition to have him appointed by the state board of education.

Both houses will convene Monday afternoon, following the usual Friday morning adjournment.

"The Demi-Bride" A Snappy Comedy

Snappy farce comedy, said to be one of the best motion pictures of the season, is coming Tues-Wed. to the Palace Theatre. It is "The Demi-Bride," a Metro-Goldwin-Mayer feature and Norma Shearer's best starring vehicle. "The Demi-Bride" is the lovely Norma's first thing at farce. That she does it superbly is evidenced by the enthusiastic approval which is meeting the film throughout the country.

New Western Has Different Slant

John Wuters' talent runs to unique Westerns. He now offers one that is minus a single cowboy.

For the characters in "The Mysterious Rider," Paramount's latest Zane Grey picture coming to the Palace Theatre Sat.-Sun. are desert homesteaders, ranchers, not cowboys, and the film depicts the actual conditions among homesteaders trying to wrest a living from the orid wastes of the West. Although there is plenty of riding in the picture as the title suggests, it is not after cattle.

Dairyman Gains Much by Better Feeding Methods

That ground corn and ground oats make a dairy cow ration that is far superior to broken ear corn has been strikingly demonstrated in the case of one Knox county (Ill.) dairy herd, says C. S. Rhode, dairy extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, who has charge of the county dairy herd improvement associations in the state. The owner of this Knox county herd increased his profits $27.74 during one month by changing from a feed of broken ear corn to one of ground corn and ground oats. Fred Shipley, tester in the county herd improvement association, reported. With the change in the ration came an increase in the average production of each cow for the month of 100 pounds of milk and 6.7 pounds of butterfat.

The ration was improved both by grinding the corn and by adding the ground oats, Rhode explained. The benefits of grinding in this case are in line with the results of experimental work and the experiences of practical dairymen, according to Rhode. Dairy cows are hard working animals and they will give better results if such feeds as corn, oats and barley are given to them in the ground form, he added.

Twin Bulls Declared to Be Potent as Breeders

Will twin calves breed? This subject is often misunderstood. Twin bulls are as sure breeders as bulls of single birth and there is no reason to suspect failure to breed when a bull is twinned with another bull, says W. W. Swett of the Missouri College of Agriculture.

The same thing can be said of heifers that are twinned together. They are as sure to be breeders as any other heifers.

When a heifer and a bull are born together, the heifer is known as a free-martin. The bull, twinned with a heifer is as certain to be a breeder as a bull of single birth, but the free-martin heifer is almost sure to be sterile.

Only a very few free-martins have been known to breed, and the chances are very small that they will ever reproduce. As a rule it is not advisable to raise free-martin heifers as they usually result in failures and are worth no more than their beef value.

Effect of Big Storm

Dairymen who have kept milk records for a series of years well know the effect of a big storm on the producing herd. Invariably there is a severe shrink resulting from a cold, stormy winter period. To prevent this shrink requires some additional work on the part of the cow keeper. A herdsman who is able to prevent a shrink during a blizzard understands his business and deserves commendation, for he has proved that he is efficient in his work.

THE SOFT COAL STRIKE

There is little public interest in the soft coal strike, but that is often the case at the beginning of any strike. It is only when the public feels the direct pinch, or when violence comes that we all wake up to the sinister significance of strikes. Let us hope that this soft coal strike may have no serious ramifications It might be well, however for the indifferent to read the current news as expressed in dispatches from London which show that the British Government's fiscal year closed with a deficit of more than one hundred eighty million dollars. That deficit means that the Chancellor of the Exchequer will have to find additional revenue, which will undoubtedly will mean increased taxes. The British people are paying tremendous taxes and they are naturally shocked at the prospect of an increase. The great industrial depression, due to the strike, not only affected revenues seriously but have compelled heavy expenditures by the treasury. It was unionized labor which precipitated the general strike with an attempt to intimidate the entire government and people, by destroying the industries and the transportation of the entire nation. It was Russian money that continued the coal strike, causing not merely discomfort but enormous losses. It is a pitiable spectacle when hundreds of thousands of men presumably with intelligence are led to their own undoing by self-satisfied leaders. This is the sort of thing which may well be expected of unionism whenever it gets a foothold, and wherever a people are not sufficiently alert to prevent its growth and dominance. Let us not forget the English record in looking to the present so-called inconsequential strike. The inspiration and purpose is the same and the result would be identical if the people who are promoting this strike had the power to crucify a nation. Every strike means economic loss and every strike is paid for by the whole people. There are few if any strikes today that are brought about because of the injustice of the employer. Union labor, politics and personal greed of leadership are back of most of them. It is like a contagious disease which should be localized and stamped out.

"So I've heard, Mr. Peter, sir," Sneed returned, understanding nothing.

"I was not aware the view was so generally accepted," said his employer. "The man who owned this literally carved his way to fortune. He had fought in Europe before he came here. His God-fearing brother, my own ancestor, disowned him publicly in church on Christmas Sunday and lost all his cattle and barns by lightning the next summer. I have always had a sneaking fondness for Captain Oliver."

Sneed followed his master down the broad stairs. The butler regarded himself as a built-in feature of the mansion. He knew that to seek work in the bustling world outside, would be repellent and bewildering. He realized that Peter Milman and he were two lonely, friendless men. And they had lost their home because one of them had trusted implicitly in Hazen Brewer. What a price to pay for friendship, Sneed mused unhappily.

He did not understand how it was the other seemed in no way depressed. Sneed was not to know that Captain Oliver's shade had whispered courage into the ear of the last of the Milmans.

CHAPTER II

At ten o'clock on the following morning, Peter Milman entered the offices of a firm of lawyers which had transacted the private business of Hazen Brewer. Henry Payne, the head of the firm, looked troubled when Milman's card was brought in. The interview would not be pleasant for either of them.

"I came," Milman began in his urbane manner, "to find out, if possible, the extent of Mr. Brewer's losses. I might have called up Hazen, but in a moment like this he has worries enough."

"I hope Mr. Brewer is not worrying now."

"Then things are not as bad as they seemed?" Milman's heart pounded as he said it.

"Worse. I've bad news for you, Mr. Milman. Poor Hazen Brewer committed suicide in the early hours of this morning. I suppose when he saw there was left nothing but liabilities, his mind gave way."

Payne wished he could discover from Milman's expression how much or little this news meant to him. But Milman had too much control of himself to allow any man to see how stricken he was.

"Poor Hazen," he murmured. "He was one of my oldest and best friends."

A curious tribute, thought the lawyer, to one whose speculations had ruined him. But perhaps the other did not yet realize to what an extent his private fortune was involved.

"The mortgage on my house," Milman began, "I suppose it will be foreclosed?"

"I'm afraid so. There will be a meeting of his creditors within a day or so. If I can act for you in any way, I shall be only too glad to do so."

"You are very kind," said Peter Milman courteously. He shook Mr. Payne's hand and left.

"A thoroughbred," murmured the lawyer, who had seen many distinguished men listen to bad news in this office. "Poor devil, wiped out absolutely!"

Before going home, Peter Milman took his way to an agency which specialized in French domestic help of the better sort.

"I want," he said to the woman at the desk, "a French butler who will do the entire work of a house in which only a few of the rooms are occupied. A woman comes in by the day to clean the place and the windows, and the furnace is attended to."

"I think I can suit you," she said, and turned to a card index.

"Wait," said the other. "There are other necessary qualifications. He must be a good plain cook and know no English."

"That makes it easier," she said. "I have a man with very good references who could fill the bill. He came over in the last quota. If you could wait a few minutes, I could arrange to have you meet him."

Achille Lutry was forty-seven, rather terrified with the size and noise of New York, and anxious to begin to save money so that he might return to Amiens and establish a restaurant. The wages he was offered seemed marvelous. The restrictions seemed no burden to him. He had no friends to ask into the house, and the little leisure he was allowed made the saving of his wages certain. He was to report at the house on Lower Fifth avenue tomorrow at noon.

That night at dinner the estimable Sneed noted a certain unusual nervousness in his master's manner. The old butler did not dream of the ill fortune that awaited him.

"You May Regard Him as a Temporary Expedient."

"Sneed," Peter Milman began, when the coffee had been poured out, "my future household arrangements will be on a different scale from what they have been of late. You have been a faithful servant to me for many years. I am not likely to find your equal. In lieu of notice I shall give you six months' wages. I shall be glad if you will leave before luncheon tomorrow."

"Oh, Mr. Peter, sir," Sneed wailed, "what have I done to be treated like this?"

"Nothing. If I had my way, I should never let you go. You cannot understand how sorry I am. But the thing is inevitable. There are matters which you must not ask me to explain. This is one of them."

"Let me stay," Sneed begged. "I don't want wages. I can do the work we pay that woman for, and tending the furnace is good exercise. This is my home, too, sir."

"Sneed," said the other kindly, "if I tell you that by remaining here you will embarrass me and imperil certain plans I have determined on, will you still want to stay?"

"I'd do anything for you, Mr. Peter," he said brokenly.

"I knew you would. I will say this: If, by any turn of the wheel, things become better, I will have you back."

"The papers say nothing is left," Sneed returned dismally.

"If the papers were always correct, this would be a direful world."

Sneed looked into the face of a Peter Milman he did not know, and he had believed he knew his employer in every mood. It seemed to the butler he had discovered a new personality, somehow more ruthless, harder, bitterer.

MOTHERS' DAY NEXT SUNDAY

TO BE OBSERVED IN EVERY STATE IN THE UNION

Give Your Mother an Opportunity to Open a Box of Flowers on This Great Day

The arrival of this newcomer, Mothers' Day, in the calender of our national festival is significant. That a day so rich in sentiment should be officially adopted in a country which scoffs at sentiment is a hopeful sign, it reveals beneath the crust of commercialism a perennial spring of idealism.

In May 1907, Miss Anna Jarvis was asked by a group of Philadelphians to organize a memorial observance in that city. The request came to her by coincidence on the anniversary of her mother's death. As her plans went forward she called upon certain influential citizens for aid in publishing the observance of an annual mothers' day, with the result that individuals, communities, states, and finally the nation were prevailed upon to set aside the second Sunday of May of each year to be observed as Mother's Day. Pennsylvania was first, it's officinl observance occuring on May 8th 1913.

State after state followed the lead of Pennslyvania until May 8th, 1914, when a resolution was presented to the senate and house of representatives at Washington setting aside the second Sunday in May as a national holiday, dedicated, in the words of the resolution, to "the memory of the best mother in the world—your mother".

The wording of the resolution includes: "To be observed through some distinct act of kindness, visit, letter, gift, or tribute." What could more poignantly express the thoughts that words are too meager to convey, than the most beauteous of nature's gifts to the world, flowers? All over the world these have become the symbol of the day, and are given by thousands of sons and daughters to "Mother" on her day.

Modern day business demands separations from home many times and makes visits impossible, but through one of the latest developments in industry, the sending of flowers by wire, no mother, no matter how distant, need be neglected on this finest of days. And when mother opens the box of fragrant blossoms, wise in their manner of expressing our deep emotions, she will know that you are offering her all the love and reverence that Motherhood commands.

Send Mother a Gift on Mother's Day, May 8th, new hosiery, handkerchief, and silk underwear. 17t2.

Bernard G. Mattson, Pastor

At the morning service at 10:30 we wish to emphasize in our invitation to the public the opportunity and privilege of public worship, the primary object of which is the recognition of the presence of the unseen God, and the acknowledgment of his goodness and love with gritude and praise. As parts of this service the music by the organist and choir and the sermon by the pastor have as their purpose this primary object. The sermon announced for the morning is upon the theme "God's Pendulum", a study of the rythm, the harmony and the onward purpose in the ways of God in his world.

The Sunday school is at twelve. The Young People's meeting is at 6:30.

The church will resume the regular evening hour of 7:30 after an extended series of combined meetings with the young people.

The pastor announces that the hour will be informally conducted with "Conversations, Readings and reviews in the paths of religious inquiry, experience and activity." Those who are willing to spend the hour thus will be impressed with the vitality of the christian religion in the life of the world today. Those who have little time for broad reading will be enriched by acquaintance with some recent and inspiring books and other books not new but inspiring. The aim will be not to conduct a duplicate of the morning service but to spend an hour together in freindly give and take, in interchange of thought and in common effort for the mutual enrichment of life.

At the church on Thursday evenings at 7:30 the pastor will conduct a meeting for prayer nnd for a weekly survey of current events in the religious world.

At the Ironton church service, Sunday school and worship with sermon are conducted every Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Further progress with building improvements are being made, with the erection of a new bell tower and the plastering of the interior.

GAME VIOLATORS PAY FINE AND COSTS

Four Boyne City Men Caught By Game Warden Fike

Deputy Game Warden Henry Fike of Boyne Falls arrested four Boyne City men last week for spearing rainbow trout in Boyne River. In each instance the violaters paid a substantial fine and costs. The fish were confiscated and turned over to the county poor commissioners. It must be remembered that spearing fish of any kind at this time of the year is against the law. Even having a spear in your possession is prohibited.

TRAIN HITS AUTO— TWO MEN KILLED

Accident Occurs oo Crossiog North of Petoskey

Two more victims were claimed at railroad crossing last Wednesday morning, when A. J. Pierce and his brother, Emmet Pierce, both nf Hnrbor Springs, were killed by a G. R. & I. passenger train at the brewery crossing, north of Petoskey, on M. 131.

The brothers, both of whom were past 70 years of age, were on their way to Petoskey when the accident occurred. Emmet E. Pierce was driving the cnr, a Ford sedan. According to an eye witness, the Pierce car swung around a truck load of logs, awaiting the passing of the train, and was struck on the left side and hurled into a standard switch. From there it rolled down a shallow embankment and came to a stop about 25 feet from the crossing.

A. J. Pierce was instantly killed, and his brother, Emmet, so seriously injured that he died in less than three hours later. The train whistled for the crossing, according to the witness, but, acquaintances stated, that the driver of the car was deaf, and would not have heard the whistle.

TRI-COUNTY RE-ALTORS MEETING

BANQUET AT HOTEL CHARLEVIOX LAST WEDNESDAY

John Buys and John Doelle Addressed Meeting on Subjects Vital To Dealers

Real estate men from Emmet, Antrim and Charlevoix counties, members of the Tri-county Real Estate Board, together with a number of Charlevoix business men banqueted at the Hotel Charlevoix last Wednesday evening.

A thirty-two pound mackinaw trout was the big noise of the banquet supper served nt 6:30 by the hotel management. The huge fish, the largest trout brought in here for some time, was cooked at McCann's bakery and brought into the dining room whole and then served to the thirty or more men present.

John Buys of Grand Rapids, president of the Michigan Real Estate Board, and John Doelle of Lansing, secretary of the Board, addressed the meeting on subjects of importance to real estate men, bringing emphasis on the organization of sub-real estate boards and ways nnd means of bringing the dealer and purchaser closer together. They dwelt at length on legislation brought before the house and senate at Lansing by the state board aimed to professionalize the real estate business and protect the buyer from shady dealers and unfair methods.

A piece of legislation which is well merited and will serve to establish public confidence in real estate operators was passed by the legislature last Thursday. The law will establish a board of state examiners to pass upon the issuance of state real estate licenses, giving them full power to act upon the matter. Applicants for license will hereafter be examined and passed upon by the new board. This bit of legislation was sponsored by the state real estate board and shows the extent and nature of their operations. It will protect Michignn from an occurance similar to that experienced the past two years in Florida, where there was no control over licenses issued—and—where unscrupulous dealers and unfair methods and "skin" games put the buying public on their guard and discredited real estate men as a whole.

The talks by Messrs. Buys and Doelle were well received and contained information of much benefit to dealers in Northern Michigan

CAMP GROUNDS ARE IMPROVED

CHURCH OF GOD GETTING READY FOR ANNUAL MEET

More Conveniences For 1927 Summer Gathering—Noted Preachers Have Been Obtained

The Church of God Camp Meeting Association of Northern Michigan wish the people of Charlevoix and this part of the state to know that some necessary and important improvements are being made at the Camp Grounds, located 2½ miles south of this city near the Loeb school.

This association is composed of churches at Petoskey, East Jordan, Boyne City, Cadillac, Charlevoix and all towns in northern Michigan. About twenty years ago or more they obtained this five acres of land and have worked and improved it in different ways until at present they have a cluster of baildings seated in the heart of a beautiful grove, thus furnishing a quiet and suitable place for worship and religious work in the summer.

There is the auditorium where public services are held; the boarding house with kitchen and dining room on the first floor and sleeping rooms above, and a store building where visitors may buy religious literature or eatables if they wish. Besides these, a new dormitory has been erected this spring and is now nearly completed. The work is under the supervision of C. B. Sheldon, who is business manager for the association. This building is 24x48 feet with chapel room in front where ministerial meetings, etc., are held, and the rest of the first floor and all of the second contains sleeping rooms to accommodate guests who come from a distance. Another new feature being introduced this year is changing the boarding house to the cafeteria plan.

Besides these buildings there is room and suitable places for tents under the shade of the spreading maples, with access to a well of pure, cold water and other things which help make this a desirable place for an outing to people who like camping out, and also gives them the privilege of listening to a good gospel preaching at almost any hour of the day.

A ten day camp meeting has been held here every summer and this year it will be from August 5 to 14 inclusive. A minister and wife (both preachers) who have experience as foreign missionaries, pastors and evangelists in different states and Canada, have been engaged to conduct this meeting, and we are looking forward to it with expectation of seeing much good accomplished. Everyone is cordially invited to come. Begin now to plan and get ready for the meeting.—Contributed.

There Is a Reason

UNDER THE DOME AT THE CAPITOL

END OF 1927 SESSION IS PLAINLY VISIBLE

Circuit Court Judges Giveo Boost io Pay—Capital Punishmont Bill Bono of Contontion.

By Len W. Feighner

The end of the legislative session of 1927 is plainly visible, even to myopic eyes. When legislators are willing to start the week's business on Monday and to hold sessions on Saturday, it is because they want to get the business of the session finished and hike for home.

With no session Tuesday, because a large number of the lesiglators wanted to take in the blossom time festival at Benton Harbor and St. Joe, every other day of the week has seen the mills steadily grinding, with morning sessions the rule instead of the exception, and much work has been completed and sent to the executive for his approval.

The capitnl punishmeent bill is still a bone of contention between the two branches of legislature. The bill, which has been the main topic of acrimonious debate during the entire session, was reported out by the senate judiciary committee, which had held it ap for two months, but with a string of amendments hanging to it, one of which provides for referendum. In this form the senate passed the bill Wednesday afternoon and the bill went to the house for concurrence in the amendments. This the house refused to do, the vote being unanimous, and the bill went back to the senate, which has asked for a conference, committees for which have been appointed. The house contends that the people of the state want the legislature to settle the question instead of passing the buck back to the voters of the state, who elected the legislature, and that the two year delay which would be required to put the law into effect through a referendum is unnecessary. That if capital punishment is needed, it is right now, without unnecessary delay. Both houses are now awaiting the report of the conference committee, which is looked for early in the week.

The death of senator George Defer of the first district, which occurred at the Hotel Downey Monday evening, cast an air of gloom over the capital this week. Both houses passed resolutions of respect and sympathy, while Capitol flags are at half mast. The senator had been in poor health for some time, but was back at his desk Monday, taking an active interest in legislative matters. That evening, in his room at the hotel, while conversing with friends, he suddenly collapsed and death was immediate.

Circuit court judges throughout the states are given an increase in pay of $2,500 per year under a bill which has passed both houses and is now awaiting the signature of Governor Green. This will make the salary paid by the state $7,500 per year, but the county board of supervisors are authorized as heretofore, to increase this by any amount they may see fit.

The university of Michigan appropriation bills as passed by the senate Wednesday closely approximate the amounts requested by president Little. The bill, which now goes to the house, provides for $4,150,000 for the building program for the ensuing two years. Included in this program is fund for a woman's league building, altes and baildings for woman's dormitories, a modern elementary school building, two additional stories for the nurses' building and a new wing for Angell Hall. The limitation of $3,700,000 of the mill tax was removed and the tax cut down from 6-tenths of a mill to five and five-tenths. It is estimated that this will raise an amount of four and a quarter millions for maintainance and operation.

The senate finance committee has reported out the bill providing for half a million for the proposed new tuberculosis hospital at Ann Arbor. This has already passed the house and if it goes through the senate and is approved by the governor both the Ann Arbor and the Howell institutions will be taken care of and each will receive $250,000 in addition from the appropriation made by the legislature of 1925.

The Horton bill, which in its rough form, undressed, weighs about four pounds, passed the senate Wednesday. It is a codification of the school laws of the state and has been in preparation for more than a year by the Department of Education, with superintendent Coffey as its sponsor. It clarifies and untangles many mooted questions, repeals a number

CLASS BASEBALL SERIES OPENED

SENIORS AND SOPHOMORES TAKE EARLY LEAD

C. H. S. Will Be Represented in District Golf and Tennis Tournaments at Traverse City

Although playing no baseball schedule with out-of-town schools, Coach Bucken has organized four class teams and opened a class championship series last Wednesday afternoon after school hours.

In the first game of the series the sophomores took the freshmen into camp by the one-sided score of 16 to 3. Batteries for the two teams were: sophs—Dick Marshall, p; Billy Supernaw, c; freshmen—Carl Snider, p; Bradley Atchison, c.

In the second game played last Friday afternoon, the seniors showed their class by trimming the juniors 10 to 4. Batteries were: seniors—"Red" McCann, p; Wilbur Brown, c; juniors—Novak, p; Edwin Kling, c.

On Wednesday afternoon of this week the seniors and sophomores will take the field and on Friday afternoon the juniors and freshmen will clash. The championship of class teams will be determined on the percentage basis after the 12-game series. At present the standings are as follows:

	Games Won	Games Lost	Standing
Seniors	1	0	1000
Sophomores	1	0	1000
Juniors	0	1	0000
Freshmen	0	1	0000

The high school tennis tournament will go under way as soon as the courts are dry enough for play to start. Sixteen entries are in to date and keen competition is promised during the tournament. The four best players in local competition will be sent to the Traverse City district tournament May 21st. Coach Bucken also stated that at least four golf players would make the trip to Traverse City to represent the local school in the district golf tournament, and prospects are bright to land trophies for the Red and White.

LIGHTNING STRUCK CITY LIGHT PLANT

Slight Damago Caused Monday Morning By Resulting Blaze

The city steam electric light plant was slightly damaged by fire Monday morning at 4:00 when a bolt of lightning ran down the transmission line wires into the transformer room.

The lightning broke an entrance bushing and a transformer bushing and burned a hole in the ceiling of the room. The blaze was extinguished without calling out the fire department, and the damage was slight.

Small Roof Fire

The fire department was called out at 10:00 o'clock last Thursday evening to extinguish a small roof fire at the Grant Crandall residence on the north side. The fire was presumably caused by sparks and the damage will amount to probably $75.00.

PACEMAKERS TO CONVENE AT INN

CHARLEVOIX CHOSEN FOR ANNUAL CONVENTION

Booklet Issued by Kalamazoo Co. Speaks In Glowing Terms of Our Accommodations

This office recently received an eighteen-page booklet from The Pacemakers Club of the Kalamazoo Loose Leaf Binder Company, Kalamazoo, Michigan, whom it will be remembered held their 1926 annual convention at The Inn.

The front page depicts a large view of Lake Charlevoix, with The Inn hotel and environs in the background, and is captioned "Charlevoix The Benutiful," the 1927 play place of the Pacemakers. The two-page spread in the center of the book gives a glowing and complimentary account of Charlevoix and The Inn, which we will reprint in part:

"Charlevoix, the playplace of the Pacemakers, in 1926 has been again selected for the 1927 meeting.

"Those who attended last years meeting will greet this announcement with pleasure for they will recall how well Charlevoix entertained them last year.

"The Inn, Charlevoix's largest hotel and one of the most noted summer hotels in Michigan, will again offer its entire facilities for the comfort of the Pacemakers Club.

"This hotel is situated upon a high terrace overlooking Lake Charlevoix and is surrounded by beautiful flower gardens threaded by wide winding walks. Three large porches running the entire length of the building provide ample space for lounging in the summer sun or for enjoying the cooling breezes from the lake.

"The dining room of The Inn will live long in the memory of all Pacemakers. The hotel operates its own gardens, fruit and dairy farms and has daily shipments of food stuffs from select markets. The management fully appreciates the fact that days spent in the open, on the lake, on the courts or in the saddle create an appetite. The fame of the cuisine of the Inn has spread afar."

The discription goes on to tell of tennis courts, golf courses, fishing, boating and bathing facilities, and ends as follows: "You are going to enjoy yourself at Charlevoix, the play place of the Pacemakers. Everything necessary for your complete entertainment and comfort will be provided, there is nothing for you to do but just enjoy it."

Charlevoix is grateful for this glowing publicity, which goes to the offices of the Loose leaf Binder Company all over the United States. The Pacemakers may be assured that Charlevoix has a cordial welcome for them and will do everything in its power to make their stay here one of utmost enjoyment.

AT THE MOVIES

Baae Ball Thrills in This Picture

A great grandstand in New York, filled with thousands of yelling fans—and the two most famous baseball teams in America battling in grim earnest—this is the mighty background for "Slide, Kelly Slide," Metro-Goldwin-Mayer's new baseball picture playing at the Palace Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday, May 17-18.

The recent World Series furnished the setting. Cameras were sent from the studios and set up during the New York games, and William Haines, hero of the story, donned Yankee uniform and appeared with the New Yorkers against the St. Louis Cardinals, for the intimate scenes in the picture.

Creative Expression Urge Effects Player

One of human nature's strongest forces is to urge the creative expression. It is the same urge that has brought fourth some of the greatest masterpieces this world has ever known. It is an urge that will not be denied. Men and women have suffered for it. Have even descended to the depths of absolute privation in their craving to give expression to that which is in the soul.

It was such an urge that first impelled Mildred Davis to enter motion pictures. It's the same urge that brings her forth from retirement.

Visiting Hollywood from her northern home, Miss Davis appeared in her first movie several years ago pretty much as a lark. An opportunity presented itself to do some "extra" work and she took it for "the fun of the thing."

Now, after an absence of three years, she's back again — still for "the fun of the thing." But back of it there's still the urge for creating, an urge that refuses to be denied. Miss Davis' return vehicle is Paramount's "Too Many Crooks" in which she is co-featured with Lloyd Hughes, George Bancroft and El Brendel. It arrives at the Palace Theare Thursday. The RECLUSE of FIFTH AVENUE

by WYNDHAM MARTYN

COPYRIGHT in the UNITED STATES W.N.U. SERVICE

"The man who comes tomorrow will never take your place. You may regard him as a temporary expedient. When you go, Sneed, I shall see one of my few friends depart."

The butler knew that there was no argument he could use to change his employer's determination. But he was cheered by the faint hope that some day he might return. Mr. Peter, he reflected, had never been like other men. Reserved, non-communicative, aloof and austere, but inflexibly a man of his word. Six months was not so long. Sneed thought he would spend the period in foreign travel. He had understood that during the past quarter century certain improvements had been made in the world.

When Peter Milman told Sneed that his presence would imperil certain plans, he was speaking sober truth. In the upper rooms of his home there had been born the determination to save the things he loved from being disposed of at auction. It seemed almost as though the shades of his forbears, lingering about the things that had been theirs, had concentrated their influence upon their ultimate descendant. He had gone to the Milman museum to say farewell. He had put down his ancestor's sword with the determination to fight. And in this fight Sneed, for all his faithful ways and honest heart, could have no part. Any deviation from the way of life he had followed for so many years would alarm the faithful butler. He would inevitably have imagined his employer was ill and buzzed about him like an anxious fly.

Milman's way of life changed directly Achille Lutry entered his service. To the Frenchman it was nothing unusual that Milman went out frequently. Lutry knew nothing of the former secluded existence.

A few days after Sneed's began had begun, Achille Lutry dropped three letters into a nearby mail-box. The letters were addressed to: Fleming Bradney, Edgewater, N. J.; Floyd Mulet of Philadelphia; Neeland Barnes of Peekskill-on-the-Hudson.

Fleming Bradney, returning home from a tedious day of work in the laboratory of an oil refinery, found his letter on the table where his meal was set. He was a big, muddy man of middle age, taciturn, and unpopular with his fellows because he invited no confidences nor answered personal questions. At the Edgewater refinery, as in that at Bayonne from which he had come two years previously, he was known as F. Bradney. None suspected him of being the great physicist, Fleming Bradney, once the foremost man in his line America had produced.

He slit the envelope and looked at the address and signature. The name Peter Milman meant as little to him as his own name to Edgewater. Bradney had never read a Social Register in his life. Between the pages was a money order for one hundred dollars.

"I beg you," Peter Milman wrote, "not to imagine that by inclosing this money I suppose you to be an object for charity. I urgently desire you to dine with me today week at half-past seven o'clock, and it may be that you must engage a substitute or be put by my request to some expense not otherwise necessary.

"You may ask yourself why you should go to this trouble for a man unknown to you. I would answer that I am thoroughly acquainted with your life history and entertain a great admiration for your genius. Think of me as one anxious to see you regain your rank as one of the great scientists of the world. Perhaps at this dinner you may be offered the opportunity.

"Beside yourself there will be, I trust, Neeland Barnes—formerly an international polo player and owner of race horses, and Floyd Mulet, who when he seemed about to take his place in the world as a great sculptor, suffered an unfortunate eclipse."

Bradney went to the library and opened the New York directory. Sure enough, Peter Milman was recorded as living on Lower Fifth avenue. The thing, then, was not a foolish practical joke.

Pulling at a big pipe, Fleming Bradney sat on his little balcony and gazed at Manhattan lights. This strange letter had awakened old hopes and ambitions that he had thought for ever dead. Of course, there could be no practical joke which expended a hundred dollars on its fulfillment. Bradney read the letter again. The phrase, "Perhaps at this dinner you may be offered the opportunity," took his fancy strangely. Opportunity! Did any exist for a man who had been disgraced and was now forgotten? Until this letter came Bradney had believed his career finished. He went into his bedroom and disinterred a suit of full evening dress from its mothball tomb. He had not worn it for a dozen years.

Peter Milman's letter reached Neeland Barnes at a moment when that embroiled sportsman was engaged in staving off his most persistent creditor, the landlord Lipsky.

Barnes was a tall, lingly male man who had run through several fortunes by his love for horses and his inability to judge of their chances in races. After his wife had died his relatives had shrugged their shoulders and abandoned him. The many schemes for his rehabilitation had failed. He disappeared from fashionable resorts. His only daughter was being brought up in England by rich relations. He had drifted about the world until, at the end of all resources, he had taken a little house on the outskirts of Peekskill.

Here he was engaged in what he explained as an attempt "to stage a comeback." He was trying to become physically fit, and he was succeeding. But mountain hikes and scrolling up the noble stream brought no grist to the mill.

"Mr. Barnes, you are a loafer," Lippsky cried when the sportsman had announced his inability to pay rent long overdue. This seemed cruelly unjust to a man who had just returned from a twenty-mile walk.

"Some day, if you keep on annoying me," said Neeland Barnes, "I shall kill you."

"You don't have to kill me," Lippsky cried shrilly. "You just pay my rent. Sell your swell clothes and get over-alls." He waved Peter Milman's letter. "Get some of your swell friends to lend you money."

Neeland Barnes looked at the letter, puzzled. He did not recognize the writing, but the stationery was reassuring.

"When what you term my swell friends know I am living in a hovel like this, they will advance me the money. I shall not ask them until I have finished my training. I am about to begin. If I hit you, it's your look-out."

Barnes began his shadow-boxing exercises. Dimly Lippsky perceived that his debtor was getting nearer and nearer. He went on muttering "Loafer." It was a word which did much to appease him.

Barnes loafed no more when his landlord had disappeared. He read the astonishing letter a dozen times and secreted the money-order at once. Alone of the three who had received somewhat similar communications, he knew of Milman and his family. Very distantly they were connected by marriage. Barnes had no idea that the Brewer failure had brought Peter Milman to penury. One sentence he found strangely intriguing: "If, as I believe, you feel yourself unfairly treated by the world that was yours, I may be able to offer you the opportunity to take your place again in society."

Neeland Barnes longed above all things for the comfortable life that had once been his. He had never permitted himself to become shabby. Never had he sunk to such a state that former friends would hesitate to recognize him. He clung to the idea that when once he ceased to shave and wear clean linen the descent to hell would have begun.

He rolled a cigarette and indulged in pleasing reveries. Good dinners, wore not given him, nor were hundred-dollar bills expended for nothing. Peter Milman was [illegible] to be something. Well, Neeland Barnes was his [illegible]. Perhaps [illegible] years. He [illegible] with Mrs. [illegible] Peter Milman [illegible] to be [illegible]. He would find Neeland Barnes [illegible] blinded in a blaze of light. He hoped the thing would be staged so that his old cronies might see it. They would never believe that he could keep sober after the scandalous rumors that had been spread about him.

Naturally there would be expense money. It would be a delightful experience to pay Lipsky his deferred rent in nickels and cents and watch him scrabbling feverishly for the coins among poison ivy. And he would be able to send his daughter a decent present at last. Poor Nita, whom he had not seen for years, brought up by jealous relatives far from his care. The adventure might lead to amazing things.

Presently these brilliant prospects failed. He was conscious that his only home was in Lipsky's grotesquely furnished lodge. Adventures with such as endings inhered themselves only to youth. He sighed a little. Then he smiled. After all, he had the hundred dollars and the prospect of a good dinner.

* * * * * * *

Floyd Mulet, under the name of M. Floyd, was earning a poor living by teaching drawing in Philadelphia private schools. The man who had hoped to see his name associated with Rodin and Meunier was forgotten by all save the few who had seen in him the signs of genius. Mulet was a man of middle size, thin and haggard. Once or twice fastidious pupils had complained that he paid too little attention to his personal appearance. Milman's letter came by late mail. At first the sculptor was inclined to think it an advertising scheme of some sort. The Lower Fifth avenue address was thick with loft and office buildings. Like Bradney, he went to a library and looked up Milman. The genealogical department gave him ample data.

The stranger's letter held out the promise of temporary relief from an intolerable life. There was money for the trip and enough over to live for many weeks as he had lately learned to live. He packed his grip, thankful he had saved a suit of evening clothes.

There is something vivifying about the air of Manhattan. It had its effect on the three men bound for Peter Milman's house. Bradney held up his head again and Mulet lost his droop of depression. Neeland Barnes, walking briskly down the avenue, passed clubs which had dropped him on account of nonpayment of dues and felt himself within measurable distance of rehabilitation. His military mustache and fine carriage made him a marked figure, and he liked the limelight.

As he neared the Milman house he wondered what his fellow guests would be like. In other years no physicists had been numbered among his acquaintances. He was not quite certain what a physicist was. As to sculptors, he had met one in Rome, but he was a marquis. Sculptors were probably all right. He was reassured by remembering that the wife of a former polo pal had her own studio. But he would probably have to dominate the conversation with Peter Milman and talk of old New York society. He must be careful not to mention the Daynes. The runaway wife had been a Dayne.

Wedged in between tall buildings, the Milman house looked squat and unimpressive. Yet Barnes gazed at it with respect. To be able to retain it spelled wealth. Lesser men would have sold at a profit and moved uptown. What this millionaire might want with Neeland Barnes was a delightful mystery. He rapped loudly with the brass knocker.

A few minutes earlier Floyd Mulet had stood appalled at the smug ugliness of the building. He did not think with any sympathy of that generation represented by the builder, which had distrusted elegance and loved what was solid and lasting. To the sculptor it seemed the Milman home was modeled on the old Astor house. But he liked the door and the brass knocker, which was a copy of that decorating an Oxford college.

The last to come was Fleming Bradney, whom the subway had annoyed. He rather liked the house. It had strength and the air of studied isolation. None could look through its windows to disturb the inmates. It lay fifteen feet back from the sidewalk. Bradney had that imagination without which mathematicians can never be great. Whom and what was he to see behind the tall door?

CHAPTER III

Neeland Barnes disapproved of Achille, who admitted him with lavish gestures. This was not the sort of butler a Milman should employ. He followed him to a library, where he found his host speaking to Floyd Mulet. It was as Barnes thought. Sculptors were not quite up to his social standard. This stranger was physically incongruous, and his clothes should have been more recently pressed.

Neeland Barnes held out his hand to Peter Milman, as one could to a man of his distinguished ancestry, with a smile which said plainly, "I, at least, belong here."

"It is very kind of you to come," said Peter Milman. He turned to Floyd Mulet. "Mr. Mulet, this is Mr. Neeland Barnes."

Barnes looked a little coldly. Curious, he thought that Peter Milman should have introduced Mulet to him.

Then Fleming Bradney came in. Although his clothes were of another cut, there was an air of power about him. He was a rather tall man, with [illegible] and [illegible] Barnes had [illegible]. Bradney [illegible] with [illegible] Mulet [illegible]

By Degrees Bradney Found Himself Listening to Barnes' Anecdotes.

YOUR PART IN CONSERVATION

Michigan today is a different land than it was 50 years ago. Fields of golden grain wave where the wolverine once made his home. The log hut has been replaced by the modern home; automobile trails wind through the country that was once the home of bear, deer and wolf, and modern cities dot the territory that was then covered with heavy forests. Many of the lakes of the state have been well fished out, a number of cities have polluted our streams; the wild life that once possessed all of our cities has been driven into a few scattered corners where protection is offered. Our fur resources are nearly exhausted and drainage has reduced many of our lakes to meadows.

However, there is yet a remnant of practically every specie of wild life that was once abundant here and while we will never be able to bring it back to where it was 50 years ago we should at least be able to retain what we still have. To do this will require the practice of conservation by every citizen of the state. Your part is to help the department of conservation in enforcing protective laws; to discourage game and fish hogs; to urge people to be careful concerning setting fires that may damage the forests. You should study the problem of conservation and give your support to any honest agency that is working for its advancement. In this way you will be providing for your children just as surely as you would be keeping up your life insurance and your missionary work for conservation need cost you nothing.

THE SOUTH IS CALLING

The Southland, through the American Red Cross, is appealing to Northern generosity. The greatest flood within the memory of the white man has swept down the lower Mississippi valley, laying waste to millions of acres of land, taking hundreds of human lives, rending thousands of families homeless and causing a property loss that will run into billions. The quiet, gentle fields of Dixie, famed in song and story, lie prostrate under this mighty deluge. The fields once reddened with the blood of a great people engaged in fratricidal conflict are calling to you. The years have softened and mellowed the memory of that conflict and now that our brothers are again facing calamity let us share with them our goods and chattles until the bloom once more over Southern field and woodland. Make your contribution today.

DRYS WILL GATHER

The second annual Prohibition Convention is to be held at the Central Methodist church, Detroit, two days, Thursday and Friday, May 12-13, according to announcement sent out last week by R. N. Holesaple, acting for the committee on arrangements. Instead of the five-day session held last year, the convention will crowd their deliberations into two days of intensive program work. Speakers of state and national reputation will have prominent places upon the program which is expected to attract world-wide comment, coming as it does upon the eve of putting into effect of Ontario's new liquor laws. In sending out the convention call Mr. Holesaple says:

"The tendency on the part of the friends of prohibition is to think that the prohibition question is all settled and therefore needs no further attention. Quick to take advantage of every opportunity, the Wets have been busy in their attempt to tear down prohibition and create a disrespect for the law. False statements and misleading argument are flung about recklessly in the hope that they may stampede the country into a repeal of what President Coolidge has termed this beneficent law. The church, science and big business combined to secure the overthrow of the legalized liquor traffic and if prohibition is to be maintained and advanced, these agencies must continue to stand by the proposition and co-operate with the Anti-Saloon League as the agency for holding the lines against the Wet advance."

"FREE SPEECH" ORGANIZATIONS IN THE COLLEGES

So-called free speech bodies are being formed in various colleges, and rows are being fomented. These new organizations do not admit that there are any limits to the excercise of the ordinary right of free speech. They insist upon what has been described as criminal license, rather than free speech. It is now charged that the American Civil Liberties Union is back of these organizations, and the American Legion is becoming extremely interested. This is a matter of more than ordinary interest to the patriotic man and woman of this country. It would seem as if it is merely a manifestation of the purpose to spread communism throughout the world. The ordinary father and mother who send their boy or girl to college do not expect to have them exposed to the danger of contempt for the constitution and the institutions of the United States. They have a right to know that their children will be guarded against those who take that attitude and against the incidental slime that inevitably accompanies that purpose. It is unfortunate that some of our prominent newspapers take every occasion to sneer at any attempt to check this unbridled license. The communists and friends of Soviet Russia are working adroitly throughout the colleges of the country, and they are perveying not merely ideas that are unpatriotic but which are morally dangerous.

NEWSPAPER FIDELITY

"A newspaper attains its greatest usefulness to its advertisers only when it is steadfastly faithful to its readers. When it sacrifices its independence or other interests, it sacrifices its readers' trust in the integrity of its columns—and thus kills the thing that profits the advertiser most.

Notice to Dog Owners

Many complaints have come to my office regarding dogs running at large and molesting and destroying game. The situation is aggravated in the extreme. Nests of game, and other birds, have been found destroyed by dogs. Dogs are feeding on young rabbits, and worrying rabbits carrying young. In my opinion, any person who permits his dog to go at large and molest game is not a true sportsman, nor a good citizen. This notice is being published as an appeal to sportsmen and good citizens to correct this abuse. It is also meant as a warning to all others. Hereafter all dogs must be confined to the owners' premises unless actually accompanied by the owner or his agent. Lon Chaney in "MR. WU" with Louise Dresser and Renee Adoree. Mr. WU is one of the most Wierd mystery stories ever written. As a dramatic production Walker Whiteside played it a short time ago with great success throughout the country. It is an ideal part for Chaney and only Chaney could handle it satisfactorily. OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

More Limestone Being Used

During the last month three more carloads of limestone were shipped and distributed to farmers near Charlevoix. This brings the total to seven carloads distributed in Charlevoix county since the first of the year indicating the interest farmers are taking in improving their soil.

Many farmers are hauling marl from several beds in the county and applying a fine coating on their soil.

The three carloads were handled by the Charlevoix Co-operative Association and distributed as follows:

One carload to Clinton Blanchard and Edd Vandenburg of Phelps, another to Loeb Farms, and the third to Geo. Meggison, Elmer Engalls and several others in small quantities, all from Charlevoix.

Farmers, now is the time to make your plans for this year. If you wish to order limestone, send your orders in right away, so you can get good service on delivery before the fall season.

Jersey Breeders Meet

The Antrim-Charlevoix Jersey Breeders Association held their first meeting of the new year at Ellsworth, on Wednesday, the 4th, with over 20 breeders present.

H. E. Dennison, the Jersey fieldman, was present and gave a very interesting discussion on matters pertaining to the Jersey breed. He stated that the Jerseys are growing faster in proportion of total numbers than any other dairy breed and the outlook mighty promising.

Plans were made for entering last year's state contest and for a large summer exhibit and show at Ellsworth in June.

In the Ellsworth community alone over 100 head of purebreds are owned as compared with some 20 head two years ago and the numbers are fast increasing. There are now five sires being used that are of very high quality and responsible for the decided improvement taking place every day. Elmer Murray of East Jordan, is secretary of the association and is anxious for all Jersey breeders not members to get in touch with him and join the association immediately.

County Achievement Day Held

The boys and girls winter club program was brought to a highly successful close on May 2, 3 and 4 when the various clubs of the county held their achievement days.

A. G. Kettunen, state club leader, and Miss Ruth Featherly, assistant state leader, in cooperation with Mr. Mellencamp, county agent, visited all the clubs and judged the exhibits. Following the program the local champions were selected. These local champions are honored by being eligible to attend the state camp at Gaylord as a representative of their club and to enter the elimination trials for the purpose of competing for Northern Michigan championship, which means a trip to the state fair at Detroit as a result.

We are proud to announce of the 15 clubs that started with a membership of slightly over 100, that 12 clubs finished 100 per cent, that is, each member that started completed the years requirements creditably. Much credit for this wonderful showing must be given to the leaders of the clubs who have donated their time, energy and efforts free gratis to be of service in developing the boys and girls along life's pathway.

Following are the results of the achievement days:

Miss Lottie Webster, Hilton High School, Charlevoix, Leader—100% finishing, 7 members, Carrie Hilton, champion.

UNDER THE DOME AT THE CAPITOL

of obsolete provisions, but makes very few real changes in the school laws.

Governor Green vetoed the Rushtan bill, providing more severe penalties for armed robbery. His reason for the veto was given as the whipping post amendment which was hung on it in the House on motion of Representative Chas. Culver. So Michigan is evidently not going to the whipping post this year, if the Governor can help it. Other measures also pending have had the whipping post clause added.

The adminstration gas tax proposition, introduced in the senate by Senator George Leland of Fennville, has finally been approved by the House, after a stormy session. As amended by the House, the cities will get $2,000 per mile for trunk line maintenance, the counties will get $7,000,000 to be divided in proportion to their weight tax, and another million will be split equally among the 83 counties of the state. The farm bureau lost out on their proposition of no raise in the gas tax unless there was a decrease in the weight tax, for which the bloc has persistently fought. The bill was defeated in the House last week, but was reconsidered and enough votes were rallied to carry it through, 65 to 26. The senate has concurred in the House amendments and the bill is now in the hands of the Governor.

An effort was made in the senate Wednesday morning to recall for reconsideration the deficiency bill passed by that body late last week and which is now in committee in the House, but the effort failed. Only seven votes could be mustered, so if the House passed the bill there will be the proposed addition of about four and a half millions to the general tax for the next two years, to make up for an alleged deficit in state funds.

Everything possible has been pushed aside to make clear sailing for Governor Green's proposed new contract with the Grand Trunk, to take the place of the one made two years ago by the then Governor Groesbeck. The new contract will limit payments to the state by the Grand Trunk to 15 years instead of 50 and will that much sooner abrogate the special charter now held by the railroad and bring it under the same tax clause under which the other Michigan railroads are operated. The bill has passed the House, but with five dissenting votes, and little if any opposition to it is anticipated in the senate.

Practically all of the routine appropriation bills are now out of the way and there seems little doubt of adjournment at the end of next week.

Increases of salaries have marked legislation this week. The state boxing commissioner, Tom Biggers, got his boost to $5,000, while the secretary of the commission gets $3,000. The limit of bouts was also raised to 15 rounds. This proposition went through the House, despite rather bitter opposition. Now it goes to the Senate.

The House also passed the Ming bill, previously defeated but brought up for reconsideration, whereby the director of conservation, the state health commissioner and the chairman of the securities commission each get a liberal boost. Total appropriations, either passed or now under consideration, are claimed to total in the neighborhood of $40,000,000. Michigan is getting to be a great state, sure enough.

Senator Pulver's so-called "smell" bill, which would have empowered search warrant for any place where odor of liquor in process of manufacture could be smelled, and which had passed both houses after warm fights, was vetoed by Governor Green, who said he thought the cause of prohibition would be harmed more than helped by the proposed law.

We are at your service on Willard batteries and Goodyear tires at a very low price. Benj. Brown.—Adv.

CLOSED GARAGES DANGEROUS

We are not familiar with the exact figures of the deaths caused each year in the United States by carbon monoxide, the deadly gas that often slays motorists who work on their cars, with the engines running, in a closed garage.

The newspapers record a sufficient number of such fatalities to cause this warning to be sounded to the motorists of Michigan. Be careful when you run your automobile engine in a garage—be sure that there is sufficient ventilation. Otherwise, before you realize it, the deadly fumes will lay you low and your family will wonder how you happened to be so careless.

THE difference in breakfast oats is in their flavor. The price mostly is the same.

Millions demand the Quaker brand because of its toasty, wonderful flavor. For flavor is the important point in food.

Some 50 years were spent perfecting that famous Quaker flavor. Once you taste it, you are spoiled for ordinary oats.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "body" of oats. And that makes Quakers less often needed. Proteids, carbohydrates and vitamins and "bulk" are thus combined to make Quaker Oats an excellent, balanced ration.

Get Quicks Quaker (cooks in 2½ to 5 minutes) or Quaker Oats today at your grocer. See how much finer tomorrow's breakfast will be than today's.

with sufficient [illegible] power to enable him to feel he had a mission in life. He lived, no doubt, as his wealthy class does, simply for the moment.

In truth, Neeland Barnes had forgotten Lipsky entirely. The dinner was excellent. A fellow-countryman of Achille's had seen to that. The wines were superb. Barnes adopted an air of exquisite but lofty courtesy toward his fellow-guests. They said very little, but their table manners were reassuring. When the dinner should be finished, Barnes determined to lean back in his chair, survey Millman with a smile that had world-knowledge and kindly cynicism in it, and demand to know for what person he was brought from Peek-skill restaurant. As one old New Yorker to another, Peter Millman would give his reasons.

"That's a very fine oil painting over your head, Mr. Millman," said Floyd Malet, disturbing the train of Barnes' fancies.

"A relative of mine," Millman answered. "Capt. Oliver Millman. That was painted in Holland when he was a young soldier in England's wars with France. It is by Jordaens, the brilliant fellow-student of Rubens. He joined his brother in Plymouth county, Massachusetts, just after that picture was painted. Later he fought in 'King Philip's war.' He was killed fighting for England against France in Pennsylvania. Historians know it as 'King William's war.' His brother disowned him for his godless ways of life. In revenge Captain Oliver bequeathed him his entire fortune, which rescued the stern and righteous brother from beggary. But for Oliver Millman we might have become obscure farmers on Cape Cod. What the Millmans had, they owe to him."

Neeland Barnes launched into a bitter, invective against righteous relatives. "Take it from one who knows," he concluded, "it is the black sheep who'll do a man a good turn when he needs it. I've found that my righteous relatives always gave me good advice and the shabby sort slipped me the coin."

"Some day a great lawlessness will sweep over the world," Malet declared. "I don't mean as a concerted action on the part of any Socialist or Syndicalist, but an expression of human unrest. We have been tied down too long. We have endured too much the oppressions of those in authority."

"We'll stampede, you mean?" said Barnes. "I'll be there."

"Do you think," Peter Millman asked, "that there is any justification for the human herd stampeding because it is dissatisfied with its masters?"

"Certainly," Floyd Malet said. "Sometimes it is just to take the law in one's hands."

"The law," scoffed Bradney, recalling certain earlier passages of his life. "The law. Now I'm a typical law-abiding citizen, but I cannot regard any man-made statutes as sacrosanct. What is law? A rule of civic conduct prescribed by the supreme power and prohibiting what is wrong. That's Blackstone's definition."

Neeland Barnes looked instinctively over the table to his host. It was his experience that oil rich men supported those laws which kept the masses in order. In his own days of wealth he had done the same. But there was no frown on Peter Millman's face.

"This is a discussion which interests me more than you can imagine," said Peter Millman, the guests noticed swiftly at Captain Oliver. "I heartily have coffee and liqueurs served in the garden." He rose. "Think you may prefer it there."

"A garden?" Floyd Malet cried. "A garden in Lower Fifth avenue?"

"You shall see," said Millman.—"They walked their host through [illegible] to what seemed to blank wall. A door, cleverly concealed by [illegible] was open. Not for twenty years had strangers been allowed the chance to gaze upon Peter Millman's Japanese garden.

"It is Japan," Malet exclaimed. "I have seen this in Nagasaki."

"I modelled it on [illegible] of the gardens in 'The Teahouse of the Indescribable Butterfly' in Nagasaki, with a suggestion here and there from the Fukawaga garden."

Neeland Barnes knew nothing about Japanese gardens, but the thing took his fancy amazingly. Quaint bridges, little streams with brilliant goldfish, garden-lanterns, strangely set stones, made this back yard of seventy feet long by half as much wide the most engrossing garden he had seen on this Avenue where he, too, had been born.

At the other end of it was a sort of platform on which comfortable seats were arranged. Immediately below it was a lily-pool. Twenty feet above was a framework of steel mesh to which mosquito netting was attached.

"This is exquisite," Malet murmured. "No wonder you do not move. Your taste seems to me to be perfect. I have never been in a more harmonious and beautifully furnished house."

While Achille was bringing coffee and liqueurs, Millman explained how, by the use of glass where now was netting, he could regulate the temperature and keep his garden beautiful when snowstorms raged and frost bit viciously.

It was when Achille had gone that Neeland Barnes found himself sleepless. He had abandoned the idea of his man-of-the-world questioning of his host. He was content that this pleasant atmosphere remain unchanged. He did not want to think of going back to Lipsky and the rent question. The wine and the green Chartreuse induced a pleasant lassitude. Neeland Barnes stretched his long legs and felt at peace.

"You have been very patient, gentlemen," Millman began, "in not asking me ere this for what reason I invited you. And you have been very courteous to come when my letter might have been construed in an offensive light." Neeland Barnes permitted himself to smile at being insulted by a gift of a hundred dollars. "I have never met any of you personally before, although I have heard Mr. Bradney lecture and have seen some of Mr. Malet's work. I also was thrilled many years ago by Mr. Barnes' horsemanship."

"Very handsome of you to say so," said Neeland Barnes. "I flatter myself I could ride in those days."

"What I am going to say may seem nothing whatever to do with me at first. It may even be that you will consider me guilty of some breach of good form when I mention certain matters in the past life of all three of you. If so, I beg you to believe I shall say nothing idly. I have a definite plan in asking you to meet, and I must tell my story in my own way."

Peter Millman looked from one to the other of them a little anxiously. He was meticulous in matters of personal conduct, and he feared he might be exceeding his rights.

"So far as I am concerned," said Fleming Bradney, "you have nothing to fear. I have done nothing to be ashamed of, although I cannot expect the world to believe that."

"My reputation," said Malet, "is a trifle besmirched, but I have long since ceased applying whitewash. Juvenal says that to be poor is to be ridiculous. Well, Mr. Millman, I can plead guilty to that count."

Peter Millman turned courteously to the third guest.

"Don't mind me," said Barnes genially, "I'm used to it. If you had had all the d—n silly relations I've had, you'd have no sensitive spots left. I have been worthless since birth." He chuckled, "But I've had a d—n good run for my money, even if this Juvenal person has my number up and the race lost. Rub it in, if it helps you. My wool is black, and I know it."

GASOLINE STATIONS AND HOT DOG STANDS

One of the Philadelphia dailies draws a comparison between the appearance of the gasoline statioos and the hot dog stands, the stations usually being a beauty spot while the hot dog stands are so crude as to be most unsightly.

Like so many present day conditions, the automobile is responsible for both. The difference in aspect is no doubt due to the difference in the amount of capital back of these enterprises. The oil stations are built by wealthy companies, who often have to pay an enormous sum to obtain the desired location and they build attractively in order to be a welcome addition to a select neighborhood, while the hot dog stand appears in any nook along a much traveled highway and whose proprietor as a rule has only enough money to buy a supply of soft drinks, hot dogs, etc.

But the question of beautifying the hot dog stand is worth considering, for the worth-while movement of aiding nature rather than detracting from its beauty is spreading rapidly and that hot dog vender, who will have an attractive setting for his wares is the one who will continue in business.

THE WHIPPING POST

Michigan may have a whipping post for her more refractory criminals. Such a measure now awaits the signature of governor Green to become the law of the state. Of course it does not mean we are to revert to the old cat-o'-nine-tails that reduced a man to a quivering, bubbling mass of bleeding flesh with every sense of a human being wiped out, but a broad non-lacerating strap calculated to produce plenty of pain without bringing permanent injury. Strange to say, the measure passed both the senate and the house without serious opposition, reflecting the extent to which public opinion has been aroused by the wholesale murder, robbery and hy-jacking that has swept over the state in recent years. The fact that a whipping post law has even been contemplated is a complete reversal of public sentiment from the day when the mere paddling of an obstinate prisoner brought a storm of protest from every section of Michigan. Even now, in the light of recent events, it is doubtful if the whipping post is an institution that should be returned to this state. Swift, stern justice, unmixed with maudlin sentiment, should prove a greater deterrant to crime.

Michigan is in the midst of an oil boom and all we lack now to make it natural is for somebody to discover oil on the Indian lands up around Mt. Pleasant.

Joseph A. Magnus, beloved Emmet county resident, died suddenly last Wednesday afternoon in his automobile, while enroute from Cincinnati to his summer home at Oden. He was 70 years of age.

REAL ESTATE MOVING ON LAKE CHARLEVOIX

Kinsey & Buys Report Numerous Sales of Lots Recently

Charles H. Emrey, manager of the local office of Kinsey & Buys, Grand Rapids Realtors, reports increased activity in real estate transfers at Springwater Beach, the company's plat located on Lake Charlevoix near Horton Bay.

This plat which was opened for sale September 1st, 1926, comprised 99 lots, three of which were dedicated as parks. These small parks have natural spring water brooks flowing through them and have been greatly beautified by the construction of fish ponds and miniature water falls. Roads have been graded and graveled and many other improvements made throughout the plat.

Forty-four lots have been sold to date and the management believes that the remaining 52 lots will be disposed of within the next 60 days. Some plans are under way for cottage building and it is believed that at least four and possibly more will be constructed this year. This plat has building restrictions such as the price of cottages to be built, specific building lines, fire-proof roofs and sanitary sewage disposal.

Mr. Emrey stated that 16 lots had been sold in the past two weeks and the prospects look bright for the coming season.

MORE MATERIAL FOR THE SOB SISTERS

Editor-Mayor Weber Comments on Recent Killing

A state trooper stopped a rum runner for questioning near Sturgis on last Sunday. The trooper was talking with the men when one of them grabbed his gun out of his holster and thus disarmed they shot him with a revolver of their own. Then there is a sob chorus back home that don't want these fellows hung, and now, there is a movement on foot among American war mothers to send every thug incarcerated in prison, no matter what his crime may have been a carnation on Mother's Day. We presumed the carnations were for our mothers to typify the deepest sort of filial devotion, but now to scatter them in the pathway of our prison burdened thugs on a day so full of tender significance as mother's day is the heighth of ridiculousness, and causes one to pause and wonder what American womanhood is coming to anyway.—Cheboygan Democrat.

Orders So Great Production Is Twice Increased

Orders received by Dodge Brothers, Inc. from its dealers since announcement on May 1 of the new four cylinder motor have been in such volume that production has been increased for the second time in ten days, according to President E. G. Wilmer.

"The immediate response of the public and of our dealers has been very gratifying, Mr. Wilmer stated. "Orders received in the first three days following the announcement totaled approximately $4,000,000. This is in addition to ordinary contractual allotments.

"The first day after announcement dealers placed orders for 1080 cars and on the second day orders totaled 1742. Orders are continuing to pour into the factory in large volume.

"Over 600 telegrams from dealers in all sections of the country have been received telling of quickened demand and requesting advance shipment of their allotments.

"Stocks of cars in dealers' hands are low and current retail sales will be immediately reflected in factory operations. Since March 1 deliveries by dealers have been materially in excess of factory production.

"Output was stepped May 9 to care for the large orders. This was the second time our operations have been speeded up within 10 days.

LOCAL C. OF C. BEHIND LEAGUE

EXTEND SUPPORT AT BANQUET MEETING LAST THURSDAY

C. H. Venema and C. V. Smazel Gave Talks on Work and Benefits of Development League

The Charlevoix Association of Commerce, after a somewhat belated start, voted last Thursday evening, to join other West Michigan counties in financial support of the West Michigan Development League.

The decision was reached at a banquet and business meeting held in the dining room of the Hotel Charlevoix, at which time the association appropriated $200 for 1927 and expressed themselves desirous of coming in for a larger amount another year. What the meeting lacked in attendance was made up by enthusiasm and accomplishment.

At the opening of the business session after the banquet, President Charles H. Emrey introduced C. H. Venema of Grand Rapids, who talked on the purpose of the League, its organization, what it had already accomplished in advertising West Michigan, and pointed out in a very conclusive manner why it was of inestimable value to every county on the West coast of Michigan.

He stated that the West Michigan Development League was organized November 1st, 1926, with the purpose of offsetting a sad lack of concerted effort toward the permanency of our west coast. He pointed out that one builder was worth a hundred tourists, inasmuch as a builder could be depended upon to come every season, would come to our winter sports, and if for reasons beyond control he could not come that he would see to it that his investment was utilized by others. Those who build here pay taxes, buy lumber, nails, paint, furniture, and even luxuries, as compared to the tourist's expenses, and they are a perpetual revenue to the community in years to come.

One strong point of Mr. Venema's talk was that the sheer pleasure of driving would resolve itself to a matter of pure transportation, eventually, just as the bicycle and street car, which are now used only for transportation. It is up to our west coast, he said, to provide for this eventuality by doing all in its power toward building, so that when people cease to drive for the mere pleasure of it they will use their autos as a means of transportation to get to their homes in our communities.

Mr. Venema stated that the league does not use paid advertising, but has a publicity man who writes magazine articles and news items for newspapers which reach from coast to coast. Mr. C. V. Smazel is retained to do this work and just how well he does the job is evidenced from results already obtained. It has been found that magazine articles alone, figured on advertising rates, more than offset the entire expenses of the League since organization, and that they were unable to obtain any accurate check on newspaper publicity although that would amount to much more. He referred to Beulah smelt run, pointing out that it was shown through news reels over the entire country and was read in newspapers in Florida. This advertising was reflected in the number of people who witnessed the phenomenom this year. He also pointed to the publicity given the presidential summer home possibility—that starting from mere propaganda the president is giving it serious thought. It suggested to the world, he said, that a tempting place to the President must have merit. Stories and pictures, if warranted, of new summer homes being built, are sent to the builders' home papers, which are glad to get such news and it is good advertising for us, because the easiest prospects we have are the friends of those who have already built.

The League, he said, really sponsored the winter sport idea through the fact that Col. John G. Emrey, its president, is ex-National Commander of the American Legion, through which organization Mr. Emrey succeeded in planning systematic competitive meets and from which we will hear much next winter. It is also active in reviving water sports.

Some 41 counties of our state, Mr. Venema said, do not bring up enough taxes to offset the state's expenditures, which deficit must be brought up by the remaining counties. Many of these counties are logical summering places and the sooner they can be

STATE SOLONS FINISH WORK

1927 LEGISLATIVE SESSION CLOSED SATURDAY

Lelaod Three Cent Gas Bill Sigoed By Govornor—Capital Puoishmont Bill Killed in Senate

BY LEN W. FEIGHNER

"Ally oop!" 'Sall off!

Now we can go und rull our hoop.

In fact, a few whoops were roiled last night.

But the legislature of 1927 is all "Off for the night."

Dignified senators and demure representatives who have not smiled for weeks are homeward bound benign of countenance and wearing the satisfied smile of work completed and a breathing spell ahead.

Corridors are clogged with packing boxes filled with relics of the dead and gone past, legislative files, red books, passed and rejected bills, records of the past and hopes of the future. Of course, final adjournment is still a thing of the future, but that is a mere matter of form, when a few members from each house will convene and declare the official final adjournment, but the business of the session is done and from now on the halls of legislation will be as dead as the capital punishment bill, which was finally throttled in the senate Wednesday afternoon by a vote of 20 to 10. The rock on which the final split came was the referendum amendment, which the house refused to accept. The conference report was accepted in the house by a goodly majority, but 20 senators said "No," and said it emphatically. The 20 were senators Baborski, Bernard, Comden, Cummings, Engle, Herrick, Howell, Jankowski, Karcher, Lelund, Lennon, Person, Pulver, Quinlan, Read, Rushton, Stoll, Wilcox, Woodruff and Baxter. Those who voted yes were Binnin, Campbell, Gansser, Horton, Martin, O'Connell, Sink, Truettner, Watson and Wood.

Among the last minute bills of general importance and interest to the state at large to come through was the Leland gas tax bill, which was signed by Governor Green Friday morning. Senator Leland prizes as a souvenir the pen with which the bill was signed. The bill raises the gas tax to three cents, leaves the weight tax as it was, provides for $2,000 per mile annual maintenance for trunk lines and cities, gives the counties seven millions divided on the ratio of their weight tax, spreads another million equally among the counties, but was not given immediate effect, so that it will take effect 90 days after final adjournment.

Another important last-week measure was the traffic code measure, introduced by senator Baxter, which originally aimed to adopt the Hoover code making traffic rules more uniform in all the states. The bill was generously mussed up in both houses before getting through, and it practically does away with the speed limit on the open road, removing the 35-mile limit. It does, however, stipulate that drivers must be prepared to stop within the limits of the assured clear space ahead, and makes excessive speed an indication of reckless driving, in case of accident.

TOO MANY GRASS AND MUD LAKES

AS WELL AS DUPLICATE NAMES OF CREEKS AND RIVERS

Developmoot League of Western Michigan Aim to Change this Condition Throughout State

The Development League of Western Michigan is inaugurating a movement on this side of Michigan to appropriately and distinctively name all the lakes and streams of the region so that tourists and resorters will have no trouble finding the place they seek. Instead of a dozen or more long, grass and mud lakes, every lake will have a name different from every other, if the league realizes its ambition. The dozens of Cedar creeks will be cut down to one Cedar creek and the others will have individual names so that trout fishermen can be properly directed.

In this task of renaming the lakes and streams of Michigan the Development League is asking the cooperation of other parts of the state so that when the job is completed there will be no further duplication of names, saving both vacationers and residents of the state all sorts of trouble.

Grass lake, Antrim county, presents a concrete case. There are many grass lakes; the name actually means nothing—except the person who hears it just naturally assumes that it must be full of weeds. It is, however, one of Michigan's finest resort lakes, ideal for swimming, fishing, boating, with sand beaches. Business men around the lake want the name changed because "grass lake" gives a bad and erroneous impression; summer home owners want it changed because their friends are apt to think they vacation beside a waterhole full of weeds.

Suggestions for lakes and streams that ought to be changed because of their similarity to other names should be sent to Clarence V. Smazel, executive secretary of the Development League, Manistee, Michigan.

The first county-wide survey of actual resort development, made last week by Clarence V. Smazel, executive secretary of the Development League of Western Michigan, shows that Antrim county has at least 457 summer homes, more than a dozen strictly resort hotels and lodges, four summer camps, two for boys and two for girls, a meeting ground maintained during the summer by a spiritualist association and a number of privately operated camps for tourist campers, in addition to the public camps of that nature.

Antrim's 457 summer homes that will be occupied this season (some of them already are) range from one-room cottages, which provide shelter and a place to sleep for their occupants who come to the northern woods and waters for rest, coolness and recreation, to mansions that can be used the year around. The rapid growth of the resort business is indicated by the fact that 65 of the 457 summer homes were occupied for the first time last year and 40 more of them are to be occupied for the first time this year—almost one-fourth of them built during the past two years.

These figures do not include cottages which will be built this year but that have not yet been contracted for," Smazel stated. "Most of the cottages are built during the summer months, after the prospective owners have a chance to look over the lots they want to buy and place their contracts, although this year saw far more building done in fall, winter and spring than ever before. There is no doubt but that this summer's building will bring the total for the last two years to more than one-fourth of the total number of summer homes, and before the end of the present season Antrim county will probably have at least 500 cottages. I believe that a close check would show that fully 90 per cent of the summer homes now in use have been built within the last five or six years, since the automobile came into wide use."

Torch lake has the greatest amount of resort development in Antrim county, the county shows, while Elk lake is showing the most rapid growth. A similar count of summer homes will be made by the Development League in all the counties in West Michigan during May and June if possible.

Work of landscaping the Wright property at the west end of the city park has recently been completed under the personal direction of George Hemmingway, owner of the Charlevoix County Nurseries.

Two groups of Russian lilac, barberry and hydrangia have been set out, one on each side of the stone driveway. Completely surrounding the house other groups of shrubbery and small trees have been placed. Included in the settings are Colorado blue spruce, white spruce, Japanese yew, silver juniper, Douglas fir, ground juniper, ball spruce, Colorado black spruce and many other varieties, all artistically arranged and prettily beutifying the grounds. Numerous flower beds have been arranged and the entire lot seeded.

MICHIGAN CROPS LOOKING GOOD

EARLY SPRING HAS LITTLE EFFECT ON CONDITIONS

Fearod Fruit Crops May Bo Injured More or Less By Cold Weather And Late Frosts

The corn outlook for Michigan on May 1 was generally satisfactory with respect to the fall-sown grain, hay and pasture. While the spring opened earlier than usual, cold weather during April retarded growth to some extent. The rainfall during month was nearly normal in amount, and the advent of seasonable temperature early in May have improved growing conditions. The fruit prospects are more promising than last year. Although no official inquiry will be made until June 1, scattering reports that sour cherries have suffered serious injury from freezing temperatures in April and that a large percentage of the peach buds were killed during the winter. Some local damage to grapes, plums, and strawberries has also been reported according to a statement from Herbert E. Powell, Commissioner of Agriculture and Verne H. Church, U. S. agricultural statistician for Michigan. The outlook for apples is considered favorable.

Winter Wheat: The wheat crop of the state promises to be about one and one-half million bushels less than that of last year, not because of a poor condition but as a result of the inability of farmers to plant the the acreage intended under the adverse weather conditions prevailing throughout the fall of 1926. The May 1 condition of 87 per cent is five per cent above the ten year average and 12 per cent better than one year ago. The fields are looking good in most sections except those that are low and flat. In the east-central district, where planting conditions were extremely unfavorable last fall, there was considerable winter injury and some acreage has been abandoned. The abandonment for the State as a whole is only three per cent which leaves an estimated acreage of 929,000 for the harvest. With normal weather conditions during the next 60 days, the present situation indicates a production of 16,107,000 bushels.

Hay: The stocks of old hay on farms are about normal, being estimated at 538,000 tons or 13 per cent of the crop harvested in 1926. One year ago, the stocks only amounted to eight per cent of the 1925 production which was a relatively small one. While some individual farmers have had to buy during recent months, there is considerable hay in the surplus sections available for shipment. The outlook for hay this year is fairly satisfactory. New seedings are good in nearly all districts. Old meadows were injured to some extent by winter killing and April freezes damaged alfalfa in certain localities. The condition for the state as a whole is reported 84 per cent, 6 per cent better than a year ago but 4 per cent cent below the average.

SUCH CARELESSNESS CAUSE OF AUTO ACCIDENTS

A party of five young people, boys and girls, whose names we have been unable to learn, narrowly escaped serious injury last Sunday evening when their small touring car crashed through the gates at the north side of the swing bridge and plunged over the embankment.

According to eye witnesses of the accident, the car came down the Bridge street hill at a considerable rate of speed. The bridge was swung at the time to allow a boat passage, the gates were down and a car parked there waiting for the bridge to close. The young man driving the car stated that he did not see the gates down and did not know what the other car was waiting for, so just swung around it, crashing through the gate and down the bank. The car was badly wrecked, but luckily no one was injured.

Our advise to this young man, whoever he may be, is to hereafter keep his eyes open. Every possible means is employed to warn motorists when the bridge is open and anyone with his mind on his driving could hardly fail to see the warning signs.

TRY THIS CAKE RECIPE AS WE TOOK IT FROM AIR

We were twirling the dials on the radio the other evening when the good wife asked us to write down a cake recipe being broadcasted from a Chicago station. We did our best, but for some reason of other got two stations, both of the same wave length, one broadcasting the cake recipe and the other morning exercises. The result of our endeavor ran about like this:

"Hands on hips, pince une cup of flour on the shoulders, raise knees and depress toes and mix thoroughly in one-half cup of milk. Repeat six times. Inhale quickly one-half-teaspoonfull of baking powder, lower the legs and mash two hard-boiled eggs in a sieve. Exhale, breath naturally and sift into a bowl.

"Attention! Lie flat on the floor and roll the white of an egg backward and forward until it comes to a boil. In ten minutes remove from the fire and rub smartly with a rough towel, dress in warm flannels and serve with fish soup."

INTERESTING BOOK NOW ON DISPLAY

Claimed by Producers to be Largest in World

What is claimed to be the largest book in the world ever made in quantities is displayed this week in the show window of Benjamin Brown, local Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers dealer. The book is 63 inches high, 10 inches thick and when opened is 7 feet wide.

This mammoth book was prepared by Dodge Brothers, Inc. and is being featured in the windows of Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers dealers throughout the United States. It tells the story of Dodge Brothers new motor, announced May 1—as the most outstanding improvement in Dodge Brothers cars since the company started operations in 1914.

All the books being displayed would, if opened and placed on edge, reach well over a mile and a third or from Charlevoix to Pine Point.

If piled one on top of the other they would make a pile 41 feet higher than the Woolworth Tower in New York City which raises 792 feet above Broadway. If placed end to end and on top of each other they would make a column one mile high. Placed against the Woolworth Tower they would make six columns up the side of that building and another column reaching half way to the top.

Notice to Dog Owners

Many complaints have come to my office regarding dogs running at large and molesting and destroying game. The situation is aggravated in the extreme. Nests of game, and other birds, have been fuond destroyed by dogs. Dogs are feeding on young rabbits, and worrying rabbits carrying young. In my opinion, any person who permits his dog to go at large and molest game is not a true sportsman, nor a good citizen. This notice is being published as an appeal to sportsmen and good citizens to correct this abuse. It is also meant as a warning to all others. Hereafter all dogs must be confined to the owners' premises unless actually accompanied by the owner or his agent. Peace officers will be instructed to kill any dog running at large and pursuing game, day or night. We mean business. If you value your dog do not fail or neglect to heed this notice. If your dog is killed by any officer do not complain about it. It will be your fault. Game animals and birds are an asset to the county and it is every man's duty to help preserve them. Tie up,' or otherwise control your dog.

"I'm afraid you don't exactly understand." Peter Milman smiled. "I am neither schoolmaster nor reproving relative. I merely wish to ask your pardon if I talk of things in your lives that may stir up unhappy memories."

Floyd thought of his lonely room, his uncongenial work, and looked about him and sighed. He liked this unknown Peter Milman, with his charming manner and a dignity that had something forgotten and Victorian about it. Life had not given Malet what it had promised, and the disappointment had embittered him; but there was nothing disgraceful in what had brought him low.

"Go ahead, Mr. Milman," he said. "You can talk for days if you like."

"Let me begin with Mr. Fleming Bradney," said Milman. "I have said I once heard him lecture. It was because I read an article of his in the North American Review on radio-activity. What I read and afterward heard him say stirred up my imagination powerfully, and I understood that a man may have a passion for knowledge which is a burning hunger."

Fleming Bradney nodded his head. "Yes," he commented, "that's a good description of it. It is a passion that recognizes no limits of time or labor expended. It is a passion that has knowledge as its goal and not fame or money. Yes, I had it once."

"The circumstances which led Mr. Bradney to give up his life-work and drop out of his world have never been told in their entirety," Peter Milman said, after a pause. "I am going to tell you now. I may say that up to the moment of his retirement we have never had a physicist who gave such promise as he. It is to the honor of a great university in this state that he was elected professor of etheric physics and asked to erect the most superb laboratory for his work that could be built. It was to exceed in equipment that of Cambridge university. He was allowed to design it. I think such a chance has rarely been given to one so young."

Bradney nodded his head. "It was the greatest opportunity ever offered a man."

"And he lost it," Milman's quiet, precise voice went on. "He lost it, and with it the chance of making a career of supreme service to mankind. I wonder if Mr. Bradney would mind telling us how."

"It is all so confused and hard to understand," Bradney said slowly. "I am not a business man in any sense. I was convicted by the university authorities of stealing the money entrusted to me to build a laboratory which cost a quarter million dollars. Not all of it, naturally. I think I was supposed to have made away with something like seventy thousand dollars. The anonymous donor of a hundred thousand dollars whose gift had started the thing had expressed a wish that I should have absolute control. It was given me. A contractor showed me how, by using inferior materials, I could make a commission—that's his term for robbery, not mine—of twenty-five thousand. I should have exposed him then and there to the president, but he begged for a chance, and it was at a period of my life when I was drunk with the joy of my opportunities. His offer was soon forgotten." Fleming Bradney made a gesture almost of despair. "Somebody got at my papers and altered figures and estimates until even the faculty which wanted to believe in me believed me guilty. I would not explain. I had the hot anger that innocence feels when it is accused of treachery to its ideals. It was kept out of the papers for the sake of the university, but I was done with. Naturally I fought, enlisted friends, and even lawyers, but I had no money saved, and it was useless."

"What did Mr. Milman mean by saying the story had never been told in its entirety?" Floyd Malet demanded. He turned to his host. "Is there anything else to it?"

"A great deal more," said Milman. "Recent exposes of conditions in the building trades make it easier to understand. The man who offered Mr. Bradney a bribe to pass poor construction was not acting for himself. He was a subcontractor who would have made possibly a few hundreds out of it. He was acting for the inevitable 'man higher up,' who in this case was Paul Raxon. Perhaps you have heard of him?"

"Not the man who downed International Motors?" Neeland Barnes cried.

"Yes. I know a great deal about

I Remember It. Was Late at Night.

Paul Raxon. I have followed his career with deep interest. It was Paul Raxon who decreed Professor Bradney's fall. He was used to breaking men who defied him. Of course, we shall never get evidence of this. The subcontractor, whose living depended upon Raxon's favor, would never tell. There was one man who believed in Professor Bradney when the inquiry was started. This was the anonymous donor of the hundred thousand dollars."

"I heard of that," Bradney said, "and I begged them to give his name so that I could thank him. I have often vowed if ever it were possible to do something for him I would, but that's unlikely. What could I do, who made a bare livelihood?" Bradney surveyed his garb with scorn. "No decent man-servant would admit me to his master's house. I look what I am—a failure, and yet, God knows, not a cent of that money stuck to my fingers. What on earth should I want money for except for my work?"

"This Paul Raxon," Milman continued, "is one of the ablest men in New York. No decent man has a chance when pitted against him and his accomplices. He is not of the usual contractor class. He began life as an architect, but always desired wealth, and found his profession too slow a method to gain it. Yes," Milman said in a slow, meditative way, "I know a great deal about him. I even subscribe to a clipping bureau, so that I may miss nothing. You will be surprised to hear that I had him followed for a long time by a private detective."

"May I ask why?" Bradney returned.

"I shall tell you presently. Let me speak first of the misfortunes, equally undeserved, which befell Mr. Floyd Malet."

The sculptor flushed. "I don't think anyone but myself knows what they were."

"There you are wrong," Milman corrected gently. "A dozen years ago America discovered that Mr. Malet was a genius. Some of you may have seen the heroic figure of Stonewall Jackson at Raleigh. That made him."

"I remember now," Neeland Barnes exclaimed. "There was some sort of wild studio party where a woman was killed. I don't see how that could hurt an artist." Neeland Barnes had formed his opinion of the morals of artists from the fiction writing of sentimental women. "Surely that wouldn't put him down and out?"

"It did," Malet answered bitterly. "A sculptor depends—in this country, at all events—on commissions from public bodies, many of whom have women among them. When my name was besmirched it was deemed unwise to employ me to decorate buildings consecrated to drama, literature, of the arts. Even politics had to be protected from my impure touch: I lost the award I had been definitely promised for a statehouse because my morals were so the report ran—loose. My failure was just as complete as that of Professor Bradney. I had a little money, and that went in lawyers' fees. My friends were few and not influential.

"Like Alfred Gilbert, I destroyed what I thought was pearl, and that is why there are not three of my works left in the world today. I have talent, but I could have done good work if the incredible had not happened."

"As I remember, the thing was rather—er delicate," Barnes said.

"You shall judge. A poor girl accosted me on the street and said she was starving. To one who had lived so long in Paris, it was nothing out of the way to take a hungry gamine to my studio and give her a meal and a little money. I remember it was late at night, and I first saw her on a bench in Bryant park just as the first snow of the year began to fall. I was selfish enough to think her thin, draped figure would do for one of the models of a group I had in mind which was to be called 'Winter.' She told me something of her history. It was commonplace. I had heard it before, I do not mean it was not true. I mean, rather, that it was the usual story of the ambitious girl trusting too well the man who defers to marry her."

"I know," said Neeland Barnes wisely. "I know. Waiting for the divorce."

"She shrank from going up in the elevator because she was so shabby, so I helped her up the long flights to my studio. She fainted when she got there, and I gave her brandy. She was so ill that I wanted to send for a doctor. Instead she used the telephone. I did not hear the number, but I knew it must be to the man she spoke. Very reluctantly he agreed to come and see her. I think the fact that I insisted on speaking was the cause. Perhaps he imagined I knew his name and more about him."

"Then you didn't know who he was?"

Floyd Malet shook his head. "Nor do I now, but I remember him distinctly. He was a thin man with a black mustache and brown eyes with red flecks in them. I knew he was a man who had been successful with women. I met him at the entrance. He wore a fur coat whose collar concealed his face. Outside it was still snowing hard. I judged him to be one used to getting his own way. I did not like his manner. There was a snarl in it. Perhaps my studio—you know what a dirty, unluxurious place a sculptor's workshop is—did not impress him. The girl had died while I was waiting for him. He cried out that it was a trick I had played him. Then he ran out for a doctor and the police." Malet shrugged his shoulders. "I never saw him again. Sometimes I wonder if he was run over and killed, or if, when he found I did not know his name and did not find any letters in the girl's pocket, he left me to bear the blame.

"I sent for a doctor, who in turn sent for the police. When I told them the story of the man with the fur coat whose face I could not see distinctly, whose name I did not know, and of whose address I was unaware, I could see they thought me lying. And when I told them the girl had not taken the elevator, I could see they thought it was a vulgar intrigue."

"But the man with the fur coat didn't walk up," Neeland Barnes reminded him.

"But the elevator boy denied having seen him," Malet explained. "It was my word against his. The record of the telephone call could not be traced. I made a bad witness. Nobody identified the girl, and as I admitted giving her brandy, the thing was treated in the papers as a drunken debauch, and I was marked as a Parisian decadent. It was my finish."

Malet sank down in his chair. The sensitive face was marked by suffering. The stamp of realized failure seemed upon him. Bradney leaned forward and put an arm about the bowed shoulder of the stricken man. It was a protective, brotherly action born of sudden sympathy and understanding. But he had nothing to say.

Malet shivered a little as a light wind swept along the little garden. He rose from his chair and held out his hand to his host.

"You have made me forget and you have made me remember," he said. "I am grateful, Mr. Milman."

"But I cannot let you go yet," said the other. "There should be some cedar logs already blazing in the drawing room." He turned to the others. "We shall find it more agreeable in the house." He put his arm in that of the sculptor. "Never think you are a failure," he said earnestly. "Your Stonewall Jackson is one of the few great things we have."

"You are saying that to hearten me," Malet answered.

"Am I?" Peter Milman laughed. "You shall judge for yourself."

Although the drawing room was a finely proportioned apartment and contained many beautiful things, Malet had eyes only for his marble group which stood near the window. He had never learned where it was, but it was this work he had believed to be his best. He approached it almost nervously. Was he to find, after all, that he was only one of the second raters? The group had been exhibited under the name of "The Settlers," and represented one of those heroic American families of Colonial days standing at bay, facing death in the form of "King" Philip's Indian warriors.

None spoke as he gazed at it. Even Barnes felt that the emotion which he could not fathom had in it some unusual quality. There were tears in Floyd Malet's eyes as he turned to Peter Milman, and his voice was husky. "Yes," he said, in a low voice, "it is good. I should have been among the great ones."

"You are among them," Milman assured him.

CHAPTER IV

When midnight was passed and the four men very comfortably seated about the fire, Neeland Barnes began to think there was to be no unmasking of his past. In a sense he was glad. These two men whom he had begun by despising seemed, after all, to have cut considerable figures once. Barnes was a shrewd judge of men. He thought that they had spoken only the truth. The big man with the eager, gray eyes was most certainly no grafter. And as to the other, Barnes recalled his case well now it was brought to his notice. He had sneered at the sculptor's odd defense and believed it with most men about town a very poor excuse. But now he believed absolutely in Floyd Malet's integrity. In comparison, Neeland Barnes, professional man-of-the-world, felt rather a poor specimen.

"We now come," said Milman, breaking in on his reflections, "to the case of Mr. Neeland Barnes."

Mr. Neeland Barnes groaned inwardly. Exteriorly he was urbane and gracious.

Overdoing?

Hurry, Worry and Overwork Bring Heavy Strain.

MODERN life throws a heavy burden on our bodily machinery. The eliminative organs, especially the kidneys, are apt to become sluggish. Retention of excess uric acid and other poisonous waste often gives rise to a dull, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning perfectly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. More and more people are learning to assist their kidneys by the occasional use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Ask your neighbor!

PURITAN SAILS ON 21st FROM CHICAGO

Will Carry Fraight and Passengers for Northern Points

The new Michigan Transit Corporution according to O. E. Wilbur, local agent, announces that the season of navigation between Chicago and all Northern Michigan summer resorts will be opened May. 21st. with the first sailing of the U. S. Puritan. The Puritan will sail from Chicago, May 1, with freight and passengers for all ports, Ludington, Charlevoix, to Mackinaw Island, inclusive.

Early inquiries from all parts of the country point favorably to an unusually heavy passenger travel this summer to Northern Michigan.

The mild winter greatly lessened the customary winter travel by rail to Florida, California and other winter resort territories and if history repeats, it is only naturnl that more people will avail themselves of the opportunity to spend their summer in Northern Michigan.

The Puritan is now to be reconditioned and fitted out for her first trip north on Mny 21.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Running too little advertizing is like sowing too little seed.

A farmer planting corn puts four or five kernels into each hill, and is satisfied if two or three good, healthy stalks come from each planting.

It's the constant advertiser who attracts attention. His succession of offerings cannot be ignored. He knows that eight quarter-page advertisements published in succession will bring more business than a single two-page spread.

Nor can all the results be obtained from advertising he expected the day following publiention. Time must be allowed for the seed to sprout, grow, ripen and be gnthered in.

Constant advertising will bring success to any sound business, he it large or small.—Ex.

JUNIOR HOP WAS A BRILLIANT AFFAIR

More Then Eighty Couples Were Present at Annual Event

The Junior Hop, given by the junior class of Charlevoix high school in the Belvedere Casino last Friday, was one of the most colorful socinl events of the year. More than 80 couples were present, which number included many out-of-town invited guests.

The scene of the big event was very beautifully decorated in green and white, the colors of the senior class, the scheme working effectively into the whole program. Lattice work was used in the decoration of the hall and beautiful baskets of snap dragons, roses and daisies were placed on the tables. One end of the dance floor was a profusion of wild cherry blossoms and the whole decorative scheme won the admiration of those in attendence and reflected much credit on Miss Liela Heise, who hnd charge of the work.

The grand march, one of the feature events of the Hop, was led by LaRue Higman, president of the junior elass, and Edwin Kling, the class secretary. Dancing to the snappy musie of Fuller's Floridans of Traverse City, formed a full evening's enjoyment.

From the beginning to end, the Junior Hop was a huge success. Much of this success is credited to Miss Lucille Usher, manager of the nffair. Mr. and Mrs. Bert Beaudoin, Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Harrington and Bnyard Buchen acted ns chaperons.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Dr. L. C. Barnes, for many years secretary of the Amerlean Baptist Home Mission Society and active in national and internutional activities will be the speaker Sunday morning at 10:30. He would like to meet all young men und women who are anticipating a college education. Perhaps he can help them solve their difficulties.

It was voted in the morning service last Sunday to take two offering next Sunday—one for the flood sufferers, and one for our work in China. It would be disgraceful not to help our unfortunate countrymen, thousands of whom have lost everything in the Mississippi and tributary rivers as they have burst the confines of their banks and made great inland seas literally burying towns and country, and it would be rank disloyalty to forsake our workers in China now when they need us more than ever before. Inclose the offering in an envelope and mark on it where you wish it to go. Let us give to each a generous offering. Friends are welcome to add their gifts to ours if they so wish. It would be a worthy thing to do.

Bible school will meet at 12:00 noon. B. Y. P. U. at 6:30 and preaching service at 7:30. We will welcome all who come with us, and they can do as good. Come!

OWNER OF BIG FISH INN DEAD

J. H. Allgire Dies at His Home in Lima, Ohio

Ellsworth received a bad shock last week, when the sad news came of the death of Mr. J. H. Allgire, proprietor of the Big Fish Inn, who passed away at his home in Lima, O., on Thursday, May 5. Although Mr. Allgire has been in failing health all winter, his death was a great shock to his many Ellsworth friends.

About three years ago, Mr. Allgire purchased the Big Fish Inn from L. VanSkiver and has greatly improved the property by erecting several cottages. He contemplated upon building several more this season but due to ill health he was unable to take hold of the work. Ellsworth has lost a very enterprising business man.—Central Lake Torch.

of the state board of pharmacy, has died down following the report of the legislative investigating committee, which reported that they found the charges "unsupported by evidence," and exonerating the board.

The Turner bill, appropriating two million dollars to be spread among the poorer school districts of the state, has finally passed both houses, with the amount pared to one million.

The revised school code, which has been in preparation by the department of public instruction for months, has passed both houses, with but slight changes from the original bill. One amendment reduces the limit of retirement pension for teachers from a proposed $1,500 per year to $900.

Boxing exhibitions in Michigan will be allowed to go 15 rounds instead of ten, as formerly, but the proposition to raise the salary of Tom Bigger, state boxing commissioner, from $3,500 to $5,000 was removed from the bill.

Governor Green on Wednesday put the stamp of his disapproval on a salary increase for the state banking commissioner. He admits the salary is too small, but that there are too many salary increases being asked for.

The people of the State will have an opportunity to grant a salary increase to the legislators at the next general election. Both houses have passed a joint resolution to submit an amendment making the salary a straight $3 per day during the two-year term.

A proposition to have a committee appointed to look up the matter of buying or building a gubernatorial mansion in Lansing fell into discard during the closing days of the session.

The proposed new contract with the Grand Trunk was approved by both houses and the governor can get busy with it immediately. As passed it provides for a 70 foot highway on each side of the Grand Trunk tracks.

The proposed one dollar fod license bill for trout fishermen went to smash in the house Thursday.

The privilege for parole for condemned first degree murderers was taken from the governor, although claimed by some of the solons to be unconstitutional.

Milkmen may not deliver milk in another milkman's bottles, if the governor approves the measure passed by both houses.

Oil inspection by the state is repealed, subject to the governor's approval. A determined fight was made against the repeal, as it is not only a safeguard against poor kerosenes, but brings a revenue to the state above cost of inspection, but the measure went through.

The Horton bill, appropriating $40,000 for the care of Michigan veterans in the American Legion hospital, was approved by both houses.

Firearms must be registered with a board, under supervision of the department of public safety, and after September 1 no gun can be purchased without first securing a state permit and a certificate of registration.

Under the Dorin bill, the state will erect a $100,000 seaplane port at Grosse Isle, to be equipped with a machine shop.

Under a joint resolution which went through Thursday the state will give $5,000 for the relief of the Mississippi flood sufferers.

Appropriation bills went through in floods during the last week, the larger and more important of course being the University of Michigan, the Michigan State college and the deficiency bill. While the University and state college fell short of what we asked, they fared well when the state of the treasury and of general appropriations is considered. It is said that appropriation bills carrying a tax clause will total well over $25,000,000. Senate authorized expenditures of about $27,000,000 for the coming fiscal year and about $22,000,000 for the following year. The house approved of most of these, but of course the governor may cut out as he likes from the appropriation bills. University gets the whole of 6-10 mill, which will amount to approximately $1,500,000; these for maintenance and operating expenses, aside from appropriations for more lands and new construction.

State taxes will be largly increased the coming two years over any previous levy, but it is impossible to tell what the increase will be until the governor gets through paring items from the appropriation bills.

Both houses held their Saturday sessions, required to legalize the business of the past week, immediately after midnight, virtually a continuation of the Friday night session. The house adjourned at four o'clock Saturday morning and the senate at five o'clock, closing the business for the 1927 session save for the final adjournment session, early next month.

lped to the other side of the state's ledger the sooner the burden will be removed from the other counties.

He said that our own people need to appreciate more what we have, and told of an incident of a wealthy man who had spent $200,000.00 on his home on our shores and was satisfied with his investment to such degree that he spends four days out of seven the year round there, and resented having a local woman tell his wife of another "sucker" who bought a piece of land on our shores.

He was very much in favor of local advertising and intimated that Charlevoix could very well stand more road signs. He stated that Charlevoix would grow only in proportion to the growth of our west shore. A person who has read much about the advantages of Western Michigan, he said, is a logical man to hand one of our circular to, and many articles and much news of Western Michigan coupled with local advertising would sell our West coast and bring us back great returns.

Mr. Venema's talk was followed with by C. W. Smazel, executive secretary of the League, who gave an outline of his activities and told of some of the work he had been doing along publicity lines for Western Michigan.

FRESHENING BREEZES

A Chicago barber has installed a radio for the benefit of his customers. Sometimes one wonders if even a radio can compete with a barber for continuous conversation.

Speaking about a wet spring and the flooding of a country village, word comes from a Southern Michigan village that a woman sank in mud to her waist in front of the town post office and it was two days before her plight was discovered.

Up in Alberta the discovery of seven aces in a deck of cards caused a shooting affray in which five were killed. To most of the boys the discovery of even one ace is still something to be hoped for.

If science is so wonderful as it claims, why doesn't it make an effort to provide something besides your best razor to take the place of a missing can-opener.

With the Chelsea cement plant, Jackson prison and the corn borer on its hands, it's no wonder that the administration is in favor of a deficiency bill.

The Chinese are reported to be striping their victims of their clothes. Still up to their old tricks—one of 'em down in Ann Arbor has a shirt that belongs to us.

With pelts of lobbyists valued by the legislators at from 40 to 60 cents, it begins to look as if the hide of a country editor isn't the cheapest thing in the world after all.

What has become of the old-fashioned parent who caused the poet to say, "Oh, for the smack of a vanished hand on the place where the spank ought to be?"

What Michigan needs is a few more razor strops and old fashioned wood sheds.

Cleveland police were called out to quell a riot the other day when two women fell to fighting over a bargain hat in a down town department store. Probably nothing to the scrap the average woman will put up to make friend husband come through with enough change for a new lid.

With the new television it's going to be hard for a fellow to call up the old homestead and tell the wife he's being detained down town on account of business.

With the farmers organizing to quell bank robbers and chicken thieves it looks as if we wouldn't need the standing army much longer.

"A lesson to all young men. How not to live."

"Mr. Barnes," said Peter Milman, "is not so complex a type as his fellow-guests. He aimed at physical attributes rather than intellectual or artistic achievements. And he succeeded just as they did. I doubt if there is an American diving who excelled in certain phases of sport as Mr. Barnes did.

"He was a man who might have passed a blameless life had his money lasted. There came a time when his relatives would not help and his horses could not win races. Finally, he was arrested of some trickery at Saratoga and found his racing career at an end. Since then he has been living insecurely on what his few remaining relatives chose to give him."

"Mr. Milman," Barnes said, and there was a certain dignity in his bearing, "I have been almost every sort of a fool in my day. I have thrown away fortunes and gambled and drunk like a madman, but I never pulled any dirty tricks on a race track. I was always out to win and never betted against my own horses. I'm not what you might call a reliable man, and I've done things I'm heartily ashamed of now, but I did not do what the Saratoga stewards believed of me."

"What did they believe?" Bradney demanded. He knew nothing of racing.

"My trainer gave evidence before them that I instructed him to dope my entry for the Saratoga cup so that I might bet on another horse. Mine was the favorite. It did go to the post full of fromide, and the horse I was reputed to have bet on won at long odds. I had the trainer against me and the bookmaker, and, because I was known to be in monetary difficulties, I was disbelieved. Not that I blame the stewards. They did their duty as they saw it. Somebody fixed my trainer and the jockey. I was forced out of the racing game, and found I hadn't a friend in the world. My wife would have believed me, but she was dead. I used what money I could get hold of to fight the thing, but the man, or men, who framed me had more money. I shall never know who it was."

"I know," said Peter Milman quietly. "You were not framed, as you term it, by any crooked owner of thoroughbreds. None of them was big enough to pull down a man of your sort. You had traditions and a name behind you. Your downfall came because you threw a man from the pier at Narragansett into the Atlantic ocean. Do you remember?"

"Yes," Barnes said slowly. "I think I do. There was a woman mixed up in it, but I forget her name now. She was one of those little fluffy blondes that were fashionable that season. Ah, I have it. She was a roof-garden star. A man came up and tried to make a scene. My Aunt Sarah, who was most particular, was coming toward us. The thing would have been most disastrous because I had turned over a new leaf the previous evening and a codicil was to be added to her will. Fortunately, the man struck at me, and I thought the simplest way out of it was to drop him in the sea. Aunt Sarah, being short-sighted, did not even see him disappear." Mr. Barnes mused on the thing for a few moments. "Most extraordinary. I never saw him again. There was no summons, no publicity—nothing. I was a bit uneasy at first lest he should have been drowned, but some body saw him crawl ashore. I never knew his name, and I never saw the blonde again."

"The man you threw into the water was the man who arranged matters so that you should be compelled to give up racing." There was a trace of triumph in Mr. Milman's manner. "You will never be able to prove it, so don't try."

"And I hoped he didn't drown," said Barnes, looking about for sympathy. "What's his name?" Barnes did not doubt his host's sincerity for a moment.

"All in good time," said Milman; "first let me show you his photograph." He unlocked a drawer and took the picture from an envelope. "Is that he?"

"As I remember it, yes," said Barnes; "but it's years ago, and there might be a possibility of error."

Milman passed the photograph to Floyd Malet.

"Do you recognize him?"

There was excitement in the sculptor's voice. "It's the man with the fur coat who came to my studio that night. This is the man, I'll swear. What's his name?"

"That is the man to whom you all owe your misfortunes—Paul Raxon."

It was a plain, narrow face that stared back at them, but it was not the face of a fool. Few men without the early advantage of financial training had impressed themselves on Wall Street as he had done. The collapse of International Motors and the failure of the Hazen Brewer crowd to break him made Raxon for the moment the most spectacular figure in New York. And yet none of Milman's guests had ever before seen a photograph of him. He had a knack of outwitting the newspaper photographers. He had smashed many cameras. It had come to be understood that to attempt to photograph him was to incur the enmity of a man who never forgave or forgot.

"That he broke Professor Bradney was a precautionary measure and not born of any personal malice. No doubt his subordinates had found the professor was not rich and supposed him ripe for the fall. There is hardly a doubt that he has made enormous amounts by these methods, always covering himself with hopelessly compromised lesser men who dared say nothing. As to Mr. Malet, that was merely bad luck and not in the first design. I don't suppose Raxon had anything personal against him, but he recognized the opportunity to escape from a troublesome position. The only purely personal spite was in the case of Mr. Neeland Barnes. Raxon was intending to buy a big house at Narragansett and entertain largely."

"I don't remember the name there," said Barnes.

"He left the pier," Milman answered. "Raxon is curiously sensitive to ridicule. He could not remain to be pointed out as the man Neeland Barnes had contemptuously tossed into the ocean. It took him several years to get his revenge, but it was a complete one. He boasts that he never lets up, and ascribes Indian ancestry to this unamiable quality. His most spectacular hatred was that my poor friend Hazen Brewer incurred.

"Brewer committed suicide because he had plunged into penury a man who was near and dear to him. This was a man unused to finance, who trusted Brewer, with his fortune and mortgaged his home in a vain effort to save his friend. Brewer felt disgraced. I think this emotion was far more potent than the fact of his financial collapse. He did not know that his friend harbored no hard thoughts of him and would have made no complaints. After all, the friend's loss was very little compared with his downfall."

Fleming Bradney, perhaps the closest observer of Milman's guests, was becoming possessed with a vast impatience to know for what reason he had been summoned. Bradney had the analytical mind of the scientist. There were several things in Milman's narrative which needed elucidation.

"Why," he asked suddenly, "did you subscribe to a press-clipping agency and put a detective on Raxon's track?"

COURTESY AND SERVICE in West Michigan

Article No. 4

West Michigan garages have a responsibility in the region's tourist and resort business they do not often realize because almost every man who comes through our country has to do business at least once a day with our garages and gasoline stations.

A. H. Landwehr, Holland industrial leader, said in an address recently that in California the gasoline attendants at gasoline stations where "gas" sells from eight to ten cents a gallon, are so eager to give good service "that they do everything except wash your car and overhaul the motor and won't even take a tip. It's all in the program of making California a pleasant place for tourists."

The writer recalls a fellow on M-11 (U. S. 31) just north of Muskegon who gives just that sort of service and he's certainly getting the business; traveling men who discover his place make it a point to stop there whenever possible and tourists undoubtedly do the same. The larger oil companies require cheerful and wide-awake service from their employees. But the station operator in the small town or along the roadside could often be more pleasant, more thoughtful of the traveler's convenience, more noticing of his needs, and and thereby help make the tourist a regular customer for himself and Western Michigan, a resorter with a summer home to which he comes year after year, the ideal summer visitor.

WHOLESALERS WILL BE HERE FOUR HOURS

Famous Furniture City Band to Accompany Them

Agricultural, industrial and commercial activities have combined to make the State of Michigan celebrated throughout the entire world. That these vital activities have been conducted by men of superior ability is one of the very substantial reasons for the State's prominence in both production and distribution, for without these leaders, either would be ineffectual. In this distribution of products the wholesalers of Grand Rapids have been a vital factor, are and have been playing a most important part in bringing tourists into the Western part of this state by getting solidly behind the Michigan Tourist & Resort Association, thereby helping to build Western Michigan as the "Playground of America" and bringing into this section of our great state hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly for the retailer.

It is for the purpose of meeting and greeting retailers in the territory that the managers of the various wholesale concerns make these annual tours with upwards of one hundred in number on their special pullman train, and will arrive in Charlevoix May 24 at 6:30 a. m., staying until 10:00 a. m.

The wholesalers will be accompanied by the famous Furniture City Band, which will be heard at every stop. This will be the 21st trip of similar character made by the Grand Rapids wholesalers and farmer visits here were made memorable by the entertainment furnished by the visitors.

The visiting business men always pay particular attention to the children of the various schools by distributing souvenirs liberally, provided especially for this occasion.

* * * * * * * * * *

From the spirited discussion which followed Mrs. Usher's paper on "A Warless World" at the W. C. T. U. meeting last Friday, it is very evident that all women are not pacifists. Most of them evidently believe in preparedness and protection of their own rights.

The meeting was held with Mrs Amos Webster at 1028 May street, and there were 23 women present.

The result of the residential canvass for Red Cross flood relief was reported as $128.32.

Five new members were reported, making a total of 29 in the 1927 drive. Every member is pledged to total abstinence and to employ every proper means to secure the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Law enforcement and wet propaganda were discussed in the meeting. We play into the hands of the wets when we repeat the stories current about law violations without tracing them to their source and notifying the officers of the offense if it has foundation.

Alice Usher and Janet Livingston played several delightful numbers on the piano at the close of the afternoon.

The next meeting will be held at the Congregational church June 10th and members of the Boyne City Union will be guests.

MODEL OF SHIP IS A FINE BIT OF WORK

Duplicate of Frigate Constitution Done in Copper by Hand

The ship model displayed in the window of Bonthron's plumbing shop is the work of Frank Novetney, locum tinner and certainly is a piece of art.

The model is a duplicate of the Frigate Constitution of Revolutionary War fame and is said by those who have seen the original ship to be its likeness even to the smallest detail. The whole model is made of copper, cut and soldered by hand, and shows the famous old fighting vessel in full sail.

Mr. Novotney used a magazine cover picture of the boat to go by and has taken four weeks at the job. He stated that he intended to build a larger model during the coming winter, using experience gained from making the present boat to perfect an even better one later. One may more fully appreciate this excellent piece of work by going to the plumbing shop and looking for themselves.

County Raises $1,410.00

Charlevoix county subscribed well over her quota in the Red Cross drive for funds for Mississippi river valley flood sufferers. Latest reports show the total has reached $1,410.00. East Jordan topped the list with a total of $786.00. Charlevoix raised $317.87 and Boyne City $307.08. Efforts are still being made to raise more funds and the total will be considerably swelled before the drive is completed.

* HOSPITAL NOTES *

* * * * * * * * * *

Mary Finucan had her tonsils removed at the hospital last Saturday.

Mrs. Floyd Rice spent from Friday until Monday evening at the hospital for medical treatment.

Mrs. John Weiland of Ellsworth, submitted to an operation last Sunday.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Ward, Monday morning, a 9½ pound baby boy.

Sam Rontley is in the hospital this week for medical treatment.

Mrs. Steve Bradshaw of Central Lake, submitted to an operation Monday.

Mrs. William Tate of East Jordan, was operated on at the hospital Tuesday.

Miss Elsie McClanaghan of route 2, was operated on Tuesday for ruptured appendix. Her condition is critical.

In the Courier issue of May 4, a glaring error was made under the heading "Hospital Notes." In the superintendent's monthly report it read "births 6, deaths 6." In regard to the number of births, the item was correct. But in regards to the number of deaths, it should have read three instead of six. The error was made in copying the report. During the month of April, three people died in the hospital. In each instance they were brought into the hospital almost at the last minute of life, with the hopes that by special care or an operation, life could be prolonged. We make this correction due to the fact that the error brought forth considerable comment, especially from those not familiar with what might be termed as "emergency cases," or rather, cases brought to the hospital almost at the last minute of life, with the hopes that some relief might be given. No hospital nor physician can accomplish the impossible, and in most instances where deaths have taken place in our local institution, they were "emergency" or last minute cases.—Editor.

MICHIGAN CROPS LOOKING GOOD

rather early, the cold weather during April has retarded growth although the condition is 80 per cent, or five per cent above normal. On the same date last year it was only 56 per cent. As there is an ample supply of moisture, warm weather will bring them forward rapidly.

The average condition for all states is 87.0 per cent. On May 1, 1926 it was 74.6 per cent of normal.

Farm Labor: The supply has been a little more plentiful this spring, the ratio of supply to demand being 102 per cent one month ago. With the increased need for hired labor at this season, the ratio has dropped to 97 per cent by May 1.

For the entire country, the supply averages 89.9 and the demand 88.4 per cent above normal, giving the ratio of supply to demand of 101.1 per cent.

C. R. BELLINGER DIED LATE SUNDAY

WAS CHARLEVOIX'S OLDEST BUSINESS FOUNDER

Spent Nearly Forty-eight Years at Watch Bench in His Bridge Street Jewelry Store

Today Charlevoix mourns the death of Charles Roland Bellinger, its oldest business man, and this very fact is the best tribute that may be paid a man who has lived the years of usefulness Mr. Bellinger has.

Death, which occurred Sunday afternoon at around 4:30 o'clock at the family home on Bridge street, was entirely unexpected and a severe shock to the family and citizens of the town generally. Mr. Bellinger was apparently in the best of health and in spite of his years was a very active man. He had been on the streets at various times Sunday and just a few days ago he remarked to a friend that he had never felt better in his life. Death overtook him while he was alone in his home; other members of the family being absent at the time, and not aware of his passing until their return.

Charles Roland Bellinger was born at Popes Mills, New York, December 25, 1858, at which place he spent the first 16 years of his life on a farm near Black Lake. During these years he apprenticed himself to one Joseph Tanner, who taught him the watchmaking trade as only the old-timer knew. Finishing with Mr. Tanner he remained only a short time in New York, coming west and stopping at Maple City, Michigan, where he had relatives. Leaving there he worked at his trade in Frankfort and Traverse City and later with his bag of tools he fixed watches and clocks as he walked from house to house on his way to Charlevoix. Here he stopped at the home of O. D. Hilton, who persuaded him to locate in this city. He opened his shop in Charlevoix in 1880, and had managed it continuously until the time of his death, making nearly 48 years he had worked at the watch bench in our city.

He was married at Traverse City in 1878 to Adeline M. Hodge, who survives him. Other survivors are four children, Wm. C. Bellinger of this city, Mrs. G. E. Dutton of Saginaw, Mrs. Frank Schuler of Muskegon, F. G. Bellinger of Sawtelle, California, 14 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services were held at 2:00 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the Methodist Episcopal church, under the auspices of the Masonic lodge, of which he was a member, Rev. C. E. Pollock officiating. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

The office of an obituary is not to give voice to a man's modest estimate of himself and his accomplishments, but rather to leave upon the record the verdict establishing his character by the concensus of opinion on the part of his neighbors and fellow citizens. In touching upon the life history of Mr. Bellinger, the writer aims to avoid extravagant praise, yet he desires to hold up for consideration those facts which have shown the distinction of a true, useful and honorable life—a life characterized by preservance, energy, broad charity and well defined purpose. Having done this only reiterates the dictum pronounced upon the man by the people who have known him long and well.

Dana Hinckley Reappointed

Editor Dana Hinkley of the Petoskey News, has been appointed one of the commissioners of the Mackinac Island Park. This is a splendid appointed because of our friend and neighbor is close to the park and knows its requirements and its various needs. He is a man of wide vision and that vision includes a wide awake interest and recognition of what the parks and the people visiting them every year means to the progress of the upper part of the state.

CITY SHOULD CALL A HALT TO ALL TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS

The Petoskey News says: "It's going to be 'Good Morning, Judge' for those auto drivers who persist in driving with only one headlight, no tail light, driving past stop street signs, and with speeding and reckless driving on the city streets. Between 30 and 40 drivers who were operating without proper lights have already been warned, and at second offense will confront the judge. Several speeders have already paid stiff fines and others have paid both fine and costs for various infractions of the traffic laws. A campaign to secure correct observance of the rules and regulations governing road laws is also under way, and better and safer driving for all is hoped for."

Wouldn't it be a God-send to those who try to observe general traffic laws, also pedestrians, if a similar campaign was started locally. Little, and in many instances none at all, observance is made to the law governing stops at stop streets, U turns on Bridge street, signals in making right or left turns and traveling at high speed on our main streets. Cars with lights on full blast are met at any time at night on Bridge street. One never knows when a car will back out from its parking place. Daily you see cars parked on the wrong side of the street, headed in the wrong direction. Speeding at night on side streets seems the chief diversion of some drivers. Open cut-outs, cars loaded with from six to nine youngsters, and other similar violations are frequently observed. If a checking up on these violations was ever needed, it is right now. One arrest and one "Good Morning, Judge" would soon put a stop to these violations.

PLANS SET FOR MEMORIAL DAY

PARADE TO START AT NINE-THIRTY SHARP

Splendid Program Prepared for Exercises at Cemetery—Services at Memorial Park

Details of the Memorial Day program at the cemetery and services at Memorial Park have been completed by committees in charge, and with the cooperation of Charlevoix citizens the day will be observed in a fitting manner.

All those participating in the memorial services are requested to assemble on Park avenue west of Bridge street, not later than 9:10 a. m., as the parade will form and start promptly at 9:30, and proceed to Memorial Park, where a short but impressive service will be held to commemorate those who died upon the seas while in the service of their country. All organizations are invited to participate in the parade and those who do will find a place assigned to them.

Immediately after the service at Memorial Park the parade will continue its march to the cemetery, where the program outlined below will be given to commemorate the memory of our heroic dead. Commander Hamilton of the American Legion will be in charge of the parade and services as officer of the day.

Program

Invocation, Rev. C. E. Pollock.
"America," City and School Bands combined.
"America," sung by school and audience.
Address, Rev. Herman Burns.
Selection, High School and City Bands.
Selection, American Legion Quartette.
Ritualistic Work, Baxter Post, W. R. C.
"Star Spangled Banner," sung by school and audience.
Legion Memorial service.
"Star Spangled Banner," Band.
Taps.
Prayer.

We have been asked to speak of a seeming disrespect for the flag and the national anthems shown in the past. When the American flag passes in parade every man should bare his head and every person should stop and come to attention until the flag has passed. The same applies when "America" or "The Star Spangled Banner" is being sung. We hardly believe that any of our citizens have ignored this courtesy with any idea of disrespect, but more likely through carelessness and by some possibly through ignorance.

With possibly minor changes, the above program will be carried out Monday. It is the duty of all citizens to be present.

Use Sunoco Gas and Oil—it is the best money can buy. Ask those who have used it, then try it yourself and be convinced. You will find it at The Sunoco Oil Station, ½ mile south from Antrim street on U. S. 31. Open early and late. A. C. Hansen.—Adv. 21-t2.

OFFICERS GRAB WET VIOLATORS

ALL ENTERED PLEAS OF GUILTY IN CIRCUIT COURT

"It Takes a Crook to Catch a Crook"—Method Found Very Effective in This Case

During last week the officers of the county stepped out and applied the law to a number of moonshiners who were operating about Charlevoix. Search warrants were obtained and seven places were searched and in all cases except one evidence in the shape of stills or liquor was secured. When arrnigned in circuit court Monday, all stood mute but the next morning changed their plens to guilty. Sentences have not yet been imposed.

We hear considerable chatter about the street regarding the use of two detectives who obtained the evidence for the searches. It seems that these detectives do not have a character approved by some local persons who offer criticisms. These person claim that the officers should not use men of that type to secure evidence. The officers are saying nothing except to ask whether these persons, who do not need to be named must be consulted by them before any action is taken to enforce the law. They say that none of the violators was induced or tempted to commit a crime. The violators were caught with the goods, and admit that they made the sales to the detectives. The latter did not frame anyone. The affidavits they made were true, and they were in court ready to back them up. One objector was backed into his hole when an officer asked him if he would object if detectives, or any other character of man were used to run down a gang of theives operating in the county. The objector at first tried to say that the cases were different, but finally had to admit that he was wrong.

It is probably true that the detectives "made up" for their parts. Their "make-up," from all that we have been able to learn, was rather complete. Some of their actions may have been unnecessary, but that is a matter resting in the sound judgment of the officers. It is to be noticed that nearly all complaints regarding the "make-up" of the detectives come from wet sympathizers, or persons who were uninformed. The officers also say that they have had little success in trying to secure evidence from either "known" drys or "known" wets. We suppose they mean that "It takes a crook to catch a crook."

We have very little comment to make. It seems to us that these men who are doing the objecting have a wrong slant. If they would bend their energies to looking after their own business and permit the chosen officers to run their offices according to their best judgment, it would be better for them and the public generally. The officers are to be commended. They are capable and fearless, and notwithstanding the "hollering" can be assured that the large majority of the thinking public are with them.

PHEASANT EGGS DISTRIBUTED THIS WEEK

Beaver and Garden Island Get Part of Consignment

Under the supervision of Ed. Deuel, district game warden, three baskets of pheasant eggs were distributed for hatching in the vicinity of Charlevoix the fore part of this week.

The consignment was received here Tuesday afternoon from the state conservation department's breeding farm at Mason, Michigan, one basket was sent to Beaver and Garden Islands at the request of the Beaver Island Game Protective association, another was taken to Boyne City, and the third distributed out of this city.

Mr. Deuel stated that county conservation officials are busily engaged planting the streams and lakes of the county and that a large number of fingerling trout had been placed in local waters this spring. In spite of unfavorable weather, trout fishing has been the best in a number of years. Large catches have been reported at numerous times and the size has run above the average. Local sportsmen attribute this to two causes: high water and excellent feeding conditions in the streams this year, and the order closing feeder streams.

COURT PASSES SWIFT JUSTICE

PLEAS OF GUILTY ENTERED IN ALL CASES TRIED

Rapid disposal of criminal cases characterized the first two days of the May term of circuit court which opened here Monday morning. Twelve cases were tried, parties found guilty and they have either been sentenced or are awaiting sentence.

Seven of the parties taken in the raid last week and charged with violation of the liquor law, pleaded guilty when arraigned in court and are being held for sentence.

In the case of The People vs. Grace L. Oldham, violation of the liquor law, respondent pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced by the court to pay a fine of $200 and costs of $100, in default of such payment to serve from six months to one year in the Detroit House of Correction. The court recommended eight months.

Moxie Spangenberg of Boyne City, charged with violation of the liquor law, pleaded guilty and will be sentenced later.

In the case of the People vs. Grace Robert Cotton Sears and William Herbert Sears, charged with destroying a deed, the former was sentenced to pay a fine of $1 and costs of $15. The latter was discharged.

Monroe VanCamp pleaded guilty to a charge of rape. He was placed on probation until the first day of the August term of court, and must pay court costs of $50 before September 15th. In default he will be brought into court for sentence.

In the case of the People vs. James Martin, for sentence, the court ordered him to pay a fine of $75 and costs of $300. The original charge of was the illegal netting of fish. He was sentenced in justice court and appealed the case. From all appearance he might have been satisfied with the original sentence.

JOHN COOK DIED MONDAY MORNING

DEATH CAUSES REAL GRIEF TO CITIZENS OF CHARLEVOIX

Had Served in the Capacity of City Treasurer for a Period of Nineteen Years

Charlevoix loses one of her most estimable citizens in the death of John Cook, who died shortly after midnight Sunday at the University hospital in Ann Arbor. Death resulted from pneumonia with which he was afflicted following an operation for cataract of the eye. There is hardly a person in the city who will not feel some measure of grief on account of Mr. Cook's death, for he was known by everyone.

Deceased was born at Brooklyn, Canada, September 12, 1859 and resided there until the age of eight years. His parents having both died during his infancy, Mr. Cook went to the township of Scott in the Province of Ontario, Canada, where he resided with an aunt, Mrs. George Huntington, until about the age of twenty-two. In the year 1881 he came to Charlevoix and followed his trade as a stone and brick mason until stricken with a disease known as arthritis, which has made him practically an invalid for twenty-five years.

Some nineteen years ago Mr. Cook was first elected to the office of treasurer of the city of Charlevoix. His re-election each year until the time of his death is an outstanding tribute to the faithful and courteous manner in which he performed his duties as a public servant. Although partially crippled, his wife brought him each day to his office in a wheel chair, and there his genial disposition, with never a complaint ever through his suffering, won him the close friendship of Charlevoix citizens.

Mr. Cook was married in Charlevoix to Elma Helena Moore, February 24, 1885. To this union were born three children, two of whom, besides the widow, survive, viz: Mrs. J. H. Campbell of Pontiac, and J. Byron Cook of Belding. A daughter, Ethel, died at the age of 21.

Funeral services were held at 10 o'clock Wednesday forenoon from the home on Mason street under the auspices of the Masonic lodge of which he was a member, with Rev. C. E. Pollock of the Methodist Episcopal church officiating. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

CHANGES YOU INTO A BIRD—MAKES YOU HOWL AND GROWL

An exchange says: "When officers raided a moonshine making plant in an Italian home near Iron River along with a still bubbling over with mash and a trickling stream of moonshine, they discovered 42 dead song birds, including robins, chickadees, woodpeckers, meadow larks and song sparrows, which the members of the family had killed to eat, as their habit they claiming they did not know it was against the law to kill such birds. The game wardens then lodged a complaint against the woman found in possession of the song birds and she was fined a total of $105. The moonshine charge against her husband will perhaps come off in the federal court."

Well, well. This might be a solution to the actions of some of our local fellows. Can it be that our Bohemian friends picked up in the raid last week have been peddling their product charged with woodpecker steak, meadow lark soup, or sparrow loin? One we saw recently, well lit up, imagined himself a bird of some kind—would sing for a while and then tap his nose against a telephone pole. It never seems to have the same effect on those who drink it. Another would look at the moon and howl. You can never tell how it will make you act, at least, this has been the results of our observations.

Mothers Look for the Quaker's picture when buying oats.

That means richer flavor

WHEN children say they don't like oats, it's usually because rich Quaker flavor is missing.

Children who ordinarily don't take to oats are often quickly won to this important food, simply by giving them "Quaker."

The flavor is uniquely different; toasty, rich and creamy, Quaker Oats alone has it. Some 50 years were spent in perfecting it.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed. Thus protein, carbohydrates and vitamines and "bulk" combine in making Quaker Oats an excellently balanced ration.

Director Clarence Badger Hollywood's Memory expert

Hollywood's champion memory expert has been discovered. He is Clarence Badger, the man who directed "IT," Clara Bow's first Paramount starring vehicle, which reaches the Palace on Saturday and Sunday.

Madame Elinor Glyn, author of the story, who spent much time on the set, observed Badger proceeding from one scene to another without consulting scenario. She was astonished, and inquired as to his methods.

It was then revealed that her screen adaption from the original story of "IT" had not only been studied thoroughly by Badger before starting the photoplay, but he had also memorized the scenes of each sequence.

TOURISTS LIKE TO SEE CHANGE

OUR NATURAL SCENES APPEAL TO THEM THE MOST

They Revel At Sight of Sand Dunes and Shacks That Are Eye-Sores to Us

What are attractions in West Michigan for tourists and resorters?

Familiarity breeds contempt, apparently, in many different ways and recently it is being discovered that West Michigan's familiarity with many of its natural attractions have bred contempt for them, according to Clarence V. Smazel, executive secretary of the Development League of Western Michigan.

Some time ago Elk Rapids decided that the squeeking reels and old slab shanties of its commercial fishing village were unsightly between its main street and the Lake Michigan shore and accordingly sought some means of ridding the village of the settlement. But a wealthy resorter, with an expensive summer home right beside this "eyesore," called upon the village council and offered $500 if the village would be allowed to remain "because it is something different, real evidence of a pioneer industry and a vital link with the past of this country, which I now call home at least in summer." The Elk Rapids council got a liberal education at that meeting but wouldn't accept the $500; now the summer home owner has taken steps to preserve the old commercial fishing settlement as long as possible!

A million—perhaps a billion—times West Michigan's winding sand roads have been cussed. Yet an Indiana man, writing in a national outdoor magazine of a fishing trip through the region, declared that one of the greatest delights of the trip was the drive through those winding sand roads of Lake Wexford, and Manistee counties! Reminded him of Indian trails, he said, and convinced him that he was really in God's great out-of-doors. "In that story is a tip for resort road builders," Smazel says. "Roads to resort districts should not be slashed through the trees or timber, but should take natural winding routes, the principal requirements being that there are no impassable holes in the road, that it have foundation enough to stand the amount of traffic it is to bear and that it is brushed out enough so that good automobile paint jobs are not spoiled by limbs. Preserve the appearance of nature; it is no prigilege to drive on straight highways or city streets; and it's merely an additional expense to build a road that way."

Old deserted, falling-down hunters' shacks and pioneer log homes are also objects of attraction. Even more modern structures that have been deserted along the country-side as long as they are not too numerous, draw the eager attention of tourists, especially if in a lonely and woodsy spot. Anyone can become interested in an old house—perhaps a big happy family there in the old days, perhaps a young couple with several children later, struggling to make a living while industry crowded out agriculture as the principal means of livlihood—all interesting because it is real life. Why not forget West Michigan as abandoned farms, at least so far as our summer visitors are concerned, the Development League's secretary suggests, and call them pioneer homes no longer livable, which, in fact, is what they really are?

PETOSKEY MAN BUYS WALLOON LAKE HOTEL

Fern Hotel to Be Run Under New Management This Season

William H. Fochtman, of Petoskey, has purchased the Fern Cottage Hotel on Walloon Lake and has already taken possession. The hotel was erected about 25 years ago by Mr. and Mrs. B. Clayton Bixby, who have operated it very successfully since.

Mr. Fochtman is well known in Petoskey and Northern Michigan, having resided there many years. He and Mrs. Fochtman will devote their entire time to their new undertaking and friends predict a continued success for the hotel.

The hotel was one of the oldest on Walloon Lake, being pleasantly located in a good sized plot of lawn and grove on the shores of the lake in the north section of the village of Walloon Lake. It is not far from the stores section and post office and has a splendid bathing beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Bixby will continue to operate other interests at Walloon Lake and will maintain their home on State street in this city. They spent last winter in Florida and may return there again next season.-Boyne Citizen.

Dear Mr. Gilpin:

We operate two complete factories, one in Detroit and one in Chicago. We also have Branch Warehouse facilities in Cleveland and New York City. The large volume of correspondence between these points involves our considerable use of the long distance telephone. We would scarcely know how to operate without your facilities. We encourage prompt action by permitting our subordinates to call each other at will. The resultant rapid turnover of inventory is more worth the telephone cost.

Our exclusive operating licensee in Canada is in close touch with us by telephone and within the past few months, since you changed your lower rates to begin at 8:30 in the evening, I have talked with the plant of our California licensee in Los Angeles several times. This service has been surprisingly clear, prompt and economical in every way.

In one of these conversations with our Los Angeles connection, my young daughter talked to our Mr. Rauen, just for the experience. The best expressed my own feelings - "Daddy its no different than talking right in town".

The RECLUSE of FIFTH AVENUE

"Because I had learned through a source entirely confidential that it was Raxon who had ruined Mr. Mabet. I was interested in Mr Mabet. I think that marble group proves it. And I have said I was interested in your work too. If it had been possible to clear you, I should like to have done so. I am not sure there was not something of childish vanity in it. I liked to sit here in my lonely, unvisited house and feel I was learning day by day, hour by hour, more about a man who believed himself above the law and building up this knowledge into a weapon against him. But I found he was so secure as to be able to boast of things that no legal evidence could charge him with, Neeland Barnes, for example. A few hundreds spent in bribery, or a few promises dropped as to future patronage, and the thing was accomplished.

"All you have done," said Bradney, who was suddenly assailed with doubts as to Milman's ultimate purpose, "is to get us here and show us what failures we are. That is not kind, unless you have a remedy. Don't you see it puts us in a very poor light? A man may fail and still have self-respect left. I decline to consider myself a black sheep. You tell me Raxon ruined my career. I shall make a point of seeing the editors of all the great New York papers and telling them what you have said. Too long a certain type of man has ruled our cities in the name of democracy."

There was no doubt now about Peter Milman's uneasiness as he listened.

"I thought you understood," he said quietly, "that this conversation was privileged. If you go to your editors you will do two things: One will be to convince them that you have brooded so long on your troubles that you are mad. The other will be to disclose the confidences a dead man gave me."

"But you want me to give up the only chance I may ever have of clearing my name," Bradney complained.

"You can never clear it that way. I don't think you can ever hope to defeat Paul Raxon that way." His tone changed a little. "Tell me this Mr. Bradney. Which counts more with you: the clearing of your name of suspicion of dishonesty—not actual conviction of it, remember, for your case never came before a court of law—or the opportunity to devote your life to your chosen science?"

"The latter, of course," Bradney cried. "It is only if I establish my innocence that I can hope to get another appointment. Such work as mine is very costly. I must have large funds at my disposal and elaborate equipment."

"And you?" Milman said, turning to the sculptor.

"If enough mud is thrown at a man, no matter how innocent he is, some of it will stick. I have long since abandoned any hope of being whitewashed. In a sense, the equipment of the sculptor is expensive. If I were a painter, it would be a different thing. There is no institution to endow broken, middle-aged men."

"It is for that reason I asked you all to come here," Milman answered. "You don't understand? Gentlemen, I am a broken middle-aged man. In Hazen Brewer's failure my entire fortune went. I mortgaged this house to help him. Out of the wreck I may save enough to live in a couple of humble rooms for the rest of my life. We are all in the same boat, all four of us victims to Paul Raxon's whims."

"You," Neeland Barnes cried. "You had all sorts of money, I thought."

"I have none now. That is hardly true. I have enough to live on in this house for three months. Then the mortgage will fall due. There will be an auction sale and an end of the New York Milmans." She paused unless—"

"Unless what?" Bradney demanded.

"You complained a few minutes ago, and justly, that I had listened to your confidences and given none of my own. Very well. You shall hear me now. To begin with, I am prepared to abandon the conventions and habits of a lifetime in order to keep this home or mine. I was born here, and I wish, when my eyes are to close forever, to die here. I have suffered disappointments in my earlier life that have not made me anxious to go about and be pointed out as the Peter Milman whose wife ran away from him. My life is bare. I cannot face the world with equanimity after those solitary years where never an unwelcome person came to disturb me."

Of the three watching him, Neeland Barnes was conscious of the deepest depression. Milman had brought him here under false pretenses. All those dreams of future prosperity were idle ones. The man was almost as down and out as he himself. He must go back and try to persuade Lippsky to let him live rent free until something turned up. There was always Milman's hundred to hold against the bad day. "Well," said Neeland Barnes, almost sympathetically, "what are you going to do about it?"

Peter Milman's answer amazed them all. It was given in a way where doubt had no part. He was confident without being assertive.

"I am going to get my money back from Raxon," he said.

"But you have said he's above the law," Bradney retorted.

"And I mean it. I had not thought of invoking that sort of law. There is an older one."

Mabet looked at him in sudden comprehension. Long since he had seen something from behind the smile of the well-bred host. This was not any longer merely a quiet, middle-aged gentleman who faced them. It was an avenger. Mabet wondered the others did not see Milman as he did. Captain Oliver came to life again.

"Don't you see," he explained, "Mr. Milman means that he is going to get Raxon somehow, law or no law?" The whole thing was now plainly discernible to him.

To Barnes it seemed that madness had seized upon the recluse of Fifth avenue. Peter Milman represented to him all the conventions of an established order, an order which frowned upon the ways of adventurers.

"One man wouldn't have a chance against Raxon," he exclaimed. "Besides that, Mr. Milman isn't that sort of a man."

"My dear sir," said Milman, and there was a queer smile on his face, "for what purpose do you suppose I have invited to my house three men who might, but for Paul Raxon, have been rich and famous? Was it merely coincidental that you three should have been his victims, while I made up a fourth?"

Peter Milman was by all odds the calmest of them all. Even Bradney, the slowest to be influenced, experienced an emotion of excitement.

"The only point now to be decided," Peter Milman went on, "is whether or not you will join me." He looked from one to the other of them with that curiously steady gaze of his. It was the expression that Captain Oliver had lent him, an expression which would have been a puzzle to those who had known him well in other days. "Well, gentlemen, what is it to be?"

CHAPTER V

Peter Milman leaned against the corner of the Colonial mantelpiece of cream marble and looked at his guests with no undue eagerness. He might have been proposing a game of billiards or auction bridge.

For the moment none of them could estimate with any exactness just what risks he was asking them to run. They knew only that this man of blameless life distinguished family and assured social position was calmly proposing to engage them in a conspiracy to take from Paul Raxon some of those many dollars his unscrupulous conduct had won.

"Naturally," Milman continued, "you are too much surprised to have your answers ready. You cannot believe that I am serious. Or you may think for unguessed reasons that I am trying to trap you into damaging admissions. I repeat in all seriousness that I am ruined. I have some inconsiderable assets which may be untouched, but all the things in this house of value—and there are many will be sold because Paul Raxon ruined my closest friend. And he murdered him, gentlemen." Milman's voice was sterner now. "Raxon has brought me to an impoverished and friendless end. Unless I struggle against it, I shall join those unnumbered victims his career has created. My proposition is most certainly a reasonable one. Since Paul Raxon by illegal means—or, let me say, inequitable means—has brought us to what we are and driven my dear friend to a suicide's grave, I purpose to pool our abilities and enthusiasms and make him pay something in return."

Milman's remarks were addressed mainly to Bradney. He was assured of Barnes, and he had seen an eagerness about Floyd Mabet. It was Fleming Bradney who was frowning.

"This is too important a thing to settle offhand," said Milman. "You will, of course, spend the night here. Your rooms are ready for you. I will say only this: If you want proofs that Raxon is the cause of your troubles, I cannot give them. He is not the sort of man who can be convicted by any ordinary process. If you want my word of honor as a gentleman that I am certain he is to blame, I give it to you readily."

Milman pushed the button that summoned Achille Lurry. It was plain he wished no further discussion. Only Bradney made a protest.

"I'm in evening dress. I can't go back to the works like this tomorrow morning."

"I do not think you will ever go back there." Peter Milman said, smiling. "It may be that you think otherwise and will miss a day. If so I have provided you against reasonable loss. I urge, gentlemen, be my guests tomorrow."

"I wonder," said Neeland Barnes, "if I could have just a little brandy? I'm a bit excited with what you have said, and I'd like to make sure of a few hours' sleep. "Thank you," when Achille had been sent for the cognac. "Count on me tomorrow and the day after and as long as you like. If any hair-splitting moralizing coward tries to persuade himself that he hasn't got a grievance against Paul Raxon, let him go home, set the alarm get up at daybreak and punch the clock when the whistle blows."

At the moment Neeland Barnes felt there was nothing he would so much like as swinging his right across to the point of Bradney's jaw. Barnes considered that he stood in the light of Milman's champion. He owed a duty to so generous a host.

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," said Peter Milman. "Please do not quarrel. Professor Bradney has risen superior to personal enmities. He has forgiven Raxon. I confess that I have not."

Bradney looked coldly at Neeland Barnes.

"Mr. Barnes," he said, "has courage, and a tendency to quarrel. Most men have. It requires greater courage to estimate the risks of such an undertaking as this and then enter it without heat or rancor. I am not a coward morally or physically; and if Mr. Barnes thinks so, he is as poor a judge of men as he is of the considerations he owes a fellow-guest."

"My fault, my fault entirely," Barnes murmured. He had seen in Bradney's eyes no trace of fear. He was conscious that old New York had not performed according to traditional form. "Noblesse oblige," he added suddenly. "A little excited." He waved an arm which included the whole of the luxurious room. "Sudden change from a hovel furnished by a man called Lippsky. Went to my head. Haven't been inside a decent house for years." He was relieved when Bradney smiled at him.

"It is late," said Peter Milman. "so I think we had better arrange to breakfast together at nine. You will find night-gear and dressing gowns in your rooms."

He shook them each by the hand. Bradney had the feeling of being sent to bed like a child. He did not get into bed when he had changed. He lighted his pipe and flung himself into a big chair. He was no less excited in his own way than Neeland Barnes. There was something under the courteous exterior of Peter Milman which he had not yet solved. Was the veiled promise to reinstate him the result of sane belief or a madman's vision of victory? He knew nothing about Peter Milman.

Bradney's room was separated from that occupied by Floyd Mabet by a bathroom. He rapped at the door, and was bidden to enter.

"Sorry to bother you," said Bradney, "but I'd like to discuss this thing with you. I'll admit the thing obsesses me entirely. Selfishly, I'm bound to say. My life has only one love, and that's my work. If I thought there really was a chance of being able to get control of a physical laboratory again, in dependent of outside interference and subsidized to insure continuous experimentation, there is nothing I would not do."

Floyd Mabet did not speak for a little while. Very much the same thoughts had passed through his own mind. "I don't mind saying," he remarked, "that my present existence is so distasteful that prison has no horrors for me."

"Exactly," Bradney said quickly. "Will it lead to prison? You see, we should not go to prison as heroes, but as miserable little blackmailers, or something of that sort. Is this man sane? That's the thing which bothers me. I've never heard of him before. What is his family history? Is this a great delusion? Has he brooded so long that he has become abnormal? He knows about you and me and that ass Barnes, but what do we know of him?"

"Let's ask Barnes. They have common friends, as we learned at dinner. I rather like Barnes. You can see he's willing to be first or second murderer whenever called upon."

Neeland Barnes was stretched on a chaise longue. Over his pajamas was a rich lounging robe of blue silk.

"Come in," he cried genially. He had entirely forgotten his temporary annoyance at Fleming Bradney, which had sprung less from dislike of him than a desire to come to the aid of his host.

"Look here, Barnes," Bradney began earnestly, "tell me as a man of the world what you think Mr. Milman really means."

"I think he's got a plan up his

IF you would be well, see to your elimination. Faulty kidney action permits toxic material to remain in the blood and upset the whole system. Firestone GUM-DIPPED TIRES

Note balanced tread with even wear—no excess or wasted rubber. Flexes freely with Gum-Dipped carcass—easier riding—surer steering.
No ply separation or "shoulder breaks"—extraordinary mileage. Has tradein value, or can be recorded to give additional thousands of miles.

Firestone Round Tread Balloon

MANY Firestone Dealers are prepared to take in your old tires, offering you a liberal allowance on a new set of Gum-Dipped Balloons.

Firestone Dealers are given the advantages of attending Tire Educational Meetings held throughout the country, where tire design and construction are discussed. The sections of used tires reproduced here are a part of this program. Study these two sections and you, too, will understand what Firestone means by tires built for service and tires made to sell.

Note unbalanced tread with uneven wear—excess rubber at shoulders wasted, stiffening tire, making it harder riding and harder steering.
Note low hinging action at heavy shoulder causes ply separation and broken carcass.

The Firestone Gum-Dipped Balloon with its scientifically designed tread permits free flexing, easier riding, extra comfort and safety.

The balloon tire with heavy, flat tread design is obviously stiffer and rides harder. The excess rubber, placed for appearance at the edges of the tread, is not only wasted but produces hinging action causing ply separation and "shoulder breaks."

Firestone designed and manufactures Oldfield Tires and Tubes, distributing them direct to Firestone Dealers only, through 148 Factory Warehouses. This efficient and economical distribution assures tire buyers everywhere; clean, fresh stocks of Firestone and Oldfield Tires in all types and sizes, and has helped to make possible today's remarkably low prices—the lowest in tire history. LOCAL CARRIERS ATTEND CHEBOYGAN MEET

Good Roads and Maintenence Were Topics of Discussion

Postmaster George W. Weaver in company with Earl Miller, Harlin McGhan, Louis Sharrow and Floyd Black, local rural carriers, attended and reported a very interesting meeting of the Northwestern Michigan Association of Rural Carriers at Cheboygan last Saturday.

Inspection of the Cheboygan postoffice, the newest government building in Northern Michigan, and talks by Mayor Al Weber and Rep. Fred Ming, were highlights on the program of the meeting. There were about 40 carriers present, six postmasters, postoffice workers, railroad mail clerks and officers of the Northwestern Michigan Association of Rural Carriers' making a total attendance of about 100.

Cheboygan entertained the guests and served a delicious whitefish dinner at the Elk's temple. The sessions were held at the Odd Fellows' temple. Mayor Weber welcomed the men to Cheboygan and the invocation at the banquet was by Rev. G. A. Weaver, of Petoskey.

Vice-President Gardner, of the Michigan association, was present and had a part in the business sessions. Roads and maintenance were the topics for discussion.

Word from William Paddock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Paddock, states that he will graduate June 10 from Michigan State College at Lansing. Shortly after this he will leave for Fort Sheridan, where he will spend six weeks in training camp.

"Bill" recently took a civil service examination which he passed successfully with one of the three highest standings. As a result of passing this examination he was offered and has accepted a position with the U. S. forestry buseau, and will leave about September 1st to assume his duties at Umoka National forrest, located in Virginia and Tennessee. His permanent headquarters will be at Bristol, Tenn.

Mr. Paddock's parents are very proud of their boy's record, and justly so. "Bill," as a lover of the outdoors will follow a profession to his liking. His friends extend congratulations.

BAPTIST CHURCH

As announced we made an offering for the flood sufferers and another for our workers in China. The two amounted to about forty-five dollars. It was nearly evenly divided. We were glad thus to share with those less fortunate than we.

Dr. Barnes' coming was an event. This world-wide experienced veteral certainly brought inspiration and we are sure some Charlevoix young people will seek to secure a college education because of his visit with us. Our evening congregation greatly enjoyed Miss Black's, singing and hope she comes again.

Our ladies are meeting today with Mrs. Sam Hamilton on Belvedere avenue, in a Mission circle meeting. They will elect officers for the ensuing year. The Aid Society will meet one week from today, June 1st with Mrs. Eva McGhan, 106 West Lincoln street, for a similar meeting.

Next Sunday morning we will join in the Union Memorial service at the Methodist church. Other services for the day and week will be as usual. A glad hand of welcome for all who come.

In announcing the new figures Monday, George Lord, chairman of the state tax commission, explained that the assessed valuation of the utilities represented an increase of $8,756,850 over 1925, the tax will net $853,759 more than last year, and the rate has been increased from $27.56 to $29.10.

Railroads of the state were valued at $306,415,000; telephone and telegraph companies at $81,745,450; sleeping car companies at $1,395,000; car loaning companies at $5,249,450, and express companies at $1,500,000.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

First Congregational church, Bernard G. Mattson, Pastor.

At half past ten o'clock this church will unite in the union service to be held in the Methodist Episcopal church in observance of Memorial Sunday.

The regular Sunday school session will be held at noon.

Young peoples' meeting at 6:30 p. m. and evening service at 7:30.

The evening service, thought and conversation will center around a choice book entitled "The Syrian Christ" by Abraham Ribhany, a native Syrian who has risen to a position of literary and Christian leadership in America. The subject will give many beautiful illustrations and explanations of the customs referred to in the gospels, many of which are perpetuated in Syria to this day. Those who attend will find themselves enriched with a more enjoyable intimacy with their new testaments and with a fresh appreciation of the truths of the gospels.

The mid-week meeting will discuss living forces and significant events in the extension of Christianity throughout the world. No force today has more vitality in it than the Christian church. Cynical writers in magazines and novels make cheap capital out of the defects of certain types of religion which are rapidly passing away. It will be the aim of these evening conferences to meet such superficial ignorance and acid smartness with real fates and with glimpses of many noble and fruitful lives giving devoted service today in many callings in many parts of the world.

Services at Ironton will be held as usual.

HENRIETTA BALDWIN DIED LAST MONDAY

Untimely Death Leaves Stricken Parents and Host of Friends

Nearly an eight month struggle to regain the coveted health of youth came to a sad close at 12:00 p. m. Monday in the death of Henrietta Corlett Baldwin. That she should be stricken in the flower of young womanhood after so valiant a struggle strikes deeply into the sympathetic hearts of all who knew her.

Miss Baldwin was born at Boyne City, Michigan, September 16th, 1908, the daughter of Emrey D. Baldwin, now deceased, and the present Mrs. DeForrest H. Wood. She received her education in the Charlevoix public schools and graduated with high honors as salutatorian of the class of 1926. She had a university career ahead of her, but before entering the University of Michigan discovered her ailment and was operated on the 9th of last October for removal of the spleen. After passing the critical stage of her recovery from the operation she rapidly gained in health and up until a little over a week ago her recovery was considered complete. Complications set in, however, which resulted in her untimely death.

Henrietta was possessed with that sweet, genial disposition, which made her a friend of anyone she met. She always had a smile for everyone, and was a friend indeed, to all of her acquaintances. She leaves a deeply grieved mother and father and a sympathetic community.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed at this time.

Life is growth— a challenge to environment. GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP

The following is an interesting extract from an address by Henry S. Ives of Chicago, at the recent industrial conference at Brimingham, on the evils of government ownership:

"Government ownership is the product of loafing minds and loitering ambitions. It is the indolent offspring of the addle mind and its ancestry may be traced back through a long line of dawdling political soothsayers. As a theory, it lacks imagination, originality, inspiration and romance. As an actuality, it is a stupid, dull, languorous method of carrying on the work of the world. It is the substitution of government deficits for private profits. It is the dragging brake on individual enterprise and a stubborn barrier to industrial progress. It is the Santa Claus idea of government, heralded by political sleigh-bell ringers. It has never won an economic battle, despite the unfair advantages it demands in its own behalf. It has never developed a new idea, it has never created anything except jobs. It is destructive of wealth growth and productive of debt growth. It deadens the will to do and nourishes the will to be done by. It makes politics instead of business the national dividend producer. Such is the indictment of experience. The suspicious government failures in the world have been in public ownership. But despite this record there has been developed in this country a very strong agitation for the adoption of a system which hasn't worked anywhere else and which has always proved an effective bar to industrial development. In fact, Socialists use it deliberately as a curb to prosperity because continuing prosperity spells the doom of socialism."

SAVING HUMAN LIFE

Marked progress has already been made by the railroads in an effort to provide greater protection at grade crossings. Safety devices of various kinds have been installed while obstructions which obscure the view of the tracks have been removed. In addition many other steps have been taken to increase the safety of the public at crossings. Enginemen are also devoting more attention than ever beforr to the giving of adequate warning when their trains approach grade crossings and are doing everything possible to avoid accidents at those points. Greater realization on the part of the motorist, however, that he, too, must co-operate wid the railroads and use increased care in approaching grade crossings is necessary.

CLEANING UP THE AIR

That the present radio congestion will be reduced to a minimum before autumn, is the promise held out by the United States Radio Commission, whose power of authority to clean up the field of broadcasting is vested in an act of Congress. Of the present 732 broadcasting stations now on the air, it is estimated that not more than 150 will remain when the commission finally decides to issue permanent permits. This will be brought about by weeding out the undesirables without enlarging the broadcasting band, which would render thousands of the present receiving sets valueless. Chicago and New York will be cleaned up as a first move, the pirates and bad boys put out of commission, only those with unsullied records remaining. Portable stations, which number about forty, will be eliminated entirely, it is believed. They were a source of interference with established stations and really performed no service otherwise than that of an advertising nature. For the present only temporary licenses to operate are being issued by the commission. These are limited to ninety days each, which not only bring the stations under Federal control, but will enable the commission to thoroughly investigate the past record of the station before another permit is granted. Under this arrangement a station must not only show an unsullied record of the past performance, but it also must be able to convince the commission of its ability to provide acceptable programs in the future. Under this arrangement piano solos, screeching kids and advertising talks will be wiped out. Curtain lectures, stock reports, how to take care of the baby, or somebody's view on the Chinese situation will not be allowed to interfere with the fellow who likes to tune in on his favorite station and listen to what Detroit is doing to Philadelphia with Ty Cobb in the line-up. And when the day is ended and he desires to listen to something worth-while, the air will not be filled with the screech of hundreds of stations all trying to use that particular part of the ozone over which he grabs his program from out the night.

WHAT REFORESTATION MEANS

A few years ago the lumber industry held an important place in the commercial life of Michigan. Great sawmills, operating day and night, provided employment to thousands of men. The logs and lumber furnished tonnage for the railroads and the industry paid immense amounts in taxes. As the supply of timber grew less, the sawmills stopped operation, one by one, and many a prosperous community became nothing more than a bare landscape as the sawmills closed and milling operations ceased.

Reforestation will bring new life to many of these communities that are now looking to a dreary future. It will keep the wheels of manufacturing institutions turning. It will add to the tax rolls. It will give employment to thousands of men and, besides all this it will mean that we will import less lumber for our own needs. Michigan's vast acreage of cut over lands are capable of producing more than pine and timber suitable for the manufacture of building material. Jack pine and other quick growing timber suitable for the manufacture of paper can be raised and another gigantic industry can be saved to the state. Reforestation is an economic proposition in every sense of the word. It means millions to Michigan.

THE LITTLE OLD MAN OF THE BILLS

A few days ago we attempted to hold a "Father's Day," but up until the present time the seismographs have failed to register any serious disturbances throughout the country as a consequence. In fact, the day passed almost unnoticed, father's attempted place in the sun reminding us of the cold, dark stillness that falls over the congregation when the minister announces a second collection for the suffering natives of some heathen land. We know that dad as a rule is a self-effacing individual who comes and goes without much ado, so perhaps it is no wonder if we take him for granted, just as we take for granted the skies, sunshine and the seasons. But very few fathers of the household desire any special attention; they rather shrink from it. Mother is entitled to such things, and there is not one in the home who does not try to make "Mother's Day" for her a happy occasion. But to go back to the little old man of the domicile. We know that not all of them are deserving of very much celebrating in their honor, but some are. We know of many men in this community who are supporting large families in comfort, and doing it without a word of complaint. The man who does this and meets his bills at the end of the month is a hero in real life. We watch them come and go every day, some who are beginning to walk and act, not tired, but just weary, slowly ageing with the years. It is only when father lies in state in the best room, one he has used so little in life, that we walk in for a farewell look and through the tired lines in the silent face does there come to us that perhaps after all he might have enjoyed "Father's Day" a little more if we had given him the opportunity.

IN EFFICIENT HANDS

The railroads are in efficient hands; their managements have achieved results never before attained and they readily have given the full share of credit for what has been done to their employes who have co-operated with their companies. There isn't a business in the world where there is closer relationship between the employer and the employe; where it is seeking, it is due, for the most part, to the public interference with railway revenues. Every workman is worthy of his hire, which quite a few opponents to fair railway return, reasonable wages and service conditions do not want to admit.—From The Railway Trainmen.

Why buy poor tires at a low price when you can buy a Goodyear tire at that price. Benj. Brown.—Adv. 10tf.

FRESHENING BREEZES

Speaking of the gas tax, what a whale of a difference a few cents makes!

President Coolidge has made it plain to China, that so far as we are concerned, no hellee no smackee.

All the governor seems to lack now to look like a former great American is a prominent set of teeth.

We believe the governor should approved the "Smeller" bill—just see what a lot of old women's noses he put out of joint.

We hope the South wont take it as an affront the nightly rendition of "Muddy Waters" by some of the so-called Northern baritones.

It is a good thing for the manufacturers that we don't treat automobiles like the old folks did the one-horse shay.

We get this track from the farm to the city is not caused by the desire to get a little bit nearer to a gas station.

With shorter skirts and all those heavy winds we can't see why Florida should come in for such a lot of panning as she does.

Scientist now claim that the apes sing to each other. After listening in on some of the radio programs we are convinced that not all of them are hanging from a tree in the jungle either.

sleeve to trim this Raxon and share the profits with us. The blue suits me down to the ground."

"Do you think Milman is sane?"

"Haven't a doubt of it. Why should you?"

"His amazing proposition for one thing. He doesn't belong to the criminal classes, and yet he proposes to extract enough money from Raxon to pay back his own losses and endow my laboratory and start Malet again and give you a new chance. We know very well that Raxon won't give up money unless forced to. To use force is to come under the frown of the law. In short, it is a criminal undertaking."

"Not as I look at it," said Barnes easily. "Raxon in my opinion is an outlaw."

"But the law," Bradley insisted, "the law doesn't admit that. To the rest of the world he is a great man."

"We know he's a crook, so what do we care for the world?" Barnes was evidently not to be shaken. Bradley tried another tack. "Is there any insanity in the Milman family?"

"Not that I ever heard of. The Milmans have always been shrewd, conservative men. Poor old Peter's the last of 'em, and the best. It may be there's something crazy in wanting to live down here, and yet, when I see what a beautiful home he's got and think of my shack at Peekskill, I understand why he wants to fight to keep it."

Barnes nodded a genial good night to his visitors. He did not understand why they hung back. Already he was visioning the future. He would buy a great ranch in California. And there, with splendid horses to ride, he would pass the rest of his days. And, of course, he would have his daughter.

When the three men in evening dress were summoned to breakfast in the Japanese garden they found their host similarly clad. Whether he had not been to bed, or whether he had dressed thus to make their own garb less singular, they did not know. They knew only that they found him free from embarrassment and as courteously considerate as he had been at dinner. Not during the meal was anything said about his proposition. Milman talked freely of his garden and the rare plants in it.

A little dial at his side attracted Bradley's notice. He saw that a wire was attached to it leading to the north wall.

"A little burglar device of my own," Milman explained. "By it I am enabled to detect the presence of anything on the iron screen which shuts this place in. For example, if I find the dial indicates five pounds in weight, and that the object is moving, I can tell almost certainly it is a wandering cat. If a hundred and sixty pounds, I can be sure of a burglar looking for an opening. Cats are frequent visitors. In the score of years this garden has existed I have had no more than seven burglars."

"What happens to them?" Barnes asked. "How do you get them?"

"I extinguish the lights here and the shades are drawn back. By illuminating the marked area, I see the intruder and have him at my mercy. I keep a loaded shotgun handy, and there is seldom any difficulty in the matter. Only one ever got through."

The Alarm Must Have Been Out of Order.

The alarm must have been out of order, for he sawed his way in during dinner and broke his neck on a stone known, very amusingly, as 'the Stone of the Respectful Visitor.' I am very well protected here. I have had time to elaborate certain devices which make me feel perfectly safe. The police assure me that my cellar is the attraction. It is stored with what was laid down many years ago and the law allows me to keep."

Watching the speaker carefully, Bradley had come to the conclusion that his host was wholly sane. "I've made up my mind," he said, when Achille had gone.

"Well?" said Milman. He felt if dissuaded. "Well?"

"I'm with you."

"I thought you would be when you had had time to reflect that what is unlawful is not always inequitable. I am very grateful. And you, Mr. Malet?"

"Count me in."

"I don't think Mr. Milman has any doubts about me," Neeland Barnes remarked.

Peter Milman smiled a little. He rather liked this big man. "I had no doubts about you. Now that we are agreed, let us discuss the thing."

"First of all," Bradley said, "what are your plans?"

"I have no plans," Milman returned. I see that you look disappointed. Evidently you expected me to have the whole thing cut and dried. That, gentlemen, seems unreasonable. What object should I have in inviting you here if I were able to accomplish the thing alone? I approach the problem with an open mind. My contribution toward it will be to entertain you for three months. If at the end of that time we are not successful, this house will no longer be my home. We shall have failed, and if we are still at large there will be five hundred dollars each for you. All expenses will be borne by me. I hope you are not dismayed by my news. I do not think you will be. You have not been chosen idly. In Professor Bradley we have a great intellect fit to expend itself on our common problem. In Mr. Malet we have the quick mind and vivid imagination of the artist. Mr. Neeland Barnes brings to us physical prowess and an extensive knowledge of the underworld and its ways. My contribution seems small by comparison."

"First," said Fleming Bradley, "let us collate all documents that bear on the subject. I assume you have data concerning Paul Raxon, Mr. Milman?"

"I have a great deal," said his host. "I know details of his personal and business life that he cannot possibly suspect."

"But how," Bradley asked, "if you rarely go out and never receive visitors, can you get at this information, which must most surely be very difficult of access?"

"In the beginning, by design, I was determined to find out what forces had pulled you and Malet down. Later, by accident. I spoke not long ago of my cellar. My father laid down a great deal of port in 1871, when I was born. It is a wine I do not greatly care for. A lawyer named Loddon, who has acted for me for some years, is also Raxon's confidential attorney. His name never appears publicly in Raxon's affairs. He is engaged mainly in keeping his client clear of the effects of earlier indiscretions. Loddon had dined with me many times, and this port induces amazing loquacity in him. If I have doubted his assertions, he has boasted the more loudly. These dinners became at last a most interesting part of my life. I drew him on deliberately, never permitting him to see my keenness." Milman smiled. "For every bottle of my port Loddon drank, he repaid me a hundred-fold. It was when Loddon learned that Malet had made 'The Settlers' that he told me in so many words that his client was responsible. I will not weary you with details. I have a careful record of every conversation. It soothed his ego to talk, and he believed me harmless. Yes, gentlemen, I know a great deal about Paul Raxon."

"And you think he'll be easy to defeat?" Bradley asked.

"No more dangerous man lives in all New York," Peter Milman said gravely. "That is why I have been so careful in selecting my companions.

CRIMINAL CODE LAW HAS BEEN SIGNED

Measure Backed by Rep. Harris Effective September 2

The Harris-Condon code of criminal procedure, embodying the recommendations of the crime commission appointed by the last legislature, was signed by Gov. Fred W. Green. The new law will not take effect until September 2, as it was considered advisable to give attorneys and courts of the state an opportunity to familiarize themselves with its provisions.

Introduced in the house by Rep. John M. Harris of Boyne City and maneuvered through the senate by aid of Sen. George M. Condon of Detroit, the code revises and codifies Michigan's criminal laws and court procedure for disposal of criminal cases.

While the code was considered a long step in advance, it met considerable opposition in the House of Representatives until Gov. Fred W. Green sent a special message to that body requesting its passage "just as the commission drew it, or with as little change as possible." As a result, the measure was adopted with only slight amendment.

One of its chief provisions is mandatory life imprisonment for fourth conviction of felony, similar to the Baumes law provision of the New York statutes.

Another important provision of the code is the requirement that before an appeal may be taken from a criminal conviction, permission must be obtained from the supreme court.

100,000,000!

A World's Record!

A world's record was established at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, when the one-hundred-millionth pneumatic motor vehicle tire was made.

100,000,000 tires! Enough to fill 55,524 freight cars — a train 420 miles long! Enough tires to make a chain twice around the earth!

No wonder the workmen cheered as the whistle howled.

We got a thrill out of it here in our local Goodyear Service Station. We helped Goodyear win that record.

One of the reasons for Goodyear supremacy is Goodyear Service.

Here, in your community, we deliver the Service that Goodyear puts behind every tire it makes.

We sell Goodyear Tires. And from the hour we put a Goodyear Tire on your car until it is finally worn out, we want to do everything possible to help you get trouble-free mileage from that tire.

First of all, we know how to apply tires correctly, removing rim rust and making certain that the wheel runs true, that the tire is properly inflated.

And then, if you will drive in at regular intervals, we will check inflation and examine your casings for any sign of unnatural wear, or accident.

There is no charge for this service. If repairs are needed we make them at small charge.

You don't have to take this service. You can put on Goodyear and run them as you please. But if you want the most economical mileage it is possible to get, use Goodyear Tires and Goodyear Service.

Come in and learn the price of a Goodyear Tire to fit your car. See the new-type All-Weather Tread Balloon, the World's Greatest Tire. If you want a low-priced tire let us show you other Goodyear-made tires. The complete Goodyear line includes a tire for every car, at the price you you want to pay.

The World's Greatest Tire

Above you see the Goodyear Tire that is speeding Goodyear sales all over the country.

This is the product of the great experience obtained in building millions upon millions of passenger car tires.

It is the new-type All-Weather Tread Goodyear Supertwist Balloon!

Until this new type Goodyear you never saw a quiet, smooth-running balloon tire with equal traction. Safe, surefooted, skidless, this tire has in its tread's center sharp-edged diamond-shaped blocks which seize, grip, and hang on.

Until the coming of SUPERTWIST cords, casing fatigue and shoulder-break were the arch-foes of balloon tire performance. Since Goodyear developed this amazingly elastic and durable material these troubles have virtually disappeared.

Until now "cupping" and "pot holes" were characteristic of trend wear in balloons. The specially-designed new-type All-Weather Tread meets this issue squarely and insures long, slow, even wear.

PREPARE NOW FOR VACATIONERS

SHOW THEM BEST TIME CAN BE HAD HERE

Good Roads, Golf Courses, Tennis Courts and Play Grounds will Hold Their Interest

Now is the time for West Michigan to get busy, to prepare to show the summer vacationers of America that they can have a better time here than any other region devoted to recreational uses, says Clarence V. Smazel, executive secretary of the Development League of Western Michigan.

A Missouri man who once came to West Michigan regularly writes that he "has decided to go to Canada for his vacation and also the Ozarks in Misouri are opening up and afford us an opportunity for recreation that we have not hereto been able to enjoy."

"While the automobile has increased West Michigan's possibilities as a summerland," Mr. Smazel says, "it has also brought in new competition from every other resort community and some communities that have never thought of the tourist and resort business before the days of the automobile.

"The resorter of the future is going to the land that interests him most, that gives him and his family the most recreation and happiness for the money and time they spend. Any resort community that seeks to hold its own or advance must give him the most for his money, just exactly as a man might buy a car because he believes that car will give him the most pleasure for his money. West Michigan wants to and undoubtedly will be in the class of resort communities that will continue to advance, but it will take an effort on the part of individuals, communities and the region as a whole. It means good roads, golf courses, tennis courts and play grounds, good hotels and restaurants, safe bathing beaches and highways, summer home fire protection, the marking of interesting spots and points from which beautiful views can be seen, the maintenance of good fishing in our lakes and streams—everything, in fact, that will help to make the vacation of any tourist or resorter happier than it would be anywhere else; it means the exaustive development of every known recreational possibility. The Development League is prepared to help West Michigan as a whole or as individual communities in any effort to make those communities measure up to the more exacting demands of the summer business."

I have combined my battery and tire repair shop and will give all car owners the service that they are looking for. Benj. Brown.—Adv. 10tf.

SENIOR BANQUET WAS AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Several Interesting Talks Added Spice to the Program.

The social committee of the Parent-Teachers' association and friends of the Charlevoix high school senior class tendered a banquet to members of the class, the school superintendent, the school board and staff of instructors Monday evening in the parlors of the Congregational church.

The guests marched into the dining room to music played by Mrs. C. S. Webster and opened the program by singing "America," after which Rev. C. E. Pollock returned thanks. Dr. Mattson presiding as toastmaster, gave greetings to the guests, to which Superintendent Coverdale responded. H. A. Craig, as member of the school board, made a few fitting remarks on "Student Citizenship." Professor Oscar P. North of some experiences of "Our Last Year Together." Willard J. Smith, president of the senior class, told of the class activities during the year and his talk was enlarged upon by Hubert McCann. Rev. Herman Burns closed the program with a talk on "Looking Into the Future." Dr. Mattson dismissed the gathering, which was declared by all present to have been a very happy one.

The committee sponsoring the banquet wishes to thank each and everyone who in any way contributed to the success of the occasion, especially the Congregational church society for the use of the rooms.

VISITORS DAY AT SCHOOLS A SUCCESS

Many Parents Viewed Excellent Displays Shown Last Friday

Visitors Day at the Charlevoix public schools last Friday afternoon was a decided success, judging from the interest manifested and the number of parents who took the opportunity to visit the schools and view the work done by the students during the year.

Each grade room and all departments of the high school had a splendid display, showing specimens of work done by the students during the past year. Black-boards and walls were utilized for the displays, which included specimens of penmanship, maps, drawings, mounted cuttings, algebra and geometery propositions, etc., all of which reflected much credit to the students. A very fine display of dresses and other articles of wearing apparel was shown in the domestic science department, members of that class also serving coffee and sandwiches during the afternoon.

A full afternoon could have been profitably spent viewing the different specimens on display, and, at the same time, visits of this kind to the school give the parents a chance to become better acquainted with the instructors, get a better idea of the work done by their children and incidentally create a closer relationship between the parents and schools. Parents are always welcome and are urged to visit the schools at any time.

TWO DIE IN WRECK NEAR KALKASKA

Man has Broken Neck and Girl Is Badly Crushed

Henry Gilkerson, 45, farmer living 4½ miles west of Kalkaska, had his neck broken in an auto accident Thursday afternoon of last week, and Dorothy Keller, aged 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armond Keller, was also killed.

It was the girl's 12th birthday and she and Julia Stites, a neighbor girl, were picked up by Gilkerson and another neighbor, Fred Alms, in the former's Ford car and taken to Barker Creek to get the mail.

The Ford's steering gear was very loose, and Gilkerson drove rather rapidly on their return from the post-office. Within a half mile of the Keller home Gilkerson ascended a hill on high and then broke over the crest and started down the incline at a rapid pace. The car ran into loose gravel or sand, and the driver lost control and the party went down into the ditch, a distance of about 15 feet, the Ford landing bottom side up.

The Stites girl, aged seven, must have been thrown clear, for she ran to the Keller home and reported the accident. When the car was lifted off the three pinned underneath, Alms was unconcious and the others were dead.

Almes testified that he was forced to raise the car off his chest each time he tried to get his breath, before he fainted. His ankle was held by the windshield and was painfully cut.

GOOD ADVICE TO COMMERCIAL FISHERMEN

Cheboygan Editor Comments on Local Situation

We observe that a state conservation officer is obliged to spend a lot of his time at the local commercial fish receiving house, looking over the fish that are brought in by the fishermen to see that no undersized fish are packed and shipped away. This should not be necessary, because of many reasons. There ought to be honor enough among commercial fishermen to not require constant watching. The commercial fishermen should realize they are robbing themselves by catching undersized fish, and that by continuing the practice they would in a short while deprive themselves of a business and livelihood. The fish buyer should refuse to accept undersized fish and the practice of trying to dispose of them in that way should be stopped. We are happy to say no complaints have been lodged against Cheboygan fishermen because of such practices, but the undersized fish are brought in by fishermen from neighboring places. If the fishermen cannot be trusted to play the game fair without being under constant surveylnace by the state department of conservation they ought to be made feel the penalty every time they are caught out of bounds. A strict and close application of the law is coming to that class.—Cheboygan Democrat.

M-66 EXTENSION BEING AGITATED

CHARLEVOIX AND EAST JORDAN WORK FOR RE-ROUTING

Would Give Route From M-13 to M-11 Through Twn Cities and Swing Tourist Traffic

Considerable interest is manifest in East Jordan and Charlevoix at the present time over the prospects of the state highway department extending M-66 from Lodi through Mancelona and East Jordan to Charlevoix.

This move has been sponsored for some length of time by Charlevoix and East Jordan boosters and benefits the two cities would derive from an extension would greatly enlarge the tourist traffic through both towns.

The proposed route would be from the junction of the East Jordan-Mancelona road on M-13, through Green River and down the Jordan river valley to East Jordan. From there it would follow the Charlevoix-East Jordan road out to the Eveline Orchards corner and thence down the lower road on the west shore of South Arm to Ironton and then on to Charlevoix.

There could be no possible argument against to the superior scenic beauty of such a route. Jordan River valley is one of the show places of the county and if opened by good roads to traffic, would call thousands upon thousands of visitors each year. Some virgin timber still stands in this region and the beautiful stand of second growth and scenery along the Jordan river would be a treat to the eyes of city dwellers.

The upper road to East Jordan missed one of the county's most beautiful scenic drives along South Arm. Property owners along the route have agitated improvement of the lower road for some time and called attention to its dangerous condition. An extension of M-66 along this route would bring in needed state aid, open the territory adjacent to real estate development and open to tourist traffic one of the most beautiful scenic drives in the north.

A local committee composed of Charles Novak, William Wallace, Jr., James Wyers and L. P. Adams are expected to leave for Lansing Wednesday evening to meet with members of the state highway department to consider the proposition. A large delegation from East Jordan will also be present at the meeting.

First Anniversary

The first anniversary of the local Pythian Sisters will be celebrated next Monday evening, June 6th. At the close of the meeting, refreshments will be served and the husbands of the Sisters will be entertained.

GILBERT IMPOSED HEAVY PENALTIES

VIOLATORS TAKEN IN RAID GIVEN STIFF DOSES

Moxie Spangenberg, Boyne City Violator, Gets Fine of $200 and Costs of $400

Continuing the results of the May term of circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, which closed last week, we find that Judge Parm C. Gilbert handed liquor law violators fines which should, in our opinion, make them think twice before tampering with the law in the future. Records show a total of $3,000 assessed in costs and fines for such violators, with alternatives of confinement in state penal institutions.

In the case of the Milwaukee Tank Works vs. East Jordan Cooperative association, assumpsit, judgment in default was given in the sum of $751.80.

Guy Pearl, Jacob Bendik, Sam Pavalik, Joe Bonk, Joe Saltis and Joe Gengle, having pleaded guilty to violation of the liquor law, were each sentenced to pay a fine of $300.00 on or before August 10th, 1927, with the privilege of applying for further time from the court. They were also required to obey the laws and conduct themselves as good citizens. Further requirements were that they file with the prosecuting attorney consent to search their premises at any time within the next two years.

Moxie Spangenberg of Boyne City, who pleaded guilty to violation of the liquor law, was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 and costs of $400 on or before June 1st. In default of such fine he will serve from to 6 to 12 months in Jackson prison. The court recommended eight months.

Hilton Marshall, also a liquor law violator, was placed under probation in the custody of Charles Marshall until 10th day of August. His probation calls for rigid restrictions as to his conduct during that time.

Paul Currow, taken in the raid week before last, was also placed under probation in the custody of Sheriff Vaughan until the 10th day of August, when he will appear for sentence.

Judge Gilbert was in Charlevoix again on Wednesday of this week and heard a number of non-jury cases, the results of which are not known to us at this time.

LOCAL TEACHER ANNOUNCES ENGAGEMENT

Wedding to Take Place June 21st in Falmouth

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Elsie Vandewal to Mr. Albert Molhoek, of Falmouth, was made by Miss Juanita Secord, Tuesday evening, May 31, at the home of Mrs. L. E. Benton on Bridge street. The wedding is to take place June 21, at Miss Vanderwal's home in Falmouth.

The guests, a few friends of the bride-to-be, were enjoyably entertained with bridge. At an appointed hour, dainty refreshments were served, at which the engagement and approaching marriage were announced. The color scheme was carried out in spring colors of yellow and orchid.

Miss Vanderwal is a teacher in the public schools of Charlevoix, and has made many friends during the year. The friends of Miss Vanderwal wish her much happiness.

MEMORIAL DAY WELL OBSERVED

CEREMONIES ATTENDED BY LARGE CROWD

Impressive Program Carried Out at Cemetery—School Children Well Represented

Although rain clouds threatened Monday morning, Memorial Day in Charlevoix was observed in a fitting manner, with large crowds attending the ceremonies at Memorial Park and at the cemetery.

Promptly at 9:30 the parade, led by the high school and city bands, left the corner of Bridge street and Park avenue, where the different organizations had assembled, proceeding down Bridge street to Memorial Park at the corner of Antrim. Here the parade paused while a brief ceremony in memory of those who lost their lives at sea was conducted by the American Legion and W. R. C. From there the parade marched to State street and out to the cemetery.

A large crowd of Charlevoix citizens met them at the cemetery gates and assembled themselves within to witness the ceremonies, which were brief but impressive. Dr. Frank Wilkinson gave a short address on the significance of the day, and then introduced by Ray S. Hamilton, who acted as master of ceremonies. Rev. C. E. Pollock of the Methodist Episcopal church opened the exercises with a beautiful and impressive prayer. Music by the band and singing of "America" followed. The remainder of the program was conducted according to schedule. The address by Rev. Herman Burns was very impressive and the ceremonies of the Woman's Relief Corps and the American Legion were effectively conducted. The music by the American Legion quartette and the combined high school and city bands was also highly appreciated. The music by the high school band called forth many words of praise, it being their first public appearance since their organization last fall. The closing prayer was given by Rev. B. G. Mattson of the Congregational church, this closing the day's official observance in the city.

BENEFIT MUSICAL PROGRAM ENJOYED

Proceeds Go Toward Fund to Purchase Band Uniforms

The musical program given under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Miller and Mr. TerWee at the Palace Theater last Friday evening, was well rendered and highly appreciated.

Proceeds of the program, which are to be used to buy uniforms for the high school band, were not as large as the committee had hoped for and any private donations for the purpose will be received at Fesenden's drug store.

The senior class boys, who took the part of a double colored quartette, rendered their parts well and occasioned several good laughs. The bride and "flapper" also were very humorous. Many favorable comments have been made on the splendid music rendered by the high school band, which is indeed a credit to the community. Miller's orchestra and the high school orchestra rendered several numbers which were greatly enjoyed.

Here Comes the Bride

COUNTIES ARE SEEKING T. B. SANITARIUM

Twenty or More Will Be Joined By Special Organization

Twenty Northern Michigan counties are binding themselves together in a strong mutual benefit group to wage a determined battle for definite assistance from the state in the matter of health measures, roads and all other good things needed in the region.

At a recent meeting at Gaylord representatives adopted a resolution approaching such an organization and the boards of supervisors of the several counties will at their June sessions hear complete reports on plans of action.

The Gaylord meeting recommended that supervisors and other influential persons take action in the matter and that delegates or county members be named. First work will be a regional tuberculosis sanitarium to take care of the growing list of those who desire hospital treatment for this disease but cannot afford private sanitariums. The first unit would have not less than 50 beds.

Counties represented in the group include Emmet, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Presque Isle, Antrim, Ostego Montmorency, Alpena, Leelanau, Ogema, Roscommon, Missaukee Wexford and Manistee. Mackinac and Chippewa counties in the northern peninsula may be included if they desire to enter.

MACKINAW PHONE CABLE REPAIRED

ICE OR SHIP ANCHORS DAMAGED LONG DISTANCE WIRES

Wrecking Tug Favorite Used in Work on Milo of Submarine Circuit on Straits.

Because of transmission difficulties that have developed in some circuits, the Michigan Bell Telephone company has had to raise more than a mile of its longest submarine cable, which connects the two peninsulas of Michigan at the straits of Mackinaw. Transmission engineers, using delicate measuring apparatus, located the trouble, lifted the cable so experts could open it and correct the trouble. It was a spectacular and unusual operation.

It is believed the trouble was due to the shifting of the currents of water, where the cable crossed a rock ledge, in the deep water, about a mile off shore at Mackinaw City. Eight of the 21 long distance circuits contained in the cable were out of order.

The Mackinaw City-Ignace cable which is more than four and a half miles long, was laid July 9, 1918, at a cost of $50,000, replacing one laid in 1899, since abandoned. Over this cable is handled most of the telephone trafic between the cities of the two peninsulas and much of that to and from Mackinac Island.

Submarine cables often are subjected to peculiar accidents. Shifting currents, lightning or crushing ice floes will disable the toughest cable. Boats at anchor often cause damage to the marine telephone highways. The St. Ignace-Mackinaw Island cable was cut last year by a boat that anchored in a storm. Not long ago, one of the several cables connecting Detroit and Windsor was caught by a boat's anchor, and a section was dragged through Lake Erie to Buffalo. Several times, the telephone cables crossing the Black River at Port Huron, has been cut by boats and dredges.

LOCAL PAPERS' WORK OUTLINED

SHOULD KNOW THOSE BEST FITTED FOR LOCAL OFFICES

Politicians All Strive for Fulsome Flattery Through Columns of Local Press

"Give us an alert, an unafraid plain spoken press and we will show you a worth-while community, a law abiding people and a satisfied and going-ahead people," says the Cheboygan Democrat in commenting on certain matters that took place during the recent session of the state legislature. Editor Weber, mayor of Cheboygan, reviews the situation as follows:

"The Michigan Press Association representative at Lansing during the last legislative session says that the last legislative session was one of apparent hostility to Michigan newspaperdom, and that several members of the lower house apparently were under the impression that the principal business for which their constituents sent them to Lansing was to crucify the community newspapers. We can readily understand how some of the little fellows suddenly lifted into high places would react to the newspaper panning that was given the legislature by the larger city dailies during the last session, and how those important little boys have been chafed by the criticism directed at the institution of which they felt themselves such an important part. Because of this self assumed importance they have looked upon every specie of the newspaper family as harmful and a dangerous menace to their rights and liberties. The newspaper makers of the country are largely to blame for this condition. They are to blame because they do not take a more active stand in the political matters in the communities which they represent. Invarably some fellow feels that he has been called to step out of the line and save his country, and the first place he hies to is the home newspaper office, and forthwith issues therefrom great sheaves of fulsome flattery, and in doing all this Mr. Newspaperman has cut away every bit of originality and independence, and has made of himself a common, cheap rubber stamp bought and paid for as one would buy the rubber article. There are newspapers in our state in the country field that are powers in their community, but the editors thereon do their own thinking and select those they will support for office from those their wide experience and knowledge of the humans of their community qualifies them to know are best fitted and most inclined to serve their constituents intelligently and honestly. There is legislative timber in every community large enough and broad enough to recognize the power and the worthiness of the press to that community, and again there is the cheap political chair warmer that looks upon every institution not functioning directly for his political aggrandizement as of no consequence and harmful. Take the press away from the communities those little fellows infest and there would soon be a community not worth representation. The man that questions the value of the press to any community is either a crook at heart or he is too puny above the ears to be entrusted with an official position. Give us an alert, an unafraid plain spoken press and we will show you a worth while community, a law abiding people and a satisfied and going-ahead people."

Touring Suggestions

1—The Pipestone Quarries in Minnesota are well known because of the Indian lore and legend associated with the peculiarly reddish stone found here. This stone was used by the Indians for making peace pipes. Large rocks called "The Three Maidens" are the subject of a legend of fierce battles between warring tribes. These quarries are part of the setting of Longfellow's immortal poem, "Hiawatha." Near State Highways 47 and 6.

9—"The Little Brown Church in the Vale," made world famous by the song of Dr. W. S. Pitts. Hundreds of young couples come from far and near to be married within its appealing old walls. FACTS about used car allowances

Most new car sales now involve the trading-in of a buyer's used car. More and more people are asking: "Why should my used car seem to have several values? .... Why should dealers in different makes of cars offer me allowances differing materially? .... Does the largest allowance offered mean the best deal for me?"

Here are basic facts:

1 Your used car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.

2 Your used car has only one fundamental basis of value: what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.

3 The largest trade-in allowance which is offered on your used car is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; but sometimes it is not.

4 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.

5 Judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your used car.

WHEN YOU are ready to trade-in your present car, remember that after all you are making a purchase and not a sale. You are buying a new car and simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of a new car.

CHAPTER VI

Although Paul Raxon had always professed a great belief in his own destiny, he had never thought to be a multimillionaire. He found himself, suddenly, a national figure. It amused him to read newspaper accounts of himself. People assumed that he had newly come to New York, whereas he had been for years a power working through other men.

It was as an architect's clerk he discovered the graft which was possible in the building trade. Among the group of illiterate men who were holding up big jobs and levying blackmail from contractors in the name of Labor, he soon became a leader. He was cautious, educated and supremely cunning. The price of success was the betrayal of his benefactor, and he had not hesitated to make it.

At the age of forty-two he took his place with the living powers in Wall Street, hated by many, liked by few, but despised by none. Publicity overwhelmed him at last. Mrs. Raxon and her family returned from Europe, where for some years they had lived. At a large price he purchased Great Rock, formerly the home of Bellington of the Traction trust, and he knew he must fill it with his wife's friends and entertain in the manner of the very rich.

At this period of his life the idea of power obsessed him. He did not want to run the risk of losing what he had gained. He was not anxious for any unsavory episodes of his past to arise. There had been many, and with most women were concerned. He grew less intrigued with women as the idea of senatorial honors forced itself upon him. Senator Raxon of New York! No state honors for him. He desired to be sent to Washington. Loddon, his lawyer, licked his thick lips at the thought.

"I'm satisfied," said Raxon, "that nobody can pull me down. Jim Caffray was dangerous, but he's in Sing Sing for seven years."

"He'll be out in five," said Loddon, "and Jim's dangerous, because he knows a lot."

"Jim will be out in less than that," Raxon retorted. "Bright's disease. He's incurable. You look like a Bright's disease type, Loddon. Better be moderate if you want to help me to the United States senate. I've got a chance. Women are voting against the old machine type of politician, and I'm going to cultivate the women and pose as the pioneer of a new day." Raxon chuckled a little.

He was a tired-looking man, slim, and a little stooped. He had fine hands and good features. He could bring readily to his aid the salesman's forced enthusiasm, which seemed genuine to those who did not know him. He knew he would do well in politics if no old ghosts arose to confound him. For years now he had been living among men immeasurably beneath him in intelligence; a lucky turn had made him independent of them.

To go to the senate from New York would be an expensive matter, but he was prepared to pay. To that end it would be necessary to conserve his fortune. His wife, after years of living in second-rate hotels, was inclined to a reckless extravagance. Domestic life at Great Rock was strained. Yet Raxon saw that the era of great entertainments was at hand. He knew that as he was now a man in the public eye, he had better do the thing well. The life of relatively small things was over. Not again would he deal with the baser sort of men. Much of his amusement came from watching the men he controlled trying to assert themselves. There was Loddon, for instance. At heart, of the shyster lawyer type and filled with the ideals of petty graft, a wealthy benefactor had bought him a partnership with a respectable firm and he had to raise his professional conduct accordingly. Loddon for the moment was filled with glee at his own fortune. He wished Raxon to regard him as an equal instead of snapping orders at him. He ventured to disagree with his patron.

"My success," Raxon said, stopping him with a gesture, "is due to two things. One is a total absence of pity. Another that I only use men that I can crush if they get out of bond. Jim Caffray was one. You're another." He looked at the gross, formless creature and sneered. "When I pipe, you shall dance; and if you don't dance to my liking, what happens? The Bar association will disbar you. You may try to incriminate me, but you haven't a shred of evidence of anything crooked, not a check, letter, telegram, or a dictaphone conversation. Keep me in good humor, Loddon, and work for me and you'll go far. Try to be independent, or indiscreet, and I shall break you."

"Why, Paul," Loddon cried, "what's got into you? I'm the loyalest follower you ever had, and you know it."

Raxon smiled. "I want intelligent loyalty, and you're not overburdened with intelligence any more than Caffray was. I'm not underestimating you. You've been useful to me in a number of ways."

"Thank you," said Loddon, almost bitterly. He thought of certain unprofessional things he had done at his patron's bidding which had, in effect, delivered him bound hand and foot to Raxon.

That Raxon aspired to a United States senatorship seemed a laudable enough ambition. But that he had a chance seemed, on reflection, almost absurd. And yet Raxon was not the kind of man to delude himself. Loddon voiced his doubts.

"McKimber is the party's nominee," he observed. "Of course, he'll carry New York city, and they say he'll get more votes up-state than any possible candidate."

"The party will get the votes, not the man," said Raxon.

"But McKimber's the party's choice," Loddon persisted.

"It looks that way, doesn't it?" Raxon smiled. "McKimber's very popular."

"You're keeping something back," said Loddon.

"I always do. That's why I get on. That's why I'm going to the senate."

His hands clasped behind him, Paul Raxon stood at a window and looked over the sound. Loddon talked, but he did not listen. Raxon saw himself in a few years as the greatest money power in America. All his future was carefully planned. He was now engaged in mapping out a present. He appreciated the power of women politically and knew he must appear as a home-loving man, a man who was notoriously good to his wife and children. Fortunately, all of them were attractive physically.

He was interrupted by Mrs. Raxon. She was a handsome, dark woman who had only just discovered that while she had been living abroad her husband had become enormously wealthy. She had the sense of a personal grievance against him highly developed. He could see she was prepared for battle.

"I want a suitable allowance for myself and the children," she began. "I want a banking account and my own limousine and chauffeur." She had thrown down the gage and waited, a little frightened, for what was coming. Paul had always seemed incomprehensible. She did not understand him now. When he smiled it might be, she supposed, the prelude to some biting sarcasm.

"Certainly," he said. "A very good idea. Fortunately, Loddon is here. Talk it over with him. I am very willing that you should take your place in society. I only ask that you will be careful with what people you fill my house. I'm after big game, and if I rise you'll go up with me. Talk it over with Herman." He smiled and walked slowly from the room.

And while Marie Raxon was passing an enthralling hour discovering her many needs, and her husband was wondering how best to start to beautify Bellington's enormous building, some men in Lower Fifth avenue were discussing his ruin.

Mulet had returned from Philadelphia, where he had thrown up his position. Already another laboratory assistant had taken Bradley's place. The two had yielded to Peter Milman's importunities and agreed to remain as his guests. Neeland Barnes had not yet come back from Peekskill. He had gone with the avowed intention of paying Lippsky something off his account and hurrying back with some clothes.

So that he might escape the ridicule attending a man who reaches his suburban home in full evening [illegible] at midday, Barnes arranged to come to his distasteful abode when it was dusk. He wanted to remove his entire wardrobe from the Lippsky shack and pay as little of the deferred rent as possible.

In Lippsky's front yard, which commanded a view of his tenant's entrances and exits, the aggrieved landlord was trying to bring to maturity depressed looking vegetables. His eyes glistened when he saw who approached. He dropped his spade and hurried to meet Neeland Barnes.

"Was you expecting a lady?" he demanded.

"Good God, no!" Barnes stopped instantly. Had old ghosts arisen to confound him?

"Has any woman the right to go in and monkey about with your things?"

"Absolutely nobody," Barnes cried.

"Mr. Barnes," said Lippsky shrilly, "you are a loafer. You sent her in to get your clothes so you should go away and leave me without nothing to hold. I got your number, and by golly I got hers. I locked her in, and I tell her if she makes a fuss I send for the police. You thought you should find me out. You know this is my lodge night."

"I didn't know there was a lodge low enough to admit you," Barnes said ungrily, "and I sent nobody here. Send for the police. I've had enough of your d—d insolence."

"Pretending she was a fine lady," said Lippsky, who was growing angry. "Looking at me and my house as though we was dirt. She wouldn't believe you lived here. I tell her right quick you wouldn't even be living here if you didn't come over with rent."

Neeland Barnes removed his silk hat and mopped his brow.

"My good ass," he began, "what the devil are you ranting about?"

"I tell her," Lippsky went on, unappeased, "you could go out with your fine gentleman's clothes on, and a silk hat even, and treat me like dirt, I'm a citizen here same as you, and this is an end of you walking over me with your silk hat and your fifteen dollar shoes. I know the price of them shoes. I tell her to scream all she likes, nobody hears away up here."

"You mean to say you've locked a strange woman up in my house?"

Good Health Requires Good Elimination

TO be well, you must keep the blood stream free from impurities. If the kidneys lag, allowing body poisons to accumulate, a toxic condition is created. One is apt to feel dull, languid, tired and achy. A nagging backache is sometimes a symptom, with drowsy headaches and dizzy spells. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. WE CRITICIZE TOO MUCH

The legislature has adjourned and the boys have gone back home, some to sow and some to reap while only one, so far as we can learn, has been charged with trying to rob the town bank. Since the end of the session we have heard much criticism, some sharp and severe, while others have assumed a more tolerant attitude. People have a habit of criticizing the legislature. we really should not do so—or that is, we should not criticize it as much as we do. The members of the legislature are no different from any group of people selected at random. They constitute but a cross-section of Michigan's population. As such there were all kinds of people making laws for us at Lansing. And if this were not so—if all were of one class, one kind of persuasion the laws which we would get would not be fair or representative of the needs of all the state.

The public has charged the legislature with ignorance and dishonesty. Both charges are unjust. The legislature was no more ignorant than the public it represented. It was no more dishonest than the people who voted for them. There may have been members of monumental ignorance in the legisluture, but they were by far over-shadowed by men of keen intelligence and perception. If there were dishonest members in the last legislature, they must have been very, very few. By far was the last legislature composed of men of unquestioned integrity.

During and following the close of a legislative session there is always so much thoughtless talk. "Let's dispense with the legislature; we have enough laws," is commonly heard. But laws to correct local conditions or regulnte the state must be made and lawmakers must convene. The legislature is a necessity. The fact that lawmakers are made up of all manner of men, that they fail to agree, that they have distinct opposing and sometimes ridiculous notions is nothing wrong. It is Democracy. That's it.

WILL MICHIGAN'S NEW LAW BE TOO DRASTIC?

Michigan now has a criminal code patterned after the famous Baume's law of New York, which makes it mandatory for courts to impose life sentences in certain cases. Michigan needed to take drastic measures to curb crime in this state. Men were beginning to look with impunity upon the laws of society, crime had become a profession and it was up to the organized forces of society to protect itself. A legislature, faced with the necessity of adopting capital punishment or the new code, very wisely chose the latter. It is an excellent piece of legislation except its mandatory provisions, which makes it too severe in application sometimes.

When the law is finally placed on the statute books fourth offenders will automatically be sentenced to prison for life, the courts having no alternative. New York and California now have such laws. In New York a Cuban turned the knob of a hotel door for the purpose of stealing something to eat. He was a third offender under the law and was sentenced to prison for life. Had the door been opened when he entered hostelry, ostensibly to steal, he would have been guilty of only a misdemennor known as unlawful entry. This would have brought him only a short sentence. The judge who sentenced him said the law was altogether too severe, but it allowed him no deviation. On the same day that the Cuban was sent up for life, Walter J. Hunter, a negro, of Oakland, was sent up for life for stealing a roast pork sandwich and eighty-five cents. He had three previous convictions against him. Judge Leon Grey, sentencing him, said the law gave him no alternative.

Sentences of this nature are too severe. A law that makes sentences mandatory is not a just law. When we consider the Creator made men as they are instead of what they ought to be, putting into the heart of one impulses that lead to gehenna and into another ideals that lead to the throne, we should understand that we cannot make one law fit all men any more than we can make one boot to fit all feet.

MICHIGAN

Are you not glad you live in Michigan? If not, you should be. Think of what has happened down south, with its unheardof floods, carrying with it loss of homes, property, farms, livestock, desolation, destruction, disease, death and pestilence. Think of the happy homes, families, prosperous business, farms, destroyed by the onrushing waters that have spread out in some places twenty-five miles, and then think of the privileges and pleasures enjoyed in good old Michigan. Quit howling because it is hot or cold, rains or snows, and thank the good Lord that you live in the garden spot of the earth, where the people can be happy, prosperous, contented and free from the awful death carrying floods that leave hundreds of thousands of families cold and hungry. And after you have come to a realization of the benefits we enjoy, send a few dollars to the helpless in the south through the American Red Cross.

THE REASON FOR CONSERVATION

Would you give orders that at the time of your death your home and property should be destroyed? No, you would want your children to have all the things that you might be able to leave to them, and more if possible. You would like to leave them a veritable paradise, where they might live in greater comfort than you were ever able to afford.

Much of the pleasure our children get out of life depends on what we do now. The playgrounds of the future will be what we build today. The fishing of the future will be just what we want it to be. We can conserve and have good fishing or we can waste and have no fishing. Our forests will be just what we make them. We can reforest and develop our timber resources or we can waste them and let our children worry about replacing them.

Conservation is one of the most vital subjects before the people of Michigan today. It requires the study of every citizen and intelligent administration of all our natural resources. Mistakes in administration will occur and there will be problems to face, but let us face them honestly and with open minds. This newspaper hopes that you will take more interest in conservation than ever before and that you will devote your best efforts along the lines of assisting the Department of Conservation in preserving our natural resources.

FRESHENING BREEZES

The Belding man who was awarded $750 for his wife's affections should consider himself lucky. At least that's what a lot of the boys are claiming.

Co-operation has at last been established between the bankers and the farmers—the bankers agreeing to let the farmers protect the banks from bank bandits.

What has become of the old-fashioned justice of the peace who 'lowed that about two dollars would be enough for a minor infraction of the law.

An old country woman was sent to jail for selling her daughter to an actor for two dollars. Over in this country she could have bought an actor for that much money.

Before a Chicago man skipped he wrote a note to his wife to meet him in Heaven. She was given a divorce on the grounds of desertion, the court reasoning the fellow could no longer be in Chicago.

We see where rifle clubs are becoming popular with the girls. Why go to all that trouble when one can generally find an extra window sash weight any time they want to bump off friend husband.

Scientists claim that fish worms can sing. This explains the humming noise you hear on a line these days when the fish are not biting.

Wild and incoherent talk indulged in by a man in the south part of the state led to his identification as an escaped inmate of an Iowa asylum. If the poor fellow was from Iowa he was probably trying to explain the Coolidge veto of the McNary-Haugen bill.

The mayor of a small Michigan town has warned Sunday loafers to either go to church or get off the streets until services are over. Having grown up in a small town, the mayor evidently knows what the boys are talking about when they see some of the handmaidens of the village on their way to devotions.

Know the thrill of the Super-Six

Millions* may now experience what thousands already know

Motordom's Highest Achievement—
the speed, power and safety of Super-Six Performance in a Nationwide "Demonstration Week"

Hudson dealers were never so busy—our sales were never so large—customers were never so pleased—the value never so great.

Thousands of cars have been sold without opportunity to demonstrate them. Demand has kept the market stripped so that few but imminent buyers have had an opportunity to ride.

Now with Hudson dealers giving principle attention for one week to demonstrating the new Hudson Super-Six, all motordom may have first hand experience of what is possible with the Super-Six principle released in full capacity. Until you ride in the Hudson Super-Six there is a motoring thrill you can never know.

You see Hudsons everywhere. You admire their striking beauty. You note their flashing performance. And you see in them the greatest values motordom has ever offered.

In appearance, beauty of detail and finish, and in performance, you compare Hudson with cars costing twice as much. Make it stand out in your mind that Hudson's price is hundreds of dollars below any car with which it is compared.

Take advantage of this special demonstration opportunity. Ride in the New Hudson Super-Six even if you have no immediate intention of getting a new car.

Firestone Dealers

The Mark of Quality

Have Purchased 100% More GUM-DIPPED TIRES

[This Year Compared With Same Period Last Year]

THE demand from car owners for Gum-Dipped Tires has given Firestone Dealers a large increase in volume enabling them to sell these tires to you at the lowest prices in history.

On the cars of motorists everywhere, these wonderful tires are delivering unheard-of long mileage with greater safety and comfort.

The Firestone Balloon Tread, scientifically designed three years ago, and unchanged today, follows the contour of the tire carcass with no excess rubber at the edges to cause "shoulder breaks". Narrow rider strips permit the tread to yield to depressions and cling to the road, preventing skidding. This tough, pliable tread has the wear-resisting qualities for thousands of extra miles.

Such a tread must be placed on a carcass with the qualifications to withstand the terrific flexing that this design permits. The Firestone carcass is made of cords dipped in a rubber solution which not only saturates and insulates every fiber of every cord, but unifies sidewalls with carcass, avoiding separation under the extreme flexing.

Many Firestone Dealers are prepared to offer you a liberal allowance for your old tires, on a new set of Gum-Dipped Tires to start the motoring season.

To meet a demand for a low price tire and tube, Firestone designed and manufactures, for Firestone Dealers only, Oldfield Tires and Tubes, which carry the Standard Manufacturers' Guarantee.

COST MILLIONS TO CLEAR STREAMS

MICHIGAN INDUSTRIES WILL SPEND HUGE SUMES

Splendid Results Already Attained to End Pollution—Cities and Villages Also Aiding

More than three und a half million dollars has already been expended the past twenty months in the huge task of reclaiming the waters of Michigan, is revealed in the statement made public by Homer Murphy, deputy in charge of pollution, of the Department of Conservation. Of this sum the industries of the state have spent $3,525,000 in attempts to overcome water pollution; the paper mills $2,200,000; sugar plants, $500,000; tanning companies, $50,000; milk product concerns, $575,000; canners, $100,000; and miscellaneous industries, such as woolen mills, textile mills, chemical plants, etc., $500,000.

A portion of the above sums was spent on equipment that is actually eliminating the pollution, and some of course was spent on purely experimental work. Besides the sums already enumerated, the American Pulp and Paper Association of New York City, in a report of January, 1926, stuted that more than two million dollars have been spent on research work in the United States.

In order to avoid duplication and eliminate much of the cost, the Department of Health has combined with the Department of Conservation in the work of solving this big problem now confronting the state. Experimental stations have been established by the canners of Kent City, the tanners at Holland, and the milk products people at Standish and Bad Axe. The Kent City station was established in 1926 and experiments have reduced the polluting matters of their waste not less than 75 per cent of the composite. The tanners seem to have their problem well in hand and after gathering up the few loose ends at the experimental plant at Holland, which has been in operation since early in 1926, will be prepared to outline and build a treatment plans to handle the wastes from any type of tannery. This work should be accomplished during the present year. Although the milk product plants are just getting under way, it is believed splendid results will also be obtained during the summer months of this year. Full time chemists from state departments are aiding in the work at each of the experimental stations.

Owing to the shortness of their seasons, the sugar companies seem to be facing the hardest problems. One company, last fall, undertook recirculation of their flume water, good results being obtained. The gas companies are also confronted with dificult problems, but are entering into the work of ending pollution with a firm determination to work out some successful plan. By the installation of the proper faculties it is believed that over one-half their pollution waste can be overcome. Many cities and villages are aiding in the work, 33 having already submitted reports on sewage disposal; 15 cities and villages have their own engineers while 10 cities and villages are working locally on their own plans for sewnge disposal.

Joseph Stutzman County Champion in Handicroft Clubs

Joseph Stutzman was awarded the county championship in Handicraft Club Work at the recent Achievement Day. He is a member of the Hilton School Handicraft Club, located on M-11 south of Charlevoix and displayed a fine exhibit of six articles that he has made during the winter. Much of the credit must be given to Miss Lottie Webster, who has been largely instrumental in the success of the club. Joseph was selected by A. G. Kettunen, state club leader, as having done the best work out of 20 boys in four clubs and we all unite in offering him congratulations upon his high attainment.

We are unable at present to make public the name of the county champion in the Girls Sewing Clubs, but will be in a position in a short time. Owing to the rain on Achievement Day there was not a sufficient number of clubs represented. As a result Miss Featherly from M. S. C., who judged all the exhibits in the county, will make her decision and inform us very shortly.

Nutrition Project Being Completed

The local leaders in the Nutrition Project for this county received their 4th and last instruction from Mrs. Hernice Wells, food specialist from the Michigan State College last week. The East Jordan group received their lesson on Thursday and the Boyne City group on Friday.

These leaders will give their last lessons this week to over one hundred ladies who have enrolled in the various classes and will then unite in putting on a big Achievement Day to be held at the East Jordan high school auditorium on Wednesday, June 15th. Posters, exhibits, charts and a highly interesting program will conclude the year's work and show the results of the project to the public. Watch the succeeding papers for further details of the big meeting and plan to attend.

Tuberculosis Campaign in Charlevoix County Nearly Completed

Dr. P. T. Pomeroy, the veterinarian, in charge of the campaign to eradicute tuderculosis from the cattle of this county, reports thut the work is progressing very rapidly and probably will be completed in the next two weeks.

The present cumpaign was started early last spring and continued until the appropriation made by the board of supervisors was used up. At that time fully 50 per cent of the cattle population of the county had been tested with a .8 of 1 percent infection, which was too high and necessitated testing all the cattle in order to get our percentage down below .5 of 1 percent before our county could continue its high rating of an uccredited area.

With the completion of the campaign all the cattle will have been tested and our county again placed in the honor roll and the public can be assured of securing a practically disease free milk. We are highly gratified to learn that thus far this year very few reactors have been found. All herds having reactors last year are again tested and give us the reassurance that they are clean.

Have also been informed that Emmett county is again accredited, Ostego county as well, and Antrim county tests again this year, so this gives this section of the state protection from this dreaded disease.

SENIOR DEPENDABLE

ANNOUNCING The Senior Line

A REMARKABLE NEW SIX
by DODGE BROTHERS

A new line of Sixes by Dodge Brothers is presented ro the public today.

It has been rumored, and hoped, for years that Dodge Brothers would ultimately produce such a line — more refined and, of course, higher in cost than their present car.

To combine the sturdy worth of Dodge Brothers standard product with those refinements which greater cost permits, could not fail, it was conceded, to produce a motor car of unique distinction and fineness.

The Senior Line is Dodge Brothers answer to this demand—and Dodge Brothers have answered well.

These are remarkable cars. Brilliantly vital and alive—surprisingly quiet—impressively smart. And built, like all Dodge Brothers motor cars, for years of dependable service.

See one and drive it and you will marvel that performance of this quality and character could be provided at a price so low.

BENJAMIN BROWN

6-CYLINOER DODGE NOW ON MARKET

NEW CAR ON DISPLAY AT BROWN GARAGE

Additional Body Types to Be on Market Withio a Few Weeks— Car is a Beauty

Today marks one of the most important events in Dodge Brothers history—the introduction of the first model of tbe company's new line of fine six cylinder motor cars. The ear put on display today by Benj. Brown, local Dodge Brothers dealer, is a four-door sedan—an impressive looking vehicle wbich is said to possess a truly remarkable motor.

Within a few weeks two additional body types, a four passenger coupe and a new type of cabriolet roadster, will be added to the new line of "sixes."

Elaborate preparations for the advent of the six cylinder cars have been made by Dodge Brothers. Last fall construction work was begun on one of the largest factory buildings in the world and throughout the winter and spring was rushed to completion.

Actual production of the six cylinder line was started early in May. The initial production rate was about 50 cars a day. This has been rapidly stepped up from week to week and daily output is now running approximately 200. By the end of June when the two additional body types will be in production, it will run fully 300 cars a day.

The new line of "sixes" has been named Dodge Brothers Senior line to distinguish it from Dodge Brothers standard line of four cylinder cars with which the company has built up its world-wide reputation.

The pistons are of an advnnced type, designed to give rapid pick-up, greater power, smooth performance, exceptionally low expansion and long life.

The exhaust valves are made of steel, nlloyed with silicon and chromium, materials which give maximum durability and resist heat and wear.

Single Plate Clutch Used

A single plate type of clutch is used. Its design is similar to that used on many of the highest priced cars such as Hispano Suiza, Pierce Arrow, Marmon, Locomobile, Peugeot, Sunbeam, Diamler, Duesenberg, and the British Rolls-Royce. It is exceptionally easy and quiet to operate. The pedal action is said to be lighter and softer than any other type, and gives a smooth, gentle application of power with no chattering of parts when it is released.

Selective Slidiog Gear Transmissioo

The transmission is of the selective sliding gear type and the shift is the standard system with three forward and one reverse speeds. Two radial ball bearings and three roller bearings are used in the transmission to insure quiet, smooth operation and long service without attention.

The springs are of chrome vanadium steel and are semi-elliptic in type. The front spring length is 37 inches and the rear 55½ inches. The rear springs are underslung.

Dodge dealers everywhere report an enormous advance interest in the new six and as a result it is expected that the local showrooms will be well crowded for some time to come.

Goodyear high quality tires at the latest reduction in price will please all tire user. Benj. Brown.—Adv. 10tf.

"A Kiss in a Taxi," Bebe Daniels' latest Paramount comedy success, arrives at the Palace Theater next Saturday and Sunday. Advance notices claim it to be equally as good as "The Campus Flirt," "Stranded in Paris" or "Lovers in Quarnntine." And to give the farce added color "A Kiss" takes place in zat gay city on the Seine Paree!

Chester Conklin adds his bag of tricks to all those which Bebe puts over. Clarence Badger, director of a long line of hits, is said to present another masterly job. Douglas Gilmore, a new Paramount recruit, appears as Miss Daniels' leading man.

"Afraid to Love" Called One of Season's Finest

Florence Vidor whose latest Paramount starring effort "Afraid to Love," comes to the Pnlace Theater Tuesday and Wednesday, has very definitè idens concerning propriety in women's apparel.

She maintains that too many women neglect to take into considernation their own individual type of beauty, and often enough spoil it by failure to select appropriate costume. Beauty enn he augmented or diminished by clothes, she says. "Not that clothes makes the woman entirely. She must first have something to start being beautiful with," she added humorously.

LOCAL PRIZE WINNERS IN ESSAY CONTEST

Pupils in Fifth and Eighth Grades Do Creditable Work

Pupils of the fifth and eighth grades of the public schools did the required work in the Essay contest sponsored by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the prize essays have been entered in the state contest.

The eighth grade pupils, Addison Oakley, teacher, wrote on the subject, "Why the United States prohibits the sale of Beer and Wine." Eloise Tillotson was awarded the first prize in the local contest, $5.00; and Lola Fessenden the second, $3.00.

In the fifth grade, Bernice Lamphear received the first local $5.00; and Wilma Bellinger the second, $3.00. The pupils of this grade under the supervision of their teacher, Miss Florence Milner, made some exceedingly creditable notebooks, every one with a beautifully designed poster cover, and containing among other things reasons why railroad engineers, auto drivers and others should not use alcoholic; several problems, in arithmetic showing how much a man saves when he deposits in the bank money formerly used for liquor; a United States map showing states that had prohibition before the eighteenth amendment became effective; clippings from newspapers reporting accidents due to intoxicants; and a copy of the oath taken by all the young citizens of ancient Athens,—"We will reverence and respect our nation's laws. We will strive unceasingly to strengthen the nation's sense of civic duty. Thus in all ways we will pass on this nation greater, better and more beautiful that it was passed on to us."

HELD BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR THREE

Munyon Home Scene of Enjoyable Party Saturday Evening

Forty-five guests gathered at the home of Charles Munyon Saturday evening last to help celebrate the birthday anniversary of Mr. Munyon, Walter Roger and Alvin Durance.

Mrs. Munyon and Mrs. Roger served a pot luck dinner, the outstanding features of which were the three birthday cakes, prettily decorated, with their candles.

The guests were members of the Country Club as follows: Mr. and Mrs. George Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Will Johnson of Charlevoix; Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Hulbert of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lewis of East Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Munyon and grandson, Edgar Walter Hoffman of Cadillac; Joseph Thumm, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Thumm and daughter, Barbara Joe of Bellaire, and Mr. Coffin of Mt. Pleasant.

The house was prettily decorated with apple blossoms and narcissus, and the event was greatly enjoyed.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Decoration Day brought home many former Charlevoix people. The presence of some of them with us last Sunday evening gave us a most enjoyable service. Archie Carey, now deacon of the First Baptist church of Detroit, and Cecil Poole of the Temple Baptist church of Detroit, brought their greetings, and reminisced of the old times when they were boys in the church and Sunday school at home, and our chorister who was associated with them in those days, gave us an unusual musical program, one feature of which was a duet sung by himself and Miss Slyvia Black. The storm prevented a large congregation, but those present enjoyed a rare treat.

Next Sunday morning the pastor's theme will be "Behold The Man" at 10:30. The bible school will meet at noon and the B. Y. P. U. will meet at 6:30 p. m.

The congregation will join in the union baccalaureate service at the Methodist church at 7:30.

Snow 18 Years Ago Friday.

Those who keep track of weather events of years gone by report that it was just 18 years ago last Friday that the record May snow fall visited Northern Michigan. Snow fell to a depth of from 8 to 10 inches over the entire region. Within a day it had entirely disappeared, however, doing little damage to crops.

TWELVE PRESENT ON BIRTHDAY OCCASION

Occasion Was in Honor of His Fifth Birthday Anniversary

Master L. V. Simmons, Jr., was host to a party of his little boy and girl friends last Saturday, May 28th at the home of his parents, Beaver Dam Bungalow, Loch Farms, the occasion being his 5th birthday anniversary.

Tables were set for 12 guests and decorations were carried out in yellow and blue with a center piece of daffodils and yellow snap dragons. A delightful luncheon was enjoyed by the little guests, who afterwards played games in which Miss Marjorie Edwards carried off the honors.

Those present were: Rosann Parker, Marjorie Edwards, Eleanor Russell, Jane Allen Loeb, Rosemary Cooper, Helen Foster, Barbara Jean Fowler, Billy Mitchell, Bobby and Dick McHugh and Forest Allen Fowler. The young host was the recipient of many nice gifts given by his guests.

Star in Unusual Story

Adolph Menjou plays sophisticated Parisian roles better than any other actor on the screen, it is generally admitted. In "Evening Clothes," coming Friday to the Palace Theater, he is again cast as a Parisian, but he is not the gay boulevardier all the way through the picture. He is first seen in an absolutely different characterization, as a French country gentleman, who although of aristocratic background and tremendous wealth, has enough of the homely manners of the soil to repel the dainty Paris bride whith whose parents he arranged a match.

Virginia Valli is leading woman.

Pupils Give Entertainment

Mrs. Stelter's piano pupils gave a very interesting program of solos, duets and two piano numbers at her home on Belvedere avenue last Saturday afternoon.

The playing of each number showed a concentration of thought, artistry and thorough preparation by the students. In all, the afternoon was enjoyable and profitable for the mothers and friends as well as for the pupils.

Streams Open to Fishermen

At a recent meeting of the state conservation commission, upon petition from sportsmen of the eastern part of Chalevoix county, Advance Creek and South Arm Creek were opened to trout fishermen. The order became effective immediately.

They say the pioneers had a hard time breaking up the land with ox teams. We'll bet that none of them ever tried to write a column like this and at the same time listen to the radio account of Capt. Lindbergh's flight to Paris.

COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY

HELD AT BARNARD M. E. CHURCH LAST THURSDAY

Large Attendance At Both Afternoon and Evening Sessions—Meeting Successful

"There are more murderers at large in this country than there are ministers of the gospel! About 12,000 murders are committed annually and only a small percentage of the offenders brought to justice!" So said State Secretary Halpenny of Lansing, over at the County Sunday School Rally, held last Thursday at Barnard.

"Murder results from a lack of respect for human life. Respect for one another falls down when reverence for God fails. The greatest thing you can do for a person is to reveal God to him," said Mr. Halpenny. In his three addresses he made a strong appeal for religious education and trained workers. He also gave many helpful suggestions stressing the value of the men's bible class movement, the need of men teachers for teen age boys, etc.

There was a discussion of "Gambling at the County Fair" from the viewpoint of Prosecutor Fitch of Charlevoix and Rev. Sidebotham of East Jordan. Some people heard for the first time that there was gambling at the Fair and that the sheriff and his deputies have to be constantly on the job to protect people from the unscrupulous concessioners. These parties carry thousands of dollars away with them and pay perhaps $500.00 for the privilege. The directors feel forced to sell the concessions in order to meet expenses.

Our Fair is no worse than others all over Michigan and the same principal is involved in thousands of business places where you deposit your money, turn a wheel and take a chance on receiving a box of candy or some other commodity, with a good prospect of getting nothing in return.

There are many good features at the county Fair. It is educational in many ways, but Sunday school workers and others interested in children and young people will protest against dismissing them from school to spend a day at the Fair where they gamble and don't know it is gambling. Surely this feature should be eliminated and clean amusements provided, even if taxes are increased to meet the deficit.

The topic "Temperance Teaching for To-day" was presented by Mrs. Saltonstall of Charlevoix, with special reference to the Sunday school. "The law is still on the statute books of Michigan requiring temperance instruction in the public schools, showing the effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human system." Wm. C. Palmer of Clarion, gave a helpful talk on "The Sunday School Worship Service."

Mrs. Harker Kirby of Charlevoix, the county secretary, gave an account of an attempted survey of the rural Sunday schools which she had tried to secure through the day school teachers. Fifty-two questionaires were sent out and the names of seven Sunday school superintendents were reported. Geo. Weaver of Petoskey, the Union Sunday School Missionary, was present and listed the rural schools he knew of—12 in number. Boyne City reported 7 schools, Charlevoix 4, and East Jordan 5, a total of 28.

This total is probably incomplete and an effort will be made to get in touch with all the schools through township or regional workers or a paid county missionary. Michigan was the only state without statistics at the last national gathering and is far behind in some departments of Sunday school work, according to State Secretary Halpenny.

Thursday was an ideal day for the rally. The Barnard church was in gala attire with fresh paint and paper and beautiful floral decorations, and the pastor and people most hospitable. The enrollment was 101 but this did not include everyone for the church was packed to the doors for the evening session. Over forty attended from the Charlevoix churches.

The county convention will be held in the fall at the new M. E. church in East Jordan.

MISS ISABELL MITCHELL GOES ABROAD

Will Visit Family Home in Scotland For First Time

Miss Isabell Mitchell, secretary and treasurer of the Charlevoix Abtract & Engineering company, left Tuesday morning for Montreal, Canada, on the first lap of her journey to Arbroath, Scotland, where she expects to visit relatives for the next two months.

From Montreal, Miss Mitchell will make the remainder of the journey by boat, and, incidentally, this is her first trip to the old family home in Scotland. We are informed that Mrs. O. P. North has accepted a position in the Abstract & Engineering company's office during Miss Mitchell's absence. Mrs. North was formerly employed in a Bay City insurance office for over ten years and is thoroughly acquainted with this line of business. Walker Miles will be in charge of the office.

SCHOOL YEAR WAS SUCCESSFUL ONE

STUDENTS MAKE FINE RECORDS IN SCHOOL WORK

All But Four of Present Teaching Staff Will Return For The 1927-28 Term

While the teaching staff for Charlevoix public schools is not quite complete, the following information regarding it is definite and may be made public at this time. Contracts have not as yet been made with the new teachers who are to take the places of those of the present staff who do not expect to return to Charlevoix next fall, and announcement of such appointments must be deferred until a later date.

George H. Coverdale will commence his third year as superintendent of schools next September. With him will be Oscar P. North as principal. Mr. North also teaches a class in science and mathmatics.

Of the present staff, most of the familiar names will appear on the faculty roster for 1927-28. Miss Velera Keller will return for her history classes; Mrs. Leonn McKinley for English; Stewart Coleman for mathmatics and scince; Miss Elizabeth Hood for home economics; Bayard Buchen as athletic instructor, coach and mathmatics; Miss Eleanor Thomas as commercial teacher and girl's athletic instructor.

Those in the grade school will be Gertrude Young, kindergarten and first grades; Florence Little, third, fourth and fifth grades at the north side school; Martha Seeberger, third and fourth grades at the south side school, where the vacancy caused by Miss Vandewal must be filled. Instructors at the central grade building will be as follows: Eleanor Finucan, kindergarten; Rocina Wilson, first and second grades; Sophia Manson, third grade; Juanita Secord, fourth grade; Florence Milner, fifth grade; Hazel Stewart, sixth grade, principal; Walter Alexander, seventh grade. A vacancy in the eighth grade is yet to be filled. Pearl Brigge will be principal of the Charlevoix county normal next year, with Gertrude Dick as critic teacher.

The remainder of the staff will not return, some having already accepted positions in other localities. Addison Onkley goes to Royal Oak, Michigan, Miss Sarah Lamb to Imlay City, and Miss Vandewal and Miss Vanderhaagen will quit teaching.

The school term of 1925-26, which closes with the senior commencement exercises at the Palace Theater Thursday evening, has been one of unusual success and activity. The graduating class of thirty-three boys and girls is one of the largest in the history of the school and the excellent standings of the students is evidence of efficiency on the part of instructors and close attention to study by students, a condition which could not exist without perfect cordination between the two.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Baptist services for next Sunday and next week will be as usual with sermons by the pastor. On account of the school activities this week the program for next week will be somewhat condensed.

Remember the baked goods sale to be given by the M. E. Ladies, Saturday, June 11, at Jacob's store.—Adv. 23-t1.

Modern Advertising Methods

Next week the Courier inaugurates a new advertising service—one which the publisher believes will not only help him in the way of building up a more profitable business, but one which will prove also of great value to every business man in Charlevoix and to the general public as well.

In the business life of every community the interests of each individual are more or less interwoven with the interests of the community as a whole. The man without capital has a better chance to succeed in a live, prosperous town, than he can possibly have in a dead, unprogressive town and by the same token the modern, up-to-date business man can achieve greater success in a community where the people who patronize him have money to spend and where they know that they can get what they want when they want it at prices and on terms equally satisfactory with those they can secure in any other town or city in the country. In order that the people shall know these things, however, some means must be provided for the business men to get the information to them and that newspapers are the best medium for the purpose has been so frequently and so thoroughly demonstrated by the most successful business institutions in the country as to permit of no argument.

In common with other lines of commercial activity and advertising business has been developed within the last few years into a system that closely approaches a science. Experts, men who by years of experience and study have demonstrated that they are qualified to produce advertising idens that will get results for the business men who employ them, are, in a way, directing the advertising business of the entire country and their knowledge and the results of their experience are now available to every progressive newspaper in the country and through them to every advertiser.

Under its present management the policy of the Courier has been, and will continue to be, that of SERVICE to the community that supports it and in keeping with this policy the paper has secured an advertising "sales service" from Bonnet-Brown of Chicago, one of the very foremost concerns in that line in the United States. Through the use of this service the Courier is able to place at the disposal of its advertising patrons the very latest developments in advertising cuts, borders, ideas and suggestions. The service does not mean that any "hand-me-down" "ready to run" advertisements such as some ad writers sell to business men at big prices but it offers up-to-the-minute cuts, suitable for practically every kind of business, borders and designs which feature almost any article the merchant may wish to offer at that particular time, and advertising idens and suggestions of value to every man who wants an attractive, business-getting ad.

The service comes to us every month, that for June is now on file at the Courier office and advertisers are invited to call at their earliest convenience, look them over, and make selections. Don't wait for our advertising man to call. We are pretty busy and he may be delayed.

If the old fashioned, sloppy, change-once-every-few months method of advertising without cuts or other attractive features paid, certainly a modern, attractive, up-to-the-minute system such as we are now able to offer you AT THE SAME PRICE will pay you better.

Sneak theives entered the garage of the Northern Auto Co. some time during the night of Tuesday, and rifled the cash drawer for a small amount, no other articles being missing upon careful investigation.

The night prowler evidently use a duplicate key, as all entrances show no signs of being forced. This fellow will pull a stunt like this too often, and we as well as other business houses hope he will be given the limit of the law if apprehended.

"MISS CHARLEVOIX" IN EXHIBIT RUN

Invited to Show Speed at Manitowoc, Wis., July 3 and 4

M. Roy Brady of the Brady Boat Co., this city, has just received an invitation from the American Legion of Manitowoc, Wisconsin, to bring his 725 class hydroplane, "Miss Charlevoix," to that city for exhibition running. The Legion there is staging a home coming celebration on the 3rd and 4th of July and are inviting a few of the fastest boats they can get in touch with to come there at this time and put on exhibition running just to give the people the thrill of seeing real speed on the water, the Legion offering to pay all expenses and a generous amount for time.

"Miss Charlevoix was reccommended to them by the secretary of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association. This is quite a compliment to a home town boat and shows what the outside people think of her. Mr. and Mrs. Brady also received entry blanks and invitations to enter the M. V. P. B. A. races at Houston, Texas, the 2nd, 3rd and 4th of July, and the Ohio Valley Power Boat Racing association at Cincinnati, Ohio, also on the 3rd and 4th. Cincinnati has chosen the same date for her races as the M. V. P. B. A. because of the distance to Houston, feeling that there will be a lot of boats fail to go there because of the distance.

SHIP CREW TELLS OF JANE SINKING

BOAT GOES TO BOTTOM WITH LOAD OF CEMENT

Wreck Lies in Thirty Fathoms of Water in Shipping Lane Off Arcadia

The following story relative to the sinking of the little freighter, Jane, during a blow off Arcadia, just south of Frankfort, last Monday, was told by members of the crew on their return to Charlevoix.

The ship, after stopping for repairs, was headed for Whitehall with her cargo of 500 barrels of cement from the Petoskey plant when a leak was discovered in the coal bunkers. The rip in the steel plates of the boat was in such a spot that the break could not be repaired and the water rushed in with terrible force, sending the boat to the bottom within an hour. The ship and cargo were insured.

Members of the crew, who were Captain Alford Ward, Peter Bathke and William Walker, all of Charlevoix, took to the life boat and within a few minutes the ship plunged to the bottom in 30 fathoms of water, where she rests today, probably never to be recovered. A heavy fog covered the lake and the crew members are not just sure as to the exact spot where the ship lies. She is about eight miles off shore on the usual shipping lane.

The ship was owned by Urban F. Myer and Capt. Ava Smith, of interest and the latter one-sixth, and at one time when the ship was first brought out, was under command of Capt. Smith, then a resident of Charlevoix.

The Jane was built in 1923, in Chicago. Her hull was of steel and dimensions of 57 feet in length, beam 22.3 feet, depth 6.4 feet and propelling power of 75-horsepower steam engine.

Her first sailing of the season was May 7, after she had been chartered by Capt. John Roen of this city to carry cement to the Sloan road job near Muskegon.

BEAT BANDIT AT HIS OWN GAME

CHARLEVOIX BANKERS ORGANIZE COUNTY FEDERATION

Will Equip Sheriff With Bullet-proof Vest and Organize Large Posse of Vigilantes

"Just as the Americans cannot hope to win a battle by the use of artillery alone, so the bankers will never be successful in their war on bank bandits by the use of mechanical devices alone."

This is the statement of Joseph Rylands, Chicago, field representative of the Michigan Bankers' Association in a talk before the bankers of Charlevoix County in the banking rooms of the Charlevoix County bank Monday night.

The meeting was one of organization of which the vigilante plan of bank protection was launched in this county.

"We have been trying to beat the bandit with mechanical means too long and now we are going to meet him on his own footing," said Rylands. "In other words we are going to use the same weapons he uses as well as a few more."

In discussing the history of bank crime, Rylands showed where the bandit had never feared anything in the way of bank protection until the vigilante iden was brought into being.

With such states as Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas and Oklahoma operating under the plan, the bandit has felt himself much abused because the bankers had taken away from him the two elements on which he depended for success—the elements of surprise and the element of force.

All citizens and farmers in the community will be enlisted to act with the bankers in their war on all major crime. They will be constantly on the alert for the suspicious stranger.

Forty-six vigilantes, all picked men who will be scattered about at strategic points in the country will be sworn in as deputy sheriffs.

Each of these vigilantes will be equipped with a .45 caliber revolver and a Krag rifle. Secret alarms will be run from the banks to the vigilantes place of business; a wide spread system of alarm will be worked out with the telephone company which will enable the sheriff and the county protective committee of the bankers to spread a net of vigilantes in all the counties surrounding in less than thirty minutes.

The Charlevoix County Bankers Federation at this meeting also voted to equip the sheriff of the county with bullet proof vests and bullet proof glass for his automobiles. Gas bombs and high explosive bombs will follow in short order.

A reward of $1,000 will be offered by the County Federation for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any bandit robbing or attempting to rob any bank in Charlevoix county.

Another meeting will be held at the Charlevoix County Bank, June 15, for further organization of the county federation.

Such Flavor

as this comes only in real Quaker Oats

THE price you pay for substitutes is the same as for the genuine Quaker Oats. The difference is in the flavor. And flavor, above all things, is important in oats.

That rich and toasty Quaker flavor is the result of some 50 years' milling experience. Once you taste it, you are spoiled for ordinary oats.

That is why millions demand the Quaker brand—why you should accept no other.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed. Protein, carbohydrates, and vitamines and "bulk" are thus combined to make Quaker Oats an excellently "balanced" food.

Get Quaker Oats today. Grocers have two kinds: Quick Quaker, which cooks in 2½ to 5 minutes, and Quaker Oats.

The RECLUSE of FIFTH AVENUE

"It's my house. If you pay the rent, you can go in and get your clothes. If you don't, you stay out." Feverishly Lippsky destroyed whatever chance of life a row of kohlrabi might have had. Then, when he saw his tenant march toward the shack, he followed.

"One of them yellow hairs," he scolded as he trotted by the tall man's side. "A swell lady who said she didn't know how you could live in such a pigsty. She called my house a pigsty. Well, she's been locked up in a pigsty since it was my dinner time."

Suddenly Barnes' powerful hand seized Lippsky.

"If you don't give me the key," he said, "I'll twist your arm out of its socket." Barnes turned the other's wrist a little.

"You shall sleep in the jail for this," Lippsky cried when the key was forced from him.

"It will be less verminous than this place, Barnes answered. He put his key in the door and threw it open. He was wholly at a loss to know whom the invader could be.

The noise of the opening awoke her. She was a tall, slim girl with golden hair, in a white knitted sports suit. When she saw him she held out her arms.

"Darling daddy!" she cried, throwing her arms around his neck.

"Nita," he said, stroking her hair, "how I have longed for you! But, my dear, how is it you are here?"

"I ran away," she confessed. "They said such utterly beastly things about you I couldn't stand it. How well you look, daddy. I shall call you my big brother. Nobody will believe you're my father. What makes you stay in such a funny place as this?" Suddenly she caught sight of Lippsky. "Who is that dreadful little creature?"

Lippsky spoke up distinctly.

"I own this house, and I've come for the rent. If he don't pay, he goes to sleep in the village jail. I guess he don't mind. I guess it ain't for the first time. He ain't got no money. You say he's your father." Lippsky grinned. "Well, you got the chance to save your daddy from jail."

"Dad," she whispered, "I hadn't any idea it was as bad as this. I've only three dollars left. The boat trip took all my savings."

"My dear girl," he said easily, "the man is known widely as the village idiot. Nobody believes him. It does happen that my rent is due. By the way, how much is it?"

"Ninety dollars eighty cents."

"I rather thought it was more," said Barnes. He took out a roll of bills and paid. He was left with seven dollars. His reward came in the feller the girl showed.

"It's a fad of mine staying up here," he admitted. "The air is good and I've been training. I shall leave now. I think we'll go to New York as soon as possible. How lovely you look. You have those unforgettable violet eyes of your mother, but you are taller." The thought that he had nowhere to take her made him miserable, but he would not let her see it. It was incomprehensible to him that the countess of Horsham, his late wife's eldest sister, had allowed her niece to come. The countess had always been his enemy.

"It came to a point," the girl said when they were in a New York-bound train, "when I was asked to drop my own name and take my mother's. Not that I minded being Nita Fessendon, except that it seemed as though I were publicly ashamed of you. I simply refused. There were awful rows. So I ran away. I was twenty-one and my own mistress. I sent all the jewels and presents back and started to earn my living."

"Nita," he cried, with admiration in his look, "how could you possibly do what I've always failed in?"

"It wasn't easy at first," she admitted, "but I stuck it out and made enough money in secretarial work to come out to my own country second cabin. I tried to find you six months ago, but the silly clubs returned all your letters."

Neeland Barnes colored. "Must have mislaid the address," he said; "d—d careless of them. I shall report it." He wondered how she had run him to earth.

"When I got to New York I 'phoned the Knickerbocker. I knew it used to be your favorite club. I told the secretary, or whoever it was, that I was your daughter and simply had to find you, and they told me to call up later. When I did they said you lived in Peekskill. I spent three hours looking and then that village idiot locked me in."

She did not tell him that naturally she had started her search expecting to find him in one of the better sections of the charming Hudson-side city. The Lippsky cottage on the outskirts had been a dreadful shock. But the search was over and she was happy. She was very proud of him. Her aunt had drawn the picture of a decrepit, vice-ridden physical wreck. Instead he was vigorous, clear-skinned, and agile.

"Where are we going, daddy?" she demanded, after she had passed Sing Sing's embattled walls.

"I'm staying with Peter Milman," he answered. "Lady Horsham may have mentioned him."

"I remember. His wife ran away and he shut himself up in his house and went mad."

"That is just what your aunt would say," he returned. "He did not go mad. He happens to be the best friend I have, and I shall ask him to let you stay the night there. Much better than a stuffy, noisy hotel."

"And tomorrow we'll get a cozy little flat. I've often wanted to look over the treetops into Central park."

"I'm afraid cozy little flats on Fifth avenue where you were born aren't exactly within my means. The view is just as pretty from Central Park west." He groaned to think they were just as difficult to attain.

"Anything you like," she said happily.

Peter Milman and his two guests had finished dinner and were in the large drawing room when Achille came in with the news that Neeland Barnes had returned with a lady!

Bradney looked at Malet and shook his head. It was in Bradney's mind that Barnes had spent his money on liquid refreshment and had so far forgotten himself as to seek to introduce a lady friend to a bachelor establishment. He could see that Peter Milman was much disturbed.

A moment later Neeland Barnes was introducing a very pretty, gracious girl with charming speaking voice as Anita Barnes newly come from England. Peter Milman's annoyance was banished momentarily as he thought of the ramifications of his family tree. The girl must be, remotely, a distant cousin. He greeted her with distinguished courtesy and introduced the other men to her.

"Most extraordinary," Neeland Barnes began. "Entirely unlooked for. I feel as if I had come in for a fortune." He smiled at his daughter. "I have, and that's a fact. She has been living with her aunt in England."

"Till I couldn't stand it any longer," Nita informed them.

Her father was greatly troubled. Circumstances, as he would presently explain to Mr. Milman, had compelled him to bring his long-lost daughter here. But what he had to say could not be said in her presence.

"I wonder," he said meditatively, "whether Mr. Malet would mind showing you the Japanese garden. You'll be simply crazy over it, especially the 'Stone of the Unfortunate Burglar.' Mr. Malet understands these things so much better than I do." He winked ponderously at the sculptor. He tried to convey the impression that he must speak privately with his host.

"A Japanese garden?" she cried. "How delightful. Please, Mr. Malet, show me its wonders."

"Look here," said her father when she had gone. "I couldn't help this. They made things so hard for her that she ran away. She had an idea I was sick and in need of her. She actually earned her passage money. The first of my bread to earn money! She was waiting at Peekskill for me. Lippsky saw his chance and made the most of it. I had to pay everything. You see me now penniless again. She thinks I am staying here overnight and will take an apartment on Central park tomorrow." He looked appealing at the two men. "Could I help it? I had to bring her here. She has nothing left. The Barnes breed of cattle's not economical. Here we are beggars, outcasts in our own city."

"Neither beggars nor outcaste for three months—at least—" Peter Milman said cheerfully. "Of course, your daughter must remain here. It will be pleasant to have someone young and beautiful with us." He lowered his voice a little. "She must never suspect what brings us all here. It can be supposed that we are engaged in some promotion concerning oil." He put his hand on Barnes' shoulder with a friendly gesture. "I envy you. I am going to see that a room is prepared for her."

Barnes looked at Bradney when the door was closed.

"Outside here," he said, "in the world which calls itself society, Peter Milman has the name of being a soured old grouch and a disgrace to his name. I ask you, as man to man, if you've ever run across anyone more considerate? My God, Bradney, if you knew the sort of life I've led since that trouble at Saratoga trying to keep my end up when my people had dropped me and my old pals cut me dead, you'd understand just what this means. I'm going the limit for Peter Milman. You've just seen how he saved me from another humiliation. I should have had to tell my girl her father was such an utter failure he couldn't even get her a room in a cheap hotel."

"I know how you must feel," Bradney commented.

"We've got to get the money out of Raxon," Barnes went on, "even if I'm the goat and end up in Sing Sing. Frankly, Bradney, I'm not much of an original thinker. I can carry out another man's conception absolutely and add a few improvements of my own, but I look to neo-

TALK IN WASHINGTON OF COMPROMISE FARM MEASURE

There is talk in Washington of a compromise farm measure, but no details are yet available as to what from the proposed compromise legislation will take. It is said that it may lean towards some plan for orderly co-operative marketing of agricultural products, with the government lending funds to co-operative associatinns. No bill should pass the sennte which will be unecomic in principal because the chief sufferers will be the farmers themselves. It is to be hoped that the approach of the 1928 election will not permit the passage and enactment into law of a bill which will not be based on reason, logic, common sense and economic workableness. The farmers of the country should study the new measure and should make their voice and their opinions known in their own way and by all means through the real farmer who should represent them in Washington.

THE TREK TO TOWN

A report has just been issued by Secretary Jardine showing that 2,150,000 persons moved from farms to cities, towns and villages last year, the greatest number in any year since 1929. There may be a little sunshine in this picture of wholesale desertion of the farms in the fact that while this exodus was under way there were 1,235,000 persons who moved from the cities to farms. Excess of births over deaths in the agricultural sections also added 371,000 persons, so it is estimated that the net loss to the farms is somewhere nround a million persons. This estimate is arrived nt by crediting thousands of those who have gone back to the country with still virtually remaining a part of our great industrinl life. They move outside of city limits, but continue to earn their living in industrial persuits by driving back and forth each day. If they acquire land it is either left idle or is farmed out by fields to neighbors so that there is not an actual increase of tillers of the soil. In this grent trek to the city is seen the dissillusionment of thousands who cnn no longer keep up whnt they believe is an unequal struggle; they prefer the city with its higher wages, life and excitement. It is the tragedy of this movement which if not stopped may end in a shortage of food supplies and eventually an American peasantry. Even in Michigan, where agriculture and industry nre more nearly on a par than in any other state, there is a constantly growing number of the deserted farm houses whose owners have abandoned them to the elements while they sought shelter within the sound of the hum of factory wheels. It is a problem that galls for the best thought in America to solve.

OUR FRIEND, THE GAME WARDEN

The nld conception of a game warden is a man who should be feared and his work obstructed in every way possible is fast giving way and sportsmen are becoming to recognize him as a friend.

It is not strange that there was opposition to the activities of the game warden in the early days. Men had been used to hunting at all seasons of the year, and to them, legislation restrictions concerning the taking of game and fish wns an encroachment on their personal rights. They did not think that there would ever be a time when game and fish would not be plentiful. In reality, they thought very little of the future nlong that particular line. Their big job was to tame the country and they were taming with an iron hand.

However, as the years passed by and the shortage of game and fish became more apparent, sportsmen began to realize that the game wnrden was in reality their friend. They discovered that the laws which he was trying tn enforce had been passed for their own protection and that without them the attractions of field and stream would soon be gone. They also discovered thnt the game warden was a very human fellow nnd that he did not intend to persecute anybody. They learned thnt the game warden and the game and fish department, in a scientific way was endeavoring to make hunting and fishing better. The game warden discovered that they could get a tremendous amount of co-operation from sportsmen. They also learned that sportsmen were anxious to introduce new game into the state and again the two elements were nble to work together. The sportsmnn introduced the game and the wardens protected it after it was here. Thus, as a result of this co-operation, the citizens of the state were afforded sport that they never enjoyed before.

The game warden is the friend of every citizen. His sole duty is to try to make conditions such that there will be more fish and game. Through his activities the outdoors should become more interesting. He is not trying to deprive any citizen of anything. He is merely protecting the property that belongs to all of us—the creatures of the wild. He should have our co-operation and help every time he needs it.

IT'S THE LAW

Following each adjournment of the legislature there is always more or less comment on the quality of the laws that finally managed to get through the legislative hopper. But despite our apparent habit of criticizing, rather than to praise, there has been a decided improvement in legislation in recent years, says the Golden Book Magazine, which goes nn to call attention to some old time legislation that once cluttered up the statute books of the nation.

A Kansas legislature once enacted, "When two trains approach each other at a crossing they shall both come to a full stop and neither shall start until the other is gone." The solons of Tenessee in 1923 enacted, "It shall be unlawful for the owner or keeper of horses, mules, cattle, sheep, goats or hogs to run at large."

Suppose some of the fair sex, were to go back to 1652, when Massachusetts legislature enacted the following regarding women's apparel, and which, so far as known, has never been repealed: "Hereafter no garment shall be made with short sleeves whereby the nakedness of the arm may be discovered in the wearing thereof; and such as have garments already made with short sleeves shall not hereafter wear the same unless they cover their arms to the wrist with linen, or otherwise; and that hereafter no person whatsoever shall make any garment for women, or any of their sex with sleeves more than half nn ell in the widest part thereof, and proportionable for the bigger or smaller persone."

The city of Los Angeles once decreed by ordinance that two persons should not occupy a bath tub at the same time, while a Wisconsin legislature made it mandatory upon lumber camp foremen to provide an individual bnth tub for each lumberjack employed in the camp. Coming back home we might cite the action of the 1907 Michigan legislature which prnvided for "An act to provide for the lawful taking of suckers, mullet, dogfish nnd lawyers from the waters of the Sturgeon river."

Puritans Fond of Stocks and Bonds

When the young man about town dabbled in stocks and bonds in Puritan days, it wasn't the same process that it is today. In fact, it was rather an uncomfortable proceeding—as the stocks of the Puritans held hands and feet in a board—and the bonds triced them up while they were being flogged.

Some queer sentences were given, involving the use of these forms of correction, it was disclosed in the research work done for Lillian Gish's new Metro-Goodwyn-Mayer feature, "The Scarlet Letter," an adaption of Hawthorn's classic of Puritan days, which comes to the Palace Theater, Saturday and Sunday, June 11 and 12.

Whistling on Sunday meant three hours in the stocks.

Laughing on the way to church meant from one to two hours in this uncomfortable and undignified perch of correction.

Smiling on Sunday brought a public rebuke in church—and a second offense the stocks.

Neglect of church services meant flogging.

Offenses against the Sabbath generally meant more severe punishment than thefts.

The new story, Hawthorn's classic cry against intolerance, hinges largely in some of these queer punishments, and much research was made necessary to depict them. Miss Gish plays the ill-fated "Hester Pynne" in the new production, with Lars Hanson, the famous Swedish star, in the principal male roll of "Reverend Dimmesdale," and Karl Dane, William H. Tooker, Marcelle Corday, Mary Hawes and others have important rolls. Victor Seastrom, director of "He Who Gets Slapped," directed the new production.

DETROIT BUCKS NEW GAS TAX

THREATENS MEASURE BY REFERENDUM PETITION

Governor Warns That Highway Work Will Be Delayed if Wayno Protests

Governor Fred W. Green today warned the voters of Michigan that "by signing a refrendum petition to delay or defeat operation of the Leland-Cameron three cent gas tax, only n small amount of new highway construction not contracted for by the last administration can be undertaken this year or next."

The governor's statement was prompted by reports from Detroit to the effect that the Detroit city council contemplated taking the lead in circulating such a petition to delay the new law until the 1928 fall election. Otherwise the law will become effective September 4 this year.

Fund Overdrawn

"The highway fund will be $1,000,000 in 'red' on July 1," the governor continued, "and because of the action of the last administration, virtually all of the estimate receipts from the present two cent tax and the weight tax are tied up in contracts binding the state."

Passage of the three cent bill was sought by the governor to provide funds for construction and paving of highways not embraced by the program inherited by his administration from the one it supplanted, he said. It will net an estimated $6,000,000 additional annually. It was passed by the legislature only after an original defeat, and a subsequent compromise.

Opponents of the Leland bill included all but three of the twenty-one members of the Detroit delegation in the house, and most of the so-called farm bloc members.

The movement to circulate a referendum petition, which would require 31,336 signatures, grew out of a conference in Detroit between Rep. Robert D. Wardell of Wayne, anti-administration member of the house, Acting Mayor John C. Lodge and Councilman John Stevenson. After the conference Stevenson announced he would submit a resolution to the council.

Farmers Oppose it

Despite the governor's opposition, there was believed a better than even chance that the petition, if launched, would obtain the required number of signatures. Wardell asserted that Rep. John Goodwine of Sanilac, director of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, had assured him the bureau would support the movement. Goodwine, representing the bureau, consistantly opposed any bill that did not contemplate a reduction in weight tax as a concession to the farmer.

Wardell characterized the three cent gas tax as a measure designed to provide the wherewithal to meet campaign promises. Stevenson asserted the bill had been "crammed down the throat of Wayne county in spite of our opposition and the opposition of a large section of the farm population." Acting Mayor Lodge said "There is a feeling that it is unjust taxation, wholly unnecessary, and the way to find out is to submit it to the voters of the state."

If the resolution is carried, the Detroit city clerk will be ordered to prepare the referendum petition blanks for circulation. In view of Goodwine's support, it was believed likely that the farm bureau would aid in distribution of the petition through the rural districts.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
by B. C. Mellencamp

Announcement of Alfalfa Certification

There is now being produced in Michigan considerable quantities of alfalfa seed, the productivity of which, for Michigan, cannot be exceeded for similar varieties grown elsewhere.

Much of this seed loses its identity, as now marketed, the producer getting only the price of a cheap "common" and the purchaser often uncertain as to the origin of a particular lot of seed.

To overcome these conditions, the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, working under the supervision of the Farms Crop Department of the Michigan State College, is offering alfalfa seed inspection and certification service as follows:

Hardigan Alfalfa Seed. Genuineness must be established by pedigree.

Grimm Alfalfa Seed. Genuineness must be established by pedigree.

Variegated Alfalfa Seed—Michigan grown. This class may include Grimm, Hardigan, Cossack, Ontario Variegated, etc., without pedigree. Field inspection will determine eligibility to this class. Fields not showing sufficient variegation for this class will automatically be classed as common.

Michigan Common Alfalfa Seed. Any field of alfalfa having passed through two winters will be eligible for this class.

Field inspection must be made while fields are in bloom, except "common." At time of final inspection, made when seed is cleaned and sacked, the sacks will be sealed and tagged.

"Shall I save this crop for seed, or had I better cut it for hay?" We expect our inspectors to give valuable recommendations on prospects for a profitable seed crop.

The Farm Bureau at Lansing has excellent seed cleaning machinery and will be asked by many growers to market their seed, so cleaning shall be done nt the Michigan Farm Bureau Seed Service, Lansing, under the supervision of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, except in instances where special permission is otherwise granted.

Fees: $1.00—Membership in Membership in Mishigan Crop Im- $5.00—Field inspection—each variety—any acreage—paid but once for each field; one half cent per pound —Sealing fee, collected on seed passing inspection and sealed; $5.00—Travel fee is sealed at any place other than Farm Bureau, Lansing.

If any farmer in Charlevoix county desires inspection, either send your name to B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent, or write to the Michigan Crop Improvement Association for details.

millionaire president of the Paige Motor Car Company, has his 3,000 acre estate, with an additional 160 acres acquired through Backus & Mathews of Harbor Springs last fall. Mr. Jewett has imported some twenty pairs of Hungarian pheasants, which were taken from their native haunts in Central Europe to Paris by airplane and were given special transportation all the way to his farm. He also hired some Finns, specially skilled in the erection of log buildings, to construct his rustic summer home on the estate. They were employed in this work for an entire season.

A recent sale by Backus & Mathews was that of a tract of 4,700 acres in this territory, owned by the Buffalo Land Co. The government bought this land for addition to what is known as the Michigan National Forest. Many of these natural forests have been created in the west, usually in the vicinity of the national parks.—Harbor Springs Republican.

BEAVER PLACED IN THREE STREAMS

Petoskey Men Take Charge of Handling Animals

Six well fed beaver were placed in various Northern Michigan streams last week, the three Galster brothers, John L. A. Charles and Henry of Petoskey, superintending the job.

The beaver were secured from Northern Michigan, being captured in special beaver traps authorized by the U. S. government, the traps holding the animals without injury of any kind.

Two each were placed in Spring Brook, Minnehaha and south Boyne creeks, and it is hoped that they will increase and become acclimated to conditions prevalent here.

Game wardens have been instructed to prosecute any molestation of these protected animals, it being unlawful at any time to kill or injure the beaver. Special observations will be made of the work of the beaver, and the wardens will promptly make arrests where the protective law has been violated.—Petoskey Evening News.

Let Michigan citizens be just as generous with the stricken little village of Bath as they have always been with the unfortunate of other climes. Here is a tragedy at home that calls forth our deepest sympathy.

ple like you and Malet to dope out the plans first."

Bradney stirred a little uneasily. He saw that the man of action was looking to him for guidance. The more ardently Bradney desired to pull down Paul Raxon, the more difficult the task seemed. This move of the financier to Great Rock had nullified most of the laborious details garnered by Peter Milman concerning the vacated home in Short Hills in New Jersey the domestic arrangements had been on a simple plan and the servants few. In the Long Island mansion much greater style was kept up. There were extensive grounds and many outdoor servants.

"I'm afraid you must not look for much help from me," Bradney said. "Milman has assured me absolutely that it is to Raxon I owe my downfall. He has literally stolen my existence. Yours, too, and poor Malet's also. If I had accepted a bribe disguised as a usual form of commission, I should probably have been what the world terms a great man today. If you had not been afraid your aged aunt would see you in an altercation concerning a roof-garden actress, you would not have been disgraced. Had Malet possessed a less generous nature, he would have been talked of in a breath with Rodin, Raxon, Raxon everywhere. Let me tell you I'm just as ready to go the limit as you are. As a matter of simple fact, we were looking to you to make the first concrete suggestion."

"That scoundrel Lippsky drove every idea from my mind," Barnes confessed, "but we have plenty of time."

He stopped short as his daughter came in with Floyd Malet. What a beauty she was, he thought affectionately, and how gracefully she carried herself. Breeding in every line of her! Then the thought of his financial inadequacies came to him like a dull pain. What had he to offer? Nothing. A few months' respite and a new life would offer itself. What would that be? He did not like to think. To live for the day was a Barnes motto. He hoped Peter Milman had, indeed, some definite working plan. If it were only a matter of wading through the Raxon men servants and beating their master it would be simple. He had not in his past been noted for subtleties, and laborious, slow processes soon wearied him.

Nita slipped her arm into that of her tall, handsome father.

"Don't look so glum," she chided. She was in very good spirits. The shock of the Lippsky episode had been forgotten when she entered this unique home. She could associate neither failure nor poverty with any of the men beneath its roof. She was curious to know what had brought them together here. It was difficult to conceive of her father as a successful business man. Lady Horsham had often declared few men had been offered such opportunities and made less of them than Neeland Barnes.

METHODIST CHURCH

C. E. Pollock, Minister

The pastor leaves tomorrow morning for Albion college, where he will teach in the summer school of theology. During his absence from his pulpit, it will be very ably filled as follows:

June 12, Rev. Dr. E. A. Armstrong of Grand Rapids.

June 19, Rev. Dr. J. C. DeVinaey of Grand Rapids.

June 26, Rev. Dr. W. M. Puffer of Kalamazoo.

The pastor is sent by the Michigan conference to serve as teacher during the summer term. He receives no additional financial return for his services except his actual expenses. Thus his contribution is partly a gift from Charlevoix Methodism, that loans their pastor for this occasion. Simply charge it to the minister's vacation, and expect a great July and August when the pastor returns. Be sure to "listen in" on the great Sunday messages which the supply ministers will bring. They are the best to be had. Rev. Dr. E. A. Armstrong has just recently returned from a Palestinian trip and will deliver his sermon lecture, "Hours in Palestine" the evening of June 12th, at 7:30.

The Epworth League will meet each Sunday evening at 6:30 until the pastor returns and the Sunday school will meet at 12 o'clock.

There will be no Tuesday evening prayer service during the pastor's absence. The Thursday evening service at 7:30 will be led by Brother A. Edwards.

The W. C. T. U. meets Friday this week at 2:30 p. m. at the Congregational church. Members are requested to bring flowers. The program is in charge of the flower mission committee and group three will serve.

A fine success was "The Minister's Wife's New Bonnet", as presented by our Barnard church people, really our own folks, and they did their fun making and rendered their musical numbers in an excellent manner. How true the old adage is, A little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men."

POWER COMPANIES ARE CONSOLIDATING

New Merger Takes in Plant at Elk Rapids and Boyne City

Announcement was made last week of the consolidation of the Elk Electric Company at Elk Rapids with six other Michigan public utilities. These seven utilities which include the Michigan United Light & Power Co., White River Power Co., Boyne River Power Co., Boyne City Electric Co., Grayling Electric Co., and the Michigan Public Service Co., will form a consolidation system functioning and operating under the name of the Michigan Public Service Co.

At the present time these companies are intercoursed by a 220 mile, 33,000 volt transmission line with Whitehall at the southern most point and Mackinaw City as the northern point. Radiating from each of the interconnected companies are numerous smaller transmission lines that serve practically the whole resort section of Northern Michigan, assuring the dependable and economical electric service resulting from the interconnection of utilities that has gained favor through the country.

Future plans provide for expansion to serve communities and isolated districts along the shore of Lake Michigan and adjacent resort properties. This, with the future acquirement of independent utilities now operating will provide ample and well distributed electric service to Northern Michigan's rapidly growing resort section.

In Memorian

In loving memory of our darling daughter, Edna Noble Deyle, who died two years ago today, June 9:

Gone from me dear Edna forever,
Your voice so dear is still,
I try to be brave in my sorrow
I know 'twas the Lord's will;
But oh, the bitter heartaches,
The longing to see you again,
God only knows how I miss you,
Calling you back in vain.

Edna, our dear, we miss you,
Why did they take you from us,
And why did you have to go?
Never to see you, never to have you
Is a longing too hard to bear;
Oft and oft our hearts do wander
To a grave not far away,
Days of sadness still come over us
Tears in silence often flow,
For memories keep you ever near us
Though you died two years ago.

When the evening shades are falling
And we are all alone,
In our hearts there comes a longing
if you only could come home.
Oft we think of you, dear Edna,
And our hearts are sad with pain;
Oh, this earth would be a Heaven;
Could we but hear your voice again;
Each lonely hour that we have spent is woven through and through
With golden threads of memory,
Dear Edna, just for you.

STATE FAIR PLANS MANY IMPROVEMENTS

Work Being Rushed to Completion in Time For Big Exposition

Nearly $14,000 worth of improvements are to be rushed on the State Fair grounds here to have them in shape for this fall's exposition as a result of favorable action by the legislature earlier this month.

The major terms were outlined by Secretary John McNamara Monday, headed by $21,050 worth of concrete roads, some 4,210 lineal feet of paving. The speed barns are to be built, as in recent years far more racing horses have been entered than could be cared for there. The new buildings will cost $10,000 each. Nearly $20,000 will be spent on an adequate sewage and drainage system for the grounds and curbs and gutters for all paved roads will cost $15,000. Sidewalk extentions will run $10,000. Water main extentions will cost $3,500.

The electrical system is inadequate and $10,000 will be spent there. To accommodate the augmented vaudeville program, two platforms, dressing rooms and a bandstand will be built at $16,700.

Tables and shelves for the new agricultural building will cost $5,000, and $10,000 will be expended in painting various buildings. Roofing repairs are budgeted at $2,500. Gates and fence at railroad and subway will cost $1,200. A mower will be bought for $325 and two light trucks will cost $2,500.

RECREATIONAL DIRECTOR EMPLOYED

SUMMER SPORTS WILL BE UNDER HIS DIRECTION

Water Sports, Tennis and Golf Tournaments and Other Activities Are Planned

A move which is destined to make Charlevoix even more famous as the playground of the North, was brought about last week when A. I. Creamer, manager of the Inn and the city council, acting jointly secured Mr. Gerald Ash of Mimma, Florida, to promote recreationd netivities and summer sports in Charlevoix during the resort season.

Mr. Ash comes here from Havana, Cuba, where he has had charge of the officiating for all national championships of the A. A. U. of Cuba. He was also athletic director of the Cuban army for two years and in all has had over 14 years experience in directing athletic activities in Florida and other parts of the United States as well as Cuba.

The plan of having a city recreational director originated in Florida, where, with their thousands upon thousands of tourists, they had to devise some means for their entertainment other than horesome rounds of sight seeing and hotel activities. Such a plan worked out to perfection and with swimming meets and water tournaments, the tourists' days were full to the brim.

Charlevoix is about to give her gradually increasing number of summer visitors this very thing which has put Florida in her enviable position as a playground for the nation's pleasure seekers. At The Inn, Mr. Ash will have charge of the tennis courts and direct swimming netivities. Last summer during the Western Michigan tennis championships, it was found that the event had gained such popularity and interested so large an entry list, that it was almost out of the question for local men to leave their business and devote their time in putting the tournament over as it should be. This year the event, will be even larger and with Mr. Ash in charge, giving it his whole time, will prove in greater success than before.

This is but a small part of the program Mr. Ash has in mind for the resort season now under way. It is his desire to organize n city baseball team; group ball teams among the boys of the resort colonies; arrange for water sports with long distance rnces, competition of all sorts nnd water carnivals at different intervals. Local tennis nnd golf tournaments with members from neighboring resorts competing are also planned, ns are boat regattas, street carnivals, baby parades, etc. Mr. Ash will have charge of all these sport events, thus relieving local business men of such responsibilities during this busy time of year. Recreational activities have had little attention locally for lack of someone to get behind nnd promote them. With n man for this purpose on the job things will move along these lines.

We believe that Charlevoix has taken a forwnrd step and that a recreational director should have a permnnent place in our city from now on. Mr. Ash will need local cooperation—let's give it to him.

CITIZENS OF COUNTY ASKED TO HELP PROTECT SWANS

Five beautiful white swans, a gift from Mrs. George B. Douglas, cottage owner at the Chicago Club, nrrived in Charlevoix last Thursday from Cedar Rnpids, Iowa, and are now located in Old River on the Club grounds.

It will be remembered that five or six years ago the Chicago Club had another group of swans, which were killed by a party living near East Jordan, who claimed they thought they were geese. The guilty ones were arrested and fined, although that did not replace the swuns. It is the ernest hope of everyone that this occurrence will not happen again, as the beautiful birds are an ever interesting attraction. Every precaution will be taken to protect them and a warning is given that if they are molested in any way prosecution will result.

The swans will be allowed to roam the lakes at will and may be found miles from the Chicago Club. The cooperation of citizens of the county is asked for their protection.

PRETTY WEDDING LAST SATURDAY

Miss Frieda VanderHaagen and Anthony Novotny United

A very pretty wedding was solemnized last Saturday, June 11, at 8:30 o'clock, when Miss Frieda VanderHaagen, daughter of Mrs. John VanderHaagen, was united in marriage to Anthony Francis Novotny, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Novotny of this city.

The marriage took place nt the home of the bride's mother on Bridge street with Rev. G. B. Mattson of the Congregational church performing the ceremony. The young couple were attended by Miss Lillis Flanders as bridesmaid and Jeffers Novotny, brother of the groom, as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Novotny will make their home on west Garfield avenue. The bride has been an instructor in the local schools for the past few years and the groom is employed at Brown's garage. Both have a large following of friends who extend their congratulations.

This popular hostelry is owned by the Pere Marquette Railway company and has been under the management of Mr. A. I. Creamer for more than twenty years. The same corp of efficient officers and help will assist him in the operntion of the big hotel during the summer, viz: William E. Flynn as assistant in charge of rooms; Alton M. Creamer assistant in charge of cuisine; Lee McDonald, cashier and bookkeeper; Dan C. Walsh, secretary; Mrs. William E. Flynn, housekeeper; Leon York, maitre d'hotel; Louie de Boulieva, chef; Henry Anderson, in charge of buffet and billiard halls; James Flynn, head porter; John Flynn, head hellman; John Withers, chief engineer; Floyd Miller, laundryman; Richard S. Ryan, superintendent of grounds; C. Y. Marshall, in charge of tennis courts; and Gerald Ash, director of tennis and swimming activities.

There has been n force of carpenters and painters working on The Inn for two months, and the hotel is in its usual good condition for the opening date.

Emmet French, the popular golf professionnl at Southern Pines, N. C., will be n guest at The Inn, accompanied by Mrs. French, during the early part of August. He will take pleasure in giving one or two exhibitions here, playing with other well known professionals. Mr. French took the all-American team over to Europe in 1925 nnd is one of the grent golfers of the world.

Mr. Crenmer stated thnt bookings at The Inn were well in advance of a year ago and prospects indicate more than an average season at Charlevoix.

DEATH FOLLOWED AUTO SMASH

EMMET N. COULTER DIED IN LANSING LAST SATURDAY

Was One of County's Practical and Progressive Farmers—Death Shock to Friends

Charlevoix and vicinity were shocked last Saturday to learn of the denth of Emmet N. Coulter, one of its well known and highly respected citizens, which occurred at Lansing, Michigan, following an automobile accident.

Mr. nnd Mrs. Coulter had gone to the state capitol to be present at the graduation of their nephew, Earl Coulter, a student at Michigan State College. Saturdny morning they took their car and went to visit some friends. Just as they swung in towards the curbing to park, a truck, which was evidently following close behind them, rammed the rear end of their Ford sedan, turned it completely around and smashed a wheel.

Mr. Coulter turned in his seat and asked his wife if she was injured. She replied that she was not, and asking him the same question noticed that he had slumped into his seat in an unconscious condition from which he never rallied. Death followed nbout 30 minutes later in a Lansing hospital. No outward signs of injury were present on Mr. Coulter's body and death is attributed to shock and possibly a broken blood vessel.

Emmet N. Coulter was born July 31st, 1868, in Hartland, Livingston county, Michigan, the son of Rev. Cyrenus N. Coulter, a Congregational minister. He was the youngest of seven sons, in a family of ten children. His early life was spent with his family, who moved to numerous places in the state, where the father, as a minister of the gospel, was called. He was married September 8th, 1896 to Miss Lota Ayers in Central Lake, Michigan. A plumber by trade, he worked in Traverse City and St. Joseph before coming to Charlevoix in 1898, and followed the same vocation here until he located on what is now known as Coulter Brothers' farm south of the city on the East Jordan road. Mr. Coulter was known as one of the practical and progressive farmers of this section of the county.

Deceased is survived by his wife and one son, David; two nephews, Ralph and Earl Coulter, who have made their home with Mr. nnd Mrs. Coulter since infancy; three brothers, E. W. Coulter, whose permanent home is in Charlevoix, L. D. Coulter of Detroit, and O. L. Coulter of San Gabriel, California; also three sisters, Mrs. Anna Logan of Detroit, Miss Carrie Coulter nnd Mrs. Ruby Davis of Onklnnd, California.

Funeral services were held Wednesday forenoon at 10 o'clock from the home, Rev. B. G. Mattson of the Congregational church officiating. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

Marriage Announced

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Finucan of this city nnd Robert Morse of Lansing was formerly announced at a dinner party given at the home of Mr. Morse's sister, Mrs. Robert Bridge, last Friday evening. The ceremony was performed at East Jordan, Saturdny May 7th.

The Fountain City House is now open for business. H. Bedford, proprietor.—Adv. 24-t1 pd.

ANNUAL MEETING IN EAST JORDAN

WILL HOLD MEET IN CHARLEVOIX NEXT YEAR

County Federation of Women's Clubs Heard Fine Program at Annual Meeting Tuesday

Charlevoix County Federation of Women's Clubs held their annual meeting in East Jordan, Tuesdny, June 14th, at the Presbyterian church, with nbout 60 in attendance.

An open forum was conducted from 11 to 12 at which business of importance to the clubs was discussed. Mrs. C. L. Thompson of Muskegon, 2nd vice president of the State Federation gave a clear and concise outline of the work, especially the finnncing of the state federation, which was much appreciated by all present.

A fine luncheon was served at 12 o'clock in the dining room of the church, the decorations very effectively carrying out a tribute to Flag Day.

The program of the afternoon was opened with a solo, "The Flag We Love," by Mrs. Malpass of East Jordan. Mrs. E. J. Edwards then reported on the district meeting held at Manistee in May. Mrs. R. B. Armstrong reported on the biennial meeting just held in Grand Rapids. A group of songs by Mrs. Dicken of Boyne City followed.

Mrs. Thompson gave a wonderful talk, stressing the fact that the club women stand back of law enforcement and for better homes and better conditions in general. She said it was well to travel back over some of the roads to progress, taking up our dag from its inception to the present day with what it stands for, and begged of all to come out "four square."

A group of songs by Miss Shaw of East Jordan were greatly appreciated. Interesting reports from various clubs were given, followed by election of officers.

The meeting was brought to a close by singing "Michigan, My Michigan" and the meeting adjourned to meet at Charlevoix in 1928.

It will be remembered that for 11 years Mr. Redmon held the position as undertnker with the firm of S. M. See & Sons, moving to and going into business for himself at Gaylord about five years ago.

LICENSE PLATES TO BE CHANGED

State Decides on Its Colors and Size For Next Season

White letters on n green background will form the distinguishing color of Michigan automobile license plates for 1928, according to an announcement the from secretary of state's office.

Contract for 1,250,000 of the new plates has been awarded to the Jackson prison industries.

Several minor changes are announced in the make-up of the plates. The word Michigan will be carried above the number on passenger car licenses instead of below, as has been the custom. Instead of designating 1,000,000 as a diamond cipher, the number of future plates will be written in full.

Truck plates will start at the million figure. On passenger cars it is planned to distribute the larger numbers to the rural districts so as to eliminate any confusion in discerning numbers in traffic.

DEATH TAKES YOUNG MOTHER

MRS. HARRY HOOKER DIED LAST FRIDAY NOON

Untimely Demise Leaves Two Infant Children and Bereaved Family to Mourn

Every sympathetic heart in Charlevoix was deeply touched last Friday by the untimely death of a young wife and mother, Mrs. Harry Hooker, which occurred at the Charlevoix hospital at about noon on that day, a few hours following the birth of her second child, a baby daughter.

It is not for us to measure the grief of the stricken husband, family and two small children, who will go through life without the loving care of a dear mother. We all feel their grief and extend our most sincere sympathy.

Madge Kibbe was born at Grant Ren, Michigan, April 5th, 1901, and was 26 years old at the time of her death. She came to Charlevoix with the family when a young girl and had made her home here since. She received her education in the local schools and graduated with the class of 1919. Her quiet and good natured disposition won her many friends during her school days and this host of friends mourn her departure.

She was married February 19th, 1923 to Harrison Frederick Hooker of this city. Two children were born to this union, a son, Harrison Frederick, Jr., age 3, and the baby daughter born at the hospital last Friday, both of whom with the husband survive. Other surviving relatives are her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Kibbee; and her three brothers, Ernest, Warren nnd Theodore. She was a member of the local order of Eastern Stars and the White Shrine at Petoskey.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the Kibbe residence on Palmer avenue, Rev. Herman Burns of the Baptist church officiating. Interment nt Brookside.

MONSTER LAKE TROUT MOUNTED

Earl A. Young Has Fine Specimen on Wall of His Office

As fine a piece of taxidermist work as one may see in many miles of travel is that now gracing the walls of Earl A. Young's real estate office on Bridge Street.

The monster trout, which weighed 32½ pounds and was 43 inches in length, was mounted by Frank Bush of Petoskey and the work could not have been improved upon. The mounting shows the fish with body curved, fins rigid, and looks as though it was just leaping from the water. It is a credit to anyone's office.

Resorter Died in Chicago

Word was received here Monday morning by Mr. and Mrs. James Gaskin of the death of C. I. Pierce in a Chicago hospital. Mr. Pierce had been making his summer home nt the Chicago Club for ten years or more and was very well known and highly respected member of this resort colony, by whom his death will be greatly regretted.

The Barnard young people will give a supper, Tuesday evening, June 21, at 6:00 p. m., in the dining room of the Barnnrd church. Price 20 to 35 cents. For benefit of the church.

CONTRACTS LET FOR NEW SCHOOL

WORK EXPECTED TO BE STARTED WITHIN TEN DAYS

New Structure Will Contain 14 Rooms, Including Large Auditorium and Gymnasium

The final step which will result in the fulfillment of a much cherished and long hoped-for accomplishment—better housing facilities for Charlevoix's school children—took place in the high school building last Wednesday night in the opening of sealed bids for the building of the new auditorium and grade school building, and also the sale of the $125,000.00 bond issue recently voted for this purpose.

The contract for construction of the auditorium nnd grnde building was nwarded to Geo. Lather & Sons of Traverse City, whose bid was approximately $114,866.00. Reed-Taylor Electric Shop of Lansing, were the successful bidders on the necessary electrical equipment, their bid being approximately $6,115.00. Vanderwaal & Co., of Grand Rapids, were awarded the contract for heating, plumbing and ventilating, their bid being approximately $25,237.00.

Charlevoix seemed to be the mecca for a great many contractors, as there were 12 bidders on the general contract, seven on electrical, and four on plumbing, heating and ventilation. With but three exceptions, bids on the general contract were within a few hundred dollars of each other, and the same average was shown among those who bid for the electrical work, and contract for heating, plumbing and ventilation.

The sale of the $125,000.00 bond issue was made to Whittsley, McLean & Co., of Detroit, who took the entire issue at a 4 3-8 per cent, considered by all to be an unusually good price, especially on 15 year bonds.

Work on the new structure is expected to start within the next ten days, and rushed to completion. It is hoped, we understand, the building will be completed and ready for occupancy by January 1st, 1928.

The location of the new building is planned as follows: Fronting Mason street, starting about 40 feet west of the present high school building, will be erected the auditorium and gymnasium. This will be connected with the old high school building by a temporary passway giving entrance from both floors.

The grade building will face Grant street, running nbout two-thirds of the distance north across the block. Building plans contemplate future additions which, when completed, will furnish adequate room for all grades, from the high school to kindergarten, heated by one system, thus giving Charlevoix one of the most modern and up-to-date school buildings in northern Michigan.

The new building will contain 14 rooms and will be constructed of tile and brick, equipped with a fan system of forced ventilation. All steam heat radiation with thermostatic control, special attention being given to the three most important features of a school building—heating, light and ventilation.

No contract was let for [illegible] room and gymnasium equipment and furniture, as the board will take care of this item. Bids for construction work were well within estimates made by the architect, and there will be ample funds to equip the new building with everything necessary, thus keeping within the amount first made public as to the cost of the contemplated building.

THINNER PAVING BRICK FAVORED

The Department of Agriculture announces that a saving of at least $2,000,000 will result from reduction in the thickness of paving brick shown to be possible without danger of street and highway deterioration.

The announcement was made following tests by the bureau of public roads at Arlington, Va. It is estimated that traffic was equivalent to 18 years of traffic on the average highway.

It is expected, the report says, that the use of four-inch brick will be practically abandoned as a result of the test. It states that more than 10,000,000 square yards of brick pavements were laid in the United States in 1925 and at least 90 per cent were laid with brick of three-inch or greater thickness.

The text of the report in part follows:

An annual saving to American taxpayers of at least $2,000,000 will be the result of the reduction in the thickness of paving brick shown to be possible without danger of streets and highways deterioration by tests recently made by the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture.

This should be cheering news to John Smith, taxpayer, who has been called upon lately to dig rather deeply into his pocket for the cash to pay for admittedly necessary public improvements. It is also another bit of evidence of the value of the research and experimentation in highway and street construction which have been carried on actively by the federal bureau and the state highway departments and college laboratories for the past several years.

The bureau's tests, which were conducted at Arlington, Va., were made on a circular track divided into several sections each of which was paved with a different thickness of brick. One section was paved with the 4-inch brick which has become the standard as the result of 50 years of usage. Others were paved with 3½, 3, 2½ and 2-inch sizes. In all respects other than the thickness of the brick the construction of the several sections was identical.

Heavy trucks driven around the track subjected all thicknesses of brick to the same traffic, and the test was continued until each section had been subjected to 62,200 passages of the test trucks. During 22,200 passages the trucks were equipped with heavy nonskid chains on the rear wheels.

As the trucks were driven constantly over a narrow band of the pavement it is estimated that the traffic to which the surfaces were subjected was equivalent to 18 years of traffic on the average highway.

The results of the test definitely prove that 2½-inch brick of the quality used, when properly supported on a firm foundation, will prove satisfactory for pavements carrying the heaviest traffic; and 2-inch brick are shown to be entirely satisfactory for streets carrying the lighter types of traffic.

It is expected that the use of 4-inch brick, the common practice for many years, will be practically abandoned as a result of the test, and that engineers, generally, will adopt the thinner types.

Nebraska Association Seeks Higher Road Tax

The Nebraska Good Roads association, at its annual meeting, adopted resolutions recommending an increase in the gasoline tax from 2 to 3 cents a gallon, and a direct property tax of 1 mill for construction of state roads where federal aid is not available.

Establishment of a central highway commission of four members, non-political in character, with power to select the chief highway engineer, and apportionment of the proposed extra cent of gas tax to the counties in which it is collected, with budgeting of 70 per cent of the license fees for maintenance and building of county roads and bridges, were other features of the association's attitude.

Ohio to End Detouring on Roads Under Repair

A new program has been adopted by the Ohio state highway department which will eliminate the detour nuisance on roads which are being repaired and in places where bridges are being constructed.

Detours are to be established only in places where new roads are being built, and in those cases they will be made as short as possible and will be improved temporarily.

On roads that are being repaired half of the highway is to be left open for one line of traffic.

Honored by Highway

Under an ambitious plan advocated by the Lee Highway association, a great road is being built to honor the Confederate general. The road will traverse fourteen states and the District of Columbia. The proposed highway, covering 3,880 miles from New York to San Francisco, will have a right of way 320 feet wide, a speedway of 60 feet and two lanes 30 feet wide for slower vehicles. In the center would be a parkway lined with ornamental trees.

COOL WEATHER RETARDS CROPS

HEAVY RAINFALL PROVES A SERIOUS HANDICAP

General Condition of Michigan Crops as Found by Michigan's Agricultural Statistician

Cool weather and heavy rainfall prevailed during the month of May through Michigan and farm work which started out with an early spring was retarded so that the season is now late. Growing conditions continued mostly favorable for fall-sown grains, hay and pasture; but spring seeded crops were damaged somewhat by the cool, wet weather according to the statement from Herbert E. Powell, commissioner of agriculture and Verne H. Church, U. S. agricultural statistician for Michigan.

Winter wheat: The winter wheat prospects have changed little from a month ago. Fields in the better wheat sections are looking good following the heavy rainfall. A few fields which are low and flat have been slightly damaged. Wheat has developed rapidly, and the harvest will be earlier than usual. The June 1 condition of 87 per cent is the same as a month ago and compares with 69 per cent last year and the ten-year average of 78 per cent for this month. With 929,000 acres of winter wheat remnining for harvest, a production of 17,458,000 bushels should be realized if weather conditions are normal until threshing time. Last year's production was 17,916,000 bushels and the ten-year average production for the state is 15,677,000 bushels.

Spring wheat: The condition of thia crop in Michigan is now 83 per cent of normal which is four per cent below the ten-year average and one percent above the last year'a condition at the start of the season.

Oats: The condition of oats in Michigan is 81 percent of normal which is four per cent below the average for the past ten years and two per cent below the condition a year ago. Oat sowing was delayed at the proper season in the northern part of tbe state by the wet weather. Growing conditiona were rather unfavorable for oats during May, and some poor color has resulted in low spots and flat fields. Consequently the crop started out with the condition below average. In the mot important growing sections the damage is not yet permanent, however, and with the advent of seasonable weather a good crop may be harvested.

Barley: With a large part of the barley in the state grown in the eastern and northern districts where the season bas been late and the rainfall heavy, the crop has made less progress than oats. Barley was not all seeded by the end of May. The condition of the growing crop is 80 per cent below last year and six per cent under the ten-year average.

Rye: A condition of 85 per cent for the rye crop in Michigan prospects a production of 2,702,000 bushels from 195,000 acres remaining for harvest. Since last month rye has not gained in growth as much as wheat since the acreage is on heavier soil and has therefore been retarded by the continued wet weather. The condition for 1926 was 97 per cent, and the ten-year average is the same as now at 85 per cent.

Hay: Cool, wet weather during May caused abundant growth of all tnme hay and increased the condition figure two per cent over last month to 88 per cent now. This condition is 12 per cent higher than in 1926 and four per cent above the ten-year average. All timothy and clover hay has a condition of 87 and alfalfa at 89 is two points below the high average. Wild hay with a condition of 90 is six points better than average and three per cent better than n year ago. Hay in general has good growth and color. New seedings are better than the old nnes, some of which show rather thin stands although they are now filling out above expectations. Alfalfa is earlier this year. Winter freezing damaged alfalfa in the west central section of the state.

Apples: Prospects for the Michigan apple crop are better than a year ago and also above average for this early date. The promise now is for 76 per cent of a full crop compared with 74 last year and 75 for average on June 1. In the southern section the set seems good. Heavy rains interfered with pollenization to some extent in the later blooming aections. Spraying has been handicapped throught the state by the continued rains. Orchards are still in bloom in the northern counties making the situation uncertain. No production estimate is made now.

Cherries: The Michigan cherry crop will be small because of the serious damage from freezes in April. The finale outcome is somewhat problematical at this early date. The damage is reported as especially heavy in important cherry sections. At present only 42 per cent of a full crop is expected compared with a figure of 72 per cent in June last year.

Strawberries: The crop is in good shape with a condition of 80 per cent which is eight per cent better than on June 1, 1926.

I have combined my battery and tire repair shop and will give all car owners the service that they are looking for. Benj. Brown.—Adv. 10tf.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

USE BRIDGE GRAFT TO SAVE INJURED TREES

When the wound area, caused by rabbits or mice eating the bark from the trunks of fruit trees, is not more than two feet long, and the trees are vigorous and healthy, bridge grafts may be put in place to revive the connection between root and top. Bridge-grafting may be done any time before the buds start, and consists of fitting a small branch cut from the top of the tree, or other trees of similar kind, and both ends put under healthy bark at the top and bottom of the wounded area. The ends of the twig, commonly called the scion, are cut with a bevel one and one-half inches long. All cuts should be carefully made with a sharp knife.

The lower bevel should be made first and the scion put over the wound to determine how long it should be. It should be made a little longer so the "spring" will help hold it in place. The bark is split slighly at the lower edge of the wound and the lower part of the scion slipped under the bark. A similar slit is made for the top of the scion. Small brads are often used to hold the ends in place. The bevel surfaces should be put next to the live wood. Sufficient scions should be put in place so that they will be from two to three inches apart all around the injured trunk. After the scions are in place, warm grafting wax should be painted over all exposed surfaces. Grafting wax is made by melting together four parts of resin, two parts of beeswax and one part of tallow. It can be kept warm by placing the can in a pail of hot water.

The sap moves from the roots to the leaves in the wood and the elaborated food moves down in the live bark immediately next to the wood. Unless the elaborated food can get back to the roots, no growth can take place and the scions soon die. If placed they will furnish a channel for the return food.

The number of scions to use depends upon the size of the trees. On trees three to five years old three or four should be used. After they are in place and covered with wax, earth may be banked against the tree to help protect the scions.—R. S. Mackintosh.

It Pays to Give Peach Orchard Clean Culture

Experience has shown that it is advisable and profitable to give the peach orchard clean culture just as long as there is room between the trees to use horse-drawn cultural tools for the purpose. Later a sod may be allowed to form. The grass or weeds should not be removed from the orchard, but should be cut before ripening and allowed to remain where they fall for a mulch.

Fertilization, at the time of planting the trees, should not be attempted unless the soil is very poor. In such a case, the planting would better be delayed for a year or two, during which time fertility may be added by manure worked into the soil, or catch crops fertilized with phosphorus and potash, plowed under. In the meantime, there should be a liberal application of lime, unless that element is known to be present in liberal amount.

In the spring, after the trees have been set one year, an application of fertilizer should be made, and the same repeated annually. This may be manure reinforced with acid phosphate or finely pulverized raw rock, worked into the soil with the cultural tools; or it may be commercial fertilizer strong in phosphorus and potash. The use of lime must not be neglected. Unleached wood ashes are an excellent source of lime and potash and, if available, may be used liberally.

This is an age of free publicity. On every hand former newspaper men are grinding out reams of thinly disguised advertising matter which they succeded with more or less success in getting printed in the news columns of newspapers who do not wish to offend advertisers by refusing to run "puffs."

Yet the time is coming when this activity will be to a large extent stopped. Already various newspaper associations are inaugurating methods of stopping the practice and some papers have, on their own initiative, excluded this free publicity, even at the cost of losing some little advertising.

Publicity is the life blood of many enterprises today. It is absolutely necessary, yet the same concern that will refuse to appropriate $50,000 for straight, out and out newspaper advertising will spend as much hiring a press agent or "director of public relations" and furnishing him with an office force and a mimeograph with which he can turn out reams of material which it is hoped will get into the news columns without cost.

This is an era of publicity, it is true. The slogan today is "Tell the world," and there is no more effective way to accomplish this result than through the paid advertising columns of a good newspaper. If the product is right and will give satisfaction, then it needs no other stimulus than an intelligent marketing plan plus a comprehensive paid advertising campaign to arouse the interest of the buying public.

Seekers after free publicity lose sight of the fact that a newspaper has only one thing to sell—space. These same seekers after free publicity would not think for a moment of going into a grocery store and asking the proprietor to give them outright ten pounds of sugar, yet they will ask a newspaper proprietor to give them its equivalent and will be insulted if they do not get it.

MRS. MACARTHUR HAD VERY IMPORTANT ROLE

Gains High Praise in Production Put On in Flint

Word comes from Flint, Michigan, of the outstanding musical success attained by a local girl, Mrs. Roy MacArthur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Eckinger of this city.

Mrs. McArthur had an important role in the Junior Chamber Follies, a production staged by the Flint Junior Chamber of Commerce in the high school auditorium in that city June1, 2, 3 and 4. She was recommended by her music teacher, Frederick Protheroe, along with three other girls and was chosen for the part by Donald McDonald, III, director of the production.

Flint newspapers have been lavish with their praises of Mrs. MacArthur's singing, and Charlevoix friends are proud of her success.

Three East Jordan Youths Sent to Industrial School

The C. J. Malpass Hardware store was broken into last Sunday night and three watches, two rewolvers and several knives taken. Chief of Police Cook started an investigation with a result that four East Jordan young men—Curzon Kent, Jack Reinhart, Irvin Reed and Orrin Parks were taken into custody and the loot recovered. Before Justice Blount, Tuesday, Kent was bound over to circuit court, and the other three turned over to the probate judge. Prosecuting Attorney Fitch and Sheriff Vaughn were in East Jordan for the hearing. On Thursday, Judge Correll sentenced the three youths to two years each at the Industrial school at Lansing. Sheriff Vaughn took them there the same night.—East Jordan Herald.

STATE TEX LEVY IS TO BE HIGHER

Legislature Put Lot of Slicing Up to Governor Green

An approximate 50 per cent increase in the state's tax levy was expected to be the result of Governor Green's tabulated figures on tax clause appropriations of the 1927 legislature, although final figures had not been completed last week.

The governor thus far has sliced $3,000,000 from tax clause appropriations of $29,000,000 passed by the legislature and it seemed a foregone conclusion that the final figure would approximate $26,000,000.

The general tax levy for last year was $17,800,000 and if the final figure arrived at this year is in the proximity of $26,000,000 it will mean that the tax rate will have to be raised accordingly to meet the expenditures.

The governor slashed the last important appropriation bill left on his desk by the departed solons when he leveled a $4,150,000 bill to $1,350,000.

By adroit question of the four she learned their secret. They were engaged in promoting a company to operate in the Torrance oil field, in south California.

"How interesting!" she cried. "As it happens, I know a lot about oil companies and their way of doing business. You see, my last position in London was as secretary to Sir John Crowhurst, chairman of the Persian-Bagdad Oilfields, Limited."

"You?" cried her astonished father, and then suddenly remembered the thousands of words she could take a minute.

"Yes. Me. Really it was tremendous luck, but I was the only girl in the business school that sent me there who could write as well in French as in English. We had a great many stockholders in Paris. It was rather jolly being his secretary. Sir John was one of those quiet, clever men, like Mr. Milman, who deal in millions. I may look like you, daddy, but I've the business brains of my mother's people. Let me do your correspondence for you."

"Later, I see we shall have to take you into our confidence," Mr. Milman said, smiling. "At present we do not want anything known. You understand the need for caution?"

"Oh, rather," said the former secretary of Sir John Crowhurst. "It was because of an overheard conversation that we lost the Bogotan fields, which are tremendously valuable." But she did not leave the subject. To the four men she seemed an eager, pretty girl who had been by accident near enough to oil to catch a little of its idiom. They were in love with her when she bade them good night.

"Well," said Bradney when she had gone, "for amateurs you did pretty well. I envied you your flights of fancy."

"A woman has not dined in this house for over ten years," said Peter Milman. "I might have had a daughter of her age now. Barnes, there is another reason for our need to succeed. She must marry well."

Uneasily Barnes thought of the possibility of his daughter having for a father one who wore stripes at his state's expense. "Yes," he agreed soberly.

When he had lighted a cigarette and was sitting in a big chair in the girl's room, he thought there would be many to offer themselves. She had her mother's slim figure and unforgetable eyes added to the vivacity and cheerfulness of the women of his own family.

"What innocent plotters you all were!" She laughed. "Did any of you really think you were deceiving me? Poor old dear, you don't know even the a b c of the thing. I've been living in an atmosphere of petrol—or gasoline, as you call it here—for half a year. It fills the air in Europe. People like Sir John Crowhurst, who are the heads of oil companies, have political affiliations everywhere. How do I know? I wrote all Sir John's private letters, of which he kept the carbon copies locked up in his safe. I grew to know as much as an outsider could. That's why it amused me to hear you four prattling away like mechanics talking weights and handicaps to a steward of the Jockey club."

"My dear Nita," he said, "was it fair to keep pumping us?"

"Why not? I was certain you knew nothing about oil, and I wanted to make sure the rest didn't. The only thing I could assume was that they were trying to swindle you. It was horrid to imagine poor Mr. Milman as a swindler."

"Most emphatically he is not," her father exclaimed.

"Then what about the others?"

Neeland Barnes groaned. It was going to be very difficult to put Nita off the scent. She was half Fessendon, and the Fessendons invariably got what they went after. Pertinacity was theirs in a large measure. The idea of imagining Bradney and Malet trying to swindle him brought a smile to Barnes' face. Literally, he had not one cent in the world.

"Nita," he began earnestly, "I put you on your honor not to repeat what I am going to tell you to anyone on any pretext whatsoever."

"All right," she said. "Agreed. Go on."

"I have not a nickel in the world. Bradney and Malet have a hundred dollars apiece, maybe a little more. Peter Milman will have to sell this house and its contents in three months' time. All his money was tied up in International Motors. We are four gentlemen from the chorus of any beggars' opera. It's true we aren't here on any oil promotion business, but we have come together for a very serious business. We are trying to stage a come-back."

Nita was silent for a moment. It was not easy to readjust herself.

"What sort of a come-back?"

Her father hesitated a moment.

"I don't think you'd understand."

"Can I help you?"

"No, Nita; it isn't work for women."

"You mean there's danger in it?"

He was afraid to say too much. He dreaded to be entrapped by her seemingly innocent questions. He knew she was mentally much quicker than he. The Fessendons again.

"It's not my secret," he returned, "and I ought not to say any more. I can only assure you that Malet and Bradney are splendid fellows, both far superior to me. Very high types. They believe that what we intend to do is the only right and logical thing. You must let it go at that."

"And because there's danger in it you think I'd better keep out of it?"

"Exactly," he exclaimed, gratified at this attitude of obedience.

"Then it is dangerous," she cried. Barnes saw he had made a damaging admission. She had trapped him. "Daddy, what makes you think I'm afraid of anything that's dangerous?"

"Oh, Nita," he said reproachfully, "that's scarcely playing the game to drag information from me which is not mine to give. You are deliberately trying to make me betray my friends."

"What Sort of a Comeback?"

He had risen to his feet. She could see he was not pleased with her.

"Indeed, I'm not," she said earnestly. "Daddy, I came over here because something told me you needed looking after. It isn't that I'm trying to make you betray your friends. I want to be sure that they are being honest with you."

"I have never met squarer men," he answered.

"Then I'm on their side, too. My father and his friends, right or wrong."

Barnes did not know what to say. But a daughter of his could not be associated with anything irregular. He shook his head.

"I cannot accept your assistance," he told her.

"Very well. I shall tell Mr. Milman I am leaving after luncheon tomorrow. I came over here equipped, specially equipped, for a certain sort of position, and I'm going to get it."

"Skilled secretarial workers and stenographers are drugs in the market," he assured her.

"I am not going to be a stenographer," she retorted. "I did that to earn money to come here. I shall take the other position, so you won't have to live on a stranger's charity."

"That is a hard thing to say," he answered, flushing; "and it's not altogether true. Mr. Milman sought me out because he thought I was able to help him. I am not living on charity."

"What is it you are trying to do?" she asked.

"You must not expect me to tell you. My dear, don't be hasty and leave us yet. Promise me that?"

She kissed him good night.

"I won't go yet," she said. "I can't lose you as quickly as that."

When she was alone her face took on a worried aspect. She had suffered many things in order to be with him, and she determined to find out what the mystery was that enveloped this strange household. Although she was not yet twenty-two, she had traveled widely and met innumerable people. In Milman and his associates she recognized men of charm and culture who had made her father their firm admirer. And they were all holding back from her any mention of their real venture. In order to deceive her they had clumsily invented and acted a falsehood. It could only be because they were plotting something of an illegal nature.

They had played on her father's emotions and earned his gratitude and co-operation by a few hundred dollars. For so small a thing it had been possible to enlist his sympathy and aid. They had been clever enough to create the illusion that she was welcome when in truth they might be embarrassed by her presence and already planning to get rid of her. She decided she would not be driven out. Her father needed his daughter even if he did not yet know it. The thought that three dangerous men might be plotting some crime for which Neeland Barnes would ultimately bear the blame drove her to action.

Her room was at the rear of the house. Four iron bars protected its windows. Almost five feet below she could see the iron grating which roofed in the Japanese garden. When she leaned down from her open window she could hear, faintly, the sound of voices.

It was about her they were speaking. Barnes had come from her room with the disquieting information that their talk on oil had amused her very much. The news had been a blow.

"Miss Barnes gives me the impression of being a very shrewd young lady," Malet said, "and one not easily deceived. You all know that, when once we start, it will be almost impossible to keep one who is already a little suspicious in ignorance."

"Yes," said Bradney, "I am afraid she cannot stay here."

"Her godmother lives in Philadelphia," said Barnes. "She can't refuse to take her in for a month or two. She said something about earning her living, but I should prefer her to go to Philadelphia."

"I am afraid she would be a source of danger if she remained," Peter Milman agreed. "Also, it would never do to compromise her in an affair which might end disastrously."

"We've been too busy with theories," said Fleming Bradley when the problem of Nita had been settled. What we are after should be original disassociations of idens."

"I can't get that very clearly," said Neeland Barnes. "As I see it, all we want from Ruxon is a cold million. Half of that goes to Milman and we split the rest."

"Exactly," Bradley returned. "That's the very point. How are we to make him give up a million? I don't know. You don't either. None of us knows. Obviously the thing is to get close to him, into the house for choice."

"He doesn't know me," Milman declared. "But I cannot be seen, because Loddon, who has told me so much under the influence of my port and the belief that I never stir abroad and know nothing of outside affairs, is a frequent guest. The question is, would he recognize Barnes?"

"Certain to," Barnes said gloomily. "I haven't altered much since that day I threw him from the pier. What about Malet?"

"Probably not," said the sculptor. "In those days I was twenty pounds heavier, wore a mustache, and had a general air of bien-etre."

"I am the man," Bradley declared. "I doubt if he has ever seen me. We know he talked to Malet for some time. It is I who must contrive to get into his house."

"In what capacity?" Milman asked.

"There you have me," the scientist admitted.

"We are safe to start by assuming," Milman cut in, "that Paul Ruxon is always cautious. From the outside his house is impregnable."

"You mean," Bradley remarked, "that to get in one would have to be vouched for?"

"Undoubtedly," said Peter Milman. "If someone socially prominent took you there, it might be all right. There was one curiously disquieting thing Loddon told me about Ruxon. When he has devised a plan he expects some retaliation, and takes the precaution of having the injured one watched. We know he dogged Barnes for years. Even now there may be those who know for what purpose we four are gathered here. I am not certain but that Achille speaks English as well as he does French."

The listeners were startled at the sudden change they saw on their host's face. Where he had been merely thoughtful and slightly worried he was now actively alarmed. He was leaning forward examining something on the table before him. They remembered it was the electric dial, that ingenious device for the protection of his home against invaders.

The face of the dial was divided into six parts. These numbered sections would tell Milman on what part of the roof the intruder was. The three, pressing about him, saw that a red light suddenly illuminated the square marked 1. A hand moved very slowly to the square numbered 6.

"That," Milman whispered, looking relieved, "represents the weight. Six pounds means a large and prowling cat."

They heard a sudden exclamation. The weight went up a hundred and twenty pounds. The square numbered 1 was now in darkness and another was illuminated. They could trace the path of the trespasser. He was creeping near them.

"Achille," Milman whispered. "That would be his weight. The six pounds was when he rested a foot on it before putting his whole weight on the grating."

Peter Milman betrayed no nervousness now. Noiselessly he drew the sawed-off shotgun from its place. Then with a touch of a button all lights in the garden were extinguished. In the darkness the shades rolled back. Against the sky, bright with stars, the watchers could see a figure lying above their heads. Another light was switched on which left the group below still in darkness, but showed pitilessly on the trespasser. The gun was already at Milman's shoulder when Neeland Barnes made a jump for it and pulled the barrel down.

"My God, Milman!" he cried, white-faced. "It's my girl. It's Nita."

"Ah," said Milman with a curious smile, "so I perceive. A strange position in which to find a guest, is it not?"

"Inexplicable," said Bradley. He cast a suspicious look at Barnes.

"I think," Peter Milman went on, "we should like a talk with Miss Barnes."

"I'll fetch her," Barnes said eagerly. He was confused, ashamed, humiliated.

"You will be kind enough to remain here," said Milman. Barnes saw that he was menaced by that most dreadful of weapons at short range, the sawed-off shotgun. He remembered its load of buckshot. "I fear I must remind you that we must insist on an explanation from you, too. To allow you the opportunity of escape would be most unwise." He raised his voice a little, but he did not take his steady gaze from Barnes' face.

"Miss Barnes," he said, "will you be so kind as to come here at once?"

The girl's voice trembled as she answered. It seemed to them all there was a trace of defiance in her tone.

"I won't be a minute. It's not very comfortable up here."

The shades were drawn again and the lights switched on more fully. Neeland Barnes looked from one to the other of the men whose faces had been in the shadow. It seemed incredible that they could suspect him of complicity in this eavesdropping. It was plain enough what her errand was.

"Let me explain," he began.

Peter Milman stopped him with a gesture. "Wait," he commanded. "We shall hear you when your daughter comes."

Barnes sank heavily into a seat. He felt that Bradley and Malet looked upon him as a traitor.

Nita was wearing a blue silk dressing wrap when she came into the Japanese garden. Her bearing was confident and unafraid. She came quickly to her father's side and put an arm about his bowed shoulders.

"Oh, Nita, Nita," he groaned. "How could you do such a dreadful thing as this?"

Malet, watching her closely, saw that she bent upon the sitting man a look which had something of maternal tenderness in it. It seemed strange to the observers that she stood there as though to defend her father from enemies. Of shame or embarrassment there was no sign.

"So you caught me," she said. "Well, perhaps it is best you did."

"Why?" Peter Milman demanded.

"Because I want to take him away from here. I came to America to look after him—he had been horribly neglected—and I find him entangled in some network of crime. I made him admit it was something with danger in it. At dinner you all tried to deceive me, and you would have succeeded if I hadn't happened to know something about oil. You want him because of his courage, and because he is strong and a good shot and boxes well. He isn't clever and scheming as you are, and I won't have him made use of."

"Nita, Nita," groaned her father, "you've got everything wrong."

"I think I have misjudged your father," Milman said. "I am very glad to find what you did was not at his suggestion. I think there is much for you to explain. You are a guest under my roof, and there are certain laws of courtesy and consideration not less binding on you than me. You have chosen to break them. You have spied upon us. You have not behaved as I should have expected a gentlewoman of your family to do. Why?"

"I've told you," she cried. "I know you are trying to make my father help you in something desperate, and I don't choose to have him run risks for other men."

"You are absolutely wrong," the miserable Barnes asserted.

"Prove it," she retorted. "You are silent. You dare not tell me the truth. I knew you wouldn't, so I climbed out of the window to listen to what you were talking about. I'm not going to make any silly fuss by telling the police. All I want is to take my father away. I'm going to make a success of him."

"He is free to go," said Peter Milman wearily. He looked at Malet and Bradley. "So are you. I suppose I did lure you here under false pretenses. In the beginning it seemed so simple."

Nita looked about her in amazement. She did not understand why it seemed they had forgotten her. Even her father turned from her to Peter Milman.

"I shall go only when you have no further use for me," said Bradley.

"When I have done what I promised I'll go. Not before." This from Malet.

"What Does It All Mean?" the Girl Whispered.

"There were no false pretenses in it," Neeland Barnes cried. "I came willingly, and I'll be d—d if I go."

"What does it all mean?" the girl whispered. There was no doubting the friendship, almost the affection, with which the other men regarded Mr. Milman. There was a sterner air about her father when he faced her than she had ever seen before.

"Nita," he said, "with one exception, all the hurts I've received, all the bad hurts, that is, have been from pals who thought they were acting for my good. You've been dangerously near doing that tonight. You've got everything twisted. You have made me appear in a very poor light among men I respect."

There were tears dimming her violet eyes when she looked at him.

"Oh, daddy," she murmured, "I only wanted to help you. When you came to my room I said, 'My father and his friends, right or wrong.' I meant it."

"You did not know what you were promising," Milman declared. "Do you mean that if you found your father engaged in doing something the world thought wrong you would take his part?"

"If I thought he was justified, I would."

"Is it fair to involve her?" Bradley broke in.

"Certainly not," Malet declared.

"Perhaps you are right," Milman sighed. "I only know that you might have been a great figure in the world of art, and Mr. Bradley world famous as a scientist, and I myself with a fortune and a home, but for the malevolence of one man."

"Did that man injure my father?" she demanded.

"But for this man your father would not have been warned off the turf. But for him the clubs that he had to resign from would have welcomed him."

"Wait, wait," she begged. "I want to think." Naturally it was of her father she thought. She had always defended him against her aunt, but she had never been able to dismiss the accusations as worthless. She had fought because she loved him; not because she believed in him. And now to learn that, after all, his past was not disgraceful, filled her with hope and courage. She was ashamed of herself that she had ever doubted him. There was no sacrifice he demanded of her she would not fulfill gladly.

"Will you tell me all about it?" she pleaded. "No, daddy, not you. You always wander into the bypuths of narrative. Let Mr. Milman tell me."

Very concisely he told before her what he had told the other men of Paul Ruxon and his way of life. As she listened she saw clearly that it was to the malignity of one man that three lives had been ruined and a fourth brought to a penniless old age. She listened attentively to the futile plans they had elaborated and rejected. Perhaps to her fresher and more alert mind these plans seemed commonplace, and doomed to failure. But she knew it was not to commonplace men she listened.

"Now, Mr. Bradley," she commanded, "tell me your story."

When he had finished she said: "Of course it was Mr. Milman who was the unknown giver of that hundred thousand dollars."

Peter Milman turned red. But he could not deny it.

"Why didn't you tell me?" Bradley asked, with reproach in his voice.

"I did not want to influence you. I wanted you to decide for yourself."

Car Ferry Tolls for May

Figures released by the state highway department Thursday show thnt the state realized $11,004.75 in tolls during May from ferries operating across the Straits of Mackinaw. Vehicles to cross the straits during the month totaled 3,656 and 5,755 foot passengers made the trip. The figures represent a substantial increase over the same month of last year. The policy of charging foot passengers 25 cents has proved lucrative for the state coffers. Formerly they have escaped any fee.

Curing Hay in the "Shade

The perfecting of a new system of curing and handling the alfalfa and hay crop by the use of the left hand, side delivery hay rake and hay loader has eliminated, according to Ralph Hudson, superintendent of the Michigan State College Farm, much of the worry experienced in harvesting alfalfa when the old system of cocking was used.

The college farm now has about 200 acres of alfalfa to cut two or three times each year. The old system of cocking was too slow, too expensive and in addition the cured hay often was not of high quality. The problem of securing a high quality hay with a minimum of labor and with a low operating cost has been a serious one with Mr. Hudson.

Mr. Hudson put this new system under test in 1925 with the old method of handling hay for a direct comparison of both methods. A small acreage of hay was cocked, while the hay in the adjoining field was cured in the windrow. He found that by this new method of curing alfalfa he was able to reduce the expense of curing by about 40 per cent, and was also able to receive a better quality of hay at less risk.

Farmers having ten acres or more of alfalfa also face this same problem of securing a good quality hay at a low labor cost. The left hand, side delivery rake going in the same direction as the mower (immediately, or at least within two hours after cutting) places the green alfalfa in a windrow before the leaves have been exposed to the sun.

The large succulent stems in this case would cover the leaves. The left hand rake does a much better job of this, inasmuch as it goes more directly against the heads, thus placing a much larger percentage of the leaves in the inside of the windrow than will a right hand rake.

The leaves thus cure in the shade, while the large succulent stems are on the outside of the windrow exposed to the sun. As the green leaves contain 65 to 70 per cent of the protein in the entire alfalfa plant, it is highly important to get the hay out of the swath and into a windrow before the sun has dried up the small leaves. The development of hay making machinery and its well advised use can not handle the heavy growth of alfalfa with a very low labor cost, as well as produce an excellent quality of green, leafy, well cured hay, which is so highly desired.

This new system of curing hay will be demonstrated in Charlevoix county on July 7th. Watch for further announcements.

Barbara Evers, County Champion In Clothing Clubs

Barara Evers was awarded county championship in Clothing Club work by Miss Ruth Featherly, assistant state club leader, M. S. C. She is a member of the Burgess School Clothing Club, located on M-11, east of Charlevoix, and receives this high award in recognition of her fine workmanship on the several articles that she has completed during the last winter.

Her achievement is of particular merit in that she has won over eight other girls who were the local champions in their respective clubs and in all cases older than she. Barbara is only ten years of age and has been successful in this, her first attempt at club work and in many cases competed against girls from four to eight years older. Much of the credit must be given to Mrs. Rabor and Mrs. Evers who have acted as leaders for the club and have been very sincere and conscientious in their desire to instruct the girls in the clothing project.

It is of particular significance that out of a total of 58 girls who started the project, 54 completed their work creditably, which is in itself an excellent average.

Eddie Speculates on Art of Comedy

"This business of being funny in pictures certainly has its drawbacks" says Eddie Cantor former Broadway comedy star whose latest Paramount mirth-provoker "Special Delivery" will open at the Palace Theater two days, Saturday and Sunday, June 18-19.

"When you're funny on the stage, you know what you're going to do and you do it. Its all in what you say and how you say it.

"But being funny in pictures is altogether different. I know, I've tried it twice You never know what you're going to have to do nor when you are going to do it."

Fifteen Beauties on Screen

The biggest fashion show this side of Paris, France, arrives at Palace Theater next Monday and Tuesday when Esther Ralston's first Paramount starring vehicle "Fashions for Women" opens at the Palace Theater.

The picture is said to brim over with more youth, romance, comedy and up-to-the-minute gowns than have been seen since "The Dressmaker from Paris." In all, more than a score of complete outfits, designed especially by Travis Banton, one of the world's most noted style creators, are worn by a bevy of fifteen beautiful manequins in a colorful fashion show sequence.

"God Gave Me 20 Cents" Has—ahem—Pulchritude

William Collier Jr., playing the part of a sailor in Herbert Brenon's production, "God Gave Me Twenty Cents," is surrounded with a coterie of the hardest seamen that ever stepped from a Jack London thriller thanks to the genius of Paramount's casting director.

In addition to young Collier,—Lois Moran, Lya de Putti and Jack Mulhall are featured in this tale of four people and two crooked dimes. Dixie Wilson wrote "God Gave Me Twenty Cents." It comes to the Palace Theater next Wednesday and Thursday.

Foster Dancing Girls in Gilda Gray's "Cabaret"

A troupe of the internationally known Foster girls make their motion picture debut in Gilda Gray's second Paramount starring picture, "Cabaret" which arrives at the Palace on Friday. The girls, ten in number, are from a troupe that is featured in Earl Carroll's "Vanities." They appear in the picture as dancers in the lavish cabaret where Gilda Gray is the sensational chief attraction. Incidentally, they're the first Foster girls who've danced before a camera.

FRESHENING BREEZES

Several thirsty persons in Glasgow drank from a gutter when three casks of whiskey fell from a truck and burst open. If that had happened in this country we shudder to think of how many would have been killed in the rush.

A Missouri farm girl threw a couple fits when she discovered a live snake in her bed. In the old days we've seen many of the boys reach up and pick a couple dozen off the light fixtures in a single evening.

A freak baby born at Walsall, Eng., which lived only a few hours, was found to have no brain. Over here we call 'em shieks.

A Chicago woman knocked a man cold and then had him arrested for trying to flirt with her on the street. Mebbe the lady thought it was her husband.

A queer case of profiteering come from the southern part of the state where a farm hand sold his old woman to a tin peddler for fifteen dollars.

Wonder whatever became of the old-fashioned tintype wagon of our boyhood days.

In the old days the boys ust to turn down the gas—now they step on it.

DAIRY

BIG ADVANTAGES OF FALL CALVES

There are a number of advantages in having dairy calves dropped in the fall. Cows which freshen in the fall usually produce more milk than cows which freshen at other seasons of the year. Heifers are usually bred so that they will come in milk at two years of age. If they are fall calves they will mature at the proper season. Calves which are to be raised on skim milk can be kept growing nicely during the winter and turned out on pasture without checking their growth. The disadvantages of feeding and care in winter are more than offset by the annoyance from flies and hot weather which are experienced by the spring calves. In addition there is usually more time available for giving the calves proper attention in the winter.

Clean pails for feeding and clean barns for housing are two important essentials in raising the calves. The calves will need to have a stall or lot where they can get plenty of sunshine. If the calves are confined to a dirty, dark stall they are apt to become unthrifty.

Calves should have their mothers' milk when they are started on feed. Whole milk should be continued for the first month and gradually shifted to skim milk. The calves should be given grain as soon as they will eat it. If a little cracked corn is placed in the bottom of the milk pails the calves will soon acquire a taste for it. The amount of milk and grain should always be limited. Better results are obtained if the calves are kept hungry.

An abundance of clean water should be accessible at all times or available at frequent intervals. Good hay should be provided. Many people favor mixed hay for calves as it is less apt to cause scours than alfalfa hay. However, good results can be had in feeding alfalfa hay if it is fed in limited quantities so that the calves will not gorge themselves. If any scours appear, the hay should be changed and special attention paid to cleanliness of both the stalls and milk pails. Sanitation, feeding and housing are the important details in raising fall calves successfully.

Frogs and the Weather

As long as frogs remain yellow in color nothing but fine weather may be expected. Should, however, their coats begin to assume a brown hue, it is a sign that bad weather will shortly arrive.

SAFETY AT GRADE CROSSINGS

We are entering upon the time of year when greater use is made of the public highways than at nny other season. Highway traffic over railway crossings is at n peak during the summer months. It is therefore especially timely to call nttention to the tragic results of being careless in crossing railway tracks.

The railronds are safer to work for and to ride on than they used to be. With more employes and more passengers, there nre fewer accidents to employes and passengers. But accidents at grade crossings are increasing instead of decreasing. More persons were killed in grade crossing nccidents in 1926 than in any other year but one on record.

Grade-crossing accidents were greater during 1926 than in any previous year, despite the campaigns for carefulness that were carried on by hundreds of different agencies. Nearly three thousand lives were sncriticed, and more than twice that number were maimed and injured.

The tragedy of such a record is thnt caution should have preventeo every one of these accidents. The careful person is safe at any railway grade crossing, but to the careless person every crossing is dangerous. Safety or danger does not lie in the crossing; it lies in the person using it.

It is particularly difficult for the railroads to cope with the problem of snfety at grade crossings. Their employes are constantly on the alert to prevent accidents, but the nation's business must be moved without delay, nnd railway trains cannot be stopped at every grade crossing without strangling the commerce of the country. Since the railronds are under the necessity of operating their trnins over nearly n quarter of a million highwny crossings—almost one for every mile—it is obvious that the final responsibility for safety at such plnces must rest upon those who cross the trnck.s.

Four out of every five nccidents at grade crossings involve nutomobiles. The automobile ought to be nn agency fnr safety at crossings It can be controlled by a carefu driver better, for example than a spirited horse cnn be controlled. But in the hands of an indifferent driver, the automobile is an agency of destruction instead of an agency of safety—at grade crossings or elsewhere.

AGRICULTURE AND INDUSTRY

There is a splendid movement under way in this country that has for its object the bringing about of better understanding between ngriculture nnd industry. Both the national Grange and the American Farm Bureau Federation have given the movement their official sanction nnd while there nre many details to be worked out there is a belief that co-operation between agriculture nnd industry will eventually be brought about. We quote from a recent speech by Professor T. C. Atkinson, for many years the Washington representative of the National Grange:

"There nre two outstanding groups of producers in our form of orgnnized society—there may be others—but the two chief groups are the farmers nnd manufacturers or processors. Farmers take seed, nnd soil, and with the implements of culture and harvest, prepare the soil, sow the seed, conserve the moisture, keep the weeds and pests in check, and harvest and prepnre the food and textile products.

The manufacturer nnd the processers take the product of the farmers, and the foresters and the miners, and good as they are in that stage, turn them into still more useful and needed forms. In many respects the conversion into usable form is as essential to human welfare as the original production.

"The farmer would sow but little wheat if there were no miller to grind it into flour, and the shepherd would raise but few sheep if the woolen manufacturer were not waiting to wash, card, spin nnd weave the wool into fnbric. In many cases the process of manufacture is as important as the original production.

"Making things is a futile task if there nre artificial handicaps and officious and unnecessary interference from any source. To surround the work with fnir conditions, and to keep it free from unnecessary handicaps is to give it dignity and success Farmers and manufacturers face these common problems. Fundamentally thinking along pnrallel lines because of the similarity of their process and purposes—ignoring many important differences—they have n common interest and can be expected to co-operate strongly and sucessfully as to their common problem. What are these problems?

"Both give employment to large number of workers and pay wages to such workers.

Both produce necessities and must market them. They have a common interest in the terms and conditions of trade and commerce of transportation and credit.

"Fair and equal credit terms, fair and equal transportation facilities and rates are essential to balance progress and success.

"Both pay taxes and are subject to the supervision and control as well as to the protection and assistance of government. The handicap of excessive taxation and the handicap of excessive and unwarranted interferenee and control will damage the one eqnally with the other.

"Industry and agriculture are mutually and reciproeally the source of supply and the principal market for each other. Excessive development of either at the expense of the other defeats the balance of prosperity which should exist between them. Together they constitute a fine double team, opposing they pull each other to a standstill."

WASTE IN INDUSTRY

The American Federation of Labor recently held a "Waste Elimination Conference" in Philadelphia and pledged the co-operation of labor in every attempt to banish waste. But—it declared that the benefits derived from such elimination must show in increased wages for workers as well as in profits for employers. There never has been a time, at least in recent years, when industry has failed to pay workers according to their ability and according to profits. We might respectfully suggest to Mr. Green that the greatest waste which industry has to meet is to be found in the working slacker and the striker. One strike means illimitable waste and the clock-watcher nnd work dodger are instruments of waste which are difficult to measure in dollars and cents. Mr. Green said that waste in industry can be divided into classifications—material waste, human waste and spiritual waste. We agree with him in regard to his classifications, but we suggest that he give serious attention to the fact thnt strikes embody these three classes in themselves.

VALUE OF PUBLICITY

Instead of giving out facts about our industries, under compulsion, as a sop to the public, many of our large corporntions recognize publicity as a legitimate and vital means of retaining the confidence of the public. Any business man who wants to keep the facts of his business to himself still has a right to do so. He may protect that right by the simple expedient of keeping his business so small that whatever he may do will be of no public consequense. In that position, if he attempts to push prices too far up or wages too fnr down, he finds himself without customers or workers. The price for his secreey is obviously more than the right it maintains is worth. —Judge Elbert H. Gray, chnirmnn, United States Steel Corporation.

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE MARRIED

Are Given Royal Reception on Return to Charlevoix

Ruby Cremeans Case and Ernest Staley were united in marriage Sunday afternoon, June 12th, at Traverse City, by Rev. Demas Cochlin of the First Congregational church, the beautiful ring service being used. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Staley of that city.

Mr. Staley recently purchased as a wedding present for his bride, a modern new bungalow "The Edgewood" on east Garfield avenue, where they are now at home to their friends.

Mrs. Case has just finished a successful year of teaching near Ironton and Mr. Staley is one of the rising young business men of Charlevoix, being the junior partner of Staley Bros. Hardware.

When returning to their home in Charlevoix Monday evening, the happy couple were met at the Ironton Ferry by about forty-five of their friends who live in the vicinity of Mr. Staley's country home, and in the neighborhood where Mrs. Case has been teaching. The crowd was well supplied with cow-bells, drums, etc., and the noise never ceased until they reached the home of the bride and groom where they were invited in and spent an enjoyable evening playing progressive pedro.

Just as the party was breaking up and everyone was leaving for home, another crowd of town people drove up for their share of treats. After this late hour Mr. and Mrs. Staley thought it safe to retire, but to their surprise at about 2:30 another crowd of young people, friends of Miss Esther Case drove in with the information that there would be a serenade party the following evening, so as this goes to press Mr. Staley is counting his cigars and wondering just how many more dozen (?) boxes he will have to buy.

ANDREW O. SKYE WAS MARRIED IN CHICAGO

Couple Now Making an Extensive Tour of Michigan

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew O. Skye, who were married Saturday, June 4th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Aldrich in Chicago, are taking a trip through Michigan visiting in Detroit, Ann Arbor, Charlevoix and Republic before returning to their home in Chicago.

The marriage ceremony, which was performed by Mr. Aldrich, a Baptist minister, was a quiet affair and attended by intimate friends of the couple. The wedding was followed by a dinner.

Mrs. Skye, who before her marriage was Miss Esther E. Pearce, is a graduate of the University of Michigan and has been an instructor at Wesleyan College, Macon, Georgia. Mr. Skye is also a graduate of the same university and is at present employed as efficiency engineer for the Lakeside Press, Chicago.

COMET "PONS-WINNECKE" DESCERNABLE JUNE 26

Astronomers Making Plans to Witness Unusual Sight

Unusual interest is being attached by astronomers to the approaching visit of the comet "Pons-Winnecke," which will be descernable about June 26. The comet received its name from its two discoverers, Jean Louis Pons and by the scientist Winnecke. The comet on its visit generally approaches to within 3,500,000 miles of the earth. From its place of honor in the constellation Pegasus, the the comet will rise in the sky about 11 p. m. on June 26, and for a few days both before and after that date, midnight, astronomers say, is the best hour to see the phenomenon, with its tail of flashing fire.

LAST W. C. T. U. MEETING UNTIL FALL HELD

Adjournment Until September at the Rogers Home

The June meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held last Friday afternoon at the Congregational church. There was an unusually large attendance, though the visitors expected were unable to be present.

Miss Agnes Roger conducted a helpful devotional service and Mrs. Charles Arnold and Mrs. John Burns were in charge of the program and the flower mission features. Mrs. Alva Coulter, Mrs. Ed. Stewart, Mrs. E. E. Cross, Mrs. Lois Campbell, Faida Ogden, Eloise Tillotson, Jean Campbell and Don Tillotson assisted with music or readings.

Quantities of flowers were brought for distribution by the committee and $6.50 was raised for flood relief among W. C. T. U. members in the stricken territory.

There was a reception service for new members. Thirty-two have been secured since the 1927 drive. A social hour followed the program, during which Group 3 served refreshments. The meeting was adjourned until September 9th, when an all-day meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Roger.

1927 CITY TAX RATE SET AT 11 MILLS

A Reduction of Four Mills Over 1926 Assessment

Charlevoix tax payers will be given a substantial relief in taxes this season, such action being taken at Monday evening's regular council session.

The tax rate per one thousand valuation for 1926 was 15 mills. For 1927 this rate has been cut four mills, thus making the tax rate 11 mills, or a saving of $13,667.10 under the amount paid into the city treasury during 1926.

The 11 mills to be assessed for the year 1927 will raise approximately $36,623.40. According to a statement made by Mayor Arthur Burgeon, there will be no cessation in the council's activities along general improvements, and the care of the city in general, the above mentioned reduction being made possible by paying off a considerable amount of the city's indebtedness.

Financially, Charlevoix is in excellent condition, due to efficient management by our present mayor, present council and past councils.

MAN THREATENED WIFE WITH AN AXE

Search of His Premises Revealed Moonshine Still and Outfit

Mike Saganak, who resides on the Peyton farm near East Jordan, was arrested last Friday by Sheriff Dave Vaughn, and brought to the county jail here.

It is alleged that Saganak threatened to kill his wife with an axe, with the result that she called the officers. She also revealed that he was manufacturing moonshine liquor and the subsequent search uncovered a barrel of mash, still and quantity of alleged liquor.

Saganak's bond was set in justice court at $1,000 and failing to provide same, he is now being held until the August term of circuit court.

CREAMERY CO. IS GROWING CONCERN

NOW OPERATES FIVE PLANTS IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN

Business Volume Has Increased Yearly—Income to Farmers Is a Great Asset

One day last week a Courier representative, while talking with Charles H. Lamphear, manager of the Charlevoix branch of the Northern Creamery company, found the history of this organization of more than ordinary interest. In fact he found its growth had been even phenomenal, and, starting from its origin with one factory at Traverse City, the company now owns and operates five plants in Northern Michigan. The company's growth may be gathered from the following account:

In the year 1919 the Northern Creamery was formed by William McCool, its present president and general manager, at Traverse City, where he purchased the old brewery building and installed a modern creamery and ice cream factory. The following year, in the spring of 1920 the company purchased their Charlevoix plant from Charles H. Lamphear, its present manager. Operations that summer were confined to the manufasture of ice cream, hut in the fnll butter making machinery was installed and operations expanded.

The next addition to their rapidly growing company was the Alpena plant, where they purchased two ice cream factories and a creamery and bought them all under one roof. This unit was added in 1921, with Harry Geer as its manager. In 1922 the fourth plant was purchased at Mackinaw City to take care of the Mackinac Island trade and that of surrounding resorts.

With four plants in operation the problem of disposing of any surplus production confronted the company. This matter was solved in 1923 when they installed their own wholesale market in Detroit, thus supplying a ready market and allowing full time operation of all plants summer and winter. The Detroit branch now operates a fleet of five large trucks in handling their business, which has grown rapidly since it was opened. Last year the company purchased the Hansen ice cream factory at Manistee, making a total of five branch plants and completing a circle of factories on the northern, east and west coasts of the state.

From a financial standpoint the local plant means much to Charlevoix as do the others in the towns in which they are located.

In the neighborhood of $50,000 a year is paid out in cream checks to farmers in the vicinity of Charlevoix. The plant operates both summer and winter, thus supplying a cash revenue to farmers during the winter months. A force of three men is carried during the winter and five during the summer months. Approximately 80,000 pounds of butter and 12,000 gallons of ice cream were manufactured in the local plant last year. This in the Charlevoix unit alone, and when one considers the company has five plants in operation, it gives some idea of the enormous business handled in all the factories combined.

NEW PIPE ORGAN AT LOCAL MOVIE HOUSE

Patrons Enjoyed Music at Last Saturday's Show

Music from the new Bartola pipe organ, recently installed in the Palace Theater was heard for the first time at last Saturday evening's show. The music brought forth much favorable comment from theater-goers and the organ will no doubt prove a drawing card to this already popular movie house. Miss Helen Strom of Kansas City, Mo., will be organist for the summer.

Another fine improvement at the theater is the isle carpets laid last week. Numerous other changes, all with the purpose of adding to the comfort of theater patrons have been made during the past month.

TO CHARLEVOIX COUNTY WORLD WAR VETERANS

Should Reinstate Insurance Policies Before July 2

World War veterans of Charlevoix county, who have failed to reinstate their government insurance policies, must do so before July 2nd, according to a recent announcement of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, which says "there is no possibility of extention" after this date.

Any former service man who carried insurance while in service and permitted it to lapse may reinstate his policy if he is in good health and submits to a physical examination free of cost to any regional office. He may reinstate any amount of insurance from $1,000 up to the amount he carried while in service in multiples of $500. He may have a choice of seven plans of government insurance, ordinary life, twenty-payment endowment maturing at age of 62 and the five-year level premium convertible term.

We call this to the attention of our readers because it seldom pays a man to cancel any insurance policy if he intends to carry any insurance at all. There is nothing to gain and something to lose.

SELL REGION TO TOURISTS

TIME IS AT HAND TO DO THIS VERY THING

Treat Them Courteously and Fairly and They Will Come Again and May Locate

West Michigan's opportunity to give small services that will "sell" the region to its thousands of summer visitors is at hand, Clarence V. Smazel, executive secretary of the Development League of Western Michigan, points out. Here are a few suggestions he offeres regarding service the general public can give to tourists.

If you see a tourist stalled along the highway with automobile trouble stop and ask if he wishes you to have a service car sent out from the nearest garage on your route.

If a tourist stops at a corner, obviously wondering which way to turn, and you may be able to advise him, don't drive on but show him that you are interested in his pleasure and welfare by guiding him on correctly.

If a fisherman going to a lake or stream is on a road that is impassable or extremely troublesome and you know it, hail him and outline to him an alternate route if possible.

Know your community and its attractions; people don't always think of the things they want to know when at regular information bureaus. If you can't answer the question asked, say so and advise where it can be answered conveniently on the tourist's way. Misdirection or insufficient direction often only serves to make matters worse.

Dozens of little things of this nature can be done, Mr. Smazel points out, which will make a man go on his way pleased, feeling good toward the individual, the community, West Michigan, and be remembered among the pleasent experiences of the trip, whereas otherwise they might be listed among unpleasant or at least trying experiences of the vacation.

BOYNE CITY WILL CELEBRATE THE FOURTH

East Jordan and Charlevoix Will Cooperate in the Event

Boyne City will celebrate the Fourth of July this year. This is carrying out the plan agreed upon several years ago, whereby one of the cities of the county would put on a day in full observance of this yearly event.

Charlevoix celebrated last year and East Jordan the year before. Now residents of the entire county are asked to spend the day at Bayne City and lend their assistance in carrying out the day's program.

Boyne City business men have completed arrangements and have a program of entertainment that will prove interesting and enjoyable to the hundreds who will celebrate with them.

AUTO CAMP IS BUSY IN JUNE

TOURISTS GREATER THAN SAME MONTH LAST YEAR

Many Improvements Add to Attractiveness and Conveniences at Camp Grounds

Although the official opening date of Charlevoix auto camp was Wednesday, June 1st, Hugh Brady, caretaker, states that cars have been in the camp grounds daily since May 26th.

Each day since that time has seen the number of tourists increase and last Saturday 11 cars, the highest number of any night so far this year, was taken care of. Mr. Brady stated that the number of visitors has been considerably more than during the early part of June last season, and indications point to a record year at the camp.

Many improvements have been made since the camp closed its successful season last fall. Space for between twenty or thirty more cars has been provided by clearing out the trees and underbrush at the west end of the park, where the ground has been leveled off and roadways built to make it easily accessible to automobiles. In the neighborhood of 150 cars may now be taken care of without cramping them for space.

One new kitchen unit has been installed and twelve tables built, making a total of 40. Equipment has been placed in the room at the rear of the registration building for a laundry. The space was originally constructed for this purpose, but no equipment was placed in it last season and the room was utilized by tourists for sleeping quarters.

Caretaker Brady takes great pride in the numerous new flower beds set out this spring. A total of eight have been arranged on each side of the sidewalks leading to the rest room, where groups of dahlias, gladiolas, zennas and canna plants, the same as those on State street have been set out. Another bed laid out in a semi-circle, will be very attractive.

Thousands of former and many new tourists who will visit the park this summer will find it even more attractive than ever before.

NORWOOD COUPLE MARRIED TODAY

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Holecheck Will Make Their Home in Holland

A very pretty wedding was solmnized at the Methodist parsonage in Ellsworth Wednesday afternoon, June 22nd, when Miss Anna Jones and Glen Holecheck, both Norwood young people, were united in marriage by Rev. Conklin.

They were attended by the bride's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Heise. Mrs. Holecheck attended the Charlevoix high school and graduated with the class of 1925. She has been teaching at the McGeagh school for the past two years and has many friends in Norwood and Charlevoix. Mr. Holecheck attended school at Norwood and is well and favorably known.

After the marriage a six o'clock dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Jones, after which the young couple left on a honeymoon to Detroit and Port Huron before going to Holland, Michigan, where Mr. Holecheck has employment. They have the best wishes of their many friends.

CHICAGO GOLF COURSE OPENS

FEW CHANGES IN OFFICIALS FOR THIS SEASON

Opening of Belvedere Golf Course Set For July 1—Full 18 Holes Ready For Use

The Chicago Golf Club of Charlevoix officially opened for the 1927 season on Monday morning of this week with a few changes in the office force and many important changes and improvements on the course.

William Watson, who has acted in the capacity of professional for a number of years, will be here again this year, Cleveland Roe is Caddy master again this season and his brother, George Roe, is assistant caddy master. Miss Lila Heise is bookkeeper and will have as her assistant Miss Mary Krulik. Billy Supernaw will work in the club house. The course patrolman is yet to be selected.

Among the many improvements started last fall and completed during this spring are new, modern trappings throughout the entire course. The following changes in the lay of the course were made last year but have not been put into use until this spring. The location of the tee on hole number 3 has been changed, as has the lay and length, the hole now being 186 yards, running east and west. Number four now runs through a patch of woods which was cleared for that purpose. Number four is now number five and former number five has been eliminated and converged into number 6 adding over a hundred yards to the length of that hole.

A modern sprinkling system covering greens, fairways and tees has been installed. A motor-driven pump with a capacity of 40,000 gallons daily will pump water to the tanks on the grounds. New, bright-colored flags with numbers in large black letters, take the place of the ones formerly used.

The course is in wonderful condition this season, numerous spring rains putting the fairway, greens and tees in first class shape.

Present plans call for the opening of the Belvedere golf course on or about July 1st. William Watson, professional at the Chicago Golf Club, has been engaged to act in the same capacity. Miss Doris Hammond will be bookkeeper and other members of the office force have not been engaged at this time.

The full eighteen holes will be used this season and are now in wonderful shape. Seedings on the greens, fairways and tees have come through in excellent shape and will be ready for the opening.

OAKLAND BUILDING PROGRAM COMPLETED

Improvements and New Machinery Will Double Capacity of Plant

According to word received by Block & Simmons, the Oakland Motor Company has completed the $2,000,000 improvement program recently launched to double Oakland Six production, and is now building the Oakland Six in a plant unsurpassed anywhere in the automotive industry.

The improvements instituted in the Oakland division were made possible by the transfer of Pontiac Six machinery to the vast new Pontiac division, which went into production a few weeks ago. All the Oakland machinery was removed temporarily, so that new floors and new concrete bases might be laid.

Much of the Oakland machinery was completely rebuilt while these plant improvements were going on. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of new machinery was bought and installed. A motor conveyor assembly line, of the same type as used in the new Pontiac division was laid out and constructed, along with new block test facilities, overhead conveyor systems, and lights.

ARE MICHIGAN PRICES HIGH

SOME SAY TOWN GROCER IS A ROBBER

But Real Fact is That Such Talk is All Bunk—Merchants Net But Small Profit

Going through a resort community recently, Clarence V. Smazel, executive secretary of the Development League of Western Michigan, listened to a summer hotel man's complaint that the grocer of the town was a robber, heard the grocer say that a realtor was holding his lake frontage for prices that were too high, thereby holding up development instead of encouraging it, and the realtor declared that the hotel man charged rates that were too high, thereby preventing the growth of that sort of business.

"But an investigation showed," the Development League's secretary said, "that the grocer had to truck his goods a considerable distance, that with two additional handlings, adding considerable to his cost; that realtor had spent a good deal of money getting his property in shape for sale and that his money would be thus tied up for some considerable time; that the hotel man must, in two or three months, make enough to carry overhead expenses for 12 months or he couldn't operate at all."

"That doesn't mean that unfair prices are justified," Smazel says, "nor that they are not a harm to the resort business. But before we talk about unfair prices on the part of our neighbors, let us find out first if they are really unfair before criticizing each other to the detriment of all. West Michigan as a rule cannot be accused of any discrimination in prices; there are too many fairly large semi-industrial cities furnishing competition to strictly resort communities to permit anything of that nature. But it is well for West Michigan to remember that many resort communities have 'killed' their possibilities with high prices. Resorters can see the right and wrong of prices as quickly as anybody; the communities of reasonable prices will have their support—and vice verse."

A FORMER RESIDENT GAINS RECOGNITION

Has High Position With Michigan Council of Religious Education

Miss Iona Catton, a former well known resident of this city, is to be children's division superintendent of the Michigan Council of Religious Education after September 16, 1927.

Miss Catton is at present director of religious education in Trinity M. E. church, Knoxville, Tenn., the pastor of which warmly recommends her for the new work she is taking up. She was a teacher in the public schools here for several years and her many friends will be glad she is coming back to Michigan and to fill a position which will sometimes bring her to Charlevoix.

PIONEER RESIDENT IS CALLED

PETER RODNEY BOGART DIED LAST THURSDAY

Was Pioneer Settler in Barnard Vicinity—Survived by Host of Relatives and Friends

The older portion of the community gathered at the home of James Bogart on Hurlbut avenue Monday morning to pay their last tribute to Peter Rodney Bogart, one of Charlevoix's pioneers, who with his companion and four children came to a farm near Barnard in 1883, and had spent the subsequent 44 years in this vicinity.

He was born at Chesterville, Ontario, December 9th, 1850, and passed away June 16th, 1927 at the home of his son, H. J. Bogart, in New Lathrop, Michigan, at the age of 76 years, 6 months and 7 days.

When a child he moved with his parents to Muskoka, Canada, and there grew to manhood and in 1874 married Miss Katherine Dougherty. He moved from there to Michigan in 1883, and here has raised his family and in every way done the tasks of a good citizen.

The Barnard quartette, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. George Block, sang several appropriate selections, and Rev. Herman Burns, D. D., of the Baptist church officiated. The large attendance told of the high esteem of which deceased was held, and their sorrow at parting with the friend of many years. Mrs. Bogart passed away nearly two years ago.

To Mr. and Mrs. Bogart twelve children were born, two of whom died in infancy and ten survive—six sons and four daughters. The surviving children are: Mrs. Arthur Vouremer of Flint, who, on account of illness in a hospital in Battle Creek, was not able to be present; W. J., of Charlevoix; H. J., of New Lathrop; E. J., of East Jordan; James, of Charlevoix; Mrs. Effe Box of Central Lake; Mrs. Gustave Lick and Ray, of Kingsley; Rev. Amos Bogart of Augusta, and Mrs. Edward Utz of Flint. There are also 16 grandchildren and 6 great-grandchildren. Other survivors are three brothers, James and Webster of Canada, and John of Harbor Springs; also three sisters, Mrs. Mary Oldham and Mrs. Eliza Oldham of Canada, and Mrs. Oderkirk of Petoskey.

Thirty-five years ago deceased was converted and united with the Barnard Methodist church and remained a member of this denomination to the end. By the large circle of acquaintances he was regarded as a Christian man. No higher tribute can be paid, and as such he will long live in the memory of those who knew and loved him.

He was buried in the family lot at Brookside cemetery.

FLOWING WELLS HIT AT BOULDER PARK

Add Much to Beauty of This Fine Subdivision

Last week some of the intimate friends of Earl A. Young were beginning to kid him considerable about being related to Nebbs of the comic strip fame, in that he and Nebbs both were the owners of flowing wells, but Earl has now gone him one better and instead of having only one well has secured two beautiful wells on his subdivision on the Lake Shore Drive.

The larger of the wells has a capacity of over seventeen thousand gallon every twenty-four hours, and is situated in the center of one of the streets. It is planned that the street will be divided and the roadway will go on each side of the well and overflow basin that will be connected with it. The other well Mr. Young had drove on lot 1 in the front row. This lot he so far has reserved for himself and already has had a beautiful reflection pool built around the well, which will be nucleus for the permanent landscaping plan for this unusual lot.

Anyone enjoying a bit of unusual beauty will be rewarded by driving out to see the reflection pool that has been built and to wonder at the unusual stone formations that have been secured to line this one hundred barrel basin of beauty.

Enormous Road Building Helps Develop Country

One of the countless direct results of the great development of the automobile industry is the enormous road-building progrnm for the expenditure of $1,000,000,000 a year, to say nothing of the enormous upbuilding of all saburban commanities. In many American cities, so building records show, suburban construction is larger than in the urban district itself. This development is looked upon as the direct result of the automobile and makes this invention probably the most important factor, both from an economic and social standpoint, in modern life.

FARM STOCK

WINTER RATIONS FOR BEEF GAINS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In feeding tests recently completed by the United States Depnrtment of Agricultnre steers which made only slight gains in weight during the winter put on greater gnins on pnsture the following sammer than those which made larger winter gains. It was demonstrated that differences in gains by steers during the winter due to rations fed are gradually minimized throughout the period of summer fattening on grass. Consequently it is important that cattle to be marketed enrly from pastnre should gain considerably more weight during the winter than if they are to be sold late.

The experimenta were begun with 90 good to choice Hereford steer calves of wenning nge and continued antil the animals were marketed as three-year-old steers. The calves were divided into three lots of 30 each, each lot as nearly uniform as possible in quality, size and condition. The three lots were each given the same amount of space in an open barn and kept under cover all winter. The steers were fed twice a day, and the feed, both concentrates and roughage, was carefully weighed at each feeding. Water and salt were available in the barn at all times. Daring the period of the experiments changes were made in the grouping of the calves, and several different rations were fed.

Department Bulletin 1431-D. "Effect of Winter Rations on Gains of Calves Marketed as Three-Year-Old Steers," contains a detailed account of the experiments together with suggestions based apon the results. A copy of the new publication may be obtained free, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agricuture, Washington, D. C.

Castrate Young Pigs a Month Before Weaned

It is common practice among many farmers to castrate pigs after weaning, and in some cases the operation is deferred altogether too long. The older the pigs the more they suffer from the operation and the greater is the danger of loss. For a number of years several experiment stations have castrated pigs within 24 hours after birth and with very satisfactory results. The Ohio and Wisconsin experiment stations have done considerable work along tbat line and the former has come to the conclusion that the sooner a pig is castrated after it is two or three days old the bettar. Only a very small opening need be made at that time, and if the operation is performed under sanitary conditions the wounds heal very quickly and the pigs seem to suffer no setback whatsoever.

Pigs should never be vaccinated until the wounds from castration bava fully and completely healed. This is one reason why they should be operated on while small and at least a month before they are to be weaned.

Sheep Must Shear Good Fleece to Bring Profit

To be profitable, a sheep must shear a good fleece of wool. And bere breed characteristics may be taken into consideration. If not pure bred, a flock usually carries predominating blood of some breed and wool characteristics of that breed should be kept in mind. In all cases, however, the fiber should be of good length so as to grade in the combing classes, dense, and bave plenty of "yolk" or oil. Dry wool or wool without yolk is light and brittle. There should be a good covering on the belly, and in some breeds well down on the legs. Uniformity in length of the fiber as well as uniform fineness of fiber is essential. Sometimes there is a tendency toward kamps or hairy fibers among the wool. These are undesirable.

Balanced Ration Proven to Be Most Economical

A good many farmers are saying that they are not going to feed concentrates this year because they have so much corn. It will be a wasteful mistake to try and feed all corn without supplementing it with protein concentrates. The balanced ration has proved itself the most economical. Corn alone will not give good results with cows, with steers, with hogs, or with chickens. It will, in fact, be likely to injure them just as it used to before balanced rations were understood. If you have a lot of corn, better sell part of it and buy concentrates. It will be better economy.

Lice and Ticks in Winter

When lice and ticks annoy sheep in winter dipping cannot safely be done, but an application of a mixture of equal quantities of flowers of sulphur and lard to infested skin will soon destroy lice, when only a few are present. When the skin is badly infested it is best to dust it repeatedly with a mixture of one part of freshly powdered pyrethrum and two parts of finely sifted flowers of sulphur. Dipping should be done just as soon as the state of the weather will allow.

WORKERS OWN BONDS

Employes of the General Electric company to the number of more than 25,000 now hold botds in that corporation, totalling 22,500,000, or an average of $903 for each bond-owning employee.

The wide distrubution of stock In tho Bell Telephone system is even more striking, there being more than 400,000 stockholders in that system, which is said to be the largest number holding stock in any corporation in the world.

Similar conditions exist in practically all the great utility concerns of the country, most of which encourage their workers to become partners in their enterprises by making the purchase of stock easy through installment payments.

While the total investment in one of the larger corporations is enormous, the percentage held by any one stockholder is usually small. In the case of the Bell System, no stockholder owns as much as one percent of the total stock outstanding.

The wide distribution of stocks and bonds of big corporations is good for the corporations and good for the public. It inculcates thrift on the part of the small investor, and it gives stability to the industry concerned. It also tends to make the prejudiced appeals of damagogue politicians less effective.

SAVING OUR SCENERY

In preceding articles we have emphasized the importance of our forests as directly beneficial to the interests of commerce and conservation of game. There is another item, however, that should not be overlooked, and that is the scenic value of the woods. No one cares to visit a land that has been denuded of its forests and where in the places where healthy trees once stood, blackened stumps stand out against the sky. The scenic value of Michigan's forests cannot be over-estimated, not alone as to their lure to the tourist, but for their fascination for the home folks as well.

Many persons who are now citizens of our state have been attracted here by our wonderful scenery. Should we destroy that scenery many would probably go elsewhere to make their homes. We are living in a day when people desire pleasant surroundings. Take two pieces of property with identical advantages except that one has trees and the other has not and place them on the market. You will find that the one with the trees will not only sell quicker, but will bring more. Trees are worth money and more. Thees are worth money and now is the time for the citizens of Michigan to invest in them at little cost. A few dollars spent in planting trees today will bring you big returns twenty-five years from now. Michigan should savo what scenery she has now and ercate more by planting trees.

CROSSING ACCIDENTS

A lnrge majority of crossing accidents occur in day-light, in open country, where there is no obstruction to the view, nothing to prevent the automobile driver from seeing the approaching train, and at crossings with which the driver is entirely familiar, usually in the locality in which he resides.

During the past year more than one-fifth of the crossing accidents resulted from the drivers running inproportion of these nccidents are due to the drivers' running through lowered crossing gates, either in front or into the sides of trains. Not frequently, accordingly to the compilation of accident data, crossing flagmen in the center of the highway to protect the motorist, are run down by automobiles and killed.

These things happen in spite of the constant efforts of railroads and other interested agencies to persuade automobile drivers to be more cautious.

England has partially solved this serious problem by elevating eighty per cent of her railroad crossings. In this country only eight per cent are elevated, and there are those who believe that the railroads should be forced to a program of grade crossing elevation in order to reduce the heavy death toll from this cause.

This is doubtless the only sure solution, but it must be rembered that it is the public which in the last analysis will foot the bills. And it is questionable whether such an expense should be placed on the railroads, to be passed on to the public in the face of mounting tax and other living costs.

In the end, we may have to come to this soultion. Safety campaigns have failed to effect any sizeable resolution, but it must be remembered ings. People continue to approach crossings thoughtlessly and carelessly.

SOVIET REPRESENTATIVES NOT TO BE TRUSTED

Those so-called "liberals" in the United States who are always advocating the recognition of Soviet Russia are hard put to it to dig up reasons for the action of England in expelling the Soviet representatives and breaking off trade relations. There is no mystery about it. England discovered that it was warming a snake. It is good form for a guest to be courteous to a host and at least not to try and betray him or do him an injury. But the Soviet mental processes do not work in this way. Having established a semi-diplomatic relation with England and sent over a commission which has to have jurisdiction in the matter of trade, it used its business headquarters for the promotion of propngsnda antagonastic to England and used its English headquarters to make trouble for England in every purt of the world. The Chinese situation is a perfect example. The world knows today that Soviet representatives cannot be trusted to do nnything but seek the destruction of other countries even though they are friendly ones. And yet we are asked to suppose that if the United States were true to its tradition it would establish the Soviet Republican as an honored guest in our own house.

FORESTS AND TOURISTS

Forests hold an important position in relation to the tourist business, and it is not at all uncommon to hear visitors from other states say that they come to Michigan because trees along most of the shores of most of her thousand of lakes have been saved. This fnct alone should arouse the citizens of our state to the importnnce of saving our trees. Thousands come here every year to see our pines, and there is no reason why the pines and the spruce trees should not be found in almost every part of Michigan. Pines are a valuable asset to any community dealing with tourist trade and as the years go by they will become more valuable. Resorts in all parts of the stnte should make an effort to secure and plant a few pine trees. They will prove to be a wonderful investment.

FRESHENING BREEZES

This New York and Paris stuff will be all right if the ladies do not take it up as an excuse to make shopping trips.

The Government Club, a Chicago women's organization, requires each member to take this pledge: "I do not endorse communism, socialism or pacifism."

The first newspaper for women is said to have been the ladies' Mercury, published in London in 1693. If it circulated like mercury it certainly was popular.

A three-year-old French child can speak in three languages—and probably yell in six more.

A new hazard in golf was encountered by Roy Harkness of St. Paul, who was stunned when lightning struck his golf club.

Every producer, whether farmer, miner of manufacturer, who produces raw material or finished merchandise than the market demands is his own worst competitor. He is the enemy of his product who detracts from its value by forcing it upon the market in excess supply.

Man seems to be getting a little more recognition, a Chicago judge ordering a married woman to keep away from dances and stay at bome nights for a year.

Twins and triplets were born within the space of eleven months to a woman in Alary, Ireland, which partially explains the increasing supply of policemen in this country.

AND NOW IN CLOSING—

One of the causes for the acute traffic situation which exists in many cities was recently set forth by a school boy traffic cop, who said: "Some guy makes goo-goo eyes at a girl and she thinks she is some sheba and looks around to see how many other girls are looking at her."

BREEDING TO GET NEW STRAWBERRIES

Have you ever nttempted to rnise a fine patch of lusclous strawberries such as you have seen pictured in nursery catalogues, and then had so small a crop that you received only a good taste? Experiences of this nature caused the horticultural department of the Nebraska experiment station to see whether new strains could not be produced which would be more adapted to Nebraska conditions. A series of experiments was begun in 1913, in an attempt to produce new varieties, by breeding methods, which would outyield our standard varieties and compare favorably with them in all other desirable qualities. Of 800 hybrid or crossbred plants as a beginning, five strains have been saved for propagation and distribution.

Strawberries are propagated by runners because they will not breed true from seed. Seedling plants from pure seed probably would have shown as great varintion as those from crossbred seed, but the latter kind was used exclusively in the experiment. All of the promising hybrids saved were from crosses in which Enormous, Senator Dunlap, or Howard 17 was one of the parents.

The work of producing the hybrid seed was done in the greenhouse in winter. Pollen parts were removed from flowers of several plants of each standard variety and fertilized with the pollen from some other standard variety. Each of these 800 crosses was numbered and the seed planted in plats outside in the spring, and allowed to colonize to about 25 plants during that year.

Of these 131 of the best were saved and planted in matted rows 30 feet long the next two years. All but 40 of the new sorts were eliminated at that time. These were then grown in 40-foot matted rows with a row of some standard variety between each row for comparison. At the end of two more years the fruit from the 10 highest yielding ones was put in storage to test its keeping qualities. The fruit also was chemically tested for sugar, acid, and solids content in comparison with some standard variety. Five of the new crosses outyielded Dunlap and other varieties at the Nebraska station, and proved to be equally favorable in hardiness, prolificacy, uprightness, color, flavor and other desirable qualities.

The new hybrids have not been named, for it is not known which ones will respond best under average middle western conditions of soil and climate.—Goner V. Jones, in the Nebraska Farm Journal.

Old Fruit Trees Stage Profitable Come-Back

To show the actual value in dollars and cents of taking care of home orchards, the extension service of Clemson college arranged last year to keep accurate records on a number of home orchards where directions had been carried ont. At the close it was found that the cash value of fruit produced averaged $202 per acre. None of these orchards had ever been sprayed before and none had ever been profitable in any way. For example, one home orchard demonstrator near Easley, South Carolina, had 98 trees. These trees were planted several years ago, but they had served no other purpose than as a support for the clothes line or as shade for a hammock on a hot summer afternoon. They furnished very small crops of fruit that were always wormy and worthless. Last year they were sprayed for the first time in their lives and their blossoms changed into fine fruit. The owner was proud of his achievement for he sold $233 worth of fruit, but best of all, the home of this farmer ceased to be a home where they had to buy fruit from a grocery store. Has your home orchard been producing crops of the value of $200 per acre? If not, why not?

FRESHENING BREEZES

America today might well be described as a railroad civilization, since without the transcontinental carriers and their intercommunicating network, the vast expanse of the United States might be as unproductive as the Sahara or the Arctic wastes.

What has become of the "old-fashioned householder who used to spend his spare time in the garden?

So far Lindy has been too modest to brag about how many miles he got to the gallon.

A Ghicago woman, suing for divorce, claimed her husband was the "laziest man in the world; too lazy to get out of his own way." This will come as welcome newa to a lot of the boys, who have had that title tacked onto them at home.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our little son and brother, Bruce, who was taken so suddenly awsy four years ago today, June 25 1923:

A gift the Father gave us,
A fair and lovely child.
He gave it to our keeping,
So pure and undefiled,
But just as it was opening
To glory of the day,
Down eame the Holy Gardner
And took our flower away.

Sadly missed by all. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith and children.—Adv. 25-t1 pd.

Orchard Information

PRUNING TREES AND VINES GETS RESULTS

It is always advisnble to give the fruit trees and vines some needed attention in the form of pruning. A few hours' careful work with the pruning sheurs and book will greatly increase future fruit yields.

On the nverage farm the grape probably receives the least pruning of any of the fruit plants. Too often, when pruning is done, the vines are pruned by the spur system instead of the long cane system which horticulturists advise.

Grapes are produced on shoots which spring from one-year-old wood and the pruning of the vine is therefore primarily a renewal proposition. A certain nmonnt of wood of the previous year's growth must he saved each year for fruit production and provision made for a renewal growth which can be used the following year.

In pruning a vine according to the long cane system canes that grow well back on the body of the vine should be saved instead of selecting those that are farthest nway from the base of the vine. Four to six long canes with a totnl of thirty-five to fifty buds should be enough to produce n good crop on one vine. It is a good plan to leave a few spurs attached to the main body of the vine and two or three feet above ground. These will send out new canes to produce the following year's crop. The best fruiting cane is that which is nbout as thick as a lead pencil and carries ten to twelve buds.

By selecting long canes in the main part of the vine for fruiting, the vines can be kept from spreading over a large area and much useless wood growth may be dispensed with.—Wallace's Farmer.

Manure Brings Returns When Placed in Orchard

Trees of any sort are but large plants and require food with which to sustain their life processes. The firm orchard, whether it bears every year or not, exerts a continuous drain upon the soil which does not even enjoy the respite which comes to the ordinary field through a rotation system. Forest trees meet such condition more successfully than do the trees in an orchard for the reason that rich molds are formed by the disintegration of leaves and other vegetation from which the trees gather a large nmount of food through their intricate root systems.

Professional orchardists appreciate all this and give their trees the encouragement und assistance that is held in barnyard wastes. Many a farm orchard is denied the benefit of manuring for the reason that the wastes are needed for the fields or because of indifference due to lack of appreciation of the fact that trees as well as farm crops can make use of plant foods. The result is that farm orchards frequently yield below what would have been the case had the ground heen given a dressing of manure.

The best time to apply manure to this part of the farm acreage is just after the crop has been gathered. The waste can he made to go further if it is not spread closely around the trunks of the trees but is placed in circular fashion under the branches as it is here, of course, that the root systems lie. By distributing orchard manure at the time indicated, there will be abundant opportunity for soluble plant-foods to be washed into the soil before the next growing season and the manure itself will have become disintegrated before the next crop is in the trees.

Planting Trees in Fall Found Most Successful

When moisture conditions are favorable, fall plantings of fruit trees and most varieties of shade and forest trees generally are successful. More loss has occurred from fall pluntings in some sections as a result of dry winters than from low temperatures. One ndvantnge of fall planting is that the trees make a quicker start in the spring. Another advantsge is that the fall plnntiag can be done more leisurely. The spring rush of work on the farm is avoided.

Trees should not be disturbed until they shed the leaves and go into the dormant stage. It is essential that they be transplanted to well-prepared land and the dirt packed firmly around the roots. The roots should not be permitted to become dry or to freeze between the time they are taken from the nursery snd the time of setting out. Strawberries, rhubarb and tender plants of that nature usually do best when set ont in early spring.

Spray of Lime-Sulphur

Oyster shell scale is the most common and the most easily controlled of scale diseases. Spray the trees with a dormant spray of lime-sulphur, using one gallon of lime-sulphur to eight of water, making application before the leaves are out. Other materials will also control the insect, such as miscible oil, but since lime-sulphur is thoroughly reliable for the control of oyster shell scale, with no chance for injury to the trees, it is usually preferred.

BOATS PASSING STRAITS NEARLY TWO THOUSAND

Records Show 1,927 Recorded Since April 4

Since the 1927 season opened on April 4, when the first boat passed through the Straits of Mackinaw, 1,-72 boats have been noted by glnss and whistle at the Dagwell Marine Reporting station. This is an unusually large number of boats to pass through the Strnits this early in the season.

Someone is constantly on the watch at this station so that the name and time of passage of each boat is noted and reported to the owners. This service is especially difficult during a storm or foggy weather yet this is the time when the report of the safe arrival of a boat is most welcome to the owner.

Storm signals are displayed on the mast near the station and thus boats are warned of an approaching atorm. Mackinaw residents have acquired the habit of watching for these signals and the summer people display much interest in them also.

She listened to Malet's story and her father's.

"I shall be a great help to you," she said cheerfully when she was in possession of what facts they could give her. "A woman's brains are always useful. You see, she so often jumps to the right conclusions when you men are floundering along in doubt."

"We haven't one idea worth discussing," Malet admitted.

"I noticed that." She laughed. "I think I see exactly how it can be done."

"Nita," cried her father. He thought she was making a jest of it.

"I mean it, daddy," she said earnestly. "Fellow-conspirators all, listen."

CHAPTER VII

Paul Raxon knew very well that his sudden success would make enemies for him among the established powers in Wall Street. But he also knew that he was not to be brought low by any combination against him so long as he kept his head and resisted speculation.

For the moment he was content to rest and allow financial writers to wonder what his next move would be. He had purchased a home built for large entertainments and determined to become known as one of America's great hosts. And with this he would erect a reputation for those domestic virtues which count so much when electioneering. Raxon smiled grimly when he reflected this meant he should be on good terms with his wife. Mrs. Raxon, unaware of his ambitions, was amazed at finding him so reasonably human.

She was not unaware of her own limitations. The idea that she must with a bound become a famous hostess was disquieting. The years had not dealt so kindly with her as with Paul.

"I have here," he said one morning, "a list of people with whom I want to establish social relations. At present I don't know a quarter of them except by name."

"Why fill the house with strangers?" she asked.

"Because I want something from every name on this list. We've got to entertain so well that they talk about us. This social racket with me is a means to an end. I'm playing a game, and if you play it with me you can be a great Washington hostess."

"I don't know anything about being a great hostess," she grumbled.

"You've got to learn. I'm counting on you and the girls to be an asset to me."

Mrs. Raxon was afraid of him. She knew he would not forgive her if she failed, and yet was conscious that she lacked ability for the part she was to play. He came of a better family than she. He was never at a loss conversationally. It was wise, she thought, to point out her limitations now.

"I don't expect you to catch onto this social end yet. You can hire a well-bred woman to teach you. When you've learnt all she can teach, fire her and get another. It's a good system. I've used it a lot. Don't expect to consult me. I shall be too busy. I've got to remodel this place so it doesn't look so much like a summer hotel. I'm a little doubtful of the furniture. All Bellington knew was to put his faith in upholsterers. I'm going to make a nine-hole golf course, a polo ground and a swimming pool."

"Oh, but Paul," she cried, "I shall have to ask you when I don't know."

"Ask me as little as you can," he snapped. "It will cost you money to run this place like a well-oiled machine, but I'm not limiting you. Hire anyone you want to help you."

She looked again through the list of names. Among them were those of whose doings she had read in the social columns for years. Some were actually prominent in politics and finance. McKimber headed the list.

"Make the most you can, without overdoing it, of the McKimbers," he commanded. "I want the world to think McKimber and I are bosom friends. Cultivate his wife. She's fat, too, so you can talk calories together. Young Robin McKimber is more or less a society type and will be glad to find a polo field here when he comes."

"I wish I understood you better," she said a trifle wistfully. She had not been the only woman to say that.

"I'm glad you don't," he said cryptically; "that prevents your giving me away. I'm one of those men whose peculiar joy it is to play a lone hand. If you share secrets, they are only fifty per cent your own."

She was vastly relieved that she had confessed her ineptitudes. She could go the more cheerfully about her tasks now. She wondered why the McKimbers were so important in Paul's eyes. Other names exceeded them far in the social scale as she apprehended it. That he had been chairman of the national committee of her husband's party meant nothing to Mrs. Raxon. Her thoughts turned to Robin, the polo-playing heir to great riches. Well, her own Gertrude was good looking and a great heiress. She felt a spirit of gratitude toward her husband which had long been a stranger to her. Most men hated their wives embarking on deliberate attempts to capture society.

The idea of hiring the well-bred woman came back to her when she felt her butler's sneer. How that man seemed to dislike her. How superior he seemed and how aware of her social deficiencies. Yet she lacked the courage to dismiss him. She opened her mouth as though to frame a sentence which would annihilate him and reduce him to the ranks of one looking for work, when her courage failed. Distinctly there was something to be said for the well-bred woman. Such a one would know how to deal with butlers like this.

"A Miss Brown to see you, madam," said the butler. From his tones it seemed Miss Brown was only less distasteful than his employer. He presented a card on a silver tray. Under Miss Brown's name was pencilled, "I am calling at the suggestion of Mrs. Hamilton Buxton."

Although Mrs. Raxon had not been in her native land for some years, she knew Mrs. Buxton's name very well as a distinguished member of the smart hunting set. Also Mrs. Buxton's name was among those to be cultivated. She would see Miss Agatha Brown.

Miss Brown was young, pretty, and delightfully dressed. This was, no doubt, one of Mrs. Buxton's personal friends.

"Mrs. Buxton," Miss Brown began, "thought that as you had bought this lovely place and were going to entertain a lot, you might need a social secretary. I was going to her, but she has taken Lord Kitemaster's hunting box in Leicestershire for the coming season. I have just come back to the United States, where I belong, after spending some years abroad."

"You speak French, then?" said Mrs. Raxon in the Gallic tongue. It was her one accomplishment.

"Yes," said Miss Brown with still greater fluency. I have been mainly in England. My last position was with the countess of Horsham at Horsham abbey. She was one of the Boston Fessendons, as, of course, you know."

"What did you do there?" Mrs. Raxon asked.

"Literally everything," Miss Brown confided. "It is an immense place, fully twice the size of this, and for three years I managed it from cellar to attic. I wrote the menus, engaged the servants, saw they did their work and dismissed them if they did not."

Mrs. Raxon smiled happily.

"You understand," Miss Brown continued, "that I was not a servant or even a housekeeper. I'm a great believer in social distinctions. They make entertaining so much easier, don't they? Most people think I am a guest like themselves. I have often been taken in groups with even royalty."

With an unaffected absence of modesty, Miss Brown, in the course of half an hour, managed to impress Mrs. Raxon most favorably. "You would find very little to do here at first," said the elder woman. "We have no house guests at present, but we are going to entertain a great deal."

"I should find a very great deal to do at once," said Miss Brown emphatically. "To begin with, I should dismiss your butler, who is impertinent and offensive."

Impulsively Mrs. Raxon leaned forward and kissed Miss Brown.

"Dearie," she said, "I need you at once."

"Good," said Miss Brown, without excessive gratitude. "Another thing. If I stay I mustn't be hampered in engaging or dismissing servants. It must be understood that I have complete charge of the household arrangements. I cannot possibly run this establishment smoothly if I am to have the help running to you with complaints. Lady Horsham wanted me to relieve her of every domestic responsibility."

"That's exactly what I want," Mrs. Raxon said enthusiastically. "Where are you going?" Miss Brown had risen.

"To get my trunks. I shall move in at once."

Mrs. Raxon sought out her husband and told him the news.

"Fine," he said. "Anyone recommended by Mrs. Buxton will be all right. I suppose you looked over her testimonials?"

"Of course," said his wife, conscious that she had forgotten all about it and not anxious for him to find it out. "You'll like her. She's so distinguished. I don't think she approved of the drawing room furniture."

"We shall agree on that. Bellington furnished it like an hotel reception room. One thing more. It's about McKimber. I forgot to tell you before. If anyone asks you if I have political aspirations, say so. This goes particularly with the McKimbers. You and I know, and that's enough for the present."

At a square house on Lower Fifth avenue the young lady who had just passed as Agatha Brown burst in upon four anxious men.

"My dears," she cried, "I've got it. I move in tomorrow and take complete charge of the household arrangements. I carried her off her feet. She kissed me and called me 'Dearie.' I left before she could ask to see my testimonials. I'm afraid I lied fearsomely. It's quite true, Uncle Peter, they are going to entertain largely. She showed me the list. She evidently doesn't know how to do things on a large scale. I didn't see him."

Neeland Barnes looked at her with pride. At a bound she had landed in the guarded fortress, unsuspected. The keys of the arsenal had been handed her. It was a complete triumph.

"Now you are there," said Peter Milman, "what good shall we be to you?"

"I've thought it all out. You, personally, will have to stop here, because the lawyer man knows you. I shall need daddy and my other uncles at once."

"What possible use can you have for me?" Bradney demanded eagerly.

"Or for me?" said her father.

"All in good time." She laughed. "Uncle Peter, you made a great mistake in letting Sneed go. I am dismissing the Raxon butler tomorrow and shall want another."

"You mean you will put Sneed in? Wonderful. I have his address."

"Won't Loddon remember him?" Bradney asked.

"Probably. Sneed will say that he left because he couldn't stand the place any longer. We shall have to let him in on part of our plan. Do you think he can be trusted?"

"Without a doubt," said Peter Milman. "Yes, I made a mistake in letting Sneed go. I should have remembered his many loyalties."

"But what am I to do?" her father persisted.

"You and Professor Bradley will be my tall, imported footmen."

Instinctively Neeland Barnes stroked his chestnut mustache.

"I've had it since I was a freshman at Yale," he said regretfully.

"And I've had this"—Bradney stroked his beard—"ever since I went to Gottingen for my Ph.D." Alarm spread over his face. "But I cannot possibly do what you suggest. Footmen have to wear some sort of gorgeous livery, don't they?"

"Undress livery at Great Rock," she said, "not powdered hair and knee-breeches, as we had at the abbey. How long will it take you to get into the way of waiting at table, opening doors, and being loftily efficient?"

"I could never do it," said Bradney in a panic. "I should drop things. I should pass dishes on the wrong side. I should forget."

"The poor old thing has lost his nerve." Neeland Barnes laughed. "He can toy with atomic disintegration, but be shies at pouring out wine and passing plates."

"Can you do it?" Bradney retorted.

"It will be a great jest. I shall enjoy every minute of it. Raxon will think us flunkeys, while we are there to drag him down. Man, if you have any sporting blood in you, you can't hold back. If you had your nerve with you, we should make a great team."

"It isn't lack of nerve," Bradney explained. "I simply don't know the technique of it."

Neeland Barnes was in his element. He had kept a large establishment and had been reared among people who had not denied themselves luxuries. He explained lucidly the whole duty of footmen in fashionable houses.

"Sneed will be there," Nita reminded him. "I'm banking on him. He will be nominally your superior and help you in any way he can. It won't be a bit difficult, Uncle Fleming. Sneed, daddy, and I shall be there."

"Where do I come in?" Malet asked. He did not wish to be left out.

"I have a very definite use for you, Uncle Floyd. I talked a great deal with Mrs. Raxon about her husband. He suspects the furniture, and he is right. Uncle Floyd, how well do you speak French?"

"As well as I do English. Ten years in Paris and no chance to forget it.

Too Much "Acid?"

Excess Uric Acid Gives Rise to Many Unpleasant Troubles.

AUTHORITIES agree that an excess of uric acid is primarily due to faulty kidney action. Retention of this toxic material often makes its presence felt by sore, painful joints, a tired, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backache and headache. That the kidneys are not functioning right is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Thousands assist their kidneys at such times by the use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Doan's are recommended by many local people. Ask your neighbor!

because I've been teaching it as an aide-line in Philadelphia for the last six or seven years. Why?"

"I'm going to invite you to stay at the Raxons' directly you can raise a little mustache and imperial. You shall be a French viscount, a friend of Lady Horsham's. You are a great authority on French furniture. That means you must study all the books you can get hold of. I'll arrange a name for you later."

"How about my testimonials?" Bradney said, suddenly coming from a trail of fancies in which he saw himself the perfect footman.

"I engage all help. Your testimonials will be perfectly satisfactory. The Raxon women is afraid of men servants. She won't interfere. Her husband has given her full charge and she has deputed me to do it for her. I think she needs a friend. She babbled most indiscreetly to me about the people she hoped to have as guests. Apparently she knows none of them."

"Do you remember if the name McKimber was on the list?" Milman asked.

"Yes. It was the first name on it."

Milman smiled. It was plain the news gratified him.

"Another of Loddon's port-begotten confidences. John McKimber is aiming at the senate and hopes New York state will send him to Washington. At present there seems no serious opposition. I could hardly believe Loddon at the time, but he insisted there was a dark horse from New York city who would beat McKimber. I see now he was hinting plainly at Raxon."

"But Raxon isn't known politically," Barnes remarked.

"I Could Never Do It," Said Bradney in a Panic.

"That does not make his candidacy impossible. Men have often ridden into high office on waves of hysteria." Milman's eyes were bright. He believed that Loddon had been right after all when he hinted that a dark horse would go to the senate from New York. But how could a decent man like McKimber, extremely wealthy, a large employer of labor, and a great power up-state, be defeated? Hardly by fair means. Had Paul Raxon woven about him a mesh that would keep him inactive?

"I think I am right in assuming that Paul Raxon has definite political ambitions. He must remove McKimber from the running to get his chance. I think McKimber is in danger. His relations with Raxon—if he stays there—must be observed very closely."

"That can be managed," said Nita calmly.

"I should like frequent reports," Milman said.

"Footmen, butlers, social secretaries, and furniture experts on their nights out shall keep you informed," she returned.

It was a joyous company of gentlemen adventurers that night. In the butler's pantry Neeland Barnes was lecturing—with suitable demonstrations—on the care of glass and silver. Fleming Bradley, one of the world's great authorities on etheric physics, was listening intently and making copious notes. Barnes had rarely been so gratified at a listener's attention.

Floyd Malet, in the library, had before him Histoire de Part l'antiquite, Lady Dilke's work on French furniture, and photographs of the Bureau de Roi, in the Louvre.

In the Japanese garden Nita sat on a cushion at the feet of Peter Milman and looked up into his clear-cut, thoughtful face.

"Uncle Peter," she said, "you and I are the only grown-up people in this big house. The rest of them are all enthusiastic children."

"It is very satisfying to be a child," he reminded her.

"But children never look ahead," she said wisely. "I am sitting at your feet pretending everything is going to come out right. You are looking down at me like a courteous sphinx in evening dress, certain that your plans are not to miscarry. Uncle Peter, are you a grown-up like me, or one of the children?"

"Nita, my niece, I am grown up."

"It is hard to believe," she said slowly.

"Why should it be?"

"Because, if you look ahead, you must realize that there's more than an even chance of failure. Failure won't be pleasant for any of us. It won't be merely failing as one does when one goes after a prize or a golf cup." She lowered her voice. "It may be prison, Uncle Peter."

"It will be if we fail," he returned.

"And you can keep so cheerful?"

"We shall not fail. I feel confident that I shall not lose this home. If dumb, inanimate things can radiate cheerfulness, this house with the treasures I love radiates it. I feel influences outside my own perception, perhaps on some other plane, are fighting for me. Not for years have I awakened with such cheerfulness in my heart. When I wake up I find myself smiling as though I had just left friends who had hid me cheer up because victory was in sight."

"I wish I felt that," she said.

"There are other crumbs of comfort for you." He smiled. Milman took from his pocketbook a page of note-paper covered with his fine, distinct writing. "This," he went on, "is a copy of a conversation with Loddon. At that time Loddon had done me the honor to consider me dead and buried, a harmless recluse ignorant of what he was talking. He was able to talk indiscreetly, confident that not a breath of what he said would ever be translated into words by his listener. I will read it to you:

"'There's one big-headed, millionaire manufacturer who thinks he owns New York state above the Westchester line that has a big jolt coming his way. Some day he'll go into my friend's office looking six feet high and weighing around two-fifty. When he comes out, he'll look a dwarf and weigh as a bantamweight. I tell you, Mr. Milman, when a man has brains and no scruples he can get to Washington any time at all.'"

"You think he was talking about Roxon and McKimber?" said Nita eagerly.

"I am certain of it. 'Undoubtedly McKimber expects to be United States senator from New York. It is conceded he deserves this honor. If Raxon forces him out of the race, it can only be because he has some mysterious and powerful hold over him. You must not forget that for years I have been collecting all sorts of scraps of knowledge about him.'"

"Why?" the girl asked. "That's what is so curious to me. It seems so coincidental that just at a moment he ruined you indirectly you have all this knowledge to use against him."

"It was through Mr. Bradney," he admitted. "You guessed that I gave him the hundred thousand dollars. I believe in him. His lecture, which fired me, brought the donation. Then, suddenly, I found he had been dismissed. I had his successor interviewed, a lesser man and an envious one. He was frankly against Bradney. That's how it began. I bought Mr. Malet's wonderful group because I thought we in America had at last a sculptor worthy to rank with the world's greatest. I was interested in his eclipse. I found Raxon only when Loddon spoke of Malet."

"But my father?" she insisted. "How did you find out about him?"

"It began at a dinner table. Someone mentioned the Saratoga affair. You know, Nita, we are distant connections, and I have a family pride that is as strong as it is illogical. Even then I did not see Raxon in the affair until Loddon, port-sodden, told me that his patron never forgave. Then came instances of this vengefulness. Among them was a mention of a society horseman who had thrown this patron of Loddon's into the sea.

"I employed investigators. Many of them. The first would get facts. I then dismissed him and engaged a second to build on this structure. I did not want any private detectives to get at my real purpose. I warned Brewer against him. But at that time Hazen seemed so immeasurably more powerful than the unknown Raxon that he laughed at my advice."

"I owe you an apology," said the girl. "I had no idea you had been so thorough. I see exactly what I'm to do. I'm to find out what hold Raxon has on McKimber."

"Yes," Milman assented. "I want to use the same weapon against Raxon as he employs against McKimber."

"It's a glorious adventure," she cried.

"There's one thing which makes me uneasy," he admitted. "It is in sending you to a house owned by a man of Raxon's sort. He has the power to create the illusion of truth and sincerity when in reality he laughs at both. Good women have loved him as well as bad."

"I'm not exactly a child, Uncle Peter," she reminded him. "In society one meets all types. I am not afraid. I can never forget the life my father might have been leading now but for him. I shall never be ashamed of what we are going to do." She smiled at him. "Let's go into the kitchen and hear daddy laying down the whole duty of footmen."

CHAPTER VIII

Nita Barnes fitted into the life at Great Rock very quickly. She would have trouble later on, she decided, with the three Raxon girls, whose ages ranged from twelve to eighteen years. They were attractive in a rather second-rate way. The eldest girl was bitterly opposed to letting Agatha Brown mix with the guests. She saw that on her merits she had no chance against the stranger. Since Miss Brown carried the day and appeared at the dinner table, admirably gowned, the Raxon girls determined to force her out.

Paul Raxon, walking leisurely up his drive one day, was amazed to see two strapping men alight from a taxi outside the house and carry suitcases in as though they had come to stay. As they had gone to the back entrance, he supposed they were new servants hired by the social secretary. It had not, until this moment, occurred to him that to have strange men in the house might be dangerous. There was a new butler expected. That made three. Suspicious and crafty, Raxon saw that he might have three spies here, for all he knew.

Neeland Barnes, looking fifteen years younger without his big mustache, was giving his fellow footman a few last words of advice when a blase, cynical man pushed open the door of their common sitting room. Never before had Fleming Bradney seen the man who had disgraced him. In a sense the sight of Raxon was a shock. He seemed of a refined type, intelligent, and superior to what Bradney had expected.

Barnes was a better judge of mankind. He saw in Raxon a cruel and vindictive man, indomitable and not to be swayed.

"'Allo, 'andsome," said Barnes genially, "your name Sneed?"

"It is not," said Raxon, frowning. Sneed. That was Peter Milman's man. He had heard it more than once from Loddon. "Who are you?"

"My name is 'Iggins," said Barnes. "When you know me well enough you can call me 'Enry. I'm the new footman. This"—he pointed to Bradney, whose breathless face had a certain childish wistfulness about it—"this is Alfred Budd, also a footman to the swell who owns this place. If you aren't Sneed, who are you?"

"I happen to be 'the swell who owns this place,'" said Raxon. He had no doubt about the bona fides of these men. Tall London footmen by the look of them. 'Enry's pilfering amused him. 'Enry was heard to say that his last employer, Lord Richester, would not so demean himself as to enter his footman's room.

"I do as I please," said Raxon coldly. He left them, as he supposed, wrapped in embarrassment.

"I have seen the footmen," he said to his wife. "They'll do. Let me be told when the new butler comes."

"He's here," said Mrs. Raxon. "I hope he's satisfactory. He has the best references. He was with Mr. Peter Milman for years."

A few minutes later Sneed bowed respectfully.

"Why did you leave Mr. Milman?" he was asked.

There was a certain reticence about the man. It seemed he hardly liked to say.

"Mr. Milman was very good to me," he began, "but of late it got to be very hard there, sir."

"In what way?"

"I'm afraid poor Mr. Peter is losing his mind. He's had some money losses, I understand, sir, and he's acting queer. It's my belief he's dangerous. He's cut down on the food so there isn't enough to eat. He's been a good employer to me, but when a man don't get his wages or his meals, he has to look out for himself."

"Quite right. I've seen your two new footmen. One of them, 'Enry he calls himself, seems inclined to be impudent. Check that."

"Impudent!" Sneed was incredulous. "Why, Mr. Raxon, they have the highest references. On duty, sir, you'll find no fault with them. I don't know what's come over house-servants of late, Mr. Roxon. When off duty they seem to think themselves as good as anyone else."

Raxon said nothing. His dismissal was a nod. He was satisfied that Miss Agatha Brown knew her job. She had brought in three excellent men, and the colony of Swedish women help seemed thoroughly capable.

He found himself wondering how it was so much intelligence, energy and beauty could be united in a girl who was now only one of his help. It had been Paul Roxon's idea to make a hit with her by his knowledge of furniture. He had flung open the door of a lofty apartment with the simple exclamation, "My Louis Seize room."

"What makes you think so?" Miss Brown returned after one brief glance. She pointed out what she declared were forgeries. She went from piece to piece criticizing here and there until his pride of possession fled.

"I know very little about French furniture," she said simply. "When I was at Horsham abbey, Viscount Raoul de Guilinin often stayed there. You know, of course, that he is the supreme authority. Oddly enough, I hear he is in New York. If you would like him to see your things, I'm sure he'd be delighted. If you've lots of people coming next week, it might be better to weed some of these out. One hates to be laughed at in that sort of thing."

"I suppose this viscount has a regular fee?"

"He would want to fight a duel with you if you even suggested it. He is quite a rich man and often gives his services to museums to detect forgeries."

"I wonder how I could get hold of him?"

BETTER CARE IS BOOST FOR WOOL

Shearing is probably done as well as most of the various other tasks connected with sheep raising. There are a good many points about wool growing and wool preparation, however, in which Illinois does not hold an enviable position, according to W. G. Kammlade, in charge of sheep husbandry at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. In fact, the Boston Wool Trade association has reported that in every state east of the Missouri river some gain would result from improvement in methods of preparing wool for the market, but that the greatest gain could be made in the states of Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota and Wisconsin. The reference is not to the method of marketing—although great improvement could be made here also—but to the preparation of fleeces.

One of the worst things with which manufacturers have to contend is the chaff and straw that growers allow to get into the fleece, either by carelessness in feeding, unswept floors at time of shearing or poor storage after shearing. This may result in a loss of some ten cents a pound or from seventy-five cents to a dollar a fleece. No great care or effort is necessary to avoid this loss. The preparation of fleeces can be further improved by the removal of all tags and dirty locks right after shearing. These should be kept separate from the rest of the wool. Black wool also should be packed separately.

A great amount of carelessness is evident in handling fleeces after shearing. The tendency is to roll the fleece in any old way and tie it with anything from half-inch rope to barbed wire. The proper way to roll a fleece is to spread it out on the floor flesh side down, then fold in the legs and belly wool so that the fleece will be about two and one-half feet wide. Then start at the rear of the fleece and roll toward the head. The head and neck wool should be turned so that this part will be underneath the wool from the shoulder when rolling is complete. When the fleece is then tied it will show the flesh side and be very attractive. Rolling in this way brings the wool from the shoulder and side on the outside of the fleece. The wool from these parts is the best wool grown by the sheep.

In tying the fleece, either paper or glazed twine of moderate size should be used and not more than two strands put each way around the fleece. About seven or eight feet of twine is ample to tie the average fleece. These twines will not injure the fleece in any way. Certainly any one wishing to have a well prepared product will not use binder twine or pieces of rope or wire. The Boston Wool Trade association looks with disfavor on the use of the wool tying box as it gives the fleece a blocky, heavy appearance which is certainly not an advantage.

No suggestion looking to the improvement of wool marketing methods has so much to commend it as has the "wool pool" and it is certain in the long run to bring better prices for high quality wool—the kind every one should endeavor to produce. The wool growers of Illinois will do well to give the co-operative marketing of wool due consideration, according to Kammlade.

Our aim is to please you with Willard Batteries and Goodyear tires. Benj. Brown.—Adv. 10tf.

Jersey Show at Ellsworth

The second annual Jersey Show and picnic will be held in the Ellsworth park, June 29th, with 25 of the leading Jerseys in that section on exhibition and pitted against each other in the showing. On the same date the North Antrim Cow-test Association will have their picnic and program in the forenoon.

The "Jersey Day" is sponsered by the Antrim-Charlevoix Jersey Breeders Association, and comes as a result of the progress and development of the Ellsworth section as a Jersey center. The Ellsworth Chamber of Commerce is on the job every minute and are cooperating by furnishing ribbons to the prize winners, by transporting the cattle to and from Ellsworth and by furnishing coffee to the picnicers.

The following program will be presented:

10:00 a. m. Cow-test Association picnic. Talks by H. E. Dennison, Jersey Fieldman and by several members of the association.

12:00-1:30 Picnic dinner.

1:30 Address by H. E. Dennison on "The Future of the Jersey."

2:30 Judging and placing Jerseys.

3:30 Sale of several young registered sires.

It will be worth your time to see the kind of Jerseys that are being developed in this section, and learn how to select the best ones.

Take well-filled lunch baskets and enjoy the day. Go early and stay late. The sires are of excellent breeding and should be a big improvement for your herds. Don't miss this opportunity.

New System of Curing Alfalfa Sound

Announcement two or three years ago that quality alfalfa hay could be made by raking the hay in loose, fluffy windrows as soon as it was cut and handled from then on with modern machinery aroused a great deal of interest among Michigan farmers because of its promise of relief.

This method of handling alfalfa has been shown by the Michigan State College at thirty-eight demonstrations in the past two years, and the county agricultral agents are arranging for nearly thirty similar demonstrations during 1927. The method demonstrated has been put into wide practice all over the state, with very satisfying results. It involves the raking of the hay before it has had a chance to wilt in the swath. Raking against the heads with a left hand, side delivery rake turns a majority of the leaves toward the center of a loose, airy windrow and leaves the thick, juicy stems to the sunlight instead of at the bottom of the swath, while with hay in the swath the leaves are inclined to dry very rapidly and become brittle, the stems are ready to go into the barn the leaves are so brittle that they readily shatter and are lost.

By protecting the leaves and getting the stems into the sunlight, the two dry more nearly together and when the stems are dry enough to go into the barn the leaves, while somewhat dryer, are still tough enough to hang on.

Since 65 per cent of the food value of alfalfa is in its leaves, the importance of retaining them may well be appreciated.

Some misunderstanding of the new hay making system has crept in and occasionally an error is made by a farmer who believes hay can be cut in the morning, raked green and put into the barn the same day. Such a practice is wrong and does not give the hay time enough to dry out.

While the new system involves raking the hay immediately after it is cut, or within an hour or two where only one team is available, it does not mean the putting of wet hay into the barn. The green hay is cured in this windrow.

When the top half is dry, the windrow is loosened and turned with the side delivery rake. This turning, rather than destructive tedding, is repeated in case of rain and the hay is put into the barn only after it has dried to a point of safety.

Under Michigan conditions, hay cut at the proper stage is never ready to go into the barn the same day it is cut. Occasionally, under favorable weather conditions, it may be ready the second day, but usually it is in its best condition the third day, regardless of the system used.

The system will be demonstrated in this county July 7th, at 1:00 o'clock standard time, at the farm of Wm. Shepard one mile north of East Jordan. The entire public is cordially invited to attend and see for themselves how the hay is handled in this new system.

Good housing is essential to successful hog raising.

One should employ a veterinarian to vaccinate his hogs and adopt no half-way measures.

Carrots are beneficial and next to them in point of utility for mares come parsnips and then medium-sized rutabagas.

Keep the ram in good medium breeding condition. Do not allow him to run with the ewes in the pasture but keep him in a small pasture lot to himself during the day.

Have the pasture lot in which the ram stays fenced sufficiently high to keep dogs out. When the ewes come up at night turn them with the ram. He will single out those in heat at once.

Any ewe lambs which are saved over for replenishing the flock should be drenched three or four weeks with the bluestone treatment. This consists of a 1 per cent solution of bluestone mixed with water.

A ewe which has hearty twins year after year may well be excused some defects in wool. A "leader" of exceptional ability may well be kept to old age. An occasional extra heavy shearer of good type might be exempted from lamb raising.

• • •

A brood sow should have plenty of exercise during the winter months. The sow that keeps out of doors most of the time when the weather is good is much more likely to produce a strong litter than the sow that stays in the barn or shed.

Machinery in History

Civilization and progress are closely allied with the increased application of power, but engineers are inclined to believe that the prehistoric builders were not without mechanical devices. It seems almost impossible that those massive blocks of stone which face the pyramids could have been placed entirely by hand.

A BIG MILK FLOOD COMING

1,082,000 GALLONS WITHIN NEXT THIRTY DAYS

Three Times as Much Milk is Produced in the Summer as in the Winter

A flood of nearly 1,082,000 gallons of milk is due on Charlevoix county farms during the next 150 days, according to an estimate made by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. About two-thirds will be consumed within 48 hours after it is produced. But fully 360,000 gallons will be separated, converted into cream, held for four or five days perhaps, then marketed as butterfat. It is the handling of this last third of the production in warm weather that largely determines the farmer's yearly profit from his cows.

Three times as much milk is produced in summer as in winter, just at the time when it is most difficult to care for milk products properly. Cleanliness and low temperature are the secrets of producing high quality products. One of the big factors in the price paid for cream is its quality. Progressive farmers are increasing their incomes by taking advantage of the new system of handling milk products recommended by the agricultural colleges.

Absolute cleanliness and cold water are the basis of college methods. Prof. E. H. Farrington of the University of Wisconsin, one of America's greatest agricultural instructors, explains the procedure of making sweet cream in substance, as follows: After each skimming, take the separator bowl and tinware apart immediately, wash with cold water, then wash with hot water, a brush and washing powder, finally scalding them with boiling water or steam so that wiping will be unnecessary.

Cool the cream as it comes from the separator or immediately after, and keep it below 60 degrees.

In the absence of ice or a running spring, a cooling tank can be arranged by placing a covered barrel or tub, large enough to hold two cans, between a pump and a watering trough. The smaller of the two cans should be used to hold the warm cream until it is thoroughly cooled down, then it can be added to the cold cream in the larger can. Never mix warm and cold cream. By following these directions, the average farmer with home-made equipment can market, if not always a sweet product, at least always a high quality product that will fetch high prices.

COMMUNICATION

(Road letter from Uncle Geo. H. Van Pelt to the four newspapers in Charlevoix county. Because it is to these four papers that we are indebted for the concrete (12½ miles on the Dixie Highway) roads we have in the county. We should have had more but let us be thankful for what we have. Then work for more.)

In opening up my memory box of twelve to fifteen years ago I find many memos in your papers regarding good concrete roads, and through the influence your articles had on the taxpayers our county raised $350,000.00 with which to build good roads. Then in another memo I find that you dispensed it in the following manner: East Jordan, Boyne City and Charlevoix, each $100,000.00 and Boyne Falls $50,000.00. Let me ask every taxpayer to stop long enough to ask him or herself this question. What has East Jordan, what has Boyne City, and ask Charlevoix, what has she to show for her share. I will answer for the latter. 12½ miles of concrete road with say $25,000.00 per mile. Three hundred and twenty thousand, or within $30,000.00 of all that we bonded for.

Last year a taxi man wanted to charge me $10.00 to take me to Boyne City. I refused because I was going for the purpose of making it easier for all who drive cars. A local man heard of it who gladly and gratuitously took me free. We had a good time. I was then told that the old road to Boyne City was so bad that we could not use it and we went by the ferry. This answers what Boyne City did with the $100,000.00, and East Jordan can answer for itself, but we are now working to have a route 66 come from Mancelona to Charlevoix via their town.

In order to divert thought and observation from the dirty, black, oily, soft stuff, slidy chuck hole roads, an interest must be forced upon taxpayers, mostly by calling their attention to the advantages and saving of tax money by building concrete roads. This can be done by showing concrete roads which have been built fifteen years and which are as good today as the day they were built, while on the same stretch of road you find the other types which have had a sufficient amount of money spent on repairing and rebuilding to have built a concrete road but which are in such deplorable condition that many times it is dangerous to drive over it.

We are indebted to the four newspapers in this county for this road. They have had a hand in it. Some more and some less. There is without any contradiction a necessity for a great change of thought in our county road work. We have unloaded a lot of our county road work on the state, so have all other counties, but the tax comes out of us all the same. The state road tax has to be paid just the same as the county. Well you say the government paid 50 per cent of the 12½ miles of concrete road to Petoskey, so they did, but we all have the government tax to pay just the same.

I am herewith sending a copy of my Christmas card sent to many of you in 1916, and a few remarks concerning same for 1927, ten years later, just to show what we have been doing the last ten years.

We must remember that thought or mind, or both combined, is the cause or causation of everything we do, be it good or bad, profitable or unprofitable. Hence the necessity for good and right thinking and for excluding all wrong or bad thinking, for thought is action, before it is acted. Each and everyone has a full orbed valve opening into our real consciousness which is always on the top. It is for you to open or close and you make yourself what you are by doing so. It is important now that it should be opened, because for years we have been going on in the same old rut in our expensive and non-paying road work. I have tried to illustrate or rather to go over what we all know is true, and which everyone can go and see for himself.

ROAD BUILDING

ENGINEERS AIDED BY SOIL EXPERTS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Knowledge of the properties, constituents, and behavior of different types of soil has not only an agricultural bearing but is of great importance to the highway engineer. Hence it often becomes necessary for the specialists of the bureau of soils of the United States Department of Agriculture to co-operate with those of the bureau of public roads in investigations in localities having peculiar soil conditions to throw light on problems in highway engineering.

It has been shown, for instance, that the clay soils in the eastern part of Texas and in the Piedmont region possess the properties indicated by a low ratio of silica to iron plus alumina, and are probably the best to meet the requirements of good highway subgrade material. In southeastern Ohio, again, it was found that hillside slipping of masses of soil and subsoil material in the extensive area of Upshur soils of that region had completely demolished sections of recently laid concrete roads. Similar destructive sliding connected with this type of soil has occurred in southwestern Pennsylvania. The program seems to be one that will require serious attention from highway engineers. Another example of the co-operation between soil and road experts is the Black Waxy belt of Texas, where, in the opinion of the soil expert, the black clay of the region is not the best material upon which to lay hard surfacing. It tends to swell and shrink according to extremes of moisture. Other available road material is advised for use in the subgrade.

Improved Highways Are Big Aid to the Farmer

Much has been written regarding the value of good roads to the farmer. Tax authorities have made elaborate statements as to cost of state highways to the ruralist and the advantages he gains in living adjacent to good roads. But these were mostly estimates with frail foundations and it was not until just recently that definite figures could be secured to prove the claims. And in this the newly developed roadside market appears to be the greatest contribution.

We are told that farm produce to the value of more than $2,110,000 a month is now sold direct to motorists from roadside booths and counters in the rural districts of the United States. This new market which lends itself extremely well to the disposal of second-grade products, or fruits and vegetables too ripe for distant shipping, has grown to an unusual business of $25,000,000 for the farmers fortunate enough to live along popular highways. This figure, it is stated, includes only the produce purchased direct from the small truck growers. The sale of fresh eggs, milk and butter to urban residents who drive to the farm, it is felt, would easily bring the figure to approximately $50,000,000 annually.

Indiana, it is claimed, possesses more miles of improved roads than any state in the Union. For this we are grateful, for good roads carry many benefits to the farmer, and when the costs can be justly distributed, Indiana agriculture is highly in favor of keeping up our reputation as a good-roads state.—Indiana Farmer's Guide.

WINTER WEATHER SOFTENS SURFACE

Nearly every one has noticed how much softer a road surface is in the spring than it is in the fall or summer.

In many cases gravel-surfaced roads are softened to such an extent that the wheels of the traffic passing over the road cut through the gravel and into the clay soil below. Much of the gravel is pounded down into the clay and the clay in turn comes to the surface of the road. It only requires a few repetitions of this to do away with the fine riding qualities of a gravel-surfaced road. The clay soon predominates and during wet weather the road surface is sticky and tends to be slippery rather than possessing the qualities of gravel.

Years ago it was thought that a certain road could not be successfully graveled because the gravel would sink down through the clay. It had been graveled a time or two and the gravel always disappeared. The trouble was that the layer of gravel placed upon the road was too thin, and when wet, spring weather came, the wheels cut through the gravel crust on top of the clay and forced the gravel into the clay. This same road has now been successfully graveled for years and the only thing necessary was to put on a sufficient thickness of gravel to sustain the weight of the traffic.

If one will consider what takes place during the winter when freezing weather comes, it is easy to see why roads are softer in the spring. If the fall is wet the gravel freezes when considerable moisture is present. This water turning to ice expands, forces the soil particles apart, and when this ice melts in the spring the particles are not compact as they had been, but are left loose because of the so-called "heaving" of the road due to freezing. This expanding effect of the frozen moisture extends as deep as the frost line, which, in this latitude, is about two and one-half feet in an ordinary winter. When the roads thaw in the spring, therefore, the soil particles are loose and must again be compacted by the action of hoof and wheel.—E. B. House, Professor of Civil and Irrigation Engineering, Colorado Agricultural College.

Highway Vision Blocked by Ungodly Billboards

Preservation of the beauty of the countryside may be an important argument against the billboards that line the highways. But just as strenuous an argument is their danger to motorists.

Even those signs that display a picture with just a phrase or so threaten an accident when they are placed at corners to hide approaching automobiles from view.

But the greater danger lies in the long-winded billboards that some advertisers seem to think are better sales salesmen than their more or less silent brethren. What actually happens is that either they're not read at all by the fast-passing motorist, or he drives unwarily into an accident.

Telling the history of an approaching town, or even flaunting a verse of the Scripture in the face of Sabbath desecrating motorists, may be considered beneficial and a mental stimulus, but they're no help to the motorist if he strikes the curve at which they're placed at a 40-mile-an-hour gait, or runs pell-mell into a post.

Curves or crossings are wonderfully attractive locations for billboards from an advertising viewpoint, but highly calamitous from the motoring angle.

For safety, therefore, even more than beauty, lining the roads with billboards should be restricted.

Giant Road Improvement Plans for the Future

The nation's road program for the last four years should result in the improvement to some degree, of about 60,000 miles of highways before 1930, according to T. H. McDonald, chief of the United States road bureau. These figures are based on accomplishments by national, state and local departments in the past. The annual expenditure will average well over $1,000,000,000.

"The American Road Builders' association has given new incentive to the building of good roads and it is very probable that reports at the 1927 convention of that organization will show much progress in actual construction," he added. "The government encouragement to road construction is evidenced by the continuation of the $75,000,000 annual appropriation for 1927 and the consideration given a bill authorizing this federal aid expenditure for 1928 and 1929."

Reduce Accident Toll

The increasing number of accidents to tourists at highway grade crossings has led to the adoption of a policy looking to the elimination of such dangerous crossings wherever practicable on federal aid roads. The policy, which has met with the general support of the states, is that all existing grade crossings on the federal aid highway system shall be classified and the improvements shall be carried out as rapidly as practicable. The railroads also have agreed to this policy.

The Indians are said to have been the first chemists in America. They had wonderful methods of making flint arrow heads, spears and knives by using a piece of bone scoured or soaked in ashes and water. They tanned hides, made glue from fish scales, waterproofed canoe seams with pitch, tempered clay for pottery and dyed clothing.

Cinema Satan Modern Worldly Sophisticate

Satan was first represented in human form during the ninth century. This curious fact was recently brought to light by the Paramount Long Island Studio's Research Department.

The representation was on an ivory diptych of the time of Charles the Bold.

It was necessary to collect a mass of data and paintings so that D. W. Griffith could have something with which to work when production began on his version of Marie Corelli's book "Sorrows of Satan," which comes to the Palace on Thursday.

In his treatment of the story, Mr. Griffith follows Miss Corelli's conception of Satan. He is pictured as a polished man of the world, tempting those with whom he associates. But—in order to introduce Satan and make his motives clear it has been found necessary to go back to the legend of Lucifer's expulsion from Heaven.

"Soundings" the A. Hamilton Gibbs novel, has been translated into cinema terms by Julien Josephson. It reaches the Palace next Friday, July 1st. "The Whirlwind of Youth." Josephson's scenario was handled by Director Rowland V. Lee. Lois Moran, the sensation of "Stella Dallas" and "Padlocked" is starred as Nancy, a young unsophisticate who suddenly finds herself thrust into the whirlpool of life. Donald Keith, Vera Voronina and Ace Mills have featured roles.

FORMER RESIDENT DIED IN DETROIT

Deceased Was One of Charlevoix's Pioneer Settlers

Charlevoix was saddened last Saturday by the death of another of its pioneers, Mrs. Louis Mercier, who passed away at her home in Detroit, where she suffered a stroke of paralysis brought on by an earlier illness of pneumonia.

Sarah Weaver was born in Washington Island, Wisconsin, August 8, 1856. She came to Charlevoix in 1881, establishing a home and enduring the hardships of pioneer days, and made her residence here continuously until 1918, when she moved with her husband to Detroit. Deceased had been in failing health for a number of years, but during that time she was patient, kind and thoughtful to others. She was a loving wife and mother and will be sadly missed by a large circle of friends and neighbors.

In passing, Mrs. Mercier leaves her husband, two daughters, Mrs. George Myler of Detroit and Mrs. Ray Faulkner of Charlevoix; one son, Edward O'Neil of this city; a brother, George Weaver; eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The body was brought from Detroit to the home of her son, Edward O'Neil and funeral services were held at 10 o'clock Tuesday forenoon from St. Mary's church. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

WILL SEEK OPINIONS ON ALL GAME LAWS

Conservation Workers Interviewing Taxpayers of North

The department of conservation representatives started late last week to interview prominent sportsmen, farmers and just plain citizens as to their desires concerning game protection, changes in the season of game taking, etc.

One question asked is whether or not the spike horn deer should be protected, by permitting the shooting of full antlered deer only. Another is whether or not the closed season on black and grey squirrel should be continued. It expires October. 25, 1927, under the present closing order. Another thing on which the department wants the opinion of taxpayers is on the rabbit season. The present season in this section is October 25 to January 21, both inclusive. It is proposed to change this to October 25 to December 25. The muskrat season is also up for consideration. Some would have it closed until November 15, 1928.

Taxpayers are asked to address their communications to the department of conservation secretary, and not to the individual county deputies who are doing the interviewing.

POPULAR LOCAL GIRL MARRIED ON TUESDAY

Miss Jean Swinton Becomes Bride of Mr. Eugene Wulfman

The wedding of Miss Jean Swinton of this city and Mr. Eugene Wulfman of Mt. Clemens, Michigan, took place at the family home on Michigan avenue at eleven-thirty on Tuesday morning, June 21st, only the immediate relatives and a few close friends being present.

The guests from out of town were the Rev. Jacob Wulfman, father of the groom, who performed the ceremony, and the Misses Dorothy and Gertrude Wulfman, sisters of the groom, all from Mt. Clemens; also Miss Julia Supernaw and Mr. Hugh Dicken of East Jordan. The bride's sister, Miss Margie Swinton, was maid of honor and Donald Swinton accompanied the groom as best man.

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served and the happy pair left in the afternoon for a short trip, to terminate at their new home in Mt. Clemens. The Courier joins other Charlevoix friends in extending their congratulations.

DOES THIS KIND OF PUBLICITY HELP MICHIGAN?

Why will Michigan newspapers continue publishing vampings of some crazy weather guesser, giving columns of space to what is invariably damaging and gloomy forebodings? One of Detroit's big daily papers gave two columns of its valuable space on last Sunday to an article predicting everything of a gloomy, depressing nature, the stuff eminating from a person as well qualified to judge what the weather will be tomorrow as the looniest loony boarding at the Traverse City asylum. Then we pick up the Newberry News, an ordinary level headed paper, and the second article, a column in length is devoted to another bunch of stuff from some fellow successfully foisting himself upon a curious and gullable public. Any man that attempts to tell one what the weather is going to be tomorrow or a year from tomorrow is a rank pretender and the American mind ought to be intelligent enough by this time to realize that. Believing or taking stock in these weather predicters is not a whit better than the witchcraft days. These predictions don't do anyone any good and they stimulate and create a spirit of disatisfaction, gloom and depression. If they would predict pleasant things and pleasant weather the public mind would take hope and courage and the infection would be beneficial, but tha persistent dwelling upon the drab inclines us to take a drab view of business, of life and of everything around us. We advise giving these weather wizards the air, unless they predict only good weather.—Cheboygan Democrat.

BEAVER ISLAND DEER ARE HERE

TWO BUCK FAWNS PROCURED IN NEWBERRY DISTRICT

Doe Fawns Will Arrive From Manistique This Week—All Will Be Seot to Island

Plans of the Beaver Island Game and Fish Protective association to stock the island with deer have definitely taken shape by the arrival here Sunday of two fawns, which will be transferred to the Beavers in a short time.

The fawns, both bucks three years old, were procurred at Newberry from Julius Thorson, district game warden in that territory, who found them in the woods deserted by the mother deer. They were brought to Charlevoix Sunday by district game warden, Ed. Deuel, Sheriff Dave Vaughn and Joe Cooper, who drove into the upper peninsula Saturday, returning Sunday. It is planned to keep them in an enclosure on the court house grounds until they are old enough to care for themselves. Two other doe fawns have been located at Manistique, Michigan, and they will probably be brought here the latter part of this week.

We understand it is not the intention of those on Beaver Island who instigated the project to stock the island with deer and later open a shooting season on them. They want them as an attraction—something out of the ordinary that will interest tourists and draw people to the Island. What an excellent idea.

Speaking about an attraction. Hundreds of people have gone to the court yard each day since the two fawns were brought here to see them. And, this brings to mind the question—why couldn't Charlevoix have a deer in her city park? The place is ideal and the deer can easily be procured. Hundreds of fawns, known as pick-ups, are found each year by game wardens on their patrols. They may be had for the asking.

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE MARRIED

Ceremony Performed Last Saturday at Fisherman's Paradise

A sociable event of considerable interest to Charlevoix people occurred at Fisherman's Paradise last Saturday afternoon at 6:00 o'clock, when Miss Doris Hammond and W. King Saunders were united in marriage by Rev. Earl M. Mumby, pastor of Methodist church at Bellaire.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a party of eight intimate friends of the young couple, who were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hamilton as bride's maid and best man. Following a wedding dinner, members of the bridal party spent the week end in a cottage at Fisherman's Paradise.

Mr. and Mrs. Saunders are both very popular members of Charlevoix's younger social set and have a large following of friends, who join in extending their congratulations.

Come to the Barnard church on Friday evening, July 1st, to the concert given by Rev. Conklin and family. Strawberries and cream will be served. Everybody welcome.—Adv. 26-t1.

INFORM TOURISTS ABOUT SIDE TRIPS

MAKE THEIR STAY WITH US A GREATER PLEASURE

Let Them Know the Vastness and Beauties of Our Resort Country Says C. V. Smazel

West Michigan resort hotels and lodges should be prepared to give their guests information on interesting motor trips out of their places that will make them acquainted with the variety and vastness of our resort country, give them greater pleasure on their vacations and keep them longer with us because of the greater interest, Clarence V. Smazel, executive secretary of the Development League of Western Michigan urges.

"Recently while at one of the finest and most progressive lodges in West Michigan, I discovered the editor of an outdoor magazine who had been coming there for years, but knew very little of the interesting things in the country about him." Mr. Smazel said. "He was so well pleased with things as he found them there it never occurred to him that new delights of the eye, at least, awaited him within a few miles."

"That man was a staunch friend of the place he came back to year after year, the community and the region. But he might be turned into an enthusiastic admirer who will go back home and rave about this vacationland to his friends! That man knows the silent, barren beauty of green sodded and forested hills and valleys blue in the haze of sunset as one travels M-66 north of Pioneer. But he had never taken the county road from Mancelona to East Jordan to see there the rugged, timbered and dashing creeks that makes the Jordan river; he had never looked across the waters of Walloon Lake to the point with its summer homes and forests climbing the sides of the rise back from the lake; he had never felt the magnificence of Lake Michigan standing on the great bluff that runs along for miles north of Harbor Springs. These and dozens of other things in dozens of other neighboring communities would delight this man and his family, as they would thousands of others who come to West Michigan every year and never see them."

"No individual business or community would lose anything through exploiting the beauties of other communities on motor trips," in the opinion of Mr. Smazel, "but all would derive greater immediate benefits by keeping vacationers interested a few days longer and greater future returns for the service thus rendered in finding for the people who come into this great recreational country new pleasures and greater happiness."

The Development League's secretary is himself a most enthusiastic admirer of West Michigan's out-of-doors and is prepared to give communities, hotels and lodges whatever aid he can in finding in each community the most interesting drives and views.

LOCALS LOSE OPENING GAME

WANT MORE LOCAL SUPPORT FOR HOME TEAM

W. G. Parker, John Knight and Herbert Campbell Lead in Tennis Club Open Tournament

The Charlevoix baseball team went down to defeat in the first game of the season last Sunday against a combined team of Central Lake and Bellaire players.

The game was fast and exceedingly close. Charlevoix was handicapped by the lack of a good pitcher. Tuskeloe, Amos and McRoberts were all given a trial, and the latter proved the most effective despite his lack of control. Clare Cartier and "Red" McCann shared the batting honors for Charlevoix. Each played an errorless game in the field, garnering two hits. The latter accepting ten chances. Warren Shields got a beautiful hit over the left fielder's head for the only extra base hit.

Butler of Bellaire, and Mathers of Central Lake starred for the winning team. Charlevoix plays a return game with Central Lake on Sunday, July 3rd, at the north side diamond.

In order to have a team which will represent the home town best, the local aggregation must have more support than was displayed at Central Lake last Sunday. The home nine could be strengthened greatly, if more men would come out for the team. Anyone interested should communicate with John Knight, telephone 260.

The Charlevoix Tennis Club's open tournament is progressing nicely on The Inn courts, which have been put in splendid shape by Cy Marshall.

The men's and boys' classes filled nicely, and some clever tennis has been shown. W. G. Parker, playing with a proper short grip after 30 years of wrong style, is hitting 'em well for a youngster.

Herbert Campbell has shown the best tennis of the boys. He beat Edward Loeb in a close and exciting match. He has reached the finals and will meet the winners of the Joe Smith-Thomas Loeb match.

John Knight has shown about the best form on the lower half of the men's event, and probably will meet Parker in the finals.

CARTIER WILL HEAD TOURNAMENT AGAIN

Will Be Here For West Michigan Event in August

Highly enlivening news comes from New York in the shape of an announcement from Harold A. Cartier stating that he will arrive in Charlevoix about August 1st on his annual vacation. He will remain here until the Western Michigan tennis tournament has been completed.

The local tennis club is to be congratulated on its good fortune in again having the hustling tournament manager at the helm. He will be ably assisted by G. L. Ash, and members of the local fraternity. However, the problem of securing high class players will fall directly on Cartier's shoulders. He has already take over the correspondence.

BEAVER ISLAND LIGHT IS CHANGED

Former Oil Light Chaoged Over to Acetylene Burner

The month of June has witnessed a great change in the Beaver Island harbor light house, as the light has been changed to an unattended acetylene light.

At the same time the keeper, Ernest E. Winter, who has been keeping light for 30 years, will be retired from active service, and he will also celebrate his 70th birthday anniversary.

Mr. Winter has been a faithful lightkeeper, never lost a day from a station during all these years, and as a reward for his faithfulness has been appointed custodian at the point. He is one of the first keepers to receive the efficiency star, and never has lost it during his service.

Mr. Winter has two daughters, both born in the light house, Mrs. Frank Rydlewicz, who lives in a lighthouse at St. Martins Island, and Mrs. John Quinlan of the Beaver Island Coast Guard Service.

CHEBOYGAN GIRL AND BOY KILLED

DIED AS CAR TURNED OVER NEAR ELK RAPIDS FRIDAY

Relatives On Way to Funeral Injured in Accident South of City Sunday Morning

Ruby Cunningham and her brother, Ernest, were killed last Friday in an automobile accident at Jackson corners, four miles south of Elk Rapids. Charles P. Ferlingham, to whom Ruby was engaged to be married, was injured seriously.

The trio were pinned beneath Ferlingham's roadster, which left the road on a curve and rolled over. Ernest was killed instantly, but Ruby lived for some time and shrieked for help with her fiancee powerless to help her. The lovers talked of death for about an hour as they lay beneath the machine unable to extricate themselves, Ferlingham said.

Both boys were members of the U S. coast guard service and were on their way home to Cheboygan from Traverse City, where they had been visiting.

The Bodies of Miss Cunningham, who was about 18, and her brother, slightly older, were taken to Traverse City and later to Cheboygan. Ferlingham was taken to Elk Rapids for medical treatment.

Coincident to the accident claiming the lives of Ruby and Ernest Cunningham last Friday, was the auto smash which occurred at about 8:00 o'clock Sunday morning on M-11 near the McGeagh school house.

The occupants of the car, Burton Harris, Florence Reinhart and an unknown man, all of Traverse City, were relatives of the Cunninghams and were on their way to the funeral services for the unfortunate couple in Cheboygan when the accident happened.

We understand that Harris, who was driving a Ford roadster, handed some object to Miss Reinhart, and while doing so took his eyes off the road with the result that the car careened off the highway into a tree. All three were brought to the Charlevoix hospital, where it was found that Harris had sustained a fractured skull. His injuries were not serious, however, and he left Tuesday for his home. The other two occupants were only slightly injured.

HOTEL ALHAMBRA OPENED LAST WEEK

Mrs. H. P. Hansen Will be Manager Again This Season

The Hotel Alhambra, owned by Salem Mussalem of St. Augustine, Floridn, opened for the season last week with Mrs. Hansen as manager.

This popular hotel's advertising of its location and beautiful view of Lake Michigan and Round Lake is well justified if one would take the time to investigate. Its bedrooms are exceptionally well outfitted with comfortable beds and each room has hot and cold running water.

Mrs. Hansen, as manager, puts forth a special effort to make the hotel homey and comfortable. She reports excellent prospects for a good season.

NEW CAR FERRY IN PORT TUESDAY

CARRIED HIGH OFFICIALS OF WABASH AND A. A. RY.

Was on Maiden Trip From Toledo Ship Yards—Last Word in Modern Ship Construction

Negotiating the turn in Round Lake as gracefully as a small yacht, the Wabash Railway company's new steel car ferry, Wabash, entered the harbor Tuesday afternoon on her maiden trip.

The new boat, the sixth of a fleet of modern steel steamships operated by the Ann Arbor Railroad to carry automobiles and passengers between Frankfort, Manistique, Menominee, Manitowoc and Kewaunee, was built in Toledo, Ohio, by the Toledo Ship Building Company. She was designed, powered and equipped from plans by R. H. Reynold, a former steamboat inspector, who is very well known in Charlevoix marine circles. After being launched March 19, the boat was outfitted and began her maiden trip last Saturday, making stops at Menominee, Manitowoc, Mackinac Island and Charlevoix.

Dimensions of the ship are 380 feet over all, 57 foot 6 inch beam, 21 foot 6 inch depth of hold. Four Scotch boilers, each furnishing 185 pounds of steam to a pair of triple expansion engines developing 1500 h. p. apiece. The vessel has a capacity of thirty 42-foot cars and will make 15 miles an hour. She is equipped with automatic motor driven deck machinery and has every modern device necessary in navigation. The boat was primarily built to carry railroad cars from point to point but is equipped with comfortable, modern passenger accommodations including 12 staterooms and four parlors with bath, lavatories and toilet, dining room, radio and all other conveniences for the safety and comfort of travelers. B. F. Taussig of Frankfort, who is well known in Charlevoix, is captain of the ship, with O. T. Larson, also of Frankfort, as chief engineer.

A number of high officials of the Wabash and Ann Arbor railroads were passengers on the boat's maiden trip including J. E. Taussig, president of the Wabash and Ann Arbor; J. W. Newell, vice president of the Wabash and Ann Arbor, and wife; S. E. Cotter, vice president and general manager of the Wabash; G. H. Sido, general manager of the Ann Arbor; V. Parvin, superintendent of the Ann Arbor; M. E. Burnet, advertising manager of the Wabash; H. T. Sutter, chief steward of the Ann Arbor, and T. M. Hayes, secretary to Mr. Taussig. A number of guests, well known members of the Belvedere resort colony were on the boat's maiden trip and left the ship here to spend the summer. They were Mr. and Mrs. George Trammel of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Leland, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Garneau and Mr. and Mrs. R. Vernon Clark, all of St. Louis, Mo.

MORE TROUBLE FOR CHARLEVOIX MAN

State Conservation Dept. Plans to Make Him Pay

A Lansing dispatch says that upon request of the state conservation department, Assistant Attorney General M. M. Larmonth has taken initial steps to reopen the case of J. J. Martin, a Beaver Island fisherman, convicted last year of possessing $1,000 worth of fish illegally caught.

Suit for recovery of $1,001 has been instituted against Martin, the conservation commission contending that since the fish were worth $1,000, and Martin returned in fines and costs a total of but $375, he allegedly made a total of $625 on the deal.

As we recall the case, Martin was first arrested, convicted and fined $75.00, with $104 costs and 20 days in jail. He appealed the case and at the May term of circuit was fined $75.00, with costs amounting to $300.00, which he paid. Now it appears he must settle with the state.

Comic Marital Complications

A woman lawyer becomes so interested in her profession that friend husband is left out in the cold. In an effort to win her back, he purposely hits another car, hoping to regain wife's love as a client. But—the pretty blond chauffeur of the other auto sits in the same boat as he. Her husband devotes all his time to sick patients. So—there you have the groundwork against which an ingenious little farce has been built "The World at Her Feet." The most unusual war drama ever filmed arrives at the Palace Theatre when Pola Negri's new Paramount starring vehicle, "Hotel Imperial," opens on Monday and Tuesday.

The overwhelming realization of war is present every moment, yet the drama is centered upon a small group of individuals, rather than sweeping battle fronts, with numberless soldiers fighting through the holocaust of conflict in confused masses. The battles that form the story's background are suggested rather than pictured. Swift moving glimpses are given, conveying an indelible impression of fighting hordes, paving the way for the drama itself which portrays the reactions of nations at war upon the individual human—their devastating effect upon mind, soul and physical conduct.

POULTRY

INFLUENCES ON VALUE OF EGGS

Eggs vary in size and color, but investigations show that healthy hens, fed normal rations, lay eggs that are consistently of good quality. However, there are many factors that influence the market value of eggs, most of which are within the control of the producer and dealer of eggs.

Eggs are not bought and sold by the pound, but the size of the eggs causes considerable difference in their value. "Extras" must weigh 46 pounds net per case of 30 dozen.

This is an average of slightly over two ounces per egg. "Extra firsts" must weigh 44 pounds per case. The proper selection of breeding stock is undoubtedly the biggest factor in securing eggs of good size, although the size is influenced to some extent by proper feeding.

Cleanliness has an important influence on the value of eggs. Dirty eggs deteriorate more rapidly than clean eggs, do not present as pleasant an appearance, are not fit for storage, and, therefore, do not sell for as high a price as eggs that are clean. Dirty eggs may be largely eliminated by providing plenty of clean nests which are well supplied with clean litter. On rainy days it may be helpful to keep the hens confined until 10 a. m., when most of the hens will be through laying for the day.

Some markets pay a premium for white eggs.—A few markets pay a premium for brown eggs. Dealers seldom pay a premium for eggs of one color, as compared with mixed colors. In shipping eggs, it is necessary to take this characteristic of the market into consideration. Uniformity of color is always appreciated and this is one of the advantages gained by improving the flock through the use of improved stock.

Eggs may be of the same size and color but vary considerably in market value. This is on account of the difference in quality of the interior. Most eggs are good when they are first laid, but different methods of handling influence the quality to a large extent. Therefore, the problem of handling eggs is important as well as proper management of the flock.

Singing Hen Not Happy as Many People Thought

Singing hens have long been thought to be happy when, in fact, she sings only when all is not well in poultrydom. Hens, like human beings, are almost all very temperamental.

The singing of a hen must not be confused with cackling. Biddy's song starts softly, proceeds without break for as long as breath will allow, and often ends in a high, nasal intonation.

If the hen finds no suitable place to lay, she sings; when all the nests are full and she can't find one, she sings. Song gives vent to her feelings if hunger is troubling her, or thirst. She sings in strange surroundings like the small boy sent on an errand in the dark. Worry and shyness also bring song. She tries by singing to make herself look brave and at home at times when her self-assurance has been shaken.

Poultrymen who want to keep their flocks in perfect contentment will keep them from singing.

Rations Fed to Layers Are Lacking in Protein

During recent experiments at the Nebraska Agricultural college, it was found that rations fed to laying hens were commonly lacking in some form of complete protein like meat meal, skim milk, tankage, dried buttermilk, or liquid buttermilk. An addition of six pounds of high-grade tankage to a typical corn-belt ration increased the egg production from 59 in the check pen to 183 eggs per hen in the tankage-fed lot. Skim milk or buttermilk, when available at all times, may take the place of meat meal or tankage in the mash mixture, but it is necessary that each hen consume about 110 pounds of milk in a year in order to get the equivalent protein furnished by six pounds of tankage.

Separate Breeding Pen

Many seem to have acquired the idea that keeping a separate breeding pen means a considerable expense and much extra labor for the farmer. This is not the case or if there are such cases it is unnecessary. Maintaining a breeding pen simply means that the best birds in the flock are selected and placed by themselves during the breeding season. The breeding pen furnishes eggs for hatching during the hatching season. This means that the chicks will be much improved.

Importance of Rooster

The male is as important in poultry as in dairying. Be sure that he is not of a good flock. It does not matter whether or not he is a cockerel, or an old cock, as long as he has a good physical make-up, plenty of fight, and fully matured. Males show a preference for certain hens, and there should be plenty of males in the flock. The number of females and males, and the relation between them, depends upon breed characteristic, size of flock and time of season.

OUR DAY OF INDEPENDENCE

On Monday, July fourth, we will celebrate the 150th anniversary of the birth of these United States of America. Perhaps, as never before in the history of this nation, has there been greater need for us to pause and take stock of those things for which as loyal American citizens we should be grateful. We are living in a land where individual citizenship has found its widest expression in the control of governmental affairs. Here we find greater opportunities than ever came to the people of any land for self- advancement. Our country today is ringing with the hum of a new prosperity, the greatest the world has ever known, and this coming national natal day will find us happy, contented and at peace with all the world. It will find us content in weaving our own destinies, willing to assume our full share of the world's burdens and responsibilities. Heretofore, with perhaps one possible exception, our only danger to national unity has been outside, but of late years there has been coming to those shores a merciless horde bent upon sowing the seeds of discontent, which if not stamped out will some day assume a growth beyond our power to control. This newspaper, in common with hundreds of other community newspapers in Michigan, has long been dedicated to the service of driving every semblance of radicalism out of this state. We have no place here for the teachings of the Red Soviet, and we call upon you as loyal American citizens to join us in this new spirit of Independence, this new declaration of freedom which our revolutionary fathers dreamed of in the days when Paul Revere rode out to warn his fellow countrymen of their danger—of the deys when Washington stood at Valley Forge and saw the blood-stained tracks of his followers in the driven snow; footprints that gave us the red and white in our flag of the free; a flag born under the blue skies of a new day and a new world.

HAZARDOUS OCCUPATION

A Peoria railroad man is in a hospital recovering from the effects of an accident. It was the first accident he has experienced since he started railroading fifteen years ago—and the accident happened while he was walking across the street! All of which suggests that railroad employment, which used to be hazardous, is now comparatively safe—at least it is safer than crossing some street intersections at certain rush hours.

The Burlington railroad in its report for the year on its benefit department say that while in 1906 the benefits amounted to 60 per cent. only .39 per cent was charged against accidents last year. The report also stated that deaths of employes by accident while off duty caused drafts on the funds in three times as many cases last year as in 1906. Of sixteen deaths of employes while off duty, ten were caused by traffic accidents.

The railroads have done more for public safety than any other industry. They started the "Safety First" campaigns which resulted in accident prevention on their own lines and in their own shops and which extended into most other industries. If the same efforts which the railroads made to prevent accidents were made by cities and states and motorists' organizations the traffic accidents would decrease at about the same ratio which the railroad accidents have decreased.—From the Peoria (Ill.) Star.

FORESIGHT AND HIGHWAYS

Our highway problem of today is not so much one of mileage as one of width. There are good sectional, intersectional and transcontinental roads, but those roads are not wide enough for the rapidly multiplying traffic. We have been building hard surface roads for decades, but now that we have them they are found to be inadequate for present-day traffic. The result is that we still have a national highway problem hardly less serious than when we were a country of dirt roads.

We can be charged with lack of foresight, but even now, when the need of wider highways is recognized, we continue to build roads of obsolete widths. Where the facts are known there can be no foresight lacking.

The real reason we have not built and are not building wider thoroughfares is that appropriations for the purpose have been limited and we have sought mileage rather than the fulfillment of future needs. It is natural for each generation to take care of itself before it thinks of the next generation. Our needs was for hard surface roads regardless of width. It is now one of wider roads.

A precedent is found in the former conflict between temporary improved highways and permanent surfaces. More miles of the temporary surfaces than of the permanent roads could be constructed for the same money, but after a year or two the temporary road had to be rebuilt. In its haste for improved mileage the public dissipated its common wealth in the destruction of the temporary highways until it learned, at great expense, that the permanent road was the cheapest in the end.

The public may eventually learn that it would be better to build a few miles of broad highway than many miles of narrow road which must be widened later at greater expense.

FORESTS AND GAME

When the Indians roamed North America there was plenty of game, and no matter how thickly they would congregate in one spot there never was a shortage of game or fish. This situation was noticeable in any country that is populated by savages, and despite the fact that they depend almost entirely on wild animals and fish as their food supply, consuming many times the per capita the amount of game that the white man does, there is always a bountiful supply left for the future. The reason for this seems to lie in the fact that the savage does not destroy the home of the wild animals that becomes his food supply—the forest. He may take fish in large numbers from the streams and yet there is always plenty left because he does not contaminate the waters. He may kill deer and other game in large numbers and yet there are always plenty left, because he does not destroy their woodland home. The Indians all wore furs and lined their homes with them, and yet the fur bearing animals were plentiful until the white man came. The Indian, however, left the forests intact. He set no destructive fires that would destroy the wild life of the region in which he lived. He built no dams to flood the country. He killed only what he needed and left the rest. The main thing, however, in the Indian's code of conservation was to leave the forests, the natural breeding grounds of wild game and birds. If the white man will now take steps to preserve what forests are left and to reforest waste areas, wild life will soon be on the increase again. The excuse given for the extinction of certain species of animals and birds that were once plentiful in the United States is that they could not stand civilization. The truth is that they became extinct because the white man violated some law vital to their existence.

BETTER UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN INDUSTRY AND AGRICULTURE

Let us again bring to your mind the work of the national movement which is designed to bring about more equitable methods of taxation throughout the country. Agricultural and industrial organizations in twenty-five states pledged their co-operation in carrying out a plan to bring "mass" action to bear on state and local tax problems, at the semi-annual meeting of the National Industrial Council held at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City. The action was the result of joint efforts by the council and the national movement. "Better Understanding Between Industry and Agriculture," to find some common ground on which intra-state groups could work in harmonious co-operation in such important matters as state and local administrative methods and taxation. A national survey of conditions recently conducted by the movement showed that, in practically all of the states there is a widespread and insistent demand for relief from the tax burden. In less than ten states is there any satisfactory form of consentrated action. Notably among those states accomplishing results are: Ohio, Utah, Wisconsin and Maine. The survey also developed the fact that although there were taxpayers associations in twenty-six states there seems to be little or no effort to work with other state groups rather than with individuals. It was this failure to use "mass" cooperation in scrutinizing state expenditures and tax methods which caused the Council and the movement to study the policy successfully employed in the states just mentioned. The executive committee of the movement "Better Understanding Between Industry and Agriculture," consisting of John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, as chairman; L. J. Taber, Master of the National Grange; William H. Barr, president of the National Founders Association; and Sam H. Thompson, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation began a systematic effort to encourage the formation of a preliminary central committee in each state to consist of the state grange master, the state farm bureau president, and the officials of the state industrial association. This preliminary state committee representing the two largest groups, the farmers and the manufacturers, will invite the cooperation of other intra-state groups such as chambers of commerce, real estate associations, citizens associations, transportation associations, etc., in concerted efforts to establish and enforce budgets, and the control of state and municipal debts.

BAY VIEW SONG WEEK FEATURE

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE OF ALL COMING EVENTS

Opera "Golden Legend" Will Be Presented—Choral Singing and Other Musical Features

One of the most interesting features in years of the Bay View program is to be the presentation on August 19, 1927, during the annual music festival of Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Golden Legend." This great English composer is popularly known as the collaborator with W. S. Gilbert in many delightful light operas, but his real greatness lay in the serious music which he wrote. Some of the greatest church music of the nineteenth century is from the pen of Sir Arthur Sullivan, and the "Golden Legend" is among the finest of these.

An oratorio is an opera sung in concert form and "The Golden Legend" lacks only the stage setting and stage business to make it a full dramatic presentation such as is seen and heard in the great opera houses of the world.

"It is such opportunities for choral singing as this that has caused communities to build up such as the Bethlehem Festival, the Cincinnati May Festival, the Portland (Maine) Festival, the Worcester Festival and many others equally well known," says Dean Reddick. "In all of these cities this musical movement has brought thousands of visitors annually, and has done more to establish culture centers than any other form of artistic endeavor. And, as the center of culture, like everything else, is making westward, Northern Michigan has as much of an opportunity as any other community in becoming that center. More so, because of its summer chautauqua and its music. Of course that requires the whole-hearted co-operation of all the people, overlooking all petty, selfish interests and working together for the common good. Tremendous things are possible here and who knows but what our community may some day be known and patronized both summer and winter for its musical advantages. It is not an idle dream any more than the fact than in fifty years Chicago will be the financial center of the world is an idle dream. And if that is true as all signs indicate, then in one hundred years it will be the artistic center of the world."

LEGION TO OPEN FRESH AIR CAMP

Will Be Ready July 1st At Otter Lake

The American Legion has again cut a lot of Red Tape, the bug-a-boo of all service men. In laying the plans for the Fresh Air Camp to be established at Otter Lake this summer, the men in charge have cut the strings to the minimum and Red Tape to almost nothing. According to a statement made by John F. Roehl, Department Child Welfare Chairman, all that will be necessary to get children to the camp will be a physician's statement that the applicant is undernourished or a TB. contact and that the parent is a member of the Legion in good standing or a service man or that the parents of the child are dead. The latter statement must be made by the adjutant of the post and OK'd by the Department Adjutant.

The age limit of the children who are taken at the camp this year has been set from six to twelve years. For obvious reasons these age limits have been set and except in extreme cases, the age limits cannot be changed or children taken who are older or younger.

Extensive plansn reb cing laidf or the care of the children at the lake. All of the present facilities now available at the Billet will he used. Cottage number one and the building formerly used as the nursery will be used and the big pavilion on the hill is also being put into shape for the coming of the children.

James J. Davidson, superintendent of the Billet, will have direct charge of the activities of the camp aad additional supervisors and directors of play and activities are being marshalled as rapidly as possible.

The number of children at the camp will be limited to 50 according to present plans but this number may be incrensed as the summer progresses and the facilities increase. The camp will he open July first.

It is expected that the beautiful spot in northern Michigan where the air is wonderful, will be a most popular place during the summer and each Post and Unit in the state should take advantage of the opportunity to send the children in their comnuaities to the camp.

I have combined my battery and tire repair shop aad will give all car owners the service that they are looking for. Benj. Brown.—Adv. 10tf.

SAVING MADE BY BALANCED RATION

Balancing up the ration which he was feeding to his cows made a difference of $40.46 a month to one Moultrie county, Illinois, dairyman whose case is cited by dairymen at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, as evidence that it pays to make sure that dairy cows are getting the right kinds and amounts of feeds. When this dairyman entered his eight Jersey cows in the County Dairy Herd Improvement association he was feeding every cow equal parts of a ration consisting of two parts ground corn and one part ground oats supplemented with alfalfa hay and corn silage. The production for the first month the cows were in the association was 2,494 pounds of milk containing 113 pounds of butterfat worth $50.42. The feed which the cows ate was worth $65.96, which meant a loss of $15.54 without considering any expense other than feed.

Upon the advice of P. J. Smith, tester in the County Herd Improvement association, this member added one-half part of soy bean meal to the ration he had been feeding and cut down the amount of grain and silage to a little more than one-half what it had been. The next month the feed bill on his cows was $43.10, a saving of $22.80 compared to the previous month. Furthermore, on the balanced ration, the same eight cows increased their production to 3,507 pounds of milk containing 171 pounds butterfat worth $7.08 or $23.60 more than the previous month. This increased value of the butterfat and the $22.80 saving in feed costs made a total improvement of $46.46.

Another member of the same association fed his cows $22.84 worth of clover hay, corn, oats, bran and oil meal during one month and got only 918 pounds of milk containing 46.8 pounds of butterfat worth $19.14 in return, a loss of $3.70. The following month a new cow was added to the herd and each cow was fed according to her production. The feed cost was increased only 86 cents to a total of $23.70, while the production of the three cows was 1,844 pounds of milk containing 94.4 pounds of butterfat worth $40.47, or a profit of $16.77. The total improvement of $20.47, which came as a result of changing a loss of $3.70 into a profit of $16.77, was accomplished by feeding the surplus feed which the two cows had been receiving to a third cow.

Money Is Well Spent in Feeds for the Dry Cows

Time was when the dry cow did not get any grain feed, or at best only a small percentage of her usual amount. But that time is past and practical dairymen agree that money spent on feed for the dry cow is money well invested.

Veterinary people say that the blood passing from the heart to the udder carries the food elements which go to make milk. They also tell us that when the cow becomes dry this blood stream turns to the foetus and this same food supply goes to build up and nourish the body of the unborn calf. During the last three months before freshening, about 65 per cent of the development of the calf takes place. What then will be the result if the feed of the dry cow is materially reduced? It means that in order for a cow to freshen in good condition, maintain her original weight and go through her lactation period doing her best, she must be fed enough to put on 75 to 100 pounds of flesh. If an amount of feed for this purpose is not fed, the cow will take flesh from her own back for the nourishment of the foetus and will be thin and in poor condition at time of freshening.

A few hours later, Viscount Raoul de Guillian, duly warned by a telegram in French dispatched from a distant office, moved into the Ritz.

He received Paul Raxon with reserve. It was only when he learned that Agatha Brown was a guest at Great Rock that he consented to go. He was affable enough to agree to stay there a week.

When he arrived, the admirable Sneed was in the hall, and a footman immediately carried his suitcases to his room.

"The whole gang's here now," said 'Enry, wringing his hand. "How's good old Peter?"

"More hopeful than ever." Malet seemed a trifle nervous. He fingered his small mustache and imperial in doubt. "Do you think I can carry this through? If one is suspected, all are suspected."

"Of course you can. Even Alf is getting a firm touch. He had stage-fright at his first dinner, but he's training on splendidly." 'Enry sat in the most comfortable chair he could find and lighted a cigarette. "What's the mystery about McKimber?"

"I'm in the dark, too. Peter says I'm under Nita's orders, and she will tell us what to do."

"You're all right, you're a guest," 'Enry remarked. "I'm only a poor, honest footman and have to be ordered around."

"You've not had any run in with Raxon?"

"Not exactly, but he's a sneering swine. Told Brudney and me only this morning that men-servants were merely parasitic growths. Said that only timidity drove husky men like Alf and me into domestic service. I hope there's a time when he'll think differently."

"Milman wants you to familiarize yourself with Raxon's private rooms. From an interview in a New York paper, it appears he lives in a tower."

"He does. Since I've been here, not even his wife has ventured into it. I go in regularly to carry cedar logs for his open fire. The doors are fitted with special locks. I've taken an impression of the keys. Alf goes to town tomorrow. He'll fetch them. I'm not worrying. Nita and Peter—I never noticed those names rhymed before—are running this show. Raxon expects a great deal from you. He says you are the only expert he ever got for nothing."

Mrs. McKimber, whose fortune had enabled her husband to become one of the wealthiest men in a wealthy state, enjoyed staying in new houses and meeting new sets of people. She saw in this invitation to Great Rock the opportunity of discussing reduction to music, fruit diet, and the gospel of calories. On each of these points Mrs. McKimber had her experiences to relate.

Her son Robin, a good-looking man of five-and-twenty, did not welcome new friends unless he knew all about them and that knowledge proved satisfactory. On the drive from the hotel in New York where the McKimbers always stayed he kept questioning his father about the Raxons. Why should his father waste a week here when he could be touring the state and strengthening his political position? Robin desired to be a senator's son and taste Washington life under the happiest conditions.

Although Raxon had planned that McKimber should visit him, the manufacturer had no idea of it. McKimber on his way to Great Rock felt humiliated with the knowledge that he had virtually asked for an invitation here. A few months before such a thing would have seemed impossible.

McKimber had learned suddenly that Paul Raxon was working to gain a primary nomination for the exalted position McKimber believed was already in his own grasp. At first he laughed the idea to scorn. But his campaign manager had showed him innumerable clippings filled with interviews in which Paul Raxon had spoken enthusiastically about beautifying American cities so that the Old world sent her tourists to see them. Raxon had spoken before a federation of women's clubs and had been very well received. He was described as a ready and eloquent speaker.

"He's got a peach of a press agent," said McKimber's campaign manager gloomily, "and his line is absolutely new. It's making a great hit with the influential women."

"He can't win on that stuff," McKimber growled. He was one of those old time politicians who distrust women and underestimate their power.

"Maybe not, but he can split the party vote, can't he? His platform is a winner. He promises the building trades plenty of work and he has been their man for twenty years. As I've said, the women will vote for him, and so will the intellectuals. I tell you, John, he's got to be stopped. If he runs, our party loses out. That's sure."

"What sort of a fellow is he?"

"Nobody seems to know. You've got to get under his skin. No good going to his office. In another man's office the cards are stacked against you. Try the social end of it. He's just bought Bellington's place and is going to entertain. I've got it. I know Herman Loudon pretty well. I'll work it so he asks you for a week-end. How about it?"

In the end McKimber agreed this was the best plan. Eventually he, Mrs. McKimber and their son were asked for a week. McKimber did not look forward to his task. But he did not doubt his success. He had been used to dealing with men, and he would have little trouble with a dreamer with a better architecture complex.

Robin refused to be one of the party. He agreed to drive his parents to Great Rock, where they would make his excuses.

"I'm sure you would enjoy yourself," said his mother. "I can't think why you're so particular. Do stay with us, Robin."

The McKimber car described a sudden, alarming lurch.

"If you've accepted, I suppose I ought to stay," said Robin. "Gee, what a beauty!"

"Isn't it?" His mother agreed, thinking he had obtained some new view of the big house they were approaching.

But it was not a view of Great Rock which influenced him. Just for a few seconds as the heavy car swung around a curve Robin McKimber had looked into the amethyst eyes of a lovely girl. He had looked into many eyes, but these were different, baffling, alluring, inviting, repelling. He had barely time to see she was tall and slim and golden-haired.

"I hear," said his mother's placid voice, "that the oldest Raxon girl is good-looking."

"Good-looking," he said indignantly. "She is a peach!"

"When did you see her?" Mrs. McKimber looked at him curiously.

"I mean I've heard she is a peach," he explained.

"They lived in Paris for some years," Mrs. McKimber added. "I imagine they are chic."

"You bet," said Robin heartily.

McKimber sighed and spoke for the first time for some miles.

"You nearly ran us off the road a while ago," he said. "There was a drop of thirty feet at that point. I want to go to Washington. I don't want to end up here."

"I must have the wheel tightened," Robin answered. He hoped he was not flushing. He had thought himself to be above such displays of emotion. But then he had never seen such a girl before. Until now he had believed that writers who described heroines' eyes as violet or amethyst were merely lying. He knew now he had misjudged them. They too must have seen the eldest Raxon girl.

It took Robin's utmost composure to keep his face becomingly wreathed in smiles when he was introduced to the Misses Raxon. They were nothing; usual types, overdressed and badly made up. When they suggested he might like to see the estate he agreed readily, so readily that the eldest girl dismissed her slaters with a gesture. As the eldest she was to have the first chance.

Robin saw the golden girl as he crossed the golf links.

"One of your house guests?" he asked, as he hoped, without apparent interest.

"That's Miss Brown," said the Raxon girl. "No, she isn't a guest."

"A neighbor, perhaps?"

The eldest Miss Raxon laughed maliciously.

"She's a sort of housekeeper-secretary. Mother and we girls haven't time to think about ordering meals or firing servants, so we hired her."

Miss Brown had a mashie and was practicing short approaches.

"Of all the nerve," said Gertrude Raxon. "I'll see mother stops that. She can't learn how to play golf here."

Robin watched Miss Brown swing. The ball cleared three pine trees and nestled within putting distance of the hole. As pretty a stroke as he, a scratch man, could ever hope to make.

"I imagine she has learnt a good bit of golf somewhere else," he said dryly. Gertrude Raxon became more and more distasteful to him. She was an empty-headed little flirt and could not interest him. As soon as he could he went back to his room.

His reward came at dinner. Miss Brown was there, quite well dressed. They were not introduced, and she sat some distance from him. Robin determined to get an introduction after dinner.

After dinner came a dance, and the evasion of the two elder Raxon girls was not easy. Robin looked sourly at an animated and gesticulating Frenchman—a viscount, as he recalled. It—who carried on a long conversation in his native tongue with Miss Brown.

Only once Robin stared into the violet eyes. They seemed to look through him. But he was sure Miss Brown remembered that moment when there was a reasonably good chance of the extinction of the McKimber family. He wished he could dance with her. He detested very small clinging girls like Gertrude Raxon. And since he was himself dark, he preferred the blonde type. Of course the Raxon girls were jealous. And well they might be. Probably Miss Brown had a hard time to placate the furies her charms and beauty aroused in her employer's daughters.

Finally poor Robin had to introduce himself. He did it very well. It came in the nature of an apology. Robin was so good-looking that most girls forgave him minor breaches of etiquette.

"My name is Robin McKimber," he began. "And as I know you are Miss Brown, we are introduced, aren't we?"

"And this is your idea of an introduction?" Miss Brown spoke without enthusiasm. He was a little staggered. His smile was what people usually termed infectious.

"I had to introduce myself," he returned, "because nobody else would."

"Exactly what was the necessity?" she demanded.

"I wanted to apologize for nearly running you down on the drive this afternoon." She was not making it easy.

"I'm afraid you exaggerate," she said calmly. "I was standing on a rock fully two feet above the road level when you turned the corner so recklessly." His face fell. She could not help smiling a little. "But, of course, if you really do want to apologize for being so careless—"

"I do," he said earnestly.

"Then you must apologize to your parents. They were in real danger and I was not."

"I'm a most careful driver," he said. "Ask my mother. What happened today never happened to me before."

"What was that?" There was a trace of a smile which passed over her face and was gone.

"I saw that eyes could really be violet," he answered. He looked into them admiringly. "I forgot everything."

"You should lose your license," she said severely. But there was no doubt that she smiled as she turned away with a slight bow.

She was more used to verbal fencing than he had imagined. On the whole, he decided he had behaved very stupidly. This was no browbeaten dependent thirsting for kind words. Robin's evening was spoiled.

John McKimber was puzzled concerning Paul Raxon. He had known of Raxon for years, but he had never met him nor believed very much in his influence. McKimber had thought of him as a younger man who would look up to him as one having long ago won his spurs. McKimber had come here sure that victory would be his in the struggle.

He was uneasily aware that Raxon was not easy to impress. The younger man's knowledge of politics and politicians seemed uncanny. He was without reverence for the dead or respect for the living. Once or twice McKimber believed his host was laughing at him. It would not be advisable to start any serious discussions until the two were on more friendly terms.

Raxon's would not be the first political aspirations that McKimber had nipped in the bud. That was the duty of all sound machine politicians or popular government might creep in and destroy the machinery. Raxon would see he was wrong to imperil his party because of his new-born ambitions. For almost a generation now John McKimber had been the mainstay of his party in his own section

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.

IN the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretions are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of users and endorsers who acclaim the merit of Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

Indian or Sinclair Gas

We can furnish you either one at our Oil Station

Over production of crude oil and subsequently gasoline has lowered the price of the product and at the same time forced refiners to close their cracking plants on account of the narrow margin of profit and heavy expense of operation. This condition has flooded the market with straight run gasoline. Wide-spread disatisfaction will be prevalent among motorists who have heretofore used higher test fuel, because cracked gasoline has become a recognized product on account of its anti-knock feature. The Indian Refining Company feels that its customers are entitled to the same quality as heretofore, regardless of price conditions. The operating cost of making cracked gasoline is greater than the cost of straight gasoline, but cracked gasoline gives the quality—power, anti-knock. Try a tank full from our station and be convinced. of the state. If honors were to be awarded it was to him they should come. Raxon would probably see it in that light. If he did not there would be summoned the big men who must be obeyed.

Raxon had two big rooms for himself in a tower from which an uninterrupted view of the sound could be enjoyed. One of the rooms was a library, deep-paneled and splendid. The other was his bedroom and bath. To this retreat none came but the servants. Here he dreamed of power and planned the new life. None could overhear what he would say to McKimber when the hour came to which he had long looked forward. There would be no tinkling telephones, to interrupt. He chuckled as he thought of McKimber. He knew the manufacturer for an honest if stubborn man, who had long been regarded as a valued party prop. Well, the McKimber who would come to this talk would not be the man who went down the tower stairs.

Life had been very good to Paul Raxon. He had always won. Again and again his unfortunate entanglements with women had threatened to bring him newspaper notoriety, but he had evaded it—somehow. He wondered why, of late, he had been thinking of the girl who died so conveniently in a sculptor's studio, the sculptor who had endured the censure that should have been his. Raxon believed that it was because he had been born to a great destiny, and doubts of future success did not trouble him.

McKimber broached the subject that filled their minds one day as they walked back from golf. He had been shown by his campaign manager that Raxon's press notices far exceeded his own in frequency and interest.

"You certainly have a fine press agent," McKimber said, not without bitterness.

"The best," said Raxon. "So long as he remains the best he gets a very large salary. If he falls off, I shall get rid of him. He knows that. One might say," Raxon went on, "that that is my method always. I pay more than the union scale, because I want a result above the average."

"Maybe you're wasting your money."

Raxon shrugged his shoulders. "Maybe."

"The public buildings of this country are the best in the world," McKimber declared. He had been reading something of the enthusiasm Raxon had created among federations of women's clubs.

"You probably think so," Raxon agreed lilly. "You could sit before the statehouse at, let us say, Harrisburg, and think it was the last thing in architectural art. I am going to stamp out monstrosities in stone and melodrama in marble. We have not yet evolved a national style, but we shall."

He paused a moment to greet Robin McKimber and Agatha Brown. He had noticed of late that the two were very friendly. They made a splendid pair. He commented on it. McKimber grunted. He had other plans for his son. He found himself filled with increasing bitterness.

"When can we have a talk?" McKimber said abruptly.

"What are we doing now?"

"You know what I mean. I'm going to let you into our confidence, and you ought to know that strangers shouldn't hear it."

"Maybe You're Wasting Your Money."

"Whose confidence?"

"The party's confidence. It's a big thing, Raxon."

"Ought I to hear it? Am I important enough?" Raxon's manner had no hint of sarcasm in it, but McKimber knew that the other was laughing at him. "Tomorrow night the young people are having a dance. I keep late hours. What about midnight? You have never yet been in my tower study, have you? Sneed shall bring you up there at twelve."

McKimber felt himself dismissed. He frowned as he glared at the smaller man. The interview in the tower room would need careful handling. He wondered if he had underestimated Raxon.

When Robin joined him McKimber was still fuming. Unwisely he told his son of the coming interview, but not of its nature. Still more unwisely Robin, by this time head over ears in love with Agatha Brown, confided in her the news. She had always seemed ready to chat about his parents.

"I don't understand it at all," said Robin. "Father came here for some purpose of his own which I haven't caught on to, but it's political. Of course you haven't followed American politics of late or you'd know my father was some junkin up the state. He refused the nomination for governorship."

"Why such modesty?" she asked.

"Because he wants something bigger."

"The senate, I suppose?"

"Yes. I wondered why it was he came here when we have never had any social relations with the Raxons. I know now." He spoke confidentially. "Tomorrow night, up in his tower room, father is going to lay down the law to your Mr. Raxon. Just because Raxon made a lot of money doesn't say he is fit to represent New York at Washington. I think father pays entirely too much attention to Raxon's claims. He couldn't get in possibly. What do you think?"

"That politics is very dull."

"They won't bother us," he said tenderly. "We shan't know they exist, Agatha. I shall be looking in your eyes and forgetting time and space."

"That will make you a very agreeable dancing partner," she laughed. She sighed a little. "I'm sorry, Robin, but we shall not be dancing together tomorrow evening. It is my night off, and I'm going to see some friends in New York."

"I'll come with you," he said eagerly. "Do let me drive you in."

"That would never do. I should be dismissed directly I returned. No, you must stay here and dance with the Raxon girls and their friends. "Don't you realize how much you've neglected them?"

"I didn't come here to dance with them," he retorted. "I came in the first instance because father has something to tell Raxon from the national committee. I stayed because I saw you. If I've neglected the Raxon girls it is absolutely your fault. They should blame you for it."

"They do," she answered. "Mrs. Raxon, who was my friend, is growing cold. I shall not be here long."

"Then marry me and get a lifelong job. You'll like it, sweetheart. I'm not half good enough for you, but day by day you'll learn to love me more and more."

"Is this a proposal?" She laughed.

"It's the first I've made since lunch," he returned.

"And I shall give you my usual answer. I like you, Robin. You are one of the most attractive people I have met. I think it would not be hard to get absolutely crazy about you."

"How soon can you start?"

"I'm afraid I never can. Your father wouldn't permit it. I've watched him, Robin, when you've been dancing or talking to me. Do you suppose it was just lilly that he told me last night that he had a great future planned for you?"

"He often says that," Robin answered. "That's why he wants to go to Washington. He's thinking of politics and diplomacy."

"He was thinking of the sort of woman he intends you to marry. I can't blame him. He feels he is fighting for you against an unknown woman who may be a common adventuress for all he knows. On the whole, I rather like your father."

"The old man's all right," Robin said calmly "and I probably respect him more than anyone else; but I'm no Chinese ancestor worshiper. I shall choose my own wife. If he objects, the loss is his."

"You'd starve, my bold and brave Robin"

"Not on your life, Amethysta. I'm no idle society boy, although I play society games. I've an interest in the works which I earned. He'd have to buy me out, and it would be cheaper to have me remain. Also, I control some basic pateuls that he uses. I invented them. If you can believe it."

"How clever of you," she cried. "Do you know I had no idea you had ever worked. You play so well, you see."

"Amethysta," he said earnestly, "there isn't such an awful lot of happiness in this world. Why do you want to rob me of my chance of it?"

"If there was anything I could do to make you happy, I would do it if I had myself only to think about. Don't follow me. I've got to get back to the house and arrange an elaborate menu."

She left him with a smile. It was not easy to respond to it. So far in his life young McKimber had obtained what he wanted. He realised that he had never wanted anything very strongly until now, when his first serious defeat had been met.

Inside the house Agatha Brown met Henry.

"You allow that McKimber boy to monopolize too much of your time," he grumbled; "the McKimbers are absolutely without social weight."

"In so many words that is what Mr. McKimber told Robin about social secretaries. Don't talk about him now. I've got to go into New York and see Uncle Peter."

"Anything developed?" he demanded eagerly.

"Yes. At midnight tomorrow—there's a big dance here, you remember. Mr. McKimber is going to see Mr. Raxon and tell him he has no chance politically."

"How do you know that? So you are pumping him. Clever girl. That's why you are letting him waste his time."

"It's not being clever," she returned, flushing; "it's being dishonorable. I'm not pumping him. I'm letting him talk, and that's almost as bad."

The man who was 'Enry Seemed little interested in Robin McKimber. He was excited at the idea of the interview on the morrow.

"I believe that's the big thing," he said. "I wish I knew what old Peter has up his sleeve."

"Has Mr. Bradney finished his work up there?" she asked.

"This very morning. That's the real reason I waited for you. That d—d Raxon has no fixed habits. He crops up in most unexpected places. Sneed reported after breakfast that he and old McKimber were on the golf links. Bradney got busy at once with his job and I attended to the cleaning of the room. I didn't hear Raxon come in. You know how silently he walks. Suddenly I looked around and saw him. He made a motion for me not to say anything. He was listening." 'Enry laughed. "I didn't laugh then, Nita. What do you think it was? He thought old Bradney sawing a board out of sight was a rat. Fortunately Bradney had just finished and was listening to what we were saying. Raxon's afraid of no man, but he hates rats. He made me look down behind the hooks. I could see Bradney's face distinctly, because he hadn't quite finished. I was flustered. I said I saw a big sewer rat."

"Poor Uncle Fleming," Nita cried. "Oh, daddy, what a situation!"

"Raxon suggested sending for a fox terrier that the head chauffeur owns. Any decent dog would have worried Bradney's face to ribbons. I couldn't have that. I suggested traps and said the 'Iggleses had a bait that old Henry the Eighth used. He said the rat would take it and die in such a way that the rat would be poisoned. He went to a drawer and took out an automatic. I thought then and there everything was up. I couldn't let him take a pot-shot at Bradney. Remember, Bradney was listening to all this and not able to make a move."

"Oh, daddy," the girl cried, "what happened?"

"The 'Iggleses' rat bait won. I said to shoot under a heavy wooden bookcase might set the house on fire. It wasn't till I saw him outside with Mallet that I pulled Bradney out head foremost. Of course he blamed me for not keeping a better lookout. It all came because I was actually doing the work for which I am being paid. Let me know what Mr Milman says."

Neeland Barnes walked toward the pantry, where Bradney was cleaning some silver.

"Hello, old sewer rat," said 'Enry genially. He took a seat and lighted a cigarette. Then he complained about young McKimber's attentions to his daughter. Bradney did not take his side.

"I've watched them," said Bradney, "and I think they are the handsomest pair I've ever seen. You must admit that, physically, he is superb. You are wrong in thinking he is forcing unwelcome attentions on Nita. He is humble and adoring. I'm not much of a judge of these affairs, but I think she likes him." Bradney sighed. "I should like to be looked at as I've caught her looking at him."

"And I rather like old McKimber," Bradney said. "It is true he has drunk the wine of Bohbitry largely, but that is what every successful man quaffs. If he is autocratic and wants his way, you must remember he is the head of a tremendous business and accustomed to men taking orders from him. His wife is quite genial and unaffected."

Barnes could not dismiss his grievance against the family lightly.

"I hope he won't try to be autocratic with me because I'm annoyed with his son and heir." 'Enry put a silver carafe on a tray. "This waiting business palls after a time. There's Mallet eating, drinking and smoking with the best, while we have to work for a living. Actually he had the nerve to call me down the other night in French because I upset something over him while I was trying to hear what Raxon was saying to McKimber."

"Don't get quarrelsome here," Bradney cautioned him. "Wait till it is finished. A great deal depends on you."

"All right," said Barnes, picking up his tray. "The parasite departs. I'll watch my step."

CHAPTER IX

Very ungraciously Mrs. Raxon permitted Agatha Brown to be absent for a night. Very gladly the Raxon girls learned of it. Robin would be theirs for a few hours. After cramping continental pensions and small hotels, their present lavish life rather went to their heads. It took the form of a superiority complex which irritated Robin enormously. But he had promised his father to aid him by preserving a heartiness of manner that he did not feel. He was wholly obsessed by the thought of Agatha, that strange and lovely girl who held him at arm's length, snubbed him, harassed him, and then brought him back with a glance of those amethyst eyes. She would tell him nothing about her past life and that worried him very much. What men had loved her, he wondered, and had there been men about whom she cared? Mrs. McKimber understood the situation and sympathized. Her husband was unusually irritable. He could talk about nothing but the infamous manner in which his press agent neglected to have him featured. It seemed to McKimber that the papers were filled with Paul Raxon. Actually some club women had started a "Better Architecture League," with Raxon as president. They were in agitate for classes in architectural appreciation in the high schools.

McKimber wandered about the big rooms fidgeting. Raxon was not to be seen. At midnight, when Sneed stood respectfully at his elbow, McKimber was as nearly nervous as he had ever been. But he was too old a campaigner to show it. He followed the butler into a big sexagonal room, entrance to which was gained by a flight of eight stairs. That the apartment was furnished with subdued splendor and was of magnificent proportions added to McKimber's irritation. Instinctively he was aware that Raxon was getting ready to use his lavish settings in publicity work.

This tower study would soon be famous through the magazines. It was easy to visualize Paul Raxon leaning back in his customary indolent way with a specially prepared background. McKimber's private room represented office furnishing in its most efficient style. He reflected bitterly that this apartment must have been planned for photographic reproduction. McKimber decided it was effeminate. It provoked in him a feeling of contempt which could not dispel the knowledge that Raxon's settings were superb. But they were presumptuous. Raxon was riding for a fall. He needed to be taught a lesson. It would have been wiser for McKimber to recollect that Raxon had not succeeded through any lack of strength.

"This extensive publicity campaign of yours," McKimber began, "doesn't deceive us any."

"Us?" Raxon queried.

PLANE SERVICE AROUND LAKES

DETROIT-CHICAGO PASSENGER LINE PLANNED

Charlevoix on the Line and Ship Will Stop for In and Out Passengers

Plans for the operation of a seaplane passenger line linking Detroit, Mackinac Island and Chicago were announced Monday by Paul Strasburg, head of the Strasburg Flying Service of Detroit.

The first plane to travel over the route will hop off from Detroit and Chicago July 5.

Three seaplanes of the improved Curtiss Seagull type, powered with 210 horse-power motors, with a carrying capacity of five persons including the pilot are to be used over the 700 mile route which will skirt the shore line between Detroit and Chicago. The seaplanes will stop at Mackinac, intermediate terminal and base, where one of the three will be stationed, 300 miles from Detroit and 400 miles from Chicago.

No definite schedule will be adhered to for the present and probably none will be in effect until after August 1st, Mr. Strasburg said.

"Although our service will be used extensively by business men with whom time is an important consideration," he said, "I expect the majority of our passengers will be summer resorters leaving Detroit and Chicago for vacations.

"The service is sure to have an appeal for people living in these cities when they find they can finish the day's work in their offices at 4 p. m. board the seaplane and be in Mackinac three or four hours later for dinner instead of spending the better part of a day traveling by train.

"From Detroit to Mackinac by air is a matter of from three to three and a half hours—from Chicago about an hour more. Our plans include stops at any of the thousand resort places in between, where passengers may be landed or taken aboard.

Safety used to be the first thought in the minds of anyone considering traveling by air, he continued. "But since the remarkable flights of Lindbergh and Chamberlin the public has realized that confidence in aircraft is by no means misplaced.

"There are fewer fatalities per mile of travel in an airplane than by train or automobile, except where the unlicensed "gypsy" flier operates his machine. The seaplane is exceptionally safe because there is no difficulty arising from forced landings. It is always over a 'landing field' and in a position to land safely in case of motor trouble."

Although passengers will be given the choice of taking the eastern or western shores of Lake Michigan from Mackinac to Chicago, the distance be virtually the same, the regular route will follow the eastern shore of Lake Huron and the western shore of Lake Michigan.

The principal summer resorts over the route from Gratiot Beach to Michigan City, Ind., where the seaplane will cut across Lake Michigan to Chicago, include Lexington, Port Sanilac, Richmondville, Harbor Beach Pointe Aux Braques, Tawas City, Alpena, Cheboygan, Bois Blanc Island, Mackinac Island, Harbor Springs, Emmet Beach, Harbor Point, Bayview, Petoskey, Mullet Lake, Bay Shore, Pine Lake, Charlevoix, Grand Traverse Bay, Crystal Lake, South Frunkfort, Portage Lake, Manistee, Ludington, White Lake, Grand Haven South Haven and Benton Harbor.

The planes have a wing-spread of 50 feet, measure 30 feet from bow to stern of the hull, and can land in 12 inches of water. They will be inspected and licensed by the Department of commerce before the line opens, Mr. Strasburg said.

The seaplane line will be the second commercial air line to be established in Michigan. The first is the Stout Air Service, Inc., which operates the airplane line between Detroit and Grand Rapids. This line has now been operating more than a year.

MAIL ORDER COMPETITION

How to Overcome it

There is a merchant in a middle west small town who refuses to consider the mail order houses a serious menace to his business. A year ago, when he bought his store, he took over the entire personnel of the owner—and there was no advertising department. He bought the store at a low price because the other man said all the business was going to the mail order houses.

The new owner believed in advertising, but he couldn't afford to pay the salary of a high priced advertising man, and he didn't want to get someone who might fail, so he decided to play along with the advertising and study it himself. He bought books, subscribed to advertising journals, printers' publications and the like. He found many suggestions applicable to the city stores, but few for the small town merchant.

Studying the mail order reports, he found that most of the mail order business came from small towns. His postmaster told him how much money was going to the mail order houses from his community. After getting all his data together and checking the prices in the mail order catalogues with the prices marked on his own goods, he found that the best weapon he had was price comparison.

Contrary to the advice of many advertising men, he got out a large flyer, making direct comparison between his prices and the prices in the mail order catalogues. He invited the people to come and see his goods, look through the catalogues which he kept on file, compare his goods with the decriptions in the catalogue, and then judge for themselves.

He brought out the fact that his price covered the goods delivered across the counter at the time of the purchase—there was no money order fee or postage to be added, no waits for delivery and the customer had the opportunity to see and feel the goods before purchasing—with the same recourse, if the goods proved unsatisfactory. Here is what this merchant says in the Inland Merchant: The merchant creates an atmosphere of friendship between himself and the public when he invites mail order price comparison in his store. He is held in higher esteem, and respected to a higher degree, when he tells the public he keeps the mail order catalogues in his store for their use for comparing prices.

He is looked on as a new kind of hero in the merchandise world because he is not afraid of that "Fearful Monster," the mail order house.

When customers come in, and, unrestrained by fear of insulting the merchant or the salespeople, talk freely and ask for catalogue price comparisons, and find that merchandise can be bought cheaper at home, no value can be put upon the word of mouth advertising they will do.

For after all the public obtains its impression of your general prices from a few items in your store.

It is our plan and intention to circularize our locality quarterly with similar advertising, each time making price comparisons, and driving home facts to prove our statements that we can, and do, sell cheaper than catalogue firms.

This merchant made four mailings a year—5,500 copies—and the printer benefited to the amount of about $700.00. If this general merchant can get the community turning toward the doors of his store; if he can add several hundred new customers through this kind of advertising; if he can keep the money of his community helping to build the business of the community—then the advertising is worth while, and what he is doing in his town can be done in other towns.

Ancient American Race

The Toltecs were a people that dwelt in Mexico and Central America, prior to the Aztecs. According to tradition, they came from the North about the Eighth century after Christ and established their capital at Tula, north of the Mexican valley. The Toltecs were a mild, peaceful people, devoted to agriculture and the arts, and especially skilled in architecture.—Kansas City Star.

The Castle at Tripoli

The old castle at Tripoli, erected hundreds of years ago, was taken from the knights of Malta and Turkish viceroys by the troops of the Turkish sultan. Arab boys lived there in great splendor for many years, until 1911 the Turkish flag was pulled down and the colors of Italy were hoisted and government officials were established in office in the once great citadel.

SPEED LIMIT OFF IN AUGUST

GO AS FAST AS YOU CAN BUT BE CAREFUL

New Auto Speed Law and Other Laws That Will Become Operative

In six weeks more the limit is off and so long as a motorist drives carefully he can wear out the sole of his shoe pushing on the accelerator, at least while he is on the state roads.

The law, passed by the 1927 legislature, will go into effect 90 days after the close of the session, which was May 14. This law removes the speed limit of 35 miles an hour making the maximum speed that at which a driver can operate his car carefully, safely and prudently. The same law makes it a felony to drive away a car without the owner's permission and requires all school busses to stop at railway crossings.

Another law to have effect the coming summer requires the establishing of automatic signals at railroad crossings with the installation cost split equally by the railroad, county, and township or city.

The law requiring that slashings and debris must be removed for at least 100 feet from roadways will probably effect many timber operators in this country, where slashings have been permitted to lay near the trunk line rights of way.

The legislature formerly adopted the "half load" rule creating a wet traffic season in March, April and May, limiting truck and load weights during that period.

Road maintenance machinery is given right of way over all other traffic according to a law passed by the legislature and which will go into effect in August.

Among other new laws involving trunk line roads are provision for payment to cities of $2,000 a mile for maintenance of trunk lines in cities where the maintenance burden is altogether on the municipality; provision for a special assessment syatem for financing roads through districts which would be particularly benefitted by sucb roads; provision for the lighting of roads and building of sidewalks in townships.

MOTOR CAR NEWS

A romance of the General Motors Proving Ground at Milford, Michigan, comes to light today with the announcement that Chevrolet test car number 112 has been retired from the proving ground service after withstanding the withering strain of 46,150 miles in four and one half months over various types of roads and a wide range of driving conditions.

Number 112 had a standard light delivery panel body on the standard commercial car chassis and had been taken out of regular production at the Flint plan. When, in the course of usual routine, it was replaced at the proving ground by another Chevrolet, it still had in it many miles of unused transportation, engineers declared, despite the gruelling experience of so many miles of terrific test driving.

Forty miles out of Detroit in the hills and vales of Livingston county, where the great outdoor automobile labratory is located, this Chevrolet, like others there, underwent supreme tests in the cause of improved automotive transportation. In the course of these tests, the car was called upon to go through all the types of service an automobile may be heir to—and more.

It was kept on test for 135 days, "working" on an average of 341.8 miles a day. There were days when it was driven more than 500 miles in order to try its stamina. In addition to the test work at the proving ground, the car carried mail to Detroit and return each day, permitting of a study and a check of the car under actual road traffic conditions.

Engineers and technnical men who drove and checked the car at the proving ground had in mind the many difficulties an automobile has to contend with in its lifetime. They thought of the driver who speeds his car over rough, rutted roads; they considered the motorist who rides his clutch; they had in mind the man who habitually tramps on his brakes, another who races a cold motor, another who asks his car to pull out of a mud hole on high, and so on.

Although they realized at the same time that only a very small minority of drivers do these things today, they wanted to study the ability of the Chevrolet to withstand these nbuses and to be constantly on the watch for developments that might further improve the product.

Although the proving ground boasts some fine stretches of pavement, number 112, during the four and one half months it was on test there, never left the gravel and dirt roads, except on its roads out of the grounds as a mail car.

Asked why, Chevrolet engineers replied:

"Concrete makes it too easy!"

DAIRY FACTS

DAIRY HINTS FOR SEVERE WEATHER

The dairy cow is a home market for feeds produced and if she is to pay the highest prices by producing milk, she must be kept comfortable in winter. That's just the way it is and the owner who doesn't keep his milk cow warm and dry will find that she will not produce milk at a profit.

"The cow that is not kept warm by a good barn and a dry bed will use a large part of her feed for this purpose and thus reduce the amount of nutriments available for milk production," says John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at the North Carolina State college. "Then, too, grain must be fed liberally on those farms where it will be necessary to use low grade roughage for legume hays."

Mr. Arey recommends that fresh, clean water of a medium temperature be given the cows during winter. Cold water chills their bodies and feed energy must then be used to warm them. The water supply must also be convenient for the cows to use. Cows forced to go long ways through mud and rain for water do not drink enough for heaviest milk production.

It is advised that an accurate feed and milk production record be kept on the cows during winter because some cows pay well for the feed consumed, while others do not. Accurate records are needed to locate the unprofitable cows. Mr. Arey states that the new year might be started in the right manner by the dairyman buying a pair of milk scales.

Another winter suggestion by Mr. Arey is to give the young heifer calves some extra feed and care during the cold months of December, January and February. A stunted heifer never makes a good cow, he states, and many dairy cows are under-sized because they were not properly fed when calves.

Big Production Records Possible on Small Farms

Expensive equipment and high-priced herdsmen are not always necessary for making advanced registry records with cows, according to the dairy department of the New Jersey College of Agriculture. Good cows are the first requirement for good records, and many a man does not realize how good his cows are until he gives them a chance.

Fame and fortune have come to many a small breeder because he started official testing of his herd with what equipment and means he had instead of waiting until he had everything just right. It isn't necessary to break any records to make official testing a very profitable venture. Good ordinary records make additional values that pay big dividends on the money and labor involved.

The department further points out that the small breeder has some distinct advantages in his favor. He lives closer to his cows. He knows them better and they know him. He can always rig up some place to make his test cows comfortable, and by his personal care and attention overcome many of the advantages the big breeder may have in the way of elaborate equipment and expensive herdsmen.

If the small breeder brings out a sensational producer, the credit, fame and fortune are all his and he doesn't have to divide it with anyone, except to give his wife due credit for her encouragement.

Selecting Herd Bull Is Serious Dairy Problem

Every breeder of dairy cattle should study seriously the problem of herd improvement as the whole future of the herd is at stake when the bull is selected, says R. E. Waters, extension dairy specialist, Clemson college.

The problem of getting a better herd is largely one of having better young stock coming on. This is a matter of breeding and particularly of selecting the right bull.

The ability to produce milk is inherited through both the sire and dam, but since the sire is responsible for half the inheritance of each animal born in the herd, he is clearly the most important single factor in the development of the dairy herd.

To obtain the greatest possible improvement by use of the bull it is very important that due consideration be given to his pedigree, for both type and production. And where possible, select a bull that has some daughters, preferably some that have been in milk and proven their ability as producers. With the above points in mind a breeder can select a bull that will, with reasonable certainty, transmit to his offspring the desired type and production.

FROZEN MILK IS NOT DESIRABLE

How is cow's milk injured by freezing? In answer to that question F. C. Button, professor of dairying at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture, says:

"Even a casual observer is familiar with the visible effects that freezing has on milk. He can see that the cream in thawed milk is not the same as in normal milk. He also knows that the main portion of the milk becomes flaky when thawed. These are the physical changes which milk undergoes upon freezing. The fat is partially churned and its emulsion is never completely restored after thawing. The casein or curd in frozen milk appears in flakes rather than in the original colloidal condition.

"Freezing also affects milk in a chemical way. The interference with fat emulsion makes frozen milk harder to digest than unfrozen milk. For this reason infants should not be fed milk which has been frozen.

"When milk becomes completely frozen, it is forced out of the bottle and lifts the cap. The milk may project as much as three or four inches. In this way it may become contaminated with bacteria from blowing dust and from being licked by dogs and cats. Milk which has been frozen will not keep sweet as long as normal milk.

"Where milk is delivered in the early morning hours, the consumer should provide some protection for the bottles. A box serves very well, and a burlap covering helps more in the extremely cold weather. The ideal arrangement would be to provide some place inside where the milkman could set the milk."

Should Cows Face in or to the Walls of Stable?

The old question of whether cows should face toward the center or toward the walls of a dairy barn is not settled by the New York State College of Agriculture, which says that both plans have their ardent supporters. It lists the advantages of each, and leaves the individual farmer to make his own choice.

The question arises, as far as the college is concerned, in connection with a new bulletin on the construction of concrete floors for dairy stables. It advocates well-laid floors for permanence and durability, and gives complete details for laying them, telling how to mix, lay and finish the concrete, with photographs and working drawings of the whole job, from start to completion, so that any handy man should not have trouble in getting a satisfactory result, and without prohibitive cost.

Farmers who are contemplating the building of new stables or the remodeling of old ones, are invited by the college to write to the office of publication of the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca for a copy of the bulletin which will be sent without cost. It is necessary only to use a plain 1-cent government postcard, giving the sender's name and address, written plainly, together with the symbol E 140, and the publication will be forwarded by return mail.

Attention to Give Cows Afflicted With Garget

Watch out for garget in a new milk cow these cold days. At the first sign of a swollen udder or stringiness in the milk, cut down the animal's grain ration until she is relieved, and give her a dose of physic—castor oil or epsom salts. Milk her gently several times a day, also kneading the udder with your hands, and keep the animal in a warm place. After the physic has worked an ounce of saltpeter daily for two or three days is helpful. So, too, are hot cloths applied to the udder for a few minutes every two or three hours—taking care that the udder does not afterward become chilled.

CURWOOD SAYS IT HAS A GREAT FUTURE

Believes it Will Soon Be as Famous as The Yellowstone National Park

Within a few years northern lower Michigan will rival Yellowstone Park as a national playground if a comprensive program of conservation is followed, James Oliver Curwood, novelist member of the state conservation commission told a joint meeting of the local Rotary and Exchange clubs at Cadillac.

Curwood appealed to the state for universal support of the recently adopted conservation program and many members of the legislature who do not understand the problems of conservation and allow themselves to be influenced by our opponents."

"There is something more to this problem of conservation," he said, besides game to kill. There are 25 persons who wish to see the animals and birds in their native haunts to everyone who wishes to slaughter everything he sees in the woods."

Spearing of fish, and killing of short horn bucks are two of the practices strongly opposed by Curwood. He also said he believed the bag and possession limits should be the same, and that rabbits and red fox should be placed on the protected list.

"Rabbits furnish food for other predatory animals, and foxes prey on noxious beasts and birds and thus help preserve the balance of nature which man in his civilization has upset," he declared.

Curwood announces he planned to "side-track" virtually all of his other interests for the present in order to devote the major portion of his time to the demands of the commission. He appealed for "the advice and opinion of the public in matters pertaining to conservation."

Don't Forget the "Hay Day'

A.. roads will lead to the farm of Will Shepard, one mile north of East Jordan, home of the red, white und blue silo, on Thursday, July 7th, at 1:00 o'clock slow time; for surely all farmers will want to see the big "Hay Day" demonstration to be conducted there.

The demonstration will be in charge of Larry Kurtz, farm corps specialist of M. S. C., who has charge of some 30 hay making days throughout the state. Three complete lines of machinery will be on display and operuted in the hay field by representatives of the companies for your inspection and scrutiny. This will be one of the few times that farmers can uctually see different makes of machinery at work at the sume time and luboring under the snme conditions. The McCormick-Deering rake and hay loader will be smown through courtesy of Goodmnn & Bond, Eust Jordan; The Massy-Harris by East Jordan Co-ops, and the John Deere line by Boyne City Association.

The demonstration will show you how, by modern machinery the hay can be cut, raked immediately in flaffly, loose windrows and without losing its high feeding value by drying quickly; and to put in the barn on the second day with favorable weather conditions currying all of its leaves, and fully as important, that green color that makes alfalfa so valuable.

With the increase of nlfnlfa acreage and the difficult problem with respect to securing good help this system of curing and handling hay will no doubt be a life saver.

Mnrk the date down on your calendar right now and plan to be at the demonstration at Will Shepard's at 1:00 o'clock p. m. slow time on Thursday, July 7th.

POULTRY

EGGS IN WINTER BRING PROFITS

"To get winter eggs is essentinl if the nverage poultry flock is to pay a profit," says Prof. Willard C. Thompson of the New Jersey Agricultural experiment stution. "To get winter eggs the hens must be given every possible stimulus to production. They must be kept in perfect health throughout the season.

"The hens' environment directly affects their productive energies. During the winter season in New Jersey it is usually advisable to keep the laying flocks closely confined to the laying houses. This keeps them near the food supply and more busily at work than if they were allowed the freedom of the yards. It allows the poultryman complete control of sanitation.

"Clean the laying house thoroughly. Take the movable fixtures outside and clean them. Remove and preferably burn all old litter. Sweep down the walls, and such unsightly curtains as there may be in the house. Then spray thoroughly the entire interior with a 5 per cent solution of one of the reliable disinfectants. Many prefer to whitewash the interior, and the whitened poultry house has many advantages over a darker house. Let the house dry out, and return the fixtures to their proper places.

"Provide clean, dry litter for both nests and floor. For nest litter pine wood shavings are very satisfactory, but chopped straw will suffice, if shavings are not at hand. For the floors use any good dry substance. One of the peat moss litters is especially good if the floors tend to be damp or cold. Unchopped straw also makes a good, absorptive litter.

"Keep the house free from drafts, dry, and comfortable at all times. Give the layers an even chance to maintain an active, healthy productive condition."

Dry Mash Recommended for Winter-Laying Hens

Dry mash has been so widely recommended for laying hens that some poultry keepers have gotten the idea that a feeder full of mash in the henhouse is all that is necessary to make the hens lay. They have given the hens all the scratch grain they could eat, and then wondered why the hens did not eat the mash that is always before them. When hens are given their choice of grain and mash they will eat the grain but if they get only a limited amount of scratch grain, they will complete their fill at the mash hopper.

This is the ideal ration and the one that builds up egg production, according to the University of Nebraska. On the farm where corn is lying around, the flocks should be kept in the house during the coming winter months and forced to eat the dry mash in addition to the scratch grain supplied it. Keeping the hens in a warm, clean house will help maintain the egg production at a higher level than if they are allowed to ran out in the cold and wet. Good house rent for hens costs only five eggs per hen during the winter months, so a good poultry house can be afforded on the average farm.

Poultry Facts

The only hen worth listening to is the one that says it with eggs.

• • •

Look over the incubator and see if it needs any repairs or new parts.

• • •

Turkeys need very little shelter and will usnally roost in the open air except during severe weather.

• • •

Sell off all the stock that you don't plan to keep next spring, and save the feed they would eat this winter.

An arrangement that will save labor in caring for chickens is to place the houses in a square rather than in a long row.

Toe picking is a vice of chicks that comes from overcrowding, or lack of protein feed—like milk or meat scraps—and failure to give them green stuff.

• • •

To plan for winter eggs, one must prepare good quarters, with plenty of light and room for exercise. The roosting place need only be large enough to accommodate the fowls at night, thus leaving more room for them to work during the day.

Two males and 12 females of known capability can produce 250 hatching eggs in the time between March 15 and April 30, a good season for the light varieties. The heavier birds can duplicate this output from March 1 to April 15 on a 50 per cent yield.

• • •

Fowl tuberculosis is transferable to humans through hens' eggs, just as bovine tuberculosis is transferable through milk and meats, according to Dr. Robert Graham of the University of Illinois.

In the small breeds like Leghorns it is not advisable to have more than 20 females with one male to get the best results. With the heavier breeds it is best not to have more than 12 females with one male. Good fertility should be obtained after the male bird has been in the pen for ten days.

CONVICT SHIP SUCCESS HERE

WILL BE AT CITY DOCK FOR TWO WEEKS

Historic Old Sailing Vessel Brougbt Here Through Efforts of Ass'n. of Commerce

Charlevoix is to be visited by the most ancient of all ships afloat in the world, according to Chas. H. Emery, president of the Association of Commerce, who has been in communication with Capt. D. H. Smith, commander of the old British Convict Ship "Success," with the purpose of having thnt vessel placed on exhibition in this city.

It is reported that the prison ship is now crossing Lake Michigan from Green Bay, Wisconsin, her recent port of entry, and that Capt. Smith plans to return the old cruft to her home port, at Melbourne, Australia, after leaving the Lakes. Charlevoix, it is understood, will be the last port of her showing on Lage Michigan. She is due to tie up at the city docks sometime Thursday.

That the old vessel, whose story is told in the darkest chapters of England's penal history, is to be brought to Charlevoix, is largely due to the efforts of Mr. Emery, Mayor Bergeon and other city officials who recently met Capt. Smith on his visit here, and discussed certain advantages of Charlevoix over other ports considered by Capt. Smith, as points of exhibition in his ship's itinerary.

With no motive power, other than her sails, this old British convict hulk, is capable of sailing to any port of the world. According to every member of the crew that mans her. In recent years she has made several voyages, that excited words of praise and astonishment in the shipping world. First, sailing from Port Adelaide, south Australia, to London, England. Second, from Liverpool to Boston. The latter voyage required 96 days, making a total of 261 days under her own canvass from the Australian continent to the continent of North America. Since her arrivnl in this country, the "Success" has been shown in practically all the principal ports, from Boston to Seattle, from Atlantic to Pacific, via the Panama Canal, and so far inland as Pittsburgh, Pa.

The convict ship has been in turn the most infamous and the most famous ship afloat. She is the sole survivor of England's felon fleet. One of a fleet of vessels that carried 167,000 men, women and children from Great Britian to Ireland, to the crown's penal settlements established in Tasmania and Australia, in 1789.

The history of the convict ship is one of the most tremendous romances of the seas. Built in 1790, at Moulmein, British Burma, East India, She has sailed the seas as an armed Indian merchant vessel, felon flag ship, floating jail and woman's prison ship; boys reformatory and veritable "Ocean Hell."

For the first twelve years of her career, from 1790 until 1802, she was considered one of the finest merchant ships ever built for the East Indian trade. Traces of her former grandeur are still discernable in the cabins, where hand carved teak symbols of Hindo mysticism superimposed those stately appointments of her former glory. In fact, the old ship is constructed massively throughout of Burmese teak, a wood that excells in durability any timber on earth.

The "Success" however, became too slow for that service, and in 1802, was sold to the British goverament by the British East Indian Colinization company, who had replaced her by faster vessels. Thus the "Success" was stripped of her queenly possessions and enslaved into the convict traffic, carried on in its hideous iniquities between Great Britian and Ireland. Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania) and Australia, the penal settlements having been estnblished by England in her newly acquired colonial continent.

From 1802 until 1851, the "Success" carried her burden of wrecked beings, many of whom were unjastly convicted of fable crimes; among these were many Irish political prisoners and the thousands who could not be hanged under the 145 capital offenses, threatening the lives of men and women and children and unadorning the British statutes. Yet, in instances innumerable, resultant in suffering worse than death, on the bulks of her monstrous felon fleet. Later, her crimes were intensified, when she became a floating jail, anchored in Hudson's Bay, near Melbourne, Australia. Aboard her are now shown in their original state, all the airless dungeons, torture chambers and cells of the condemned; flogging frames, manacles, branding-irons nnd panishment balls; leaden tipped cat o' nine tails, the coffin bath and other fiendish inventions of that frightful period.

No wonder citizens of Sidney, survivors of the convict system, yenrs later, scuttled and sank the old ship to the bottom of Sidney Harbor; from her aged hulk were cast shadows on the origin of the Australian commonwealth. Five years submerged, she was raised to be sent on a tour of the world; in time to become a famous craft, to tell at once a mute and vivid story of her wrongs, under the command of Cnpt. D. H. Smith, her American owner.

ROQUE COURTS WILL BE BUILT

LOCATION NEAR BALL PARK ON THE NORTH SIDE

A. I. Creamer, City and Ass'n. of Commerce Lend Their Aid to Add New Sport

Roque, known as the most scientific outdoor sport in existence, is to be added to Charlevoix's already large list of amusements for its countless summer visitors. Plans are nearly completed for hailding two courts and work will be rushed to have them ready for play during the present season.

The courts will be located just east of the north side baseball park on ground which has been kindly donated for this use by A. I. Creamer, manager of The Inn. R. C. Hammet, who is sponsoring the movement, has secured the financial assistance of the city council and Association of Commerce, and the Pere Marquette Railway company has very generously offered to furnish 380 feet of railroad steel to hound the courts.

Roque, which is one of the most popular sports in the country, especially for the older class of people, is probably well known to our summer visitors, but is new to home folks. The courts are built 30 by 60 feet, with a border of dense concrete. The portion above the playing surface is five inches high; eight inches thick, made very smooth with the upper corners rounded. The border will slant on the inside three eights of an inch from the top down to prevent the ball from jumping and is lined with railroad steel which acts a bumper, the same as cushions on a billiard table.

The court is made of clay and is rolled and tumped until hard, smooth and level. The end stakes are made of steel and set in solid concrete blocks 8x10x16 inches, one at each end of the court. Arches are three and three eights inches wide and are set in solid concrete blocks 8x15x6 inches, with the top of the arches eight inches above the surface.

The game of Roque was first played in the United States in 1870, and has gained in popularity until now it is one of the nation's most popular pastimes. Nearly every small town in the south has anywhere from two to ten Roque courts, which are crowded with players each day. The game is played with a hard rubber hall and mallet similar to croquet, only it is more scientific and on a scientific court.

The courts will no doubt prove as popular in Charlevoix as elsewhere and it is hoped tu add others to the battery of two in another year.

SUMMER SPORTS PROGRAM PLANS

COMMITTEES IN ALL DEPARTMENTS ARE ACTIVE

Open Tennis Touroament Regatta, Water Sports and Other Features Under Way

Plans are getting well under way for definite events to be inaugurated as annual summer season sports championships, sponsored by the city commission and Association of Commerce.

The annual Western Michigan Tennis championships, now under the auspices of the Charlevoix Tennis Club, is to be played off at the Inn clay courts, August 8th to 13th. Nationally known tennis stars, men ranked in the first 24 players of the country, have taken part in the past tournaments and indications point to a larger tournament than last year for this season. This meet is sanctioned by the United States Tennis association, so Charlevoix already has attained national recognition in the tennis world. In addition to this, the tennis committee of the city's sport organization has laid plans for an annual Charlevoix open tennis tournament. It will include trials and finals in the following classes: Men's singles and doubles; ladies' singles and doubles; girl's singles and junior girl's singles; boy's singles (15 to 18 years,) boy's singles (12 to 15 years.) This meet will decide the tennis championship of Charlevoix and vicinity for 1927 and is open for entry to any player. It is also under the auspices of the Charlevoix Tennis Club as to governing rules. Very suitable loving cups are posted for this event, known as the A. I. Creamer and Charlevoix Tennis Club trophies. The committee in charge and with whom entries may be made is composed of Mr. Leland, Jr., of the Belvedere; W. Gordon Parker, president of the Charlevoix Tennis Club; Archie Livingston and G. L. Ash. Entry blanks may be obtained at the Association of Commerce office.

Indications point to a cooperating committee among the sailing, speed boat and outboard motor fans, that will result in a complete annual regatta to take place in August of each season.

A special committee headed by R. C. Hammet, has completed plans and will start work immediately the construction of two roque courts just southeast of the city baseball diamond. The steel and gronnds for the courts have been put at the disposal of the committee by the Pere Marquette Railway. Another article in this issue explains the courts and the game.

A water sports committee is preparing programs with every known feature of popular water sports events and entertainment. The old greased pole, canoe tilting, fancy diving competition, long and short distance swims and sprints are included.

Let's talk up our summer sports and help by suggestions and entering competition.

Miss Erma Lane Married

A note of unnsual interest to the young people of Charlevoix was received this week, announcing the marriage of Erma Lane, formerly of this city, to Floyd E. Wilson of Detroit. The wedding was solemnized in that city on the evening of June 29th.

FIVE WRECKS OVER SUNDAY

TWO BADLY INJURED IN GRAND RAPIDS PARTY

Crowded Highways Over Holidays, Too Much Speed and Careless Driving Causes

Charlevoix, as well as other portions of the state, witnessed a large number of automobile accidents over the week end, as holiday crowds filled the highways in search of recreation.

The most serious of five accidents reported over Sunday was that which occurred Sunday afternoon at about 3 o'clock on U. S. 31, 2 miles south of Atwood, when a Hudson coach, owned and driven by V. J. Mollere of Grand Rapids, crashed into a Cadillac sedan, owned by another Grand Rapids party whose name we have been unable to learn.

In the Mollere car were the owner's wife, Mr. and Mrs. Oral Chamness and daughter, Dorothy, and Mrs. Chamness' sister, all of Grand Rapids. They had taken dinner in Charlevoix and were on their way to Traverse City, where they had a cottage for the week.

Eye witnesses, giving their account of the crash, say that Mollere was proceeding south at a rate of speed estimated between 40 and 50 miles per hour. Ahead of him was a Ford car which swung to the right into a driveway at the top of a hill where the accident occurred. Mollere turned to the left to clear the Ford and noticed the Cadillac coming up the hill from the opposite side. Witnesses claim that Mollere evidentally became confased and lost control of his car, first striking the Ford and then careened across the road into the Cadillac which had run clear into the ditch to let him by. The Hudson climbed over the front wheel and along the side of the Cadillac and then fairly sailed through the air for nearly thirty feet before landing up side down with its occupants pinned beneath.

With the help of passing motorists members of the party were extricated from beneath the wrecked car and brought to the Charlevoix hospital. Mr. Mollere is suffering from partial paralysis caused from torn muscles, and Miss Dorothy Chamness is being treated for cuts on the face and head. Both will recover. Other members of the party were only slightly injured. Both cars were badly damaged.

A Dodge touring car, owned and driven by John Denemy, local Indian, overturned on the Charlevoix-Petoskey road just across the P. M. tracks beyond Martin's hill Sunday at about noon. Five occupants of the car were slightly injured.

Sunday evening, while driving to town from the Loeb Farms, Martin Peterson's Dodge touring car was hooked by a passing Essex coach which cut in front of him while going at a high rate of speed. The impact overturned Peterson's car and pinned him beneath it. Occupants of the Essex, a local young man and his friends, drove on and offered Peter-

DOMBROSKI IS FOUND GUILTY

Kegomic Man Is to Be Sentenced for Sale of Moonshine

Joseph Dombroski, charged with supplying moonshine to a Petoskey blind pig, was convicted in quick order in Emmet county circuit court, last Wednesday, the jury being out but n few minutes. It is thought one ballot brought an unanimous verdict of "guilty as charged."

It was charged that police captured Dombroski with a couple of quart bottles of moonshine in his pockets. He was about to enter the alleged blind pig when taken. Police had suspected the man with supplying the white mule served patrons of the blind pig for some time and had watched him make his nightly trips for some time before capturing him. —Petoskey Evening News.

STILL PLUGGING FOR GOOD ROADS

"UNCLE" GEO. SAYS YOU GET ONLY WHAT YOU GO AFTER

And This Same Principle Applies to Good Roads as Well as Any Business

Uncle George Van Pelt writes another letter to the four newspapers which have done so much towards educating the people of Charlevoix county on good roads, for without these newspapers it could not have been done.

"Building concrete roads is like building a good business, you have to advertise in the home papers to get it. If you advertise good roads, you get them. If you don't advertise, you don't get either. That's what the newspapers are for, so why don't you use them?

Any person who has made a study of any question for over twenty-five years, should know more about it than one who has given it no attention, or one who possibly has been influenced to be prejudiced against it for various reasons.

You know that I could not write a letter without saying something about concrete roads, and you still would be disapointed if I did not. I say this advisedly, because I receive so many letters from people who have ridden over the concrete roads and who have read my cards and letters.

Probably there is no other thing that is causing so much earnest cussing and disgust as has the pouring of that dirty, black, oily substance on our streets and roads.

It would be impossible to compute the vast amount of loss and depreciation done to cars and tires, due to driving them over this soft, oily, black stuff; but it is safe to say that it would run into a huge amount in the course of a year. If the money that is spent for gravel and dirt roads with this stuff put on them, was spent for building good concrete roads, the county which did it would be hundreds of thousands of dollars ahead every year.

Now what are you going to do about it? That's the question.

While at the annual dinner at Fisherman's Paradise on June 12, no less than twenty or twenty-five drivers told their stories, and in no mild manner, and since then at Hallett's Inn, I hear it daily, and as I meet my old friends on the street they ask, what can be done to stop it; all claiming great damage to their cars, which of course we all know is true. "They all say that they would rather take the dust than to get their cars so covered with the dern mushy, oily stuff."

Education is useless without common sense, which applies particularly to roads and road building, and no matter how much you have, you've got to have education to put it into effect.

I think it is safe to say that every one of us have a desire to get increased wisdom and understanding in more ways than one, and this increase can only come through constant study of the subject in question; be it farming, trucking or good roads.

P. S.

Do you want a good concrete road around Lake Charlevoix? If you do, work for it. So far as I personally am concerned it will make no difference to me, but of one thing you can rest assured, and that is this: That such a road would pay for itself in less time than you know it, just the same as it has on the Dixie Highway."

Uncle George says: This may be my last letter, but I hope to finish my 14 years getting the balance of the Dixie Highway covered with concrete—as well as the road around Lake Charlevoix.

Sincerely,

Uncle George H. Van Pelt

Rodents Damage Trees in Winter and Spring

Rodents gnaw the bark from the trunks of the trees, usually in midwinter or very early spring under cover of heavy snow and when the more favored food supply is running low, although they may do this damage any time in the late fall.

The Department of Agriculture points out that methods of prevention vary according to the species of mouse and the cultural practices followed. In much of the eastern United States pine mice are present and their injury is usually inflicted below the surface of the ground. It is necessary to destroy such mice unless they are driven out by deep and clean cultivation of the whole orchard. Where meadow mice only are concerned, such methods as mechanical protectors and repellant washes are practicable, although the destruction of the mice is preferable.

Origin of Sudan Grass

Sudan grass in this country is the result of a small package of seed, containing not more than eight ounces, which was brought to the Department of Agriculture from its native country in Africa in 1909. The value of the crop in the United States in 1918, when the last estimate was made, was more than $10,500,000. This crop is the result of a systematic search made by the department for a grass suitable to soil and climatic conditions of the South and West.

Now—A New Race of Motor Cars!

Thanks to RED CROWN ETHYL GASOLINE

CHRYSLER has just announced a new high compression engine. Undoubtedly other manufacturers will do the same thing. That means a new race of motor cars—swifter—more flexible—more powerful!

Now that Red Crown Ethyl is on the market, high compression engines can be built and operated. Red Crown-Ethyl Gasoline is a high compression fuel.

For years engineers have wanted to build high compression engines. They could not because there was no fuel to feed them. The usual type of gasoline knocks and loses power when compressed beyond certain limits.

Red Crown Ethyl "Knocks Out That Knock".

You'll hardly recognize your old car if you feed it Red Crown Ethyl! Power when you need it—speed when you want it—get-up and go every mile! An engine lively and eager and quick!

Red Crown Ethyl "knocks out that knock"—uses carbon. Carbon deposits raise the compression of your engine. That's why—with old type gasoline—carbon causes knocks. With Red Crown Ethyl it's different: Red Crown Ethyl is a high compression fuel. The more carbon—the higher the compression—the better Red Crown Ethyl works.

This remarkable gasoline gives you the benefits of high compression. That's the scientific reason back of its remarkable performance. That's why hundreds of thousands of motorists in the Middle West will use no other gasoline!

NORMAL SCHOOL NOT TO BE BUILT

BOARD OF EDUCATION VOTES THERE IS NO NEED

Governor Issued Statement Containing Minutes of Session Held Last Saturday

The proposed fifth normal school, to have been erected at Petoskey, became virtually a dead issue last Saturday and the way was paved for reversion of the $350,000-legislative appropriation to the general fund of the state July 1.

Announcement to that effect was contained in a statement issued by Gov. Fred W. Green containing a resolution passed by an executive session of the state board of education Saturday, which reiterated the stand of the board of education during the last administration that "there is no immediate need for a fifth normal school."

As a result of the announcement, it was generally predicted at the capitol that nothing further would be done toward construction of a school at Petoskey or anywhere else in the immediate future. The board of education had selected Petoskey for the site of the school, but former Governor Alex J. Groesbeck refused to give the necessary gubernatorial sanction to the selection.

The $350,000 appropriation of the 1925 legislature will automatically revert to the general fund of the state July 1 unless work is actually started on the projected institution. Commenting on the situation, the governor declared he did not expect to be asked by the board of education to approve the Petoskey site, or any other site, and he strongly intimated that no action whatever would be taken, thus permitting the appropriation to lapse into the general fund.

The governor's statement was the minutes of the meeting of the board held Saturday. The matter was placed before the board in the form of a resolution that the board reiterate its statement of last year that a fifth normal school was not necessary at this time. The vote was F. J. Jeffers and Frank Cody for the resolution and A. M. Freeland against it. This was about the way the vote had stood at the meeting last year. The board had on two occasions designated Petoskey as the site of the normal school proposed by the state legislature and for which the legislature had appropriated $350,000.

GRAHAM BROTHERS SALES SET RECORD

Reach Highest Total in Co's. History for Corresponding Period.

Bearing out reports for good business activity throughout the country, Graham Brothers, a division of Dodge Brothers, Inc., announce that retail deliveries of Graham Brothers trucks and commercial cars to customers in the United States and Canada during the week ended June 18th exceeding the corresponding week of any previous year in the company's history.

Not only does the record of 1,415 trucks and commercial cars delivered during this one week to domestic and Canadian purchasers exceed the corresponding week of the record-breaking year 1926 by a substantial margin but it is the biggest week so far in 1927, continuing the marked upward trend since last January.

While good business in general is indicated by Graham Brothers' remarkable increase in sales, Dodge Brothers dealers, who sell and service these trucks throughout the world, report that the recent advances in design and performance of Graham Brothers trucks, including the more powerful and economical new engine introduced early in June, have created demand and enthusiasm among purchasers probably unequaled in the history of the motor truck industry.

A MAN'S PRAYER

"Teach me that 60 minutes make an hour, 16 ounces a pound, and 100 cents a dollar. Help me to live so that I can lie down at night with a clear conscience and unhaunted by the faces of those whom I have brought pain. Grant that I may earn my meal ticket on the square, and in earning it may I do unto others as I would have them do unto me. Deafen me to the jingle of tainted money. Blind me to the faults of the other fellows and reveal to me my own. Guide me so that each night when I look across the table at my wife, who has been a blessing to me, that I will have nothing to conceal. Keep me young enough to laugh with little children and sympathetic so as to be considerate of old age. And when comes the day of deepening shadows, may the ceremony be short and the epitaph simple, 'Here Lies a Man.'"

The writer of this article received the above prayer, printed on a blotter, which was mailed to him by a live spirited conscientious business man. The blotter now occupies a conspicuous place under the plate glass top of his desk. It is the first thing read in the morning and the last thing read at night. Each time it is read, a new meaning is revealed, and an added inspiration received to make the day's work measure up to the thoughts expressed in the prayer.

I wonder how many of us really conceive what the meaning of sixty minutes is? Do we give to our work, sixty minutes of honest, conscientious effort for every hour supposed to be spent in work? Do we give full measure, heaped up and running over? If a thorough analysis were to be made of the actual amount of time and effort expended for every day's work, I am afraid that there would be many of us who could not lie down at night with clear consciences, unhaunted by the wasted effort and time of the day. Are we true to our own best selves, so that when we go home at night we can kiss the lips of our children with the consciousness that our words and actions during the day will bear the closest scrutiny, and meet the gaze of our wives with clearer and open countenances? Can we really laugh with the little children and sympathize with old age?

If we can answer all of these questions in a straightforward and positive manner, then we need have no fear of the deepening shadows which are sure to come some time to all of us, and we can have said of us when we lay down the working tools of our profession, "Well done, good and faithful servant—enter thou into the joys of the Lord."

BAPTIST CHURCH

The delightful impromptu program of last Sunday remains with us. Miss Erma Carey gave us a solo of rare sweetness and we were grateful for her brief vacation and homecoming. Mr. Clark of Flint, sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" with a delightful interpretation. We will long remember it. The informal address of Mr. Lee Wilson of Ripley, Tennessee, was much enjoyed. We anticipate his annual visit.

Next Sunday morning Rev. E. G. Leisman of Gaylord will be the preacher, and in the evening at 7:30 Prof. Newton H. Carman of Lombard college, will lecture on China to a union meeting. He should have a house full. Other services will be as usual. A cordial invitation to all.

Make Indian Survey

According to a recent survey, as of June 1, there are three hundred and fifty four Indians residing within the confines of Charlevoix county. Of the entire number, ninety-eight lived on the Beaver Island group, sixty-one in Charlevoix and the others at various points in the county. Several families have motored from other counties into Charlevoix since making the survey and increasing the number to approximately four hundred at this time.

EDITOR ENJOYS FINE STRAWBERRIES

Lays Away a Quart Box Containing 41 Delicious Ones

Once or twice on the average, but frequently oftener, the editor of the Courier is remembered by his rural friends in the form of a box of berries or other fruit of some kind.

The most recent gift was a box of strawberries from A. B. Chew of Hayes township. The box contained a quart, of the Senator variety, and 41 of the delicious, highly flavored fruit filled the box. Mr. Chew says within a week he will bring us another box with berries still larger. We are awaiting his arrival and if he fails us, this is one time we intend to camp on his trail.

Mr. Chew's berry patch is on his farm in Hayes township, about eight miles from Charlevoix. All told he has nine and one half acres of bearing fruit. Of the Senator variety he has three and one half acres, heavily laden with fruit. And the best part of it all is that the owner will reap a nice profit from his product this season.

FIRE DEPARTMENT HAD VERY BUSY WEEK END

Answered Eleven Alarms Over the Fourth Holidays

The local fire department answered calls for eleven small fires over the past week end for grass and small roof fires, none of which were of any serious consequence.

A grass fire last Saturday afternoon on Belvedere road beyond the railroad crossing threatened the Sinclair Oil station's storage tanks, and after considerable effort was put out. Timely work by the department and nearby residents saved the tanks from destruction with a heavy loss to the owners.

Careless campers and tourists are blamed for most all of the small fires, which started from lighted matches, cigarettes and the like being thrown from automobiles.

The building has been recently re-painted and when improvements underway are completed, the office will be up-to-date in every way.

Make arrangements for small parties by calling

PHONE 240 - F. 31 Boyne City Ex.

"We who represent an organized party in this state. We know you're out to get a primary nomination, and as you've got money and a good press agent, it doesn't seem easy to prevent you. These primaries play the devil with party obligations. They encourage the malcontents and the ambitious."

"Which am I?" Raxon asked, smiling.

"You're ambitious, Raxon. You are overambitious. The Bard of Avon says that's the thing which brought the angels down."

"This is the first time I have been called an angel," said the other.

McKimber frowned. He detested flippancy.

"I prefer to think of you as ambitious than to suppose you are wanting to split our ticket and let Westfield in. If one strong man with his party's solid backing runs against Westfield, he'll beat him."

"That cheers me very much," Raxon replied.

It was not easy for the domineering McKimber to hold himself in. He was accustomed to respect in the field of politics.

"You won't be the man," he exclaimed.

"And you will?"

"Unless any spiteful malcontent deliberately proves a traitor. Up-state, which I control politically, has no use for you. It doesn't know about you. I asked a man from Wayne county the other day if he'd ever heard of Paul Raxon." McKimber smiled. "He said he never went to moving pictures."

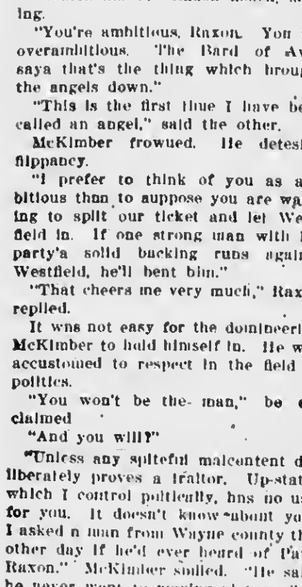
"Your mistake," Raxon said, "was that you did not ask his wife. The women know me. McKimber. My 'Better Architecture Leagues' are springing up everywhere. There's a flourishing one in Wayne county. The larger cities, such as Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and Utica, are taking the thing up admirably. Politicians of your old-fashioned kind resent women in public life and you don't conceal this. Politically, women are hypersensitive because they know they have not accomplished what the world expected of them. I admit your up-state strength exceeds mine, but what about New York city?"

"A stronghold for Westfield."

"Not so much as you imagine." Raxon yawned a little, as though the subject wearied him. "At all events, it will be an interesting experiment."

"Experiment!" McKimber cried, shocked at his callousness. "It will be a tragedy for the party."

"It will be your finish."



"He Said He Never Went to Moving Pictures."

Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

torted. His manner had no animus in it. He had neither raised his voice nor shown heat as McKimber had. "Like all old-time politicians, you lack mental agility and you won't reconcile yourself to new conditions. In the past you have been of great use to the organization. Today you are merely amusing."

McKimber flushed red and instinctively clenched his big fists. Paul Raxon noted the gesture.

"That demonstrates it perfectly," he said. "When you lose a point or hear a disagreeable truth you want to hit a man. Elemental stuff. We are here to discuss political conditions in this state. I think that is how you put it."

"You want me to back down and leave the field to you. I refuse. If the party thinks I've the better chance, they'll knife you in a minute. It isn't possible, surely, that you believe gratitude has anything to do with practical politics?"

McKimber did not answer immediately. He was conscious that he had allowed personal antagonism to color his conversation. He adopted the confidential tone which had often won success for him.

"Raxon," he began, "I'm putting my cards on the table."

"Save yourself the trouble," Raxon replied. "I can see them just as well when you hold them in your hands. All you need to understand is that I have a better chance than you to go to Washington."

"If we two fight each other, Westfield goes," McKimber said earnestly. "We need a senator at Washington."

"That's why I intend to go, as you may as well tell your friends. I've been working much longer than you can guess for this very end."

"Don't you realize you will be denounced as a traitor to your cause?"

"If the cause means so much to you, throw your influence my way. If you did that, Westfield wouldn't have a chance."

"You're d—d well right," McKimber shouted. "The man I indorse would get in even if you were he. I'll tell you just this, Raxon. From now on I'm going to devote myself to showing you up for the crooked ward politician you are. My God! To think you expect me to work for you!"

"If you're going to be abusive," Raxon said coldly, "we may as well stop."

McKimber struggled into a little less violent mood. He might yet be able to divert the Raxon ambition to some less lofty height.

"I take that back," he said. "I recognize that you deserve some reward for what you've done in the past, but I'm entitled to the nomination. It is my just reward I want." McKimber's voice became almost conciliatory. "Don't you see the justice of it? I want in my old age the opportunity of serving my country."

"And I," Paul Raxon sneered, "want in my early middle age the opportunity of serving myself. Why drag your country in? Do you think I'm a political idealist just because bad architecture offends me?"

McKimber rose to his feet. He knew he had lost, and he wanted to go before he forgot the slender, sneering man was his host.

"They told me you were a dangerous man," he said slowly, "but I don't think they gauged your rottenness correctly."

"I take good care to keep that from them."

"But you're giving it away to me, a confessed rival."

Raxon laughed. The spectacle of this tall, portly man, whose career had been so successful, amused him.

"The trouble with you, McKimber," he said, "is that you don't understand you are a corpse. Politically, you are dead and buried. You are not a rival. Don't flatter yourself to that extent."

"I tell you," McKimber thundered, "all the world shall know what has passed between us."

"If you don't lower your voice, all the world will hear. You're not a broadcasting station. Sit down. I sent for you because there's a lot I have to say which you wouldn't care to miss."

Reluctantly, McKimber sank back in his chair. He was enwrapped by a certain and unwelcome uneasiness. The man facing him seemed so secure, so unconcerned, so sure of ultimate triumph.

"The first thing to tell you," Raxon began, "is, I am going to Washington. You will quit in my favor and lend me all your great influence. Naturally you must have an excuse which seems a true one. I have it all ready prepared. You are too heavy even for your height, and the pouches under your eyes are unhealthy signs. You had better drop out, because your specialist tells you there is heart and kidney trouble. I shall refer to the fact in my speeches with great regret."

McKimber spoke with deliberation.

"They told me you were dangerous, and I know you are a traitor to your party, but not until this moment did I believe you were absolutely crazy. They call your sort of madness megalomania." McKimber rose to his feet. "I've met all sorts of knaves and fools in politics, but you're the worst yet."

"What a senator you would have made!" Raxon commented. "Do you suppose I should have talked like this if I had not been certain you were harmless, a rattler with his poison sacs extracted? My success has come mainly because I understand human motivation. I'm going to show you how it is that when you leave here it will be to start a Raxon boom in your own city. Sit down, McKimber."

John McKimber, who prided himself upon taking orders from none, dropped again into his seat. It seemed to him he was talking to a Raxon he had not until now understood. He found himself noticing what a cruel mouth the other had, and how in those brown eyes were little flecks of red. Paul Raxon gazed at him as an executioner might stare at a prisoner delivered to him for death. McKimber knew that he had been holding too cheaply one who had a dynamic and evil personality.

"If I stay," he said huskily, "it will be to hear you give away more secrets about yourself. Perhaps I shall learn by what trickery you got this place, and how it was you sent Hazen Brewer to his grave."

"I got this place," said Raxon with his old urbanity, "as I have got everything else in my life, by using men as tools. I studied men and found them pugnacious, noisy, and vain. It was hard to influence them by my subdued personality, even though I had the right on my side. I do not mix well. I knew that had to be overcome. In other words, I determined to develop something to make up for it. My success has come from finding, almost unerringly, the weak spot in every man's make-up. I got my chance at International Motors by finding out so much of Brewer's life in London that he was forced to take me in to protect himself."

"You're a d—d blackmailer," McKimber cried hoarsely.

"I am," Raxon agreed. "The phrase does not offend me in the least. Why should it? Is there any more powerful weapon? Most traitors in the great war were forced into espionage because the enemy threatened exposure as the price of refusal. In the drawer before me are two articles. One is an automatic pistol." Raxon opened the drawer and put the weapon on the writing table at which he sat. "I am not going to threaten you with it. That is old-fashioned, stupid stuff. I am merely reminding you I have it at hand if you should attack me."

There was undisguised amazement in the bigger man's voice.

"Attack you? What for?"

"Because exhibit 'B' will cause you considerable distress, and I have known men of your type to see red in such moments." Raxon balanced a square envelope in his thin hands.

"If it's blackmail you are thinking of in connection with me," said McKimber scornfully, "you are wasting time. It's you who are using old-fashioned stupid stuff, not me. I tell you, my life is an open book."

"With one blank page," Raxon remarked. "I've cut that page. It cost time and money, but it was the best investment I ever made. Think back a bit over this life of yours that is an open book. Is there anything in it that might hurt you if it got out?"

"Not a thing," cried McKimber defiantly. But there was lacking that ring of confidence he had previously shown. Fear was mastering him. There was no madness about this steady-eyed man opposite.

"Very well," said Raxon briskly. "You force me to speak. You talk of yourself as a self-made man who rose from being a machinist to the ownership of a vast organization. That's true. In Who's Who it's written for all the world to see. But there are certain omissions. I can supply them. That's why you are here, McKimber, to listen to the writing between the lines. When you were twenty you left Utica for St. Louis and got a job in the Davis foundry. There you studied drafting, and three years later, having made good, entered the employ of William Graham, Mrs. McKimber's uncle, who owned the Rochester Steel and Iron mills. Later you married his niece."

"Well," said McKimber, his throat constricting, "what about it?"

"Your employer singled her out of all his relatives and left his fortune to her on condition she married you. He had confidence in you. He had read the open book and liked the contents. If he had had access to that uncut page, he would have known that your first wife was still living."

"I divorced her," McKimber cried. "I can prove it."

"The decree was not made absolute until three months after you married your employer's niece. It's a nice legal point, and I've no doubt his other nephews and nieces would be quite ready to fight it. If the condition of getting the fortune was your marriage to Graham's niece, you did not fulfill it, because you did not marry her. A bigamous union is not marriage in the eyes of the law. You must have known that, or you wouldn't have gone through a second ceremony. The first marriage was by a justice of the peace. The second was at a New York church. You obtained Graham's fortune under false pretenses, and you were a bigamist. It's no good denying it."

"It was all done innocently," McKimber protested. "As God is my witness, I thought I was free to marry. In the divorce suit there was nothing that reflected on me personally."

"What has that to do with it?" Raxon asked cynically. "It may be that you thought you were free to marry. But that makes no difference. The world won't think that. Westfield won't think that. Nor will the big papers that are supporting him. You're through, McKimber, that's all. You'll never hold public office again if this gets out." That's not all. You are going to help me into the senate, and your friends are going to help. If your friends try and knife me, you are the one who will bleed."

McKimber sat motionless. Raxon cared nothing about his innocence. Guilty or innocent, McKimber was the loser. He turned dull eyes toward the envelope Raxon held up.

"In this is the entry of your first marriage. Someone cut a page out of the register and offered it to me for sale. I bought it. There are also some letters you wrote to your first wife when you found she was a secret drinker. Her son by a second marriage said them to my agent. Pathetic letters in their way, but you know how the modern yellow newspaper laughs at pathetic things, especially when they affect political opponents. I hope the need for publication may never come. Some day they may be yours."

Indian or Sinclair Gas

We can furnish you either one at our Oil Station

Over production of crude oil and subsequently gasoline has lowered the price of the product and at the same time forced refiners to close their cracking plants on account of the narrow margin of profit and heavy expense of operation. This condition has flooded the market with straight run gasoline. Wide-spread disatisfaction will be prevalent among motorists who have heretofore used higher test fuel, because cracked gasoline has become a recognized product on account of its anti-knock feature. The Indian Refining Company feels that its customers are entitled to the same quality as heretofore, regardless of price conditions. The operating cost of making cracked gasoline is greater than the cost of straight gasoline, but cracked gasoline gives the quality—power, anti-knock. Try a tank full from our station and be convinced.

"What do you want for that envelope, if it contains what you say?"

"You'll never have half enough money to buy it. Why do you persist in underestimating me? Realize here and now that you are beaten. You will never go to the senate. If I don't go, then Westfield wins, and you will be the traitor to your party. No further discussion is necessary. What is it to be? Absolute obedience, or do these things go to Westfield?"

McKimber's head dropped. There was a consciousness of physical feebleness about him, a devitalization which he had never before experienced. It was curious," he reflected, that the sense of anger had left him. It was the measure of his defeat.

"I can't talk now. Tomorrow my brain will be clearer." Unsteadily he rose to his feet and walked to the door.

Paul Raxon watched him go out, a broken man. Oriental in his absence of pity, he enjoyed humiliating one of McKimber's domineering sort. To bring low such gave him an increased sense of power. He disliked big, arrogant men with loud voices and assured gestures.

Raxon was aroused from his pleasing reflections by a noise on the door. It was Alfred, the dark footman, who entered and told him that he was wanted on the long-distance telephone. Raxon shut the precious envelope in his wall-safe and passed out, not even glancing at the man who stood respectfully at the door.

When Fleming Bradney was assured that Raxon had gone, he hurried back into the room. Then he did a curious thing. He kneeled down by one of the bookcases and jerked back a board with a screw-driver. Then he peered into the darkness where he had recently been mistaken for a rat. Bradney reached into this space and pulled out Nita, head first.

She wore riding breeches and golf stockings, and at first could hardly stand upright. The constraint of the position had become torture. In Nita's hands was a notebook, several pencils, and a flashlight. Every word which had passed was taken down. It was her task now to go to her room and transcribe it for Peter Mliman's benefit.

It was not until the two had passed the danger zone that they spoke. "Well?" Bradney demanded, "did you get [illegible]"

"I got everything," she answered. He wondered why there was no exultation in her voice.

Bradney resumed his duties, which consisted mainly in handing refreshments to thirsty dancers. For a little while he stood by Barnes.

"It's all right," Bradney whispered; "she says she has everything."

"She must be tickled to death at getting it—eh?"

"On the contrary, she looked depressed. I didn't understand it at the time. Of course, there was physical discomfort and constraint, and the possibility of being found out."

"She'll be all right tomorrow," said Barnes cheerfully.

Later he had the opportunity to talk it over with Viscount de Guilhain.

"Well?" said the sculptor eagerly. "What happened?"

He listened to what Barnes had to say.

"Has Nita shown you anything yet?"

"No. None of us can go to her room because she's supposed to be out for the evening, and it's locked. Bradney says she wasn't as cheerful as she might have been. I wonder why."

"She might have heard something damaging to McKimber."

"Why should that distress her?"

"Haven't you yet seen that your girl and Robin are in love with one another? My God," Malet went on passionately, to Barnes' extreme surprise, "are you so blind?"

Floyd Malet had witnessed the whole affair. He was more sensitive to it than his companions, because he had fallen hopelessly in love with her himself. It was one of those charming and romantic attachments which come to men of middle years and bring them at first an agony that thaw transmutes to the truest of friendships, never wholly separated from the love which brought it to flower.

"Nita would do nothing to upset our plans," Barnes said. "If she has one quality above others that I admire, it is loyalty. She'll stick by us."

"I didn't doubt her loyalty," Malet said quietly. "There is something which brings in its train great suffering. I leave tomorrow. I'm afraid I have not been much use."

"Nita's as good as fired," said Barnes. "Gertrude Raxon fights her

"Nita's as Good as Fired," Said Barnes.

all the time. I shall be glad to get out of it. I've been talking to the Swedish maids about it. They seem certain she's going and don't want her generous wage-scale to be cut down."

Barnes was presently called into Mr. Raxon's presence.

"It appears," said Raxon, "that you told the other man to fetch me to the telephone for a long-distance call. Central tells me there have been no long-distance calls since luncheon. How did that happen?" He looked keenly at 'Enry.

"Central!" said 'Enry with lofty scorn. "If I was you, sir, I'd complain about that young woman. I've 'ad to speak to her very severe myself, but she don't care. With your permission, I'd like to call 'er up and give 'er a piece of my mind."

"It would not be a valuable present," Raxon said. "I will see that this does not occur again."

"Anything else, sir?" 'Enry asked, a trace of insolence in his voice.

CHAPTER X

Mrs. McKimber was only concerned that the girl her son chose should be sufficiently in love with him. She loved beauty, and had been attracted to Agatha at first sight. Mrs. McKimber was prepared to help her son. She realized that it would not be easy to bring her husband to agree with her. McKimber had learned that a senator, even from the Empire state, does not ex officio find the doors open to him that shelter the great names in American society. He wished Robin to marry into a family which had entree to the best.

When Robin had gladly made the sacrifice, he found the girl put obstacles in the way. She did not flutter to his arms. She was nonchalant to his King Cophetua. Gloomily he wondered if she was fond of some other man. The viscount was good looking; he had poise and breeding. Agatha had been brought up in Europe, where disparity in age is less a bar to marriage than in the United States. They had met before. They had common acquaintances, and the De Guilhains, he was told, were all rich. Robin smoked many cigarettes over the problem. He was surprised to hear a knock at his door. It was his father who came in.

"Why, father," he cried, "is there anything the matter?" Mr. McKimber was stooped. His bold, resolute carriage was gone. He looked as one might who had undergone severe mental or physical strain.

"Not a thing," said the elder, with an effort at smiling. "I've been thinking, Robbie, and I see I have made a great many mistakes in my life."

Robin listened in silence. Never before had he heard his father in anything but an assured and contented mood.

"I tried to dictate to you awhile ago," said McKimber, "and I tried to dictate to the girl you're fond of. I told you if you didn't marry a girl I approved of we should pull apart. I told her that if anyone knowing what money you would inherit thought she could get it by marrying you without my consent, there wouldn't be any money."

Robin's face hardened.

"You had no right to do that. We may as well understand one another. I've asked Miss Brown to marry me. I haven't your social ambitions. If she won't marry me, nobody else will be asked."

"That's the right spirit," said McKimber. His son looked at him amazed. "A man who lets another dictate about whom he's to marry is a weakling and a coward. I didn't. The Grahams, all except old William, hated me. I wasn't well born or educated. I was a machinist and my hands were thick-fingered, and I hadn't any parlor tricks. I married your mother in spite of their lies and plots to separate us."

"Do you mean to say you approve of Miss Brown?"

"That's what I'm trying to tell you. I suppose you are wanting to know why I have changed. Robbie, don't ask me. There are things that happen in a man's life that change him instantly. It may be the ghost of old follies which rises to remind him of what he had forgotten. No, don't ask me, Robbie, but just bring the girl to your mother and me. She shall never want for love where we are."

He walked heavily from the room. His son could not comprehend this astounding change. There was a stricken look in his father's face. Not since Robin was a boy had he been called "Robbie." But his speculation on the cause of the change was lost in joy at what it meant to him. Agatha told him she would be back at about ten. He looked at the clock. It was past two. Eight weary hours before he could see her!

At seven he was on the golf links playing a few holes. Three hours to wait. At eight o'clock he saw her coming slowly in his direction.

"I didn't think you were going to return so early," he said, smiling. "Agatha, how lovely you look."

"I feel miserable," she said soberly.

"Darling," he whispered, "how can you feel miserable on this bright, glorious morning?"

Nothing could depress him now. There was a look in her eyes that told him what he wanted to know.

"You know, Robin, one isn't always free to do as one likes. I think if I had foreseen this week I should not have had courage enough to endure it. Robin, we must both of us forget it."

"Forget the only week I have lived," he cried. "Never." Her air of dejection communicated itself to him. "Tell me why I should?"

"There are so many things," she said slowly. "One is your father's objection. I like him because he sets such store by you, but I'm not going to come between you and him."

Robin laughed joyously. "Don't worry about him. He's for you now just as strongly as mother is. He thinks you are just the girl to look after me for life. You've conquered him. He just had to give in, so what more is there to say?"

Looking at him it seemed to the girl that the task she had set herself was beyond her strength. Why, she asked herself, had she kept heart-whole all her life to find in Robin McKimber the only man she could love? How could she tell him that she must choose between her sworn loyalty to her father and his comrades and her love for him? She was associated with men who had determined to get from Raxon's safe the documents which incriminated John McKimber and made the realization of his ambitions impossible. She saw, very clearly, what course Peter Mliman would pursue, and how in the carrying out of his plans of revenge he would have no consideration for the McKimbers.

"There is more to say," she told him, her voice trembling a little. "My dear, it is the hardest thing to say, Robin. It's good-by."

"Good-by," he repeated. "Agatha, what do you mean?"

"That I am leaving here today and shall not see you again. Don't ask me to explain. I can't tell you anything except that there is something which makes all the things I hoped impossible."

She could see the gray under his tanned skin. She knew she had wounded him bitterly. There was a terrible quietness in his distinct, clear voice.

"Then you never really loved me?"

"I did," she said simply; "that's what makes it so hard."

"If you love me," he cried, "nothing can come between us."

"Something has come between us. I do love you, Robin, and I shall never care for anyone else; but there is someone who needs me more than you do."

"I'm not going to say good-by," he said gently.

"But you must," she insisted. "It is all over, Robin. One little week of happiness and years and years of regret."

FISHING PAYS WELL AT ALPENA

Record Catch of Trout is Reported —300 Men at Work

A record catch of lake trout for the season so far by one of the local fish boats brings forcibly to the fore the extensiveness of the fishing industry at the port of Alpena.

The record catch, which amounted to 2,500 pounds, was lifted by the tug E. M. B. A., a "hook" catch, under the command of Capt. Louis Gunderson. Capt. Gunderson disposes of his catches through the agency of the Alcona Fish company.

Alpena's fisheries provide employment for about 300 men and at present there are seven steam tugs and at least 25 gas boats which ply out of Alpena or from points in the vicinity of Alpena.

An average of over 2,500,000 pounds of fish are shipped from this point yearly, which makes Alpena an important fishing port on Lake Huron and ranking with the largest on the Great Lakes. It is estimated that over $1,000,000 are invested in the industry here.

The fishing grounds in which the Alpena boats operate extend from Sturgeon Point, South to Presque Isle, north and go out fifty miles into Lake Huron.

The boat companies are the George Whitten company, operating two outfits; G. T. Montroy, Thunder Bay company, Fred. Piepkorn, Gunderson company, Lake Huron Fish company, The Lake Fish company and the Alcona Fish company.—Petoskey Evening News.

AT THE MOVIES

Huge War Scenes in Chaney War Films Are Impressive

With the huge rifles of battleships thundering their mighty salvos; thrilling battles on an Oriental plain; sensational attacks on weird Chinese villages with Chinese troops in action; a reproduction of a tropical cloudburst, one of the most terrible of storms, "Tell It To The Marines" epic of the Marine Corps, coming Saturday and Sunday to the Palace Theatre, marks one of the most elaborate production feats in the history of the screen.

The spectacle, a true story of life with the Marine Corps, was filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with the co-operation of the United States Government, which permitted the actors to take their places in the ranks of the regulars in battle practice with the Pacific fleet, and lent several hundred regular Maribes to stage a sham battle, as a Marine maneuver, for a spectacle in the new picture. The cast is one of the most notable assembled at the studio in months, augmented by men and officers from the Marine Base.

"30 Below Zero" Has Great Climax

Equipped with a gripping story and an excellent cast, Buck Jones opens a two day run at the Majestic Theatre next Saturday and Sunday in "30 Below Zero," Fox films version of John Stone's dramatic story of the north woods.

The cast includes Eva Novak, Paul Panzer, Harry Woods, Frank Butler, Henry Murdock, Vincent Howard and others.

"30 Below Zero," directed by Bob Kerr, has been called the best offering of the kind ever brought to the silver sheet. The story opens in New York and has a smashing climax in the snow country, where Buck performs some of the most hair raising stunts of his career.

Playground Equipped

The new playground equipment promised Michigan state parks by Governor Green has already found its way to the Burt Lake state park, just this side of Indian River. There are several large swings, a large and small slide and teeter boards, etc. The boats and bathing also are an attraction and are much in use by visitors.

Dairy Notes

Calves should have salt as soon as they begin to eat hay and grain.

• • •

Feed left in the trough spoils the cow's appetite for the next meal.

A cost sheet is a necessity in any business. Your milk sheet is your cost sheet.

• • •

The cow producing five gallons of milk daily cannot maintain her production long without some concentrated feed.

Nearly all feeds are selling at 50 per cent of their former value and liberal feeding makes dairying a good business.

• • •

Unclean surroundings are detrimental to the milk flow, for milk absorbs flavors and odors readily.

• • •

Silage fed to cows an hour before milking leaves an odor in the milk. Better feed it after milking, experienced dairymen agree.

• • •

It pays to use pure-bred dairy sires. South Dakota State college has found that their use on scrub or grade cows increases production in the first cross about 67 per cent.

Inspiration From Prayer

On all my expeditions, prayer made me stronger, morally and mentally, than any of my unpraying companions. It did not blind my eyes or dull my mind, or close my ears; but, on the contrary, it gave me confidence. It did more: It gave me joy, and pride, in my work, and lifted me hopefully over the 1,580 miles of forest tracks, eager to face the day's perils and fatigues.—Henry M. Stanley.

More People Buying Home Sites in Western Michigan Than Ever Before

More people are buying summer home sites in Western Michigan now than ever before in the history of the lake frontage movement, if the directors of the Development League of Western Michigan, all leading realtors from the counties in the West Michigan region, are doing a business representative of all the activity in the field.

At a meeting Monday of the Development League directors on the shores of Glen Lake near Traverse City, overlooking the famous Day Forests, where America's most exclusive northern resort development is under way, the realtors were unanimous not only in their opinion that more home seekers are turning to Western Michigan, but inquiries have been more numerous, rentals more advanced and the sale of farms increasing rapidly. They feel that the development of Western Michigan will proceed just as rapidly as the necessary capital for development projects for retail sale can be interested.

"People now want the great out-of-doors equipped with every advantage, convenience and comfort known to man before they are interested in it." B. R. Mondel of Manistee, sales manager for the Day Forests Estates, said. The Day Forests, he said, will have everything to special Western Union and long distance telephone lines before an estate is sold. The realtors cited several individual experiences to show that the higher the restrictions, the better the sales, and pointed out that the ordinary summer cottage is no longer the hapazard building of a few years ago, but n first class home, indicating that the trend is all toward better and more permanent summer homes in Western Michigan.

"Any fish in this lake?"

"I don't know—never go fishing."

"What kind of bait do they use?"

"Don't know. Minnows are best I guess."

"Where can I get some bait and a boat?"

"I don't know."

That was a conversation between a tourist and a hotel owner and manager on one of West Michigan's leading lakes, as reported by a leader in West Michigan tourist and resort activities. The result was that the hotel lost the business of a party of three tourists at least over night and possibly for a few days more. If that was all there was to it, West Michigan as a whole might not care, but the tourist got the inmpession that perhaps he wasn't wanted around, at least as a fisherman.

The conversation was merely evidence of a lack of proper service to our summer visitors, in the opinion of Clarence V. Smazel, executive secretary of the Development League of Western Michigan. "Every hotel man and everybody else in Western Michigan who comes in contact with the tourists and resorters should not only be able to give such information, but should know the principal highways, be able to direct people on pleasant and beautiful drives through the community and perform a dozen and one other similar services that would help to make the vacation guest feel that we want to see him have the best possible time while here."

"A Beulah lad who sold angleworms to fishermen last summer made $150; his dad made $300 from the minnow business which he carried on as a sideline. Those were real services and the people who wanted them did not hesitate to pay for them. They will pay for such services at any West Michigan lake shore and when those services are not supplied hotel and lodge men and others interested in the advancement of a community should see that they are. It's just as essential to sell a man angleworms if he wants them as it is to sell him a summer home if he wants it—and we have plenty of both in West Michigan to meet all demands."

JOHN F. STOWE'S UNCLE TOM'S CABIN

Will Be Given Here Tuesday Evening, July 12

Fashion in plays changes in many ways, but one may always be sure that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is being played in many places throughout the country.

The dramatization of Harriet Beecher Stowe's great book was made in 1854, and the first performance given at Troy, N. Y.; the same year.

There were in 1862, sixteen companies in this country playing "Uncle Tom's Cabin" under canvas and the play has been acted uninterruptedly since it was first brought out. Some of the cheap, butchered and burlesqued versions may have changed in some ways, but the version bearing the Stowe brand has never changed in any particular. The name Stowe is to "Uncle Tom's Cabin" what Rogers is to silverware.

The early performers in this play were not called "Uncle Tommers," in those days. That name was given them in later years, when the country became flooded with cheap companies playing the piece, and advertisements in the dramatic papers read: "Uncle Tommers" wanted.

The Jno. F. Stowe motorized "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company is the only show in America today with the undeniable right to use the original and dramatization of the play as Mr. Stowe is the sole owner of the original and only manuscript taken from the book, with Harriet Beecher Stowe's permission, she having bequeathed it to him, her favorite nephew.

A big free street parade is given on the prominent streets and a high class orchestra entertains at intervals during the performance. A troupe of jubilee singers will present quaint pastimes of plantation life in the way of cake walks, buck and wing dancing and jubilee singing along with other high class vaudeville acts between the acts of the play.

The Stowe Company, with its scenic effects, its electrical accessories and its head-line specialties will be found to be the best and largest in America.

POULTRY

GOOD CARE COUNTS WITH HEN FLOCKS

Summarizing a year's reports of 31 Minnesota poultry record flocks in 19 counties, Corn E. Cooke, poultry specialist with the agricultural extension service, University of Minnesota, finds that one location is about as good as another in Minnesota for keeping poultry; that there is no one most profitable breed; that improved feeding more than pays for itself in increased returns; that good housing is essential to good returns, and that Minnesota farm flocks are an asset to the farm business.

Also the records seem to show that increased annual net returns can be expected from a high egg production, a low feed cost, and the selling of poultry and eggs to advantage, especially for breeding purposes.

Six breeds are represented in the 31 flocks. The average number of eggs laid per hen was 128 and the average feed cost per hen for the year was $1.95. The average net return per bird was $2.53. In the ten flocks having the highest production, the actual feed cost was $2.04 per hen as compared with a cost of $1.86 in the ten lowest producing flocks. Figured in terms of a dozen eggs the high-producing flocks did the best with feed costs amounting to only 15.04 cents per dozen eggs, while it was 25 cents a dozen in the low producing flocks. The average was 18 cents a dozen. In other words, it costs more to produce more eggs, but the increased production brings a greater return.

Rooster Needs Special Feeding and Management

The rooster should have special feeding and management so as to keep up his vigor, vitality, constitution and activity, says H. A. Bittenbender, head of the poultry husbandry department at Iowa State college.

"Care must be taken in the selection of roosters, but even after the proper males have been put into the flock. It is entirely possible to ruin the chances of getting a large number of fertile eggs," says Mr. Bittenbender. "First, have the right proportion of females in the flock. Generally we can use the following guides: For Mediterranean breeds, in the early part of the season, one male to 14 females, and as the season advances increase to 25; for American breeds, one male to ten females early in the season and one to 15 later; for Asiatic and English breeds, in most cases it has been found best to use a lesser number of females than of the American breeds."

One good method of managing the rooster is to keep the hens that are not laying in a pen by themselves, and as they come into laying, put them into the breeding pens. In this way it is possible to insure a greater percentage of fertility from the ones that are laying during the earlier part of the season. It is not necessary to have a trap nest in order to do this.

Wintering Turkeys Not a Very Difficult Task

As soon as the turkeys, which have been fed for Christmas holidays, have been marketed the ration which was used during the fattening period, no doubt consisting largely of corn, may be reduced.

A breeding flock should be brought through the winter in good flesh and care should be taken not to have excess fat. Corn is a good winter food, but it is not considered best to make more than one-third of ration corn. A mixture of corn, wheat and oats in equal parts will serve as the main part of the ration.

As long as it is possible for the turkeys to range through the woods and over the field one feeding a day is sufficient. When the fields become covered with snow it may be necessary to increase the grain feeding. Green food is very essential and can be supplied in the form of carrots, turnips, cabbage, beets, etc. Meat scraps, sour milk, fresh ground bone and oyster shell will supply food which is very essential.

Take care of the flock this winter, and next year you will be rewarded for your efforts and work.

Have Plenty of Nests

Every poultry house should be supplied with plenty of nests so that each hen may have an opportunity to have the sole use of a nest when she wants to lay. One nest for each two hens is not too many, but two to five hens will do pretty well. Nests should be about 12 inches by 14 inches, and at least 12 inches deep. The opening should be about 8 inches wide and 9 inches deep. This will allow for enough straw in the bottom to make a soft nest.

White Orpington Breed

The White Orpington is one of the large breeds of chickens. The males should weigh 10 pounds and the adult hens around 8 pounds. They are fairly good layers the first year and lay a good-sized brown egg. Of course, the laying is more a matter of feed, care and breeding than it is of the breed. They are good mothers. Hens after their first laying year are likely to be broody a great deal and do not lay as well. For this reason pullets are favored for laying.

"We Serve Michigan"

What Better Railroad Service Has Meant to Business

Agricultural commodities have shown an upward tendency in prices during the current year, while the course of industrial and raw material prices has taken a downward trend. We have been going through a period of price re-adjustments—always a critical time for business—but, in this instance, there were not the usual accompanying shocks to business peculiar to such periods.

The major reason for this absence of disturbances in business is that smaller inventories are being carried nowadays since the railroad service of the country assures certain and speedy delivery. Traders carry smaller stocks, and business, therefore, is carried on with less capital and with fewer hazards.

More stabilized business conditions are assured American business, and with these, consequently, failures become less likely and less frequent.

What the workings of the Federal Reserve Act proves to be to business, through the stabilizing of credits, the improved steam railroad transportation service is accomplishing through its regular and its prompt deliveries. So the large outlays to better the service have justified themselves. Both expedients work to the same end in their respective spheres. They avert the shocks.

In Michigan, this is particularly true. Vast sums, in recent years, have been expended to achieve this new standard of service. Seven of the nine railroads serving Michigan alone are expending this year nearly $26,000,000 in new engines and cars and in improvements and betterments which will continue these stabilizing forces.

These expenditures, too, were made right at home, and at a time when the lull in industry, through which we have just passed, was at its low ebb. Therefore, these $26,000,000, going largely to labor, raw materials and manufactured commodities, served appreciably to buoy up conditions.

Michigan railroads have, therefore, been more than local common-carriers. They have, through their service, removed some of the hazards inherent in business in former years.

LANSING MAN TAKEN ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Arrested Last Friday and Is Being Held On Rape Charge

Floyd Eggleston of Lansing, who has been employed by a local painter for some time past, was arrested last Friday and placed in the county jail to await hearing on a charge of rape.

Eggleston and his wife had been camping near Susan Lake, while the former was working here in the city, and there became acquainted with a family living near by, whose 14 year old daughter, it is alleged, he picked up in his car and took into the woods near the Indian camp grounds last Friday and attempted assault upon her. He was frustrated by his wife and the girl's mother, who became suspicious and watched him. They saw him pick he girl up and called officers.

When arrested by deputy Charles Marshall that evening, Eggleston had his luggage packed and was about to leave town.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING DEMONSTRATION

State Landscape Specialist to Visit County

According to B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent, O. I. Cregg, extension specialist in landscape architecture will be in Charlevoix county on July 21st for the purpose of making planting plans for beautifying five different farm homes.

These plans will be personally supervised by Mr. Cregg, and the actual work will start next spring.

Mr. Mellencamp will be glad to receive requests for these demonstrations as soon as possible from farmers who wish to make their homes more attractive and to bring out the natural beauties that sometimes are there but are hidden.

If at all possible we hope to select these demonstrations in various sections of the county, in order to make it convenient for all interested parties to attend.

This work to be carried on will be the first of its kind and we hope that the interest displayed will be great enough to insure more of it in the future.

Charlevoix friends will be interested to learn of the marriage of Edith E. Chew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Chew of Hayes township, and Fermor W. Simpson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Simpson of Royal Oak, which occurred at the home of the bride's parents, on Monday, July 4th, which date was the 27th wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

Rev. Herman Burns of the Baptist church performed the ceremony, using the beautiful ring ceremony. The wedding was attended by only immediate relatives of the bride and groom, who were attended by Miss Iola Chew, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, and Glenn Bearss of Royal Oak, the best man. Mrs. Frank Bearss, sister of the groom, played the wedding march. The ceremony was followed by a wedding dinner.

Hundreds of Visitors Go to Island For Fourth

One of the biggest celebrations of July 4th in Northern Michigan occurred at St. James, Beaver Island, where several hundred persons gathered for the day's outing, ball game, fire works and musical program.

The Str. America carried the Petoskey baseball team from that city besides several picnic parties and the Charlevoix city band. The Str. Stanford from this city took a large crowd over.

The event went over so smoothly and there was so much real enjoyment shown that the committee in charge started arranging for a 1928 celebration, even before the 1927 event had closed at midnight.

The music by the Charlevoix band was much enjoyed, for the islanders have to depend on the radio and phonograph records for most of their band music. Seldom do they hear or see a visiting hand at their kingdom out in Lake Michigan.

Petoskey won the ball game by a three to two score, after some clever playing by both organizations. In the evening there was an attractive display of fire works and a big dancing party.

WINTER SPORTS PROVE POPULAR

Northern City Representatives to Meet in Petoskey

Replies to invitations from the Michigan winter sports committee are pouring in on Chairman McManus of Petoskey in such numbers as to indicate clearly that nearly every city and town in the state are interested in helping form and carry out a definite program of sports and pastimes, which will put Michigan on the map as rivalling Switzerland and other foreign countries.

Every reply indicates several business men from the towns responding will meet in Petoskey, July 11, at 10:00 a. m. in the Cushman Hotel. As the meeting place is centrally located, the session will draw heavily from both upper and lower peninsla.

The committee will present preliminary suggestions and leave the delegates to enlarge upon them and finally adopt the meeting's decisions into a yearly program. Among the suggestions will be that each city and town entering the program do so whole heartedly and prepare to stage many winter sport activities and to sell the idea to its own people and section.

ENROUTE TO ATLANTIC OCEAN

CONVICT SHIP NOW HERE WILL CLOSE JULY 18

Hundreds From All Points of Community Have Visited Ship Since Its Arrival

Dramatic scenes are portrayed with vivid and startling effect agoard the old British convict ship "Success," most nged of all ships afloat in the world, now docked at Charlevoix. With the first step over the gunwails of this historic vessel, one is returned to resistless amazement with vivid and startling effect aboard to the early eighteenth century. One moves in an environment thoroughly realistic of the past—the present in the hollow of his hand unnoticed.

To view the exterior of this aneient craft—the floating tomh of Enst Indian ship-workers of three quarters and one century ago—is indeed, sufficient to inspire the curiosity of the most complacent soul. The hull of the old ship is seamed and pocked with age and scarred by ocean waves of three centuries. With outlines grotesque, to the modera mind, with bulging and yellow sides, the "Success" bears no constructive marks of a swift vessel. Yet, craftsmen in ships of steel are quick to pay word tribute to her builders.

Launched at Moulmein, in Burma, British East India, in 1790, this old crnft is built throughout of Burmese teak, massive timber of iacomparable strength and durnbility. In early days, the "Success" was considered n queen ship of her type. Designed as a square rigged and armed East Indian merchant vessel, carrying wealthy European and Indian nobles ns her passengers, she rode the vast seas that separated East from West and made her port at London, EngInnd, and Calcutta, India. Notwithstanding her successful career in conquest with storm furied wnves nnd lurking pirntes of the Indian Ocean, she became unsuited to the commands of imnntient commerce, and in 1802, wns sold to the British government. Thus to sink into abysmal depths of historic iniquities.

From 1802 until 1851, the "Success" served as a convict trnnsport under the British ensign. During this dreadful period it is recorded, 167,000 men, women and children were banished from Great Britian and Ireland to the crown's penal settlements in Tasmnnia (Van Diamen's Land) and in the district surrounding Botany Bay, Austrnlia. Voyaging back and forth, from London to Melbourne, a distance almost equal to the earth's circumference, the convict ship unloaded England's human rubbish into prison camps—sunblanketed and intolerable to human existence. In 1851, the "Success" commenced her career as a prison receiving ship, with permnnent station in Hobson's Bay, near the present city of Melbourne—an OCEAN HELL—in deed, with all of the fiendish purposes of her anchorage there.

However, in time these infamies passed away by popular demand. The general indignntion of the Australian public against this heinous system, brought about its nbolition. Inhumano laws moved into the limbo of useless things. Today, the convict ship is a mere reminder of the past horrors. But the one tangible thread binding the pages of her own hideous history. Now touring the world and making her last showing in the Great Lakes at Charlevoix, later to be returned to the Atlantic coast, to Halifax, and tha Australian Governmeat.

On board tödny are exhibited in their origiaal state, (not in original purposes) ponderous leg-irons, no longer used to impress purple rings on the ankles of unfortunate creatures, but hanging on the rails as mere relics of the long departed dead. Relegated within the sombre chambers of this wonder of floating museums are numerous torture devices, discarded by the voice of mankind. Oae sees uncompromising iron straight-jackets; crouch-irons; leaden tipped cat o' nine tails; airless dungeons; branding irons; condemned cells; and the execution arm that mercifully struck death, after all hope had perished in those "corridors of pain."

Editors and writers hava devoted their pens to the story of that awful period and to the convict ship, oldest ship afloat, owned and directed by Capt. D. H. Smitb, her American commander.

REGATTA PLANS TAKING SHAPE

PROMISES TO BE BIGGEST EVENT EVER STAGED

Dates Definately Set for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 5, 6 and 7

Entries to the race, which are sponsored by George Olson of that place, are divided into three classes, and based on piston displacement. The Bradys entered their boat, the Baby B, in two races, tnking third place in the five mile run and second in the three mile run, making a speed estimated at 24 miles per hour on a mile course with hairpin turns. Eight bonts were entered in three classes.

Plans for Charlevoix's annual regatta are rapidly taking shape and the event promises to he the largest of its kind ever staged in Charlevoix. The dates have been set for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 5, 6 and 7, and the committee composed of John Winemnn, Chairman, Charlevoix: G. L. Ash, managing director; John Wilson, Jr., Geo. Shwab, Jr., Julius Gilbert, Charles Emrey, Ray Hamilton, and Mrs. M. Roy Brady, are busy making arrangements. The next meeting of the committee will be held on Thursday morning of this week aad more definite informntion will be obtainable at that time.

WATER SPORTS AT INN PIERS

SPECIAL PROGRAM ARRANGED FOR THE COMING SUNDAY

Greased Pole Contest For Men and Boys—Swimming Races and Exhibition Speed Boat Run

Music, water sports, boat races and swimming will be the standing program at The Inn bathing pier each Sunday afternoon from 3 to 4:30 o'clock. This will be promoted as a part of the summer sports and resorters' entertainment program, which is being sponsored by the Association of Commerce and city commission.

For Sunday, July 7th, the following events will take place:

Music—by The Inn Orchestra.
Exhibition run by the speed boat "Miss Charlevoix."
Walking Greased Pole—boys.
Walking Greased Pole—men.
25 yard swim—girls.
25 yard swim—ladies.
Canoe tilting contest.

The orchestra will furnish music throughout the program.

The events are all put on in a very informal way, the main object being to provide fun and entertainment more than expert competition. All wishing to take part in the contests report nt the pier in bathing suit at 3:00 p. m. Suitable small prizes such as candies, etc., will be awarded the wianers.

The Inn management have again outdone themselves hy way of putting the heach and pier in such fine condition for the use of the public. The park is benutiful in itself and with the bright colored canopies and large beach umbrellas there is an added snap and attractiveness. The beach is of whitest sand and the bather may enter the water without the hardship of walking over stones to reach a suitable swimming depth. A line of floats is stretched parallel to shore, a short distance out on one side of the pier. This acts as a safe-guard in keeping children and inexperienced swimmers from entering water over their depth.

The end of the pier is suitably equipped with diving board, raft and convenient ladders and steps for entering and leaving the water. A thoughtful addition and one that adds to the joy of the bather on hot days is the lattice covering over the pier. Come down Sunday and joia others in the fun.

SPORTS MEETING WAS BIG SUCCESS

MANY CITIES AGREE TO GET INTO GAME AND PROMOTE

Commitee Named to Make Definite Start—Northern Cities Already Boosting

With more than 25 delegates representing nearly every city and town in Northern Michigan and citics as far south as Grand Haven and Lansing an enthusiastic meeting of the Michigan Winter Sports association was held Monday at the Cushman Hotel in Petoskey. The association had been organized during the past winter, when officers and directors were named with W. L. McManus of Petoskey as president, Arthur W. Stace of the Grand Rapids Press as vice president and John A. Doelle, of Lansing, secretary-treasurer.

The officers are also directors, and Hugh J. Gray, Grand Rapids, Thos, F. Marston, Bay City, Clarence V. Smazel, Manistee and George Bishop, Marquette, are the remaining members on the board. All were present at the meeting except Mr. Stace.

The meeting was opened with Mr. McManus presiding, and he explained the purpose and accomplishments of the organzation to date and what it is hoped will be accomplished. He mentioned the passing of the lumber industry in Michigan, the subsequent growth of the summer resort business and the work which has been done toward lengthening the average stay of the summer visitors. The winter sports program, he explained, was but another step in the program of making full use of the gifts of nature to region and capitalizing on the good roads and other advantages which Michigan can offer during the cold weather periods.

Mayor McCune of Petoskey welcomed the delegates and the response was made by B. R. Hendel of Manistee, who told of his vision of making Western Michigan as popular for winter sports as the eastern cities which have become famous for their activities.

A letter was read by the secretary from Mr. Stace, who divided winter sports into two types, those which people participate ia and those in which they are merely spectators and stated that both are necessary to a well balanced program. To accomplish these he suggested organization of clubs sponsorng some one of the sports; the raising of a general fund and the employment of an expert to assist the cities in their work, and finally, when the plan has been worked out fully, the advertising for all of the cities being done cooperatively.

Other speakers during the morning session were Don McHugh of Charlevoix, who told of his trip to Lake Placid last winter; J. B. Wagner of Cadillac, who talked on "The Value of Winter Sports to Michigan" and Rev. Fr. Drinen of East Jordan. Representatives from each city spoke briefly and assured the officers the support from their cities in the program being outlined.

Luncheon was served at the Cushman hotel and the afternoon meeting opened with a talk by John A. Doelle, secretary of the association. Mr. Bishop and Mr. McNamara of

LOCALS DROPPED GAME TO EAST JORDAN NINE

Return Game Next Sunday at North Side Park

The Charlevoix baseball team dropped a loosely played game to East Jordan last Sunday on the latter's field.

As in previous games, Charlevoix was hnndicapped by the lack of a capable battery. The infield played errorless ball, and the whole team hit fairly well, but this could not make up for a mediocra battery. The entire East Jordan outfit played sparkling ball, while Hallett's relief pitching featured for Charlevoix. The locals play a return game with East Jordan on Sundny, July 17, at the north side park, nnd will he considerably strengthened for this game by the addition of a strong battery. Otherwise, with the exception of n new short-stop the line-up will remain the same.

The Charlevoix team has great possibilities and a large attendance will encourage their efforts. There has been a decided lack of support from local fans and more support would not be amiss. Boost the local nine and tura out for the game Sunday.

CHEST CLINIC HELD THIS MONTH

FOR BENEFIT OF RESIDENTS OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

Last Official Statistics Showed There Were 42 Known Llving Cases in County

A chest clinic will be held during this month in Charlevoix county. The generous purchase of tuberculosis Christmas seals last summer by the residents of the county make it possible for the Michigan Tuberculosis Association to conduct again this summer a clinic for the people of the county who wish to avail themselves of a chest examination.

Tuberculosis is the most devasting of all diseases. It takes its toll between the ages of 25 and 35. During school years the infection is usually implanted into the body to break out into disease in just the prime of life, and at the ages whea one is struggling to make headway. Very, very often it takes the breadwinner from the circumstances. Tuburculosis takes more lives than all the storms, and all the earthquakes, and even all the wars. It works so quietly and so stealthly and so insidiously that it does not attract our attention as do great losses of life at one time and in one location. Storms and earthquakes cannot be prevented, but tuberculosis can be prevented.

Last year, 3,039 Michigan men, women and children died. Someone in our state dies every twelve and one-half minutes from this disense. There are today 27,915 known living cases of tuberculosis in the state of Michigan.

In Charlevoix county the last official statistics show that there were 42 known living cases and that 7 people have died from this disease during the year.

All those who have come in contact with a case of tuberculosis or where there has been a death are particularly urged to attend this clinic. The symptoms of tuberculosis are a persistent cough, a continued tired feeling, loss of weight, and an nfternoon fever. Children under 16 yenrs of nge should be necompanied hy the father or mother.

As soon as local arrangements have been completed the dnte of the clinic will be nnnounced. Watch your newspaper and store window clinic posters far the dates.

In Memoriam

Mary Ann VanDusen—In loving remembrance of our mother who was called to heavenly rest July 15, 1924:

Home without our mother,
Gone are the happy days we once enjoyed
When we were all together,
Oh! How changed it all is now.

Home without you, mother,
Has broken our family circle.
A link has gone from our chain,
We miss you from our home, dear,
We miss you from your place.

A shadow over our life is cast,
We miss the sunshine from your face,
We miss your kind and willing hand,
Your fond and earnest care.

Our home is dark without you,
Oh! Mother dear, we miss you everywhere.
She sleeps in Jesus! Peaeful rest!
Whose waking is supremely bleat;
No fear, no woe, shall dim that hour,
When Jesus wakes her by his power.
Adv.—28-t1

In Memoriam

Two years have passed since that sad day
The one we loved was called away;
God called him home—it was his will,
But in our hearts, he's with us still.

A shadow rests upon our home.
We miss his smiling face;
Where'ere we look and where'ere we turn,
We see the vacant space.

While here on earth he did his best,
His heart was truly kind;
His memory will be forever dear,
To those he left behind.

Rest, dear heart, thy cares are over,
Rest in peace, thy work is done;
You are where we who love you,
Soon are coming one by one.

Your loving wife. Mrs. J. J. Howe.

WILL BRING OUT A NEW MODEL

ANOTHER BIG CHANGE DUE IN AUTO FIELD

Dodge Brothers About to Announce Production of Fastest Four In America

It was learned today from authoritative sources that Dodge Brothers will shortly make a sensational announcement, probably concerned with a new line of fours. While nothing definite is available as to price or specifications it is understood that the new cars are to be the fastest fours in America and that they are to be priced at new low levels. It is also understood that the new cars will be more economical to operate than any cars of the same size ever built.

The body designs are said to be more radical than anything that Dodge Brothers have undertaken in the four cylinder field. In all around beauty and excellence of nppointments, the fact, the new cars are said to bo unequalled by anything in their price class.

Announcement of this entirely new line of fours will be equivalent to a challange to the whole industry in the four cylinder field. If such n line is marketed it is assured that the enormous resources of Dodge Brothers factories and the support of one of the greatest dealer organizations in the industry's history will be solidly behind it.

Should the new cars prove to be the fastest fours in America, Dodge Brothers will have one of the greatest selling advantages in its history. In the past this company has always emphasized dependability of its cars. Nothing has ever been claimed as to their speed except that it has always been ample. Now with a four which combines great speed with the traditional qualities of Dodge Brothers cars, the company should be in an enviable position.

Benj. Brown, local distributor, is in attendance at a dealers conference being held in Detroit this week.

Lost in a big City!

Literaly, that's exactly the position she was in! Only things were worse. Her husband had disappeared and Maria didn't know where to go to for help. She asked the Bureau of missing persona but no clues were to be had. Was it possible that in a town the size of New York, a man could just drop off the face of the earth? What to do? Where to turn?

GAME WARDENS ARE AFTER VIOLATORS

Commercial Fishermeo Again Draw Heavy Fioes

Stnte Conservation Officers Ellsworth and Weber drew in their nets Saturday and caught therein Herbert Plaunt, R. E. Robinson and Tony Pnquette, three commercial fishermen operatiing out of Mackinaw City, all charged with tnking undersized whitefish. Robinson pnid $28.25, Plaunt the same amount and Paquette $58.20. These sums are insignificent in comparison with the damage done with their violations and the trouble of conservation officers are put to in watching and trying to keep them straight nnd clean.—Cheboygan Democrat.

C. M. Smith, deputy game and fish warden, who has been with the department for many years, was in the city Saturday. Mr. Smith has been patroling the waters in this section mnking an examination of the nets being used by commercial fishermen, and found some of those in use by August Johnson of a slightly undersized mesh. Mr. Johnson said he purchased the nets for a four inch mesh, and his invoice so shows, but ndmitted, after they had been measured by the wnrden, that they were slightly under. Johnson appeared in justice court, where he pleaded guilty and upon recommendation of the warden was given the lowest possible fine under the law, $25, which, together with the costs, was paid.—St. Ignace Enterprise.

BROWN & WALLACE

The RECLUSE of FIFTH AVENUE

by WYNDHAM MARTYN

COPYRIGHT in the UNITED STATES W.N.U. SERVICE

Suddenly she turned from him and walked away. He followed with beseeching gestures until he saw that DeGuilhin was approaching. It seemed to him that Agatha almost ran to the elder man.

"What have you been doing on this lovely morning?" Malet asked.

"Breaking my heart, I think," she answered. "Please walk back to the house with me. I don't want to have to speak to anyone."

Malet was not deceived by the smile with which she tried to hide her suffering. He wished he had words to help her. He walked to the big house, his heart aching because she was hurt. He wondered what it was about. Of course, it had to do with young Robin McKimber. He felt he hated the tall, handsome lad who had the power so to wound this lovely daughter of his friend. Vague desires to administer chastisement swept over him and departed. What right had he to interfere? And what but harm does one do who attempts to adjust lovers' quarrels?

"Please Walk Back to the House With Me. I Don't Want to Have to Speak to Anyone."

After breakfast Mrs. Raxon sent for her social secretary.

"Your month is up today," she said. "I do not think you need remain. I shall pay you for another month in lieu of notice."

"Why are you sending me away?" Miss Brown asked quietly.

"You ought to know," Gertrude Raxon cried. "We've watched you trying to get Robin McKimber as if you were one of our friends instead of being hired to help."

Miss Brown could even smile.

"I am quite sure," she said sweetly, "that nobody who knows me would ever suspect me of being your friend."

"And you needn't apply to us for recommendations," shouted the girl.

"I shall not," said Miss Brown calmly. She gave a little smile and bow and left them.

Mrs. Raxon wished she could walk like that. She was filled with a sudden sense of having acted badly. She had never let her daughters know how much she admired her social secretary. The girl had made no vulgar scene, as Mrs. Raxon had dreaded. She had not raised her voice; nor had she begged for another chance. She was calm, aloof, superior. Mrs. Raxon looked at her own daughter a little sourly.

"How I'm to arrange the menus and see the servants do their work I'm sure I don't know."

"Hire someone else," said Gertrude, "and let me see her first."

Half an hour later a taxi came to the front door and Miss Agatha Brown left Great Rock. Paul Raxon did not learn of it until later. He only hoped the household efficiency would not be impaired. Miss Brown had had her uses. He had learned a great deal from the criticism of one used to the homes of the great. And, he mused, it might be better for him in the long run that she was replaced by someone of rather less physical attractions. He had been thinking too much about her.

"My dears," she had said to her footmen, "you must stay on if you can until Uncle Peter has read what I have written. He may have other uses for you here."

The blond footman dropped his Cockney accent and the lackey's manner as he kissed her. "Shan't be very long here, I expect," he said. "I'm getting tired of it. Just as I open a bottle of wine and light a good cigar some d—d nobody rings for ice water, or the fire needs logs, or there's a mouse in a bedroom and I'm elected to slay it."

"But, daddy," she reproved him, "you are here on duty, and a very great deal more may depend on you than you think. I've been awfully proud of the way you carried it off."

Neeland Barnes went about his work with greater spirit.

"When I think of a man of your genius doing this sort of thing," she said to Fleming Bradney as she shook hands, "I can't admire you enough." She left them, smiling brilliantly. They felt she had the secret of success with her. Yet, alone in the taxicab, she cried unrestrainedly.

Robin McKimber did not find out she was gone until luncheon. The Raxon girls had not forgiven him. He was so obviously in love with the despised Agatha that they admitted collective and individual failure.

Robin chafed that his parents seemed to have decided to stay a few more days. He did not like to leave at once; he feared people would think he had pursued Miss Brown. All day long his father was with Raxon in his distant suite. The delay seemed intolerable. More than anything else, Robin wanted to find where Agatha had gone. His appeal to Sneed brought no results. Then he thought of De Guilhin.

Robin had not hitherto liked this man. He had been jealous of all who seemed intimate with the girl. But he decided to make a clean breast of it.

"I have asked Miss Brown to marry me," he said quietly. "Yesterday it seemed as though she loved me. This morning, out on the links, she said she had to go, and something had happened which made everything impossible. Perhaps she has heard things about me that I could explain. Can't you help me to find her?"

Malet did not answer immediately. His first impulse was to help young McKimber. But he remembered in time that he was engaged in a conspiracy in which the elder McKimber might be involved. For the time the two must be kept apart. It would not do to let him suspect he knew her present address.

"Alas, that I cannot help you," he returned. "Madame la Duchesse de Fromage-Verte, at whose chateau in the Department of the Loire I first met Miss Brown, is now traveling in Tuscany. Perhaps a cablegram addressed to her might bring results."

"How do you spell her name?" Robin demanded.

A few minutes later he came face to face with Mrs. Raxon and asked her bluntly how it was she had engaged an inefficient person.

"She had references from the countess of Horsham, at Horsham in England, and Mrs. Hamilton Buxton of Westbury Old Manor."

It was her daughters who pointed out later that he had obtained the addresses he sought by a ruse. They were very bitter.

Mrs. Hamilton Buxton would probably not have received a stranger had she not seen him coming up the drive in his fast car. She was a lady of many loves, and she had once seen him at Piping Rock, although her own set did not stoop to intimacy with that in which the McKimbers moved. She liked handsome young men.

"But, my dear Mr. McKimber," she cried, "I have never even heard of a Miss Agatha Brown. If she used references signed by me, she forged them."

Her experienced eyes had shown her that this beau garcon was in love, and probably with an adventuress.

Instantly he drove to a Western Union office and dispatched a cable, with answer prepaid, to the countess of Horsham, Horsham, England. Until the reply came he was hardly a successful or amiable guest.

"Lady Horsham," he read, "has never heard Brown and recommends Robin McKimber to put the matter in the hands of the police."

There remained that great French noblewoman, the duchess of something or another. His mother saw him peering uncertainly at a piece of paper.

"What's that look like to you?" he asked. He did not know French, and the name was indistinct. Mrs. McKimber read the language easily. He did not want to make a mistake. He determined to describe Agatha this time. Possibly she had adopted a nom de guerre.

"It means," said Mrs. McKimber, "the duchess of Green-Cheese."

"Couldn't there be such a person?" Robin was flushing red with anger.

"Of course not. Where are you going to in such a hurry?"

He had no time to answer. He wanted very much to see the viscount. But here again he met disappointment. Sneed informed him that he had gone and left no forwarding address for his mail. A friend at his club advised Robin to consult the new Almanach de Bruxelles, in whose pages the nobility of continental Europe is described. There was no mention of any Count or Viscount de Guilhain.

Robin went back to Great Rock a disillusioned young man, filled with bitterness. There was no such thing in the world as honor or truth. Agatha was an adventuress, the fake viscount an accomplice. He wondered why there was not already a robbery of jewels. It must be because Mrs. Raxon had dismissed her before the day of the coup. His inquiries about Miss Brown had frightened the viscount away. He was particularly anxious to meet the swindler.

Mrs. McKimber saw that her son was worried, but for the moment she was more disturbed at her husband's condition. He had aged for no reason that was comprehensible to his wife. He had spoken vaguely about giving up the senatorial race and living quietly away from his business. Robin was to be given complete charge. McKimber hinted that he might indorse Raxon. Secretly she was not sorry to relinquish the Washington idea. The prospect had been less alluring to her than to him. Mrs. McKimber was more interested in her home city than the nation's capital, with its jealousies, intrigues, and constant entertaining.

CHAPTER XI

Peter Milman received the transcription Nita had made from her rough notes without showing the tremendous eagerness that possessed him. "You have done splendidly," he said, and then hesitated a little. "I am almost afraid to read it."

"You need not be," she said slowly. "I think you will find that you have saved your home."

"Then it IS complete success?" he cried.

"There is still more to be done," she said, "but I think we have succeeded." She could not bear to talk any more.

In his library, Peter Milman read the document carefully. He saw exactly with what a deadly grip Paul Raxon held McKimber. But Peter Milman was not yet in a position to turn this knowledge to account. So far, McKimber was the sufferer in that, whereas only one man had known his secret, now it was shared by many. Milman thought of the thing impartially as though he were an arbitrator and McKimber's case had come before him. On one side, McKimber and Raxon. On the other, himself, Barnes, Bradney, and Malet. He persuaded himself that it was justice against injustice, right against wrong. He had brooded too long over the prospect of losing his home to have any qualms left. He waited impatiently until the hour when he expected Bradney and Barnes. They could not leave Great Rock until past ten o'clock, and it was almost midnight when he passed them Nita's report.

"The next thing to do is to obtain that envelope," Milman said. "We know they are in that room somewhere."

"There's a big wall-safe of a modern type," Barnes said.

"And therefore absolutely immune from us," Bradney commented. "I have long felt that there must be an apprenticeship to this sort of enterprise. Safe-blowing is practiced successfully by almost all the yeggs who wander up and down our country. I know how it is done, but I couldn't do it myself."

"We dare not hire anyone to do it for us," Barnes said thoughtfully. "It seems to me we are up against it. If you haven't enough to hold him up with already, I don't see what else is to be done."

"There's a way out," said Peter Milman, "and a simple one. I admit we cannot crack a safe. Why not permit Paul Raxon to open it for us?"

"He wouldn't," Barnes cried; "torture would not make him do that."

"You don't understand," said Peter mildly. "I mean simply this. Why should not Raxon open the safe, as he must do frequently, quite unaware that someone is ready to spring at him, tie him up and examine its contents at leisure?"

"By Gad!" Barnes said excitedly. "It might work. There's danger in it, but it's an even chance it might succeed. I see the whole thing. I could be hiding where Nita was—there's plenty of room—and watch him. He wouldn't be carrying that gun of his, because he would probably have locked himself in and felt free from intrusion. If you can make that end of the bookcase movable so that it can be opened without warning Raxon, I believe I can get him."

At the prospect of action and danger, Neeland Barnes seemed another man. He had, indeed, visualized the whole thing. What was the risk of a bullet compared with getting from Raxon what would buy him the ranch in California?

"Give me two uninterrupted hours," Bradney asserted, "and I can make a very workmanlike job of it."

"Not a word before Nita," her father cautioned. "She might want to come in on it, and there's just a chance it may turn out badly."

"How often does a financier open his safe?" Bradney asked. "I can see 'Enry lying there, entombed, for periods of uncomfortable duration. 'Enry has forgotten he will be helping me to attend to the Raxon guests."

"I shan't be there," said Barnes. "I shall dismiss myself tomorrow morning and then come back to my old room when it is dark. Only Sneed and you ever come up our flight of stairs, so it will be safe." Barnes chuckled. "You'll have to smuggle my meals up."

"Someone will come to take your place."

BEWARE OF THESE FAKIRS

The Hastings Banner calls attention to a gang of men who are traveling through Barry county selling linoleum. Last year these same men canvassed that county and sold linoleum of inferior quality, gave short measure and charged a higher price than good linoleum could have been purchased for from home dealers. It is altogether likely these men will invade other counties in the state as soon as they have finished in Barry, so we are passing this information along to our readers that they may be warned in time. As the Banner says: "It has been proven, time and again, that it is not wise to buy of folks who have no established place of business and who are unknown to you or your neighbors. The best plan is to purchase of the merchants who will stand back of their goods and who are on the job all the time."

GAME PROTECTION RULES ADOPTED

Conservation Body Votes To Halt Killing of Squirrel

The conservation commission Thursday voted to declare a closed season on black and grey squirrel, which expires October 25, and added the fox squirrel to the list. The present law permits hunting between October 25 and December 31, inclusive.

The season on rabbit hunting was shortened from October 1 to December 15 in the lower peninsula and from October 25 to December 31 in the upper.

A closed season of muskrats until November 15, 1928, was the last one ordered.

The commission voted to close the counties of Missaukee, Wexford and Manistee to deer hunters for five years. A bill to this effect passed the legislature but was vetoed by Governor Green on the ground that it was a duty for the commission and not the legislature.

More Delicious Strawberries

Talk about strawberries. A. B. Chew brought us in a quart of the Domore variety, that contained just 29 berries. It took just nine of the big fellows to cover the top of the box. And the flavor was excellent. This waa the quart he spoke about last week and promised to bring us. We sure do like strawberries.

Circling Lake

B. G. Horling of Coopersville, Mich., a small town on Grand River near Grand Rapids, has his own ideas of an ideal summer vacation. He arrived here Monday in his boat, "O U Cuckoo," on a tour of Lake Michigan. The craft is a 16-foot flat bottom rowboat, equipped with an outboard motor. Mr. Horling eats, sleeps and spends most of his time nhoard the boat, which has a small cabin forward for sleeping quarters. On account of her shallow draft, the boat may be run ashore any place and when Mr. Horling doesn't like the weather, he pulls his boat up and waits until the blow is over.

CONVICT SHIP

Now in Charlevoix---Foot of Mason Street

This Old Craft has been visited by over 20,000,000---TWENTY MILLION---People

Including Most of the Crowned Heads of Europe, and Has Received the Patronage of Many of the Leading State, City Officials and Clergy of all Denominations Since Her Arrival in America

The Oldest Ship Afloat [Launched in 1790.] Raised from Bottom of Sydney Harbor and Now on a Final Tour of the World

A RELIC OF THE BARBARIC DAYS, WHEN FOR A MINOR OFFENSE, A MAN COULD BE SENTENCED OVERSEAS.

THIS WONDERFUL VESSEL HAS MADE HISTORY THROUGH THREE CENTURIES

ROMANCE—PATHOS—HISTORY

To view her massive yellow hull, stamped with the sinister black, broad arrows of the British penal system; her tall and mighty spars, which formerly flew her arrow-marked sails in many latitudes; her graceful figurehead, reminiscent of the days when fine deep sea ships were loved as women; and her stately quarter decks and broad stern, is to whiff the great salt water ocean and realize something of ships and men of other days. For she has sailed the Seven Seas, plowing her way through waters and winds in many climes, with cargoes ranging from precious jewels of the Orient to wretched and suffering human beings herded below her decks like cattle. Nabobs of India and Siam have sipped tea on her quarter deck. Dusky princesses of the East have been entertained in her cabins. Hundreds of pitiful prisoners have died in her dungeon cells. Pirates have chased her and more than one desperate battle has been fought across her solid decks. Her massive hull and her mainmast still bear the marks of pirate shots fired at her by black flagged ships in the Indian Ocean. Today she is the last vivid reminder of the master sea fictionists of another day, authors like Clark Russell and John Boyle O'Reilly, whose pen pictures antedated the red-blooded, blue-sea stories of London, Melville and Conrad. She forms your only chance to see a ship like those of which you have read.

She is a floating monument of the most pathetic human drama ever played; a startling reminder that 100 years ago, and even less, women and little children, as well as men, were punished with life-long suffering and ignominy for trifling offenses. Aboard her may be seen the ringbolts and chains to which were fastened beautiful girls, often convicted wrongly, but nevertheless compelled to helplessly endure the terrors of a voyage of six months or more, completely under the domination of brutal warders. While young women became gaunt and wrinkled, boys and girls of eight and nine years of age transported for stealing apples or a two-penny pie, became hardened criminals from the sights they saw and punishments they endured. For age and sex did not spare the victims of the convict ships from the heavy irons, the cat-o'-nine tails, the whipping posts, the branding and the tiny air-tight dungeon cells below the water line to which they were thrust for the slightest infraction of the rules. There is shown the figure of Elizabeth Stott and her child, transported for life, after death sentence had been commuted by the king, to the penal settlement of far off Australia, for the alleged forging of the equivalent of fifteen dollars. What became of them after she boarded the ship and was placed in iron, God only knows. The records are mute. No story ever written, no sermon ever preached, no drama ever acted, no scene ever thrown upon a silver sheet can vie in pathos with the silent testimony of this ancient vessel and her original cells and tortures, every one of which you may actually see and feel during your visit.

The Convict Ship teaches more strikingly than a thousand-page volume of hundreds of photographs the story of human progress through three centuries. She was a link between the Orient and the Occident in the days when, as the prize of the vast East India Company's fleet, she carried wealthy and noble passengers from England to India, and returning, brought invaluable cargoes of tea, spices, silks and jewels from Calcutta to London. As a dread felon transport, she carried miserable and often innocent men, women and children from England to Van Dieman's Land and the penal colonies at Botany Bay, Australia, starting the growth of a new continent. She was an outcast from all traditions, from all the civilized world, from humanity itself, when, moored in Hobson's Bay, Australia, she was a hulk or floating prison used for the torture of those condemned to a living death in a prison which, as can be vividly seen, makes the Bastile, the Kremlin and the Tower of London at their worst seem habitable. She created maritime history when, under her own canvas and unescorted, she sailed from Australia to England, and then from England to the United States, crossing the broad Atlantic in 96 days. Since her arrival in this country she continues to make history, the number of her visitors ranging into the millions, far outstripping that of any exhibit ever shown here.

She is the oldest ship in the world, andthe only convict ship left afloat out of the dreadful fleet of ocean hells which sailed the Seven Seas in 1790 A. D.

She is unchanged after all these years, nothing being omitted but her human freight and their sufferings from the cruelties and barbarities practiced upon them.

She has held lurid horrors and dreadful iniquities beside which even the terrible stories of the Black Hole of Calcutta and the Spanish Inquisition pale into insignificance.

Aboard her are now shown, in their original state, all the airless dungeons and condemned cells, the whipping post, the manacles, the branding irons, the punishment balls, the leaden-tipped cat-o'-nine tails, the coffin bath and the other fiendish inventions of man's brutality to his fellow man. She marked the beginning of the end of England's monstrous penal system.

From keel to topmast she cries aloud the greatest lesson the world has ever known in the history of human progress.

A CHILD OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

The American Revolution, putting an end to the transportation of convicts and white slaves to the Virginia colonies, brought about the settlement of Australia and the creation of the dread fleet (of which Success was flagship) as carriers of convicts to Botany Bay.

EIGHTH WONDER OF THE WORLD

Today the old vessel, sole survivor of thnt awesome fleet spared by the relentless Hand of Time and the fury of the seas, is often enlled by educators, thinkers and clergymen, the Eighth Wonder of the World, less ancient, but of trem endously more human interest than all the other seven combined.

WHAT BETTER RECOMMENDATION THAN THIS?

R. H. L. in his daily "Line O' Type Or Two" in tbe Chicago Trihune said:

"One of the biggest four bits' worth of value we ever got for our money was a visit to the Convict Ship at the State Street Dock. It's like turning back the clock, and after you see the way the men and women were herded on the ship, taken for a voyage of thousands of miles, the paths they made in the hard teak deck, the whipping post, the airless dungeons, the branding iron and the laden tipped cat-o'-nine tails as punishment for people who had stolen per haps a piece of pie, one gets the idea humanity is getting on."

WHEN THE CONVICT SHIP WAS LAUNCHED IN FAR AWAY INDIA IN 1790—

1—Charlevoix did not exist.
2—Buffnlo was the western frontier of America.
3—George Washington was serving his first term as president of the United States.
4—The Battle of Waterloo was still 25 years in the future

THE CONVICT SHIP WILL NEVER AGAIN BE SEEN IN LAKE MICHIGAN

Your opportunity to visit her is NOW. If you do not seize it, yours will be the regret at not having seen tbe greatest and most extraordinary exbibition that ever visited this state. Wben you walk her decks, grooved witb tbe chains of ber miserable victims, the past will speak to you its sad, mournful lesson, but you will leave feeliag better because you live in a better age. Wealthy Americans spend millions annually in visiting Europe's old castles and their prisons' dungeons. Today you can walk alongside the oldest and most notorious floating prison tbe world bas ever known. Do not miss this profound illustration of one of tbe most vital factors in the betterment of tbe age. ROAD BUILDING

TEST IMPACT OF DIFFERENT TIRES

The United States bureau of public roads, in a statement just issued on a series of recent tests to determine the magnitude of the impact of different kinds of motor truck tires over a period of four years, declares that thickness and narrowness of tread rubber are desirable in reducing road impact and that increasing the thickness or profile height of rubber has a very marked effect in reducing road impact in both single and dual mountings.

The experiment in finding out the relative amounts of impact exerted on road surfaces by different kinds of motor truck tires was called the "static test." It consisted, according to the bureau, in mounting of a tire in a machine and slowly applying loads, noting the vertical deflections as indications for sketching deformation curves. The hardness of the tread rubber was measured by an instrument known as a durometer.

The bureau, in using the test machine, stated that in applying the test data it should be remembered that an impact force, expressed in pound units, does not necessarily have the same effect upon materials as a static force of the same numerical value in pounds. The "important conclusions to date" are given in full text as follows:

1. Maximum impact forces obtained with motor truck tires in service can be measured with an accuracy sufficient for the needs of this investigation.

2. As static load increases, road impact reaction increases.

3. As static load increases, the ratio of road impact reaction to static load decreases.

4. Thickness and narrowness of tread rubber are desirable in reducing road impact reaction.

5. Increasing the thickness or profile height of rubber has a very marked effect in reducing road impact reaction in both single and dual mountings.

6. In the tire equipments tested, all of which were standard at the time of the tests, dual mounting caused heavier impact forces than the corresponding single mounting of the same total load-carrying capacity. (This was determined on a pneumatic-tired, two-ton truck and a solid-tired, five-ton truck.)

7. Appreciable variation of cross-sectional rubber, or breaks in its continuity, cause heavy repeated impacts to be delivered to the road.

8. Dual-mounted tires should always be mounted with the tread design staggered.

Ohio City Plants Trees Along Lincoln Highway

The suggestion that the Lincoln Way east and west of Delphos, Ohio, be lined with shade trees has found a responsive chord in a number of Delphos people. It is suggested by one of these that a committee take this in hand and learn just what it would cost per tree to furnish and plant along the highway.

It is contended that a sufficient number of Delphos people would be willing to assist in making the highway, extending from Delphos east to the Auglaize river and the same distance west an attractive appearing memorial to Lincoln.

Delphos is noted for her beautiful shade trees. It is safe to say that few cities in Ohio can boast of streets more generally shaded than those in that city. If the Lincoln highway could be lined with shade trees both east and west of the city, it would leave a lasting impression upon the many tourists who will travel this road after the improvement is completed to the east.

The method suggested would not cost any individual a great sum and the trees would stand as a monument to Lincoln for many years to come.

MOTOR FUEL TAX FIGURES UP BIG

The bureau of public roads of the Department of Agriculture has made public a summary of the gasoline taxes by states for the first half of the calendar year 1926, showing the total taxes collected on motor vehicle fuel, refunds on gross tax, disposition of fund, rates and gallons of gasoline consumed by motor vehicles taxed throughout the United States.

It shows that such tax earnings aggregated $84,939,373, and that the total tax refunds of all the states were disposed of by $148,309 used as costs of collection, $54,981,677 used for state highways, $19,338,976 for local roads, $6,320,413 used for payments of state and county road bonds and $4,140,998 for miscellaneous purposes.

The average tax rate for the period, for all the states, was 2.39 cents a gallon, on June 30. The net gallons of gasoline taxed and used by motor vehicles in all the states aggregated 3,599,987,586, and the estimated additional gallons, not taxed and not used by motor vehicles, (reported only by Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York), aggregated 556,450,000.

The total tax earnings on fuel for motor vehicles—the $84,939,373 mentioned—represent the actual taxes available for disposal. The gross tax assessed prior to deduction or refunds and the exemption refunds, deducted from the gross tax, are not totaled for the country as a whole, the statement says, because, while showing the procedure for obtaining the total tax, it is "of minor importance." Collection costs in many states, it was said, are paid from other state funds.

Flay Signs and Shacks in Report on Conditions

As a result of a survey made by hundreds of its affiliated clubs, the American Automobile association has issued an urgent appeal calling on state officials everywhere to take immediate steps to sweep aside the debris that mars the beauty of the landscape and in many instances adds to accident hazard along the nation's great motor highways.

The national motoring body made two specific points in its appeal, which is mainly addressed to state highway officials in charge of road maintenance, construction, and supervision, as follows:

First, there is so much advertising material along the highways that the motorist is constantly confused as between these variegated signs and the signs set up by the states for his safety and convenience in travel.

Second, in many instances the scenic beauty which is the great appeal in the call of the roads, is marred because of the continuance along many of the main highways of unsightly tumble down shacks of all kinds that constitute an eyesore to the motoring public.

Mexico Creates System of Federal Good Roads

The congress of Mexico created a system of federal roads by an act passed in March, 1925. A tax of three centavos per liter (about 5.7 cents per gallon) was placed on all gasoline, whether for domestic use or export. All the tax on tobacco was also diverted to the federal road fund. In case these two taxes do not amount to $500,000 per month, the treasury department is authorized to issue notes to make up the difference. At present the two taxes bring about $400,000 a month. The construction program consists of a total mileage of 1,337, principally in a north and south road from Laredo through Mexico City to Acapulco. There are at present 25,000 automobiles in the republic, most of them in Mexico City, and before federal road building began they could seldom go outside the city.

Victory Highway to Run Through Mountain Tube

The Moffat tunnel commission which has in charge the construction of the mammoth tube which is being thrust through a mountain range in Colorado, has let the contract for two miles of railroad roadbed which will connect the Moffat railroad with the west portals of the tunnel. The new road will leave the present main line of the Moffat road near a crossing of the Victory highway and will reach the tunnel by an easy grade. The roadbed is to cross the Fraser river and the Victory highway on a bridge.

When the tunnel is complete, it will be available not only for railroad trains but also for automobiles, and will eliminate the surmounting of two high passes from the problem of crossing the continental divide.

Wide Highways Protect

Because of the ever-increasing number of automobiles in the United States, and partly because of traffic discussions of the 1926 convention of road builders at Chicago, wider highways are being adopted throughout the nation as a means of safeguarding the lives of motorists and relieving traffic congestion, S. T. Henry, newly elected vice president of the American Road Builders' association, states. This will please those motorists riding about on Sunday.

Good Roads Notes

The Lincoln highway always will be the main thoroughfare, as between East and West, in Pennsylvania.

Dunean, Neb., has rerouted the Lincoln highway through a section of the town and thereby removed several dangerous railway crossings.

As the only billion-dollar "highway nation" in the world, the United States now leads all the rest of the countries with 500,000 miles of good roads.

Traffic congestion is costing the United States $10,500,000 every day or $3,832,500,000 annually, the American Road Builders' association estimates.

The Finnish government plans to spend about $1,500,000 for improvement and maintenance of roads during 1927, according to a report received by the United States Department of Commerce.

• • •

Because of the thousands of American cars entering Canada from New York there is a movement on foot to establish a service that will insure a clear road from New York city to Montreal throughout the winter, regardless of heavy snowfall.

FINE POINTS OF GOOD MILK COWS

One thing that seems to trouble many purchasers of cattle for dairying is to judge from conformation, etc., whether an individual is or will be a profitable milker. I have found that all signs fail occasionally and that sometimes an animal will show both good and poor points and be either profitable or otherwise one year, and the opposite the next, so we cannot always be sure as to points. If I were selecting for myself—the following would be points for which I should look, and if not found any animal would not be considered desirable, no matter how large or handsome she was. Most of these points can be noted upon a calf after about four weeks if well fed.

1. A broad nose and mouth, at least 1½ inches wider at end than at 4 inches toward eyes on milkers, and proportionate with younger stock; bulls included.

2. A spacing of three or more finger widths between two back ribs extending well down toward belly; the longer the back rib the better; an excellent point in bulls as well as cows.

3. A wide and long escutcheon with no breaks or curls above the udder; curls upon the back of udder are better than not; this point is not so noticeable upon bulls as cows.

4. The milk veins should be large and long; the crookeder the better, and should come from between fourth and fifth rib or farther forward; heavy veins upon the udder are also good.

5. Other secondary points include mellow (pliable) skin; broad milk cord found vertically above the flank; long slender tail, end of dock coming below points of gambrel; deep pocket on front of both shoulder and hind leg, near flank, inside front; rough back, not humped.

6. A herd sire should have as many of the foregoing points as possible to obtain, together with four well-defined teats.

All of these points may be found in all milking cattle, some being more conspicuous in different individuals, and often very pronounced, while other points are negligible. Such animals are doubtful and often unsatisfactory to purchaser.—Howard H. Honse in Rural New Yorker.

Raise Calf Successfully by Using Various Plans

Calves have been raised successfully by various methods. Whatever plan is used must include cleanliness in feed utensils and housing, plenty of exercise, and direct sunlight.

A common method is to let the calf nurse three or four days. Then feed whole milk for three weeks. At the end of the third week start substituting sweet skim-milk, say one-eighth each day, until only skim-milk is used. If from the separator remove froth or foam. Feed three times a day at regular intervals. Do not overfeed, and watch the bowels for any sign of scours. The feeding of milk may be continued around five or six months. After two months many feeders use sour milk, which appears to be suitable if in good condition.

Meanwhile the calf is allowed to pick at a little good hay, clover or alfalfa preferred, and a mixture of grain, such as ground corn, oats and bran—only a moderate amount of alfalfa or grain.

When the milk is discontinued at around six months the calf should be eating a regular ration of grain and hay. No stated amount can be named. The essential is for the feeder to watch the calf and keep it in good growing condition. A little oil-meal, provided it is fed carefully, is an advantage.

Motorists

Now you can buy a superior gasoline at the regular price

The story of 400 "Extra Dry" is just this . . . Shell Gasoline has been greatly improved in quality, but the price to you remains unchanged.

Why 400 "Extra Dry" SHELL is Superior . . .

The Improved SHELL Way Takes only the Gasoline from the Crude

The old way (437° to 450° End Point)—the specification in general use—takes the gasoline from the crude with part of the heavier and less volatile elements.

The SHELL way (400° End Point) takes only the gasoline from the crude—producing a higher gravity gasoline—extra dry, clean-burning and wonderfully powerful and effective.

400 "Extra Dry" takes its name from the 400° End Point specification to which it is refined. Gasoline produced to meet this rigid test is "extra dry" . . . which means it is ALL gasoline . . . free from those greasy parts which do not atomize freely. Any 400° end point gasoline is recognized in the petroleum industry to be of premium standard and heretofore has commanded a higher price.

Shell Gasoline is now a premium fuel in everything but price. It contains only the most volatile elements of the crude . . . every drop vaporizes . . . every particle is converted into power . . . there are no impurities or heavy ends to pass by the pistons unburned and dilute the crankcase oil.

The quickest way to convince yourself that 400 "Extra Dry" Shell is no ordinary gasoline is to try it. Change to Shell today. Fill up the tank with this wonder fuel and put your car through its paces. You will speedily find that the merits of 400 "Extra Dry" Shell are more clearly apparent, more emphatic on the road than anything we can say on paper.

Speed when the opportunity presents . . . get-away that means minutes saved . . . acceleration that thrills and exhilarates . . . these are every-day experiences for the motorist who uses 400 "Extra Dry" Shell.

BEARS BOTHER FARM LIVESTOCK

EASTERN COUNTY FARMERS ARE UP IN ARMS

Agriculturists Appeal to State to Deliver Their Property From Ravages of Marauders

Bears have become so prevalent in the southern part of Presque Isle county south of Rogers City, and the northern part of Montmorency that farmers in the Rainy Lake and kinred sections are up in arms over the losses to their flocks. There is a great deal of bitterness over the law which protects brother bear and the farmers of that locality are beginning to think it time to bring home to some of the so-called conservationists the facts that the bear is one of the most destractive animals in the woods and quite as bad as the so-called noxious animals.

It appears to be a well founded fact that farmers are finding it necessary to corral their sheep at night and many of them have set up during the wee small hours to protect their flocks. An appeal was made to the conservation department for permission to stage a bear drive and wipe the animals out, but, this being contrary to law the department sent a state trapper.

Hardly had the visitor set his traps when one big brute was captured and two others worked out of the traps. Another was shot nearby with permission of the game warden, by a farmer who had just lost more sheep. A second bear was trapped by a farmer just over the Presque Isle county line in Montmorency county.

In the section named the desire to protect the bear, if there has ever been any, is fast fading and it will take a lot of persuading by conservationists to make farmers believe in such protection. Under the protective law of the past several years bears are so numerous as to be a positive menace. At least one settler is known to have left his farm on account of the loss to his flocks.

The bear is a master hand at a raid. A fenced farm is little protection. He will take his kill over a fence, carrying it to his swamp home and the farmer looking for his lost sheep will find only the gnawed bones and the pieces of wool. The depredations can not be laid to dogs, as the sheep killing dog leaves his prey after the killing and monster bear tracks are another conclusive evidence in these particular cases.

Many old hanters will declare that a bear is a menace to wild life as well as to flocks. A bear, according to their say so, is much like a pig, rooting about, destroying the nests and eggs of the ground bird, killing the deer fawns, etc. It is estimated that from fifty to seventy-five sheep have been lost in Presque Isle county this spring and since the bear's appetite for matton increases towards fall, it is very evident that a war will have to be carried on against Bruin if the farmer is to be protected.

EXPENDITURE FOR STATE HIGHWAYS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

The total expenditure of the state highway departments in 1925 for road and bridge construction on the several state highway systems amounted to $649,125,101, according to reports from the highway departments just compiled by the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture. Of the total expenditure 59.6 per cent was spent for road and bridge construction, 18.4 per cent for maintenance and 3.5 per cent for materials and equipment. Administrative and engineering costs accounted for 4.7 per cent of the total, interest and principle payments on bonds 7.8 per cent, and miscellaneous expenditures amounted to 6.0 per cent of the total.

To meet these expenses the highway departments received from various sources during the year a total income of $780,081,292 of which $115,656,721 was available as a balance from the previous year's operations, so that the amount of money raised during the year was only $661,424,571. Of the latter amount 43.5 per cent was raised by means of motor vehicle license fees and gasoline taxes, 30 per cent from the former and the balance from the latter. The sale of bonds realized 21.3 per cent of the total for the year, and federal aid received from the national government amounted to 13.9 per cent. Funds transferred to the state by the counties and other local governments amounted to 10.8 per cent, and the balance was made up of funds derived from special highway taxes and appropriations and from miscellaneous sources as follows: Taxes, 3.3 per cent; appropriations, 5.0 per cent; and miscellaneous, 2.2 per cent.

Although the year's expenditures were slightly greater than the previous year's total of $605,665,207, the balance of $130,956,191 carried over into the current year was even greater than the amount of unexpended funds carried over from 1924.

One of the most significant facts brought out by the report is the remarkable increase in the percentage of the total highway income derived from motor vehicle and gasoline taxes, and the falling off in the percentage representing real and personal property taxation. There has been a steady tendency in this direction since 1921. In that year the combined income from motor vehicle licenses and gasoline taxes amounted to 25.9 per cent, the gas tax revenue amounting to less than 1 per cent. In 1925 the income produced from these sources was 43.5 per cent of the year's total and the gas taxes alone amounted to 13.5 per cent.

In the same period taxes on property specifically for road purposes have dropped from 11.2 per cent to 3.3 per cent of the year's income.

Funds raised by the sale of bonds were also a smaller percentage of the total in 1925 than in 1921, being 21.3 per cent in 1925 as compared with 27.8 in 1921.

The expenditures by the various state highway departments during the year are given in the table below. These figures do not include expenditures by county and local authorities for local roads:

Always Big Demand for Fur of Ermine

One of the most prized of all furs is ermine. In reality the ermine belongs to the weasel family and very strongly resembles the ordinary weasel. Their habits are similar. The ermine is about eight inches from the tip of its nose to the tip of its tail, with the tail itself about three inches long. The end of the tail is a beautiful black in all seasons of the year. In winter the ermine turns white, while common weasels remain at all times a uniform reddish brown. The beautiful contrast between the snowy white coat of the ermine in winter and the jet black of its tail is what makes the fur so valuable, says Milton Wright in the Scientific American.

White rabbit is often used to imitate the ermine. Conies are also extensively used as imitators. The imitators most difficult to locate, however, are the weasel and the marten. In recent years summer ermine has become popular, and this reddish brown fur is easily imitated by using the skin of the weasel. Weasels are found in many countries, including our own, but the Chinese and Japanese weasels, being the cheapest, are the most generally used. Because their coats are of champagne color, they are easy to dye.

Old-Timer Heard From

I have been interested in some of the "tall ones" which appear from time to time in the Companion," writes a subscriber, and I beg leave to submit one from my own state of South Dakota. I heard it told by an old-timer from the Black Hills. I give it in his own words as nearly as I can.

"In airly days, when the railroad first come into Sturgis, leavin' the army post of Fort Meade about two mile off to one side, I got a contract freightin' supplies from the depot down to the post. One day I was unloadin' a carload of gunpowder when I had a very curious experience. I had shoveled my double-top wagon box full of the black stuff, and got down out of the car, climb up into the wagon seat, gathered up the lines of my four-mule team an' lit my pipe. Well, I jest naturally absent-mindedly throwed the match over my shoulder into the back of the wagon. An' do you know, nigh half of that stuff burned up before I could get it tromped out?"—Youth's Companion.

His Status

A very pompous farmer was made a justice of the peace, and he was so impressed with the tremendous dignity of his position that the village in which he lived became too small to contain him. As he was swaggering down the road he walked into a wheel barrow belonging to an old woman. "Be careful where you're going, man," she cried. "Woman," replied the indignant farmer, "I am a magistrate, not a man."

DUSTY ROADS--- DUSTY DRIVING

ALL SHOULD BE TREATED WITH CALCIUM CHLORIDE

"Keep Down the Dust on Important Resort Roads" Advise of League Official

There are a great many roads in leading resort communities of Western Michigan that should be treated with calcium chloride during the entire resort season is the opinion of Clarence V. Smazel, executive secretary of the Development League of Western Michigan.

"Roads of a few miles in length to resort hotels, around popular lakes and in other places where the traffic is heavy enough to keep somebody in everybody's dust all the time are poor advertising for the community or individual business," the league's secretary points out. They not only make driving miserable, but they spoil the appearance of the car and of the landscape, shrouding the grass, shrubbery and trees in the dust. Besides that, the dust is so thick at times as to be an actual danger to traffic, just as fog is."

"The state is setting an example in the care of its gravel highways. Communities would find it a profitable investment to follow the example in keeping down dust on important resort roads."

Another example of poor advertising may be found along West Michigan's highways—in boxes of native, the fine big cherries have been cherries. Obviously enough to the been picked out for sale elsewhere at fancy prices; the scrubs, those picked on by birds and otherwise undesirable are put up at some of these roadside stands for sale. The tourist forms his impression of Michigan fruit and Michigan business fairness from the cherries he buys at the side of our highways—not from the cherries he buys at the city markets, which came off the same trees. Cherries so sold should be distinctly marked second or third grade, as they are, Mr. Smazel urges, so that toarists don't get a wrong impression of our fruit and fruit growing regions to take home with them. And why not, he asks, sell the tourist the best at the roadside instead of seconds or worse? Experience has taught some roadside stand men that the best can be sold at just as fancy prices beside the road as on the large city markets—saving shipping costs.

Economic Move

The husband was having one of his periodic streaks of economy. "We must cut down on our expenses," said he to his wife. "There's no argument about it. We simply must." The wife smiled. "Quite right, dear," she agreed. "As you say, there's no argument about it. "I suggest that you do not try to get such long distances on the radio."

Fragrant Lives

The purest lives I have known have not been those carefully screened from the world, but which, coming up in it, have kept themselves unspotted. The sweetest and truest have grown and ripened under conditions, you would say, most hostile, but which have been wrought into the means of a grandly elevated faith and life.—J. F. W. Ware.

Liberal Mr. Total

The missionary meeting was over and the various amounts contributed by the members of the church had been, as usual, one of the most popular features. On the way home little Jane said to her mother: "What a kind man Mr. Total must be. He gave ever so much more than anybody else!"

Important Statistics

A statistician has figured that the lumber used yearly in the United States would build and finish a double row of five-room houses, which, 100 feet apart, would reach from New York to Seattle, south to San Francisco, east to New Orleans and back to New York.

What Volcanoes Create

The geologist, Suess, holds the source of the sea salt was volcanic eruptions, when the earth's crust was beginning to harden it. Eruptions, he says, give forth gaseous compounds containing chlorine, brought down by rain.

Moorish Superstitions

One of the first things a traveler notices in a Moorish town are the "hands," painted or drawn, on the walls of many dwellings. These are to avert the "evil spirit"; five, the number of fingers, is considered a sacred number.

Easy to Give Up

It is, as a rule, far easier to sacrifice self—to give up, that is, our moral existence in the first one who chooses to take it—than to fulfill our spiritual destiny, to accomplish, right to the end, the task for which we were created.—Maeterlinck.

"Sneed will attend to that. He'll probably work you double tides."

The three—Malet had not come—talked the thing over. If once the letters were in Milman's possession, he did not think it likely that Raxon would quarrel at the price—enormous though it was—that he would be called upon to pay. McKimber would suffer, but they could not grieve about that. The main thing was that Raxon would have to acknowledge he was beaten, and to maintain his hold on McKimber he must pay out a million dollars.

They told Nita of it when she came in. She did not venture to disagree. But her depression was noticeable. It was so unlike the cheerful and laughing girl. She gave as a reason a headache. But it was a heartache that troubled her. The father of Robin was to be disgraced. She and her volunteered activities were the direct cause. For a moment she thought of pleading with them to find some other way, but she refrained when she saw no other way was possible to make Raxon pay. She tried to harden herself against this weakness. Her father had been disgraced through Raxon. Malet and Bradney had been robbed of their opportunities and their careers clouded. Peter Milman had lost his fortune, and might lose his home if Raxon were not compelled to pay. She must be loyal to those with whom she had begun this adventure. But it was very hard. All her world had been changed in that moment when she had seen Robin looking at her from the big car that had swerved so perilously. He would never see her again. To the day of his death he would believe she had played with him, used him for a summer flirtation and then forgotten him.

"I think it is more than headache," Peter Milman observed when she had gone from the room. "Was she unhappy at Great Rock?"

"Unhappy? She had a good time for a month and came away with a hundred dollars more than she expected. If that's unhappiness, let me enjoy it."

He turned again to Bradney, not realizing for an instant that he was the sort of usual father who rarely understands his daughter. When women said little and were difficult to comprehend, he set it down to headache. It was an easy solution.

'Enry gave notice next morning. He did not hesitate to say that Mrs. Raxon did not understand domestic problems. He was lofty and not to be persuaded. Not until too late did he perceive how much more financially beneficial it would have been to get himself dismissed with a month's salary in place of a longer notice.

By nightfall he was back in his own room. He had purchased a dark sweater and black sneakers, and, by the use of those devices which he had learned in amateur theatricals, had disguised his face. Bradney had employed his leisure by doing some surreptitious carpentering work in the lower room. Sneed had arranged to give instant warning if Raxon returned unexpectedly from the city. But as a chauffeur had been told to meet the train arriving at half-past six, there seemed no reason to fear interruption.

The bookcase was six feet in height and contained five shelves. The lower, behind which Nita had hidden, was given up to volumes whose average height was eighteen inches. The shelves were very deep, made to accommodate books of more than average width, many of which were deeper than their height. They rested on a board seven inches above the floor. Bradney had ingeniously split this, so that while the books were not disturbed, the man hiding had an additional seven inches of shelter. He had the craft of a cabinet-maker, and the oiled and hidden hinges moved noiselessly.

It was as dinner drew to a close that the disguised Barnes crawled feet first to his shelter. He had arranged things so that he could see the safe without moving. There was nothing in his garments to catch on any projection. He found he could move his limbs without attracting any noise. He tried it when Bradney, directly the dinner was finished and his employer settled to a game of auction, hurried to the room. Bradney sat in Raxon's chair and looked hard at the lower shelf, but could detect nothing unusual. It was not so difficult for Barnes to remain immobile and patient as for some. He had the hunter's instinct highly developed. He was not the man to forsake a pool if the fish did not immediately rise to his fly. This was a game after his own heart. He thought of poor Fleuing Bradney, overtaxed owing to the defection of 'Enry, scurrying here and there with his grave face and rather grand man-ner, and smiled. At ten he was tired but sanguine. At midnight he began to suffer from the hardness of the floor. But the longer he waited, he told himself, the sooner would the quarry come into view.

It was nearly one when Paul Raxon entered. He took a seat at the center table and put on it some small change and bills. Bridge winnings, no doubt. Then he lighted a cigar and went to the door leading to his bedroom, soon to reappear with a velvet smoking jacket. It seemed to Barnes that he paced up and down before the bookcase for hours. Then suddenly he went to the safe, turned the well known combination swiftly and flung it open. He seemed to be searching feverishly for some one thing in its deep recesses.

Very quietly Barnes pushed open the oaken side of his prison. It made no sound. Then, as noiselessly, he emerged. His next move was to crawl to the shelter of the table. Here he felt safe. He could see that Raxon was still searching. Stealthily the man who had been 'Enry rose to his knees. Then he rose to his feet and came nearer, inch by inch, to the unconscious man. He covered the last few intervening feet in a leap. Raxon's head, twisted sideways with the fearful and agonizing force of a blow on the jaw, caught sight of a face wholly unknown to him. The disguise was palpable, but sufficient. He was thrown forward on the heavily padded lounge. It was while he was fighting for breath that his hands were tied behind him. Then a loop of rope was forced into his mouth and something pulled down over his head so that he could see nothing. Next he was dropped to the floor and pushed through a narrow door. After that he was not molested. But he could hear someone at the safe. Papers rustled, drawers were opened. Then the steel doors swung to. Later his locked door was opened and shut. After that for hours there was blackness and cramp, rage and despair.

Although he could not shout, he found he could make inarticulate noises. He made them till his throat ached and the corners of his mouth were raw from the harsh rope. He had no idea yet where he was. He supposed Hellington must have prepared this secret place and kept its locality hidden. Perhaps through it there had come men, ere this, who had spied upon him. Cramps seized him, whose agony left him white and feeble. Perhaps he would starve to death here. It was well known that his movements were uncertain, secretive, and that he was impatient of questioning. It would be found that his bed was unoccupied. They would not look for him here. They would hunt far afield while he starved to death in this tower retreat. No shame or repentance came to him. Instead he cursed himself for carelessness. In his former home he had preserved almost an excessive caution, but he had supposed in so large a household as this, with many servants and guests, he was safe. There were other rooms which should have attracted burglars more than these, rooms where women kept their diamonds. To come here argued a preconceived plan.

First of all he thought of McKimber. Could he, after all, have dared this? Was his dejected spirit assumed for putting the younger man off his guard? He remembered telling McKimber that those who underestimated him came to disaster. Perhaps he had made the mistake of thinking a man beaten to the ground when he was merely resting, awaiting an opportunity to spring. His assailant might even have been young McKimber. It was a tall, agile man who attacked him.

According to Barnes' instructions, Sneed, at breakfast, asked if he should arouse Mr. Raxon or see if he wanted his coffee in his room. As a rule Raxon was up early. In the end they discovered him. His mouth was swollen and discolored, and he could not rise to his feet when Bradney uncut the bonds. He was in a deplorable condition. He would tell his wife nothing. Nor would he hear of the police being notified.

He Was in a Deplorable Condition.

"I know who did it," he lied, "and I will attend to him myself. This must not get into the papers. If it does, I shall know it comes from one of you three." He looked coldly at his wife, his butler, and the footman.

It was Bradney alone who dared to meet his gaze. In such a rage as this Mrs. Raxon trembled. Sneed could not avoid the consciousness that it was one of the wealthy employing classes who shivered with anger. Bradney welcomed the opportunity to see a man of whom he had heard so much bad, at whose hands he had himself experienced ill-treatment, at a moment when his usual control was gone. It seemed to the scientist that for a minute the mask was lifted and the terrific emotions which he had kept hidden were let loose. He cursed his wife. He called Sneed a timid, worthless creature that he had allowed a thief to break through and assault him. Bradney, towering over them all, came in for his share. Where had this hulking flunkey been that the marauder had stolen upon him?

Bradney was secretly amused. Then he saw his chance to escape. He recalled some of Barnes' gestures and gave notice at once. There could hardly be a suspicion of collusion. It seemed to Mrs. Raxon that here was a courteous and efficient man servant goaded to rare insubordination Sneed suddenly took the resolve to depart with his footman.

Raxon turned to his wife. "Pay them and see they leave at once."

Sneed turned on his heel and left the room. His second-footman followed.

"If any of those other people heard any commotion, just tell them I had a fainting spell and shall be all right tomorrow." He almost pushed her from the room and turned the key.

Raxon hoped, as he walked to the safe, that he would find the robbery had been made by professionals for readily convertible plunder. He hardly dared search for the McKimber exhibits.

The envelope which had held what would have kept McKimber a pliant and obedient tool was gone. Negotiable securities and a large sum of cash were untouched. It was plain that the intruder had come for one thing only, and had been successful. The man who would have most to gain by this abstraction was young Robin McKimber, who had been in the house a week and had learned of the danger in which his father stood. In figure young McKimber was like the man of whom Raxon had one fleeting glance.

Never again would there be the opportunity to get any more incriminating letters. The page stolen from the register could not be replaced. What a fool he had been not to have them photographed. To implicate the politician without them would be almost impossible. Were McKimber to make a bold stand and accuse his enemy of attempted blackmail, the public would probably flock to the support of the older and better-known man. It was the greatest blow Paul Raxon had ever sustained. He felt that the humiliation of it would never pass from his mind. His face was bruised and sore, but he hardly knew it. He who had warned his opponent of the folly of underestimating him had fallen himself into that very trap.

It was late in the afternoon when he allowed his wife to enter. She had brought with her a pot of coffee and some sandwiches. The coffee he drank eagerly. He would not eat.

"I don't know what we are to do now those men have gone. It was most inconsiderate of you to talk like that to them. The maids won't wait at table and the agency can't send any men until tomorrow. If only we hadn't so many people staying here!"

"They won't be long here," he said grimly. "I think this social experiment is going to end. Pile the whole bunch in automobiles and take them to the chateau at Huntingdon. Telephone for reservations and see they get a good meal. They'll like the change. Now leave me alone."

CHAPTER XII

The evening that saw the Raxon guests taken to dinner at Huntingdon found the Japanese garden in Lower Fifth avenue occupied by the Milman conspirators. During the dinner, which was perceptibly better served because Sneed had dropped back into his old place and Achille was less hurried, there was no word said about Great Rock. It was when Sneed had taken the coffee away that Milman began. Sitting in the center of them, he showed no sign of triumph. Watching him, Nita thought that she had never seen a man more perfectly courteous than he. Milman complimented them all on what they had done, but it was her father who came in for the greatest praise. The daughter watched him growing younger as he listened to Peter's encominms. Barnes felt that at last he had been able to do his share.

"We are now," Milman went on, "in the position of holding what Raxon was going to use to lever himself into a senatorial seat. I have little doubt in my mind but that he will pay the price asked, which is a million dollars. Without this evidence he has no actual hold on McKimber. With it he can command his absolute obedience. I feel certain that with McKimber's help Raxon can win. Without it he has little chance. The question is this: Is the senatorship worth a million dollars to Paul Raxon? If not, we are worse off than when we began. If it is, we have won."

Peter Milman looked about him as the chairman of a meeting does when he desires suggestions. None would have supposed that there was a very real risk of disgrace and imprisonment if Raxon refused to buy and determined to prosecute.

"If you had looked into his face," Bradney remarked, "and had seen all the passions of hate and disappointment, fear and despair graven on it, you would have no doubt at all on the subject. I'm certain he will buy them back."

"But he'll try and get us," Barnes reminded him. "I wasn't any too gentle."

"There's always that danger," Peter Milman observed calmly; "but when a man has so overpowering an ambition as his, he may use caution which is really abhorrent. I have no doubt he will wish he could put us in Sing Sing. But better counsel will show him that it is dangerous. Before we see him we must rehearse some of the circumstances in which we were injured by him. I want him to think that we all know very certainly by what means he hurt us. In case he should decline to buy these letters, he must understand that he cannot prosecute us."

Floyd Malet had said little. He was watching the girl's sensitive face. He did not understand how it was the others did not realize she was suffering. They had assumed that she was wholly with them and as eager as they to win. It was because Malet loved her that he knew what was passing in her mind. He had seen her with Robin. He knew certainly that she loved the lad and suffered torture at the thought that she was going to aid in giving Paul Raxon the whip hand over him.

It was plain to Floyd Malet that this love of his for a girl, whose beauty had first attracted him because it was of a rare and finer sort, must be kept a secret. What has the world to offer but scorn for the middle-aged and unsuccessful lover? But love, he reflected, if it is genuine, finds its reward in service. How could he help her? Was it possible to bring her happiness and Robin? The other men were talking about Robin's father.

"He will suffer," said Mr. Milman impartially. "And his family will suffer. I am sorry for them; but in this case our interests weigh down the balance. McKimber, at all events, has money and an assured position."

"Why not offer to sell the letters to him, then?" Malet cried. "You will get your money just the same and you will be defeating Raxon?" He noticed that Nita listened eagerly for the reply.

MANY ACTIVITIES CAMP CHARLEVOIX

SWINGS INTO FIRST WEEK WITH THIRTY ON LIST

Special Features of Entertainment Planned in August Will Be Popular

Camp Charlevoix, the character camp for boys, located nn the Sweet Brier farm near the ferry, has swung into its first week of activity with thirty hoys on the list and more coming.

Director Lewis C. Reimann of Ann Arbor, has gathered around him a strong staff of specialists who give the boys a variety of activities of an educational nature as well us physicnl. Emphasis is heing lnid on handicraft, nature study, forestry, conservation, Indiancraft, dramatics, horsemanship, arts, first aid, scouting and instruction in athletics and acquatics. Every boy is required to take swimming and boating ns a safety measure.

Practically all the men on the staff of Camp Charlevoix are University of Michigan men. Two professors in instruction in forestry and dramatics. Each man has had several years experience in boys work and boys camp nnd each councillor was selected because of his understanding of boys. The one obvious thing one notices about the leadership is its virility and red-bloodedness. Many of the men are prominent in university athletic and student life.

In nddition to the other leadership there is Chief Joe Donatus of Cross Village chieftain of the Ottawa Indians who tenches Indian arts, canoe making, bead work, birchbark work and performs Indian dances around the camp fire in full Indian regalia.

August 6th has been set as "Circus Day" when a complete circus will be staged nn the camp grounds to which the public will he invited. The circus will include a horse show, trick horse performance, Indian dance and pow-wow, clowns, tumblers, Arabian dances nnd songs, and othe athletic exhibitions.

During the third week of August the Indian play "Hiawnthn" will be stuged on the shore of the lake under the direction of Professor J. Raleigh Nelson of the university.

The "Day Camper" plan has prnven an attractive feature to the resorters of Charlevoix. Under this plan the boys who resort in or near Charlevoix are called for with an auto at 8:30 each morning, given the regular program of cnmp just as the regular full-time campers receive and are returned home at 5:30 in the afternoon. The Day Campers take dinner at camp at noon and are given all the instruction given to the other campers.

A number of families are taking ndvantage of the plan and are sending their boys out to camp each day. How they are enjoying the camp is evidenced by the remark of one day camper, who said to his mother: "Gee! I wish that camp would never end.".

Vsitors are welcomed to the camp any afternoon or evening.

MINERALS SAVE MUCH HOG FEED

You've heard a lot about minerals for hogs. The Ohio station adds some more evidence to the cords of proof already piled up that minerals pay big.

They fed some pigs there in dry lots, for nearly five months. Part of them got a ration of corn, middlings, oil meal and salt. These gained an average of a little over half a pound a head daily, and required 576 pounds of the ration to make 100 pounds of gain.

But some other pigs—same weight and age—were given minerals with the same grain ration and gained nearly a pound a head daily. These required only 441 pounds of feed to make 100 pounds of gain. That was a saving of over one-fifth of what the first pigs ate.

The minerals fed to these pigs consisted of this mixture: Finely ground limestone, 40 pounds; raw or steamed bone meal, 40 pounds; salt, 20 pounds, and potassium iodide (which you get at a drug store), 1 ounce. Mix well and feed in the grain ration, about two or three pounds to 100 pounds of grain. In addition, the Ohio people allowed the animals to help themselves to salt.

When pigs get high-grade tankage, or even when they're on good alfalfa, clover or rape grazing, minerals are less important. These feeds supply minerals themselves. But even then the mineral increases gains.

For instance, the Ohio station got gains of nearly a pound a head daily on pigs fed 60 per cent protein tankage with corn and salt. But adding just finely ground limestone to this ration—letting the pigs help themselves—increased the daily gain one-sixth of a pound and made 100 pounds of gains on a little less feed, 421 pounds being the amount then eaten.

Herd Boar Is Important Factor in Hog Breeding

The herd boar is the most important factor in the breeding establishment. A good sire is more than half the herd, for a good sire used season after season will help to build up a good herd. Before breeding season the boar should be in a thrifty condition, but not fat. If there are several head of sows to breed it will reduce him in flesh considerably. Keep the boar in a large pen by himself and not near any sow. Do not permit the boar to run loose with the herd and when a sow is in heat take her to a convenient place to be served. Use a breeding crate for aged boars, as sows get a better service and the boar is more likely to sire a larger, more uniform litter. Observe the boar and be sure that he has a keen appetite. It is better to keep him a little hungry than overfed.

The boar should have special attention prior to and throughout the breeding season. Clean, dry quarters, with plenty of room for exercising, should be provided. He should also be provided with the right kind of feed so that he will continue in a strong, vigorous, fertile condition, regardless of any reasonable work that may be expected of him. During the breeding season a good mineral mixture should be fed in dry grain to promote a healthy condition and increase the boar's digestive and assimilative powers.

Exercise Is Essential for Pregnant Brood Sow

Pregnant brood sows generally get enough exercise but sometimes they do not. The value of exercise to the expectant mother of a litter of pigs is indicated by some work at the Kansas station.

One group of sows had corn alone plus plenty of exercise. Another group had corn alone in exactly the same quantity but was confined to a small pen. A third group had corn and tankage and exercise while a comparison group had these feeds in the same amounts but was closely confined. All sows were bred to the same boar.

The pigs at farrowing time did not vary much in size but there was considerable variation in the life and activity, the pigs from the sows getting exercise being more active. The most important result of the comparison was that the pigs from the sows given exercise were much heavier at 30 days of age. The pigs from sows getting corn alone and exercise were 53 per cent heavier and those from sows getting corn, tankage and exercise, 20 per cent heavier than the pigs from comparison groups getting no exercise. The pigs from the sows getting corn, tankage and exercise, were the heaviest.

Keep Sheep Healthy

No flock owner can afford to neglect the ewe lamb crop. When in restricted winter quarters, and on dry feed, care should be taken to keep them healthy. They should be provided with feeds that produce bone and muscle. Ewe lambs are susceptible to delicate fondness for certain kinds of food, and especially after coming off pasture. To obviate a setback, a little attention to providing savory food to encourage the appetite is prudent.

CRUSADE AGAINST BARBERRY NOW ON

Campaign Conducted by U. S. Department of Agriculture

The fight against the common barberry will be continued in Charlevoix county this year. The campaign will be carried on by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the Michigan State Department of Agriculture and Michigan State college. Last yenr the progress made in this county was very satisfactory, the city of Charlevoix and all of the surrounding country being scouted. Included in this scouted area was one of the largest growths of the common barberry found in Michigan.

The common barberry against which the campaign is being staged is the host plant for the black stem rust of wheat, oats, barley, rye and other grains and grasses. This black stem rust should not be confused with the leaf rust which is very prevalent at the present time. The eradication of the common barberry will not do away with the leaf rust which fortunately is not as devastating as the black stem rust.

At the present time the squad located in this county are making their headquarters in Enst Jordan, but it is expected that they will move to Boyne City some time next week. The squad consists of Walter Kidman, squad leader, Hunter, Griffith, Larson and Bryfogle.

ELECT OFFICERS FOR BOAT CLUB

JOHN R. WINEMAN HEADS ORGANIZATION ANOTHER YEAR

Coming Regatta Has Promise of Being Largest Ever Staged in Northern Michigan

At a meeting held last Thursday, the Charlevoix Boat Club elected the following officers for 1927:

Commodore, John R. Wineman, Chicago, Ill.

Vice commodore, George Shwab, Nashville, Tenn.

1st rear commodore, G. E. Hollingsworth, Renslar, Ind.

2nd rear commodore, Julius Gilbert, Detroit.

Treasurer, Robert Bridge, Charlevoix.

Secretary, Mrs. M. Roy Brady, Charlevoix.

From a standpoint of entries and interest manifested, the annual regatta of the Charlevoix Boat Club promises to be the biggest event of its kind ever held in Northern Michigan. Twenty-six beautifully engraved silver loving cups have been offered as prizes in the speed boat classes, not including prizes in all sail boat races. Two of the cups, one to be known as the Charlevoix Boat Club trophy and another given by John Koch of the Colonial Club, will be offered as perpetual prizes and raced for each year until won three times by one person.

A large entry list in the outboard classes is in prospect from resorts throughout Northern Michigan. The Baby Bandit, owned by a resorter spending the summer at Beulah, is a sure entry. This boat made a clean sweep of all competition in Florida last winter and is one of the fastest outboard boats in the country. It is intimated records will be broken and there is a treat in store for spectators when these small speedsters get into aetion.

LOCALS COPPED SUNOAY'S GAME

NOSED OUT EAST JORDAN NINE BY 7-4 MARGIN

Charlevoix's Edge in Last Four Innings Gave Them Margin of Victory

Fighting an uphill battle all the way, the Charlevoix baseball team defeated East Jordan last Sunday at the north side ball park by a 7-4 margin.

Charlevoix presented an improved team all the way around. Zimmerman pitched a steady game, holding East Jordan to seven hits, while Hursh played splendid ball behind the bat. Garrison showed well at short-stop, and scored three of Charlevoix's runs. Warren Shields was the fielding star for the locals, cuting off several runs by his sensational catches. Hallett collected two hits, which served to compensate his erratic fielding.

Gunderson and Peebles starred for East Jordan, the former getting two hits and the latter pitching a good game, although handicapped by mediocre support. East Jordan got off to a flying start, scoring one run on an error and two hits. Charlevoix countered with a run in their half of the second inning, when Garrison made a brilliant steal to home. Garrison scored again in the fourth inning, but East Jordan forged ahead in their half of the fifth, scoring three runs on Hallett's three errors, a hit batsman and Goley's mental lapse. Charlevoix came back in the game with three tallies in the same inning on Hallett's hit, Knight's sacrafice and hits by Hursh, Garrison and Benson's muff of shield's long fly.

From the fifth inning to the ninth East Jordan was helpless while Charlevoix scored another run in the seventh when Hallett singled, went to second on Knight's bunt and scored on Shield's fly.

This was the first victory of the season for Charlevoix and a good crowd witnessed it. They will continue to win if given the support of baseball fans. The team takes this opportunity of thanking Dell Dutcher for taking tickets and Frank McDonald for his effort in getting the diamond in shape after Saturday's heavy rain. They also extend their thanks to "Cy" Powers for his efficient work as umpire.

WATER SPORTS DREW BIG CROWD SUNDAY

Inclement Weather Held Eotry List to Smaller Number

In spite of cold, inclement weather, The Inn bathing pier and adjoining park was crowded with people last Sunday afternoon to witness the program of water sports.

Although but a handful of people appeared in bathing costume to enter the events, the races and contests, including greased pole contest, canoe tilting contests, 50-yard dash for men and men's balloon race were pulled off to the satisfaction of all. The Inn orchestra furnished music throughout the program.

Next Sunday afternoon at the same hour a similar schedule of water sports is in order and may other events will be added to the list. Suitable prizes are awarded to winners in each contest.

Special for this week, $1.50 to $3.00 Golf Hose, your choice for $1.00. Charlevoix Sport Shop.—Adv 29-t1.

STATE'S CORN CROP IS SHORT

EIGHT PER CENT SMALLER THAN PREVIOUS YEAR

General Condition of State's Farm Crops Below the Average of Past Few Years

Michigan's corn acreage this year is eight per cent smaller than last year and the low condition of 64 per cent of normal indicates that the 1927 crop will be the shortest in the last ten years according to a statement issued today by Herbert E. Powell, commissioner of agriculture and Vern H. Church, agricultural statistician for Michigan. The forecast is for 38,468,000 bushels of corn from 1,466,000 acres which is the lowest acreage since 1906.

Farmers were also unable to carry out their intentions to plant oats, and the acreage is 1,539,000 this year or two per cent below last year. However, the condition of 82 per cent shows that oats progressed better during June with more seasonable weather, and the outlook now is for a harvest of 52,372,000 bushels compared with the 1926 crop of 51,810,000 bushels.

With the winter wheat harvest close at hand, the outturn is expected to be larger than last year and above average. Latest information places the acreage for harvest at 920,000 acres with a condition of 88 per cent which forecasts a total production of 18,378,000 bushels. Since the intended acreage of winter wheat could not be sown last fall, the spring wheat acreage is increased from 5,000 acres in 1926 to 9,000 acres this year. This acreage indicates 140,000 bushels of spring wheat as Michigan's crop this year.

The barley acreage in Michigan this year is 190,000 acres or 57,000 acres above last year and the condition is two per cent above average so that with average weather conditions until harvest time a crop of 4,817,000 bushels will be realized.

Tame hay acreage in Michigan is one per cent larger than a year ago and is now nearly up to the large acreage of a few years ago. The increase came from larger plantings of alfalfa, sweet clover, legumes and smaller classes rather than from clover and timothy which showed an acreage lower than in 1926. The forecast from 4,097,000 acres of tame hay is 4,372, 000 tons or 275,000 tons more than cut last year.

The disastrous weather conditions last fall caused such heavy losses to bean growers that some have reduced their acreage this year and only 662,000 acres was planted compared with 726,000 acres planted in 1926. However, the heavy abandonment last fall reduced the harvested acreage to 552,000 acres from which 6,624,000 bushels of beans were harvested, the salable portion of which was approximately 5,300,000 bushels. The condition on July 1 was 11 per cent below average at 75, and this condition forecasts a crop this year of 6,206,000 bushels.

Michigan growers increased their potato acreage 12 per cent this year and planted 279,000 acres. Although a marked increase, this acreage is still considernbly under the ten year average. The July 1 condition was 85 per cent of normal which is three per cent below the ten year average

The Annual Battle

FAMILY GATHERING AT JOLIFFE HOME

Day Spent in Visiting and Enjoying Fine Dinner

A memorable home gathering occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ethan Joliffe of Atwood on Sunday last, when surviving members of the family met for the first time in several years.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Joliffe and their nephews, Sibley Joliffe, of Painsville, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. John Joliffe and Robert Stafford and family of Charlevoix; R. E. Stafford and wife of Norwood, Charley Edson, wife and family and Mrs. Elizabeth Peebles of Ellsworth.

The dny was spent visiting and talking over past events, never to be forgotten, and retold in a manner that brought one back to the time each incident took place.

The well filled lunch baskets, added to the goodly supply furnished by the host, supplied a dinner that will go down in history among the Joliffe clan. The occasion was a most happy and enjoyable one, and one that should take place among families more frequent.

MOTOR DERBY AT EAST JORDAN SUN.

AFTERNOON OF THRILLS AT COUNTY FAIR GROUNDS

Aeroplane Stunts, Motorcycle Races, Auto Polo, Etc., Sponsored by Agricultural Society

An afternoon of thrills is in store for those who attend the Motor Derby to be given under the auspices of the Charlevoix County Agriculture Society at the Fair Grounds in East Jordan next Sunday afternoon.

The Derby consists of a game of auto polo, push ball played with automobiles, motorcycle races, a fleet of airplanes in stunt flying and other attractions, and begins at 2:30 p. m.

The auto polo games are played in specially built automobiles and spills and thrills are numerous as the drivers swerve and dodge across the track in their efforts to drive the ball between the goal posts of their opponents. With cars turning completely over and many collisions inevitable, the crowd is brought to its feet again and again.

The motorcycle races with six drivers, most of whom are state champions, furnish sped that cannot be made by automobiles on a race track. They make the turns without precentibly slackening their pace, and their jockeying for the pole will furnish sufficient excitement for the most thirsty.

Auto push ball is played with four automobiles specially constructed. The ball, a pneumatic affair covered with lenther is six feet in dismeter, often bounds into the air far above the grand stand. The flying circus will include various stunts.

The first lady to finish was Miss Margorie Eiger of Chiengo, her time was 24½ minutes.

The Right Breakfast for Workers

Eat Food that Supplies "Balanced" Ration After Night's Fast

IF you feel tired, hungry, "fidgety" hours before lunch, don't jump to the conclusion of poor health. Thousands have unenergetic mornings because they start days with breakfasts lacking in certain food elements.

To feel right, you must have a well-balanced, complete breakfast ration. At most other meals—lunch and dinner—you get it. But breakfast is a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 65% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamines and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning.

Get Quaker Oats today. Grocers have two kinds: Quick Quaker, which cooks in 2½ to 5 minutes, and Quaker Oats.

AT THE MOVIES

The tinsil and glamor of a circus —and the sinister shadows of the underworld—these are the two extremes in Lon Chaney's latest and most startling contribution to the drama of the screen.

"The Unknown," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest Chaney Vehicle, is a thriller, a mystery and a wonderfully sweet human love story all in one; with Lon Chaney, master of weird disguises, in what is undoubtedly the strangest role in his career.

At the Palace Theatre, Saturday and Sunday, July 23-24.

"Quicksands" a Chapter in March of Western Progress

The clash between the desperate outlaws and the U. S. Army, exponents of law and order on the frontier of the west will be seen as a chapter in the march of progress when "Quicksands," starring Richard Dix, comes Friday, July 29th, to the Palace Theatre.

New Comedy Has Two Big Novel Features

The screen's first great feminine comedy team and a "Concentrated character cast"—these are the novelties presented theatregoers in "The Callahans and the Murphys." Kathleen Norris' famous novel of which every character was a principal one —and which idea has been cleverly developed in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmmization of the book.

Marie Dressler and Polly Moran are teamed in a series of the most comical incidents ever portrayed on a screen, and are co-featured with Sally O'Neil and Lawerence Gray.

Palace Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, July 27-28.

Stage Success Said To Succeed Again on Screen

When "The Telephone Girl" arrives at the Palace Theatre next Monday and Tuesday, July 25 and 26 will have its first chance to see Herbert Brenon's third picture since his never-to-be-forgotten "Beau Geste." In the interim, he made "God Gave Me Twenty Cents" and "The Great Gatsby" all of them Paramount productions.

STATE CORN CROP IS SHORT and forecasts a production of 29,644,000 bushels; however, July 1 is too early to give accurate indications of the final crop.

The sour cherry crop was hard hit by spring freezes and the crop is very light in important sections with less than one-half a crop every where in the state. The sweet varieties are better and show 50 per cent of a crop in many localities.

Among the other fruits the grape crop was injured more than expected and is backward in growth. Only about one-half of last year's plum crop is expected. Dry weather threatened blackberries and raspberries, but recent rains have improved the prospective production.

The United States corn crop will be the shortest since 1903 and the prospects are for a very short crop of fruits; reports on other crops were more favorable.

"It's An Amazing Performer"

The following letter is typical of owner comment in every part of America. Veteran fine car owners can't say enough about the beauty and performance of Dodge Brothers New Six

"I am not in the habit of writing letters to motor car manufacturers, but this new Dodge Brothers Six is positively a wonder, and I want to congratulate you.

During the past fifteen years I have owned many high-priced automobiles, but no car within my experience has remotely approached this new Six of yours in sheer sporting vitality – both in the get-away and the all-day going.

It's an amazing performer – with a beautiful body – and I prophesy that it will instantly take rank with the proudest names on Motor Row."

"There are two reasons against it. One, that we know Raxon to be a crook used to chicanery, fraud, and blackmail. He will not protest, no matter how we obtained these letters. He will probably pay. With McKimber it is different. How shall we convince him that if he buys these letters he is safe from subsequent blackmail? He will know if it his secret is shared by many others and he will never feel safe. As he probably won't run for office now, he may make a fight of it. He has money. He can retain the best counsel, while we are handicapped from the start. It is not a matter of choosing to benefit one at the cost of the other. Personally, I With us all it is merely the easiest and safest way to get the money we have been defrauded of from the man who did it."

"Who's to bell the cat?" Barnes asked. "How are you going to talk it over with Raxoo?"

"I think if I telephone to him he will come."

"But he might bring a gang of thugs with him," Barnes objected. "He can get a bunch of gunmen any time he needs them. What's to prevent him going through this place and getting the letters?"

"It is not a house easy to break into, as you know. He will not be admitted if he does not come alone. If he is as desperately anxious for those letters as I believe, he will come at once and alone. I shall not mention them when I speak to him, but he will be thinking of nothing else."

Malet had the opportunity to get a few words with Nita later in the evening.

"A few mornings back," he said softly, "you met young McKimber in the grounds at Great Rock. You had a few minutes with him and then left him. You said you thought you had been breaking your heart. Nita, what did you mean?"

She smiled at him. "Did I say that? How silly. Doesn't one exaggerate before breakfast?"

"You can't deceive me like that," he answered. "You are fond of Robin and you are torn between two emotions, your love for him and your loyalty to your father. What you would like to be able to do is to take those accursed letters and give them to Mr. McKimber without letting his wife or son know they ever existed."

"I would rather do that than anything else," she admitted. She saw that it was useless to conceal it from the sculptor. And she knew, too, that this middle-aged genius with the worn face and quiet ways, loved her. "It is hard, Uncle Floyd," she said, and smiled whimsically, "to feel one is betraying where one loves."

"You are not," he protested.

"But I am. It is impossible to avoid knowing it. When Raxon gets those letters nothing can save Mr. McKimber from constant humiliation. If you had heard the tone Raxon used you would understand better. He will compel Mr. McKimber to do all the little and big disgraceful things that might hurt the new Raxon's reputation. The record Mr. McKimber has built up will be trailed in the mud. Robin has told me so much about his father. I have heard so much of the acts of kindness which he hides from the world. He has educated hundreds of poor children, for example, and people don't know it because of that rather bluff, overbearing manner. How can I deny having helped to send the father of my Robin to disgrace?" She was silent for a moment. "I can see him losing his self-respect and sinking lower and lower. His wife and son won't understand. It will be horrible for them. I have sent away the man I love believing that I am heartless, without faith or honor. And I can never open my lips to justify myself. There is nothing that can save either of us."

"Don't say that," Malet cried. He was deeply moved. "There is always a way out when it is right that there should be. And if ever a thing was right, it is that you and he should belong to one another. Something shall be done."

"There is nothing any one can do," she said.

"Doesn't one exaggerate after dinner?" he laughed. "My niece, go to bed and sleep. The least of all your uncles is on the job."

It was to Peter Milman that he first addressed himself. "Milman," he began, "I'm very much interested in the outcome of a romance that began under my eyes at Great Rock." Malet flung himself down in a chair and lighted a cigarette. "You know that to men of middle age who have of necessity passed by the time of love and roses there is something very fascinating in seeing splendid youth in its great moments."

Peter Milman did not show his visitor that this interruption was unwelcome. Milman was engaged in planning how to get Paul Raxon to this house eager and yet unsuspecting. And Floyd Malet was beginning to talk of love and youth.

"I suppose so," he assented courteously.

"I'm talking about Nita," Malet went on. "I suppose hundreds of men have fallen under her fascinations." He laughed a little ruefully. "I am one of the oldsters who admit it."

"So do I," said the other. "To me she is one of the most lovely creatures I have ever met."

"The man she fell in love with—" Malet continued.

"She fell in love with?" Milman demanded. "Really that's interesting. Her father did not tell me." "Who was it?"

"Young McKimber, Robin by name."

"He will be very rich," said Milman, "and Barnes' objections can be overruled. I have never met the McKimbers, but he is said to be a man of good character."

"They can't possibly marry," Malet declared. "She has broken it off with him, and she won't change her mind. Poor child. It was a wound that may never heal."

"Why, if she loves him and he loves her, should she do that?"

"Because she knows that she is acting for the enemies of his father."

"We are not Mr. McKimber's enemies," Milman retorted.

"We are going to put in Raxon's hands what will make McKimber for ever his slave. That's not too strong a term. We are going to sell McKimber body and soul to Paul Raxon. Do you suppose, knowing that, Nita can marry McKimber's son?"

Milman frowned. "Dear, dear," he said, almost testily, "Nita went there for a definite purpose which had as much to do with her father personally as it had for you, Bradley, or myself. These complications are annoying, most annoying, but they cannot affect our plans."

"My dear Milman," Malet said, "if you are blaming Nita for falling in love, you are making the first absurd remark I have ever heard to drop from your lips. Love comes unsought, unexpected, often in its beginnings unwanted. I tell you I saw the whole thing. She held back; she tried to avoid him, but the circumstances were such that she could not. There were dances and tennis parties, riding expeditions and golf. Nita could not run away. She was, as you remarked, there for a definite purpose. Robin is as splendid in his way as she is. I think he is as badly broken up as Nita. You see, he cannot understand it. Naturally she cannot give him even a hint of it."

"I'm immeasurably sorry you had to tell me this," said Peter Milman.

"Why?" Malet demanded.

"Because it infuses an element of bitterness in what was wholly a mood of victory. I am sorry for them both, but is it not possible that you with your artist's sensitiveness have put this in too vivid a light?"

"If anything, I've understated it." Malet could see that Peter Milman was genuinely disturbed.

"Let me put it another way. Is it not possible that you, with your ready sympathy, have imagined the temporary infatuation that is so often seen in house parties to be a grand passion, something epic, as was the love of Dante for Beatrice Portinari?"

"Milman," said Malet slowly, "if I could believe you were right, I should be perfectly happy. But I saw them together. I spoke to each of them when they had said good-by. No, it was the real thing. They will never completely recover. Nita has slain her own happiness because of the loyalty she thinks she owes to us."

"Thinks," Milman repeated. "Is there any doubt about that? Was it lightly, do you suppose, that I stooped to what we have done? I have never deluded myself about it. We have done what men of honor do not attempt. What punishment Raxon deserves is not ours to administer. After I have forced him to pay, I shall never be quite the clean man I was. I shall be something a little less. I knew this very well before I invited you to join me. You must not expect me to be swerved by anything now."

"Do you think I am trying to swerve you, as you call it?"

"For what other purpose have you told me this? You have said, in so many words, that if we do as we have planned we are breaking Nita's heart."

"You will be," Malet asserted, "but you'll never know it from her. That's how she defines loyalty."

"Have you forgotten what your life has been of late and to whom you owe all your unhappiness?"

"I am past fifty," Malet answered, "and what is left of my life seems very small and unimportant when I compare it with the happiness that is owed Nita."

"By comparison I see myself in a very poor light," Milman answered. "But there is Barnes to think of, and Bradley."

Malet sighed. "It was too big a thing to expect. I had to tell you what your victory meant to Nita. I was going to appeal to the others, but as you have refused, it will not be of much use."

Peter Milman paced up and down the room. What Malet had said made him unhappy. Chivalrous by nature, just, and not embittered by what life had brought him, he was confronted with a situation unparalleled in his career. He remembered noticing that Nita was depressed, unlike her vivid, joyful self. She had drooped like a tall lily. Now he knew why. And, knowing it, the task of disciplining Raxon lost its savor.

Peter Milman Paced up and Down the Room.

"I have not refused definitely," he said. "I must think it over in all its bearings. In the end there is little doubt but I shall have to decide against you. I wish it had not happened. I am unsettled." Suddenly he held out his hand to the man who was willing to do the magnificent thing and make the sacrifice gladly. "I must add to my strong personal liking for you an increased respect. Not many would do as you have done. Come and see me about this before breakfast tomorrow."

Fleming Bradley was smoking a last pipe when Malet entered his room. The physicist was relaxed and happy. His domestic duties had been a strain, and he was now concerned with the growing of his beard.

"Fleming," Malet began, "do you like Nita?"

"Like her?" Bradley said warmly. "She is the most delightful girl I have ever met or hope to meet. She is the only woman who has ever made me wish I was as young and good looking as Robin McKimber. If she were my daughter, I should think fortune had made up for everything else."

"You must have noticed she was looking rather unhappy?"

"I taxed her with it. It's the strain she's been living under. She will soon pick up."

"She'll never be really happy again. Fleming, if her father wins, she loses. Our victory is won at the cost of parting her from the man she loves, the man who loves her well enough to risk losing his fortune."

Malet told Bradley in almost the same words what he had just told Peter Milman. The first rush of sympathy which Bradley felt for the lovers was tempered on reflection when he considered what the effect of yielding to it would mean. The work he believed he had to accomplish in the world would not be done. Again he would be compelled to seek some uncongenial position. He said as much to his friend.

"But if you admit I'm putting you in an unfavorable light, it is evident you think you are choosing the wrong thing," Malet retorted.

"I'm choosing to enjoy the rewards of an adventure which might have landed me in jail—and may yet. I'm very sorry about Nita, but she is young. Life is before her, whereas I'm past middle age. Floyd, you are intoxicating yourself, not with sentiment, but with sentimentality. It's a symptom of a generous nature, but it yields before a logical examination. I am not going to throw away what we have gained. You must not ask it of me. My God! Floyd, do you suppose I am content to go back to my job at the refinery again when there's a chance to escape?"

"I suppose not," Malet said wearily. "The way of sacrifice is too hard."

Bradley frowned. He did not rest easily under the imputation that he was choosing the selfish way.

"At least, I have Peter Milman with me," he said.

"I'm not so sure. Will you line up with him, whichever way he decides?"

"I shall be with him in any case, but I don't think that will help you much."

Neeland Barnes was stretched at length on a chaise longue in his room. He looked up with a smile.

"What brings you here, Viscount?"

"I thought I'd drop in and have a cigarette. What are you doing?" Barnes had a note-book and pencil in his hand.

Overdoing?

Hurry, Worry and Overwork Bring Heavy Strain.

MODERN life throws a heavy burden on our bodily machinery. The eliminative organs, especially the kidneys, are apt to become sluggish. Retention of excess uric acid and other poisonous waste often gives rise to a dull, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning perfectly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. More and more people are learning to assist their kidneys by the occasional use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Ask your neighbor!

THOSE WHO FARM

Mostly because he provides the world's foods and because of recent publicity given him by "dirt farmer" politicians, the farmer attracts wide public interest. Even congressional speaches about him are read and stntistics relating to the farm are sought after.

One statistical study awaiting anxiously each year relates to farm tenancy. And in recent years the public has found in these figures cause for satisfaction.

They show that there is very little absentee landlordism in American agriculture. In 1925 more than nine-tenths of the rented farms were owned by landlords who lived in the immediate neighborhood, and only five per cent were owned by landlords who lived outside the state in which the farm was located.

Further study of farm tenancy brings out the fact that large numbers of men climb the ladder from farm hand to tenant farmer to farm owner. Almost one-half of tenant farmers previously have worked on the farm for wages. And, while three-fourths of farmers under 25 years of age are tenants, only one-fourth of those over 65 do not own their farms.

Personal ownership by those who work the ground is a highly desirable condition. The only excuse for tenantry is that those who want to farm do not always have the capital necessary for buying land, stock, machinery and other essentials of agriculture. The strongest argument against it is that it makes the relation of the tenant to the farm the equivalent of the workman to the factory. The force of this argument will not be lost until agriculture rises to that stage of development where it can pay as high wages and dividends as modern industry now pays to both labor and capital.

ENFORCE GAME LAWS

Game and fish laws should be enforced. Tourists visiting the state should be required to purchase non-residence licenses before they are permitted to fish. The fee is small as compared with other states and fishing in Michigan in general is better than in most other places. People of other states who come here to fish should at least contribute the amount of a non-resident license to help put back fish in the place of the ones they have taken. Hotels, resorts, information bureaus and business houses should urge upon the tourist the necessity of securing fishing licenses, and then, if they violate the law in the face of all this precaution they should be expected to pay the penalty.

However, our own people should not expect the tourists to do something that they themselves fail to do, and the citizen should always observe the hunting and fishing laws. If he does not do this, he should be punished. Sportsmen throughout the state should co-operate with the game and fish department in the prosecution of all game violators whether they be tourists or our own citizens. The greatest attention, however, should be given to the education of the general public along the lines of conservation and in our zeal to protect wild life we should not become promiscous persecutors. We should at all times endeavor to use common sense.

MICHIGAN'S NEW CRIME CODE

Instead of following the example of New York and proposing sundry amendments for the modernization of the old criminal procedure, it was the sense of the Michigan commission that its best course was to wipe the slate clean and submit an entirely new code so drawn as to meet the needs of a new era. Such a code was prepared and finally adopted.

Some members of the Michigan bar thought the innovations went a little too far. The criminal element was unanimously opposed to many provisions of the new code. Certain criminal lawyers were hostile to it for obvious reasons. Nevertheless, both houses of the legislature had the good sense to take the report to their experts at its face value and to pass the code without any hamstringing amendments. Governor Fred W. Green, who loyally supported the commission, shares with his house and senate the credit for this highly important piece of constructive legislation.

In California, after a lively tussle, the legislature was prevailed upon to enact, without much mutilation, the admirable body of new laws sponsored by the Fuller commission. California and Michigan thus divided honors for being among the first to adopt virtually complete modern criminal codes at a single stroke.—Saturday Evening Post.

A WISE DECISION

The determination of the state government to resume advance contracting for state roads is a wise one. It promises to prevent a cessation of these very necessary operations, and it is quite in harmony with the legal financial policy of the state. One of the theories that has been advanced is that the law does not allow the making of contracts in advance of the provision of the money to pay for them. But in the case of continuing source of revenue, it should seem that a broad interpretation would hold that the funds are provided so long as the law is in force.

Michigan has a lot of concrete paving to be done before its roads are wholly satisfactory, and it not only wants them done and paid for some time, but as soon as possible. —Michigan Manufacturer.

FIRST PIONEER OF NORTHERN MICHIGAN

John M. C. Runyon Dies at Advanced Age of 91 Years

John M. C. Runyon died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. E. Chew, near East Jordan, July 16. He was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, September 11, 1835, being 91 years, eight months and five days old at the time of death.

He is survived by two daughters and one son, Mrs. J. E. Chew of East Jordan, Mrs. John King of Cheboygan, and James Runyon of Norwood, besides a host of friends. His wife preceded him nearly 20 years ago.

Mr. Runyon left Pennsylvania when 17 years of age. He spent three years in the south-west, then came to the Manitou Islands and Sutton Bay, and from there to Banks township, where he homesteaded directly after the Civil war. He lived here until 1888, when he moved to Norwood, where he lived continuously, with the exception of nearly four years prior to his death which he spent with his daughter, Mrs. Chew, who took care of him during his declining years.

He was a soldier of the Civil war, enlisting practically at the beginning and walking with several companions to Elk Rapids, where they were mustered in. He was a member of Co. E, 10th Michigan Cavalry.

Funeral services were held from the home of J. E. Chew, conducted by Rev. V. J. Hafton. Interment in the Antrim cemetery in Banks township.

BAPTIST CHURCH

The theme last Sunday morning considered the prophecies of Nicola Tesla whose research work during the past thirty years has made so many scientific discoveries and who predicts much more wonderful things by 1950. But the abiding things of faith, hope and love remain, in the Spiritual world, unmoved while the material things have been so greatly changed. A worth-while lesson to learn.

The large evening audience was greatly stirred by Mr. Kirby's solo, "The Master Stood in His Garden." The anthems sung by the choir also were greatly appreciated. They showed good work done in the rehearsals.

The usual services will be held during the coming week. The pastor will preach at 10:30 a. m. and at 7:30 p. m. Bible school at noon and B. Y. P. U. at 6:30 p. m. on Sunday. Midweek services and choir rehearsal on Wednesday evening. The B. Y. P. U. will meet at the church at 7:30 p. m. Friday and go for a "beach party." They invite tourist young people to join them. The Aid Society will meet today with Mrs. James Meggison at 217 Antrim street.

The church is enjoying the vacation being spent here by Carey young people.

Judge U. S. Eby and family of Cass county were visitors at the pastor's home on Tuesday. They were former parishioners.

VISITORS WILL SEE FAMOUS DAIRY HERD

Dairy Day at Traverse City State Hospital July 29

Dairymen from the Grand Traverse region will meet at the Traverse City State Hospital July 29 to see the herd of cattle judged for type and to hear prominent dairy specialists, according to a statement from the dairy department at Michigan State College.

The herd of purebred Holsteins at Traverse City was established in 1889 and individuals from the herd have carried the name Traverse to all corners of the United States. At the present time the cows in this herd have an average of an annual producton of milk of over 10,000 pounds of milk annually.

The cattle will be judged for type at 10:00 a. m. by Prof. John Burnette, Michigan State college. An all day program has been arranged and weather conditions will not interfere with its completion.

One of the features for the day will be a baseball game between inmates of the institution and a selected team for attendants and visitors. Patients at the institution defeated the attendants recently in a hotly contested ball game.

The Traverse City Hospital will furnish ice cream, coffee and lemonade, and a basket dinner will hold the visitors attention at noon.

Traverse Colantha Walker is a member of the Traverse City herd and is the holder of the world's record for butterfat production in eight location periods. This cow is only one of the holders of high individual records in this herd.

MARRIAGES AND DIVORCES IN MICHIGAN

Comparison of Years 1925 and 1926 Complied

Report on marriage and divoree in Michigan for the years 1926-1625, issued by the U. S. Department of Commeree, Washington, gives the following figures for counties in this region.

	Marriages		Divorces
	1926	1925	1926	1925
Charlevoix	92	123	20	21
Antrim	58	85	7	16
Emmet	104	170	20	29

The Department of Commerce announees that, according to the returns received, there were 39,788 marriages performed in Michigan during the year 1926, as compared with 46,276 in 1925, representing a deerease of 6,488, or 14 per cent. This deerease is, in all probability, due mainly to the enactment in 1925 of a law requiring application for a marriage license five days in advanee of the date of which the license is to be issued.

Our aim is to please you with Willard Batteries and Goodyear tires. Benj. Brown.—Adv. 10tf.

It begins to look as though there was going to be another superintendent appointed to take charge of the Mackinac Island state park. We have no axes to grind with Mr. Kenyon, the present ineumbent, as he has always been very courteous and kind with the Cheboygan people and has complied with their every request, but if he is the father of the steps taken to get automobiles on the island which we think he has sponsored and encouraged, we are in favor of a new man to take his place. By all means the island should remain virgin as regards the intrusion of automobile and all of Michigan should fight to keep it so. Let there be one place in the world where the gas wagon is not the dominating factor, let that place bo the beautiful gem rising from the breast of our wonderful inland seas, a hallowed land made world famed in history and story. There are so many reasons why the automobiles should be kept off the island and only commercial and selfish reasona why they should be allowed thereon.—Cheboygan Democrat.

Our garage, battery and tire shop is at your service. Benj. Brown.—

COMMUNICATION

Two essential points in road building are—that concrete roads wear, and that all other kinds wear out. The age of concrete roads is not known for us yet, none have worn out, and I truly believe that one hundred years from now this same statement will be true.

I never did suppose that the whole United States would immediately take up the building of good concrete roads, but I did think that Charlevoix county would—and then after our adjoining counties had witnessed the beauty and permanency of these roads, and they too would. But this I do say, "That as a result of the object lessons which have been so forcibly given us in our building of these roads fifteen years ago and all the newspapers in Charlevoix county preaching and publishing them, I did expect more concrete roads built."

Remember: Uncle George says, "Every householder in every county should subscribe for one newspaper at least in his own county—and every business man should advertise his business. Show me the man in business who does not advertise, and I'll show you a dead or dying one. If you will compare the articles in your own county papers with those of many other counties, you will admit that you have a superior class of papers at home.

It is absolutely a crime to spend our money for building the kind of roads we are. Especially since we have so many miles of concrete roads which haven't cost a dollar since they were built, and all the others have cost us hundreds of thousands of dollars, with no permanency in any of them, nor can there be. The whole world has ever been looking for something according to the system of their times—while Charlevoix county has sat still for the past ten years with folded hands, apparently satisfied with what they have done. Now the time has come to wake up and devise ways whereby we can get the balance of our twenty miles of Dixie Highway finished, and a complete concrete road around Lake Charlevoix.

I feel very proud of the following poem which was written some twelve years ago. It has been copied by several papers and seems to have made a good impression.

Where Are The Roads?

Hordes of autos now remind us,
We should build our roads to stay.
And departing leave behind us,
Kind that rains don't wash away.
When our children pay the mortgage,
Fathers made to have their loads,
They'll not have to ask the question,
Here's the bonds, where are the roads?

Yours truly,
Uncle George Van Pelt.

BRINGING UP FATHER COMING HERE FRIDAY

Will Be Shown in Large Water-Proof Tent Theater

Among those who entertain the public, the least known is the cartoonist. Millions know the appearance, the habits and life of the stage and movie stars; thousands are familiar with the features, temperaments, and byographs of writers; but few have any iden of what the most popular cartoonist looks like their habits or how they do their work.

They are like the masters of a marionette show, they remain behind the scenes unseen. We laugh at the antics of puppets, but rarely think of the one that pulls the string.

Some of the cartoons are printed in more than one hundred different papers at the same time. The most widely known of them all are "Jiggs and Maggie" or "Bringing Up Father." For this widely read cartoon George McManus receives a salary greater than the president of the United States or a King's ransom.

Maggie and Jiggs, with Dinty Moore and the others, will be here in person. This is the only and original "Bringing Up Father" company on the road authorized by George McManus.

It comes direct from the big cities, where it is played at high prices of admission. This company is now motorized and plays at popular prices in a tent theater, the first time in its long run of over ten years.

George McManus writes a new comedy with music each session. The one being presented this season is a laugh from start to finish. It will be presented at Charlevoix, Mich., Friday, July 22nd, in a big water-proof tent theater.

If you fish you must have the right kind of tackle. Come in and let us outfit you right. Staley Bros. Hardware.—Adv. 27tf.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
by B. C. Mellencamp

Charlevoix County Reacredited

We are pleased to learn from a recent announcement from H. W. Norton, director, Bureau of Animal Industry, state department of agriculture, that Charlevoix county has been reaeredited under date of July 1st, for a period of three years. We have the honor of being the third county in Michigan and one of the few in the United Sttates that have made such a successful campaign to eradicate tuberculosis from its boundries.

In order to be accredited a county must have less than 5 of one per cent infection which makes it next to impossible for the dreaded disease to gain a foothold. This high rating now held by the county is worth thousands of dollars to the farmers as it means added value on every head of cattle owned. During the last two years on an average out-of-state buyers have purchased several carloads of cattle and paid a premium of from ten to fifteen dollars more per head as a result of our accreditation.

At the present time there are 34 counties that are accredited, 19 counties with the first test completed, two counties with first test in progress, and 18 counties on the waiting list, which totals 73 out of the 83 counties in the state that have taken aetlon. By the time you read this there will be 42 counties that are accredited as eight more have been sent in for accreditation.

The Charlevoix Co. Board of Supervision should be complimented for their financial assistance that has made the work possible and their desire to make this county one of the most healthy spots in Michigan to live.

Cherry Growers, Attention

Michigan is experiencing a hnd infestation of cherry leaf-spot this year and in many localities the need for immediate spraying is urgent. From recent correspondence the infection is something terrible in Southwestern Michigan and also in Oceana county, whieh is one of the main cherry producing seetions in the state.

Spray your trees with either lime-sulpher or bordeaux mixtures. If you note any yellow leaves on your trees start now. Your next year's crop will be damaged if this is not done.

One other thing that will be of considerable help to next year's crop is that of using a cover crop. A cover crop of oats, seeded sometime between July 15th and August 1st will accomplish a great deal in preventing winter injury which so often is a hazzard in cherry orehards, especially when we have a bad leaf-spot infcetion yenrly followed by a late growing fall and a cold winter.

Remember that the young trees are just as much in need of this treatment as the hearing trees. You cannot afford to lose many leaves from the new trees as damage will be done.

MRS. MARSHALL DIED AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Had Been a Resident of Charlevoix for Nearly Forty Years

Mrs. Henry Marshall, a resident of Charlevoix for the past 38 years, died at her home on Mason street last Saturday morning after an illness which extended over a period of many years.

Elizabeth Emmeline Clothier was born in Trobridge, Canada, September 25, 1885. She was united in marriage to Henry Marshall at Trowbridge, in October, 1874. They made their home in Canada until 1889 when they came to Charlevoix, where they have since resided. Six children were born into this home, one having died in infancy. Those who survive are Hilton of Charlevoix; William of Lansing; Mrs. Morris Ackert and Harry of this city and Roy of Minneapolis, Minn.

Mrs. Marshall was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal church, having united with the church in infancy and transferred her membership here when she moved to Charlevoix. She was also a member of the Eastern Star. For about sixteen years she had been in failing health and during the last few months was a great sufferer. In her years of health she was a practical nurse, ministering to many in their need. She was also active in church work, teaching in the Sunday school. Besides her five children she is survived by her husband and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted from the home on Mason street, Tuesday morning at 10:30, Rev. C. E. Pollock officiating. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

DEER LAKE FARMER BADLY INJURED

Completely Covered With 800 Pounds of Hay

Last Saturday while Terry Barber was putting hay into his barn the ropes on the hay forks became tangled. His son lifted Mr. Barber up to untangle the ropes and as soon as he touched them they loosened, letting down about 800 pounds of hay upon Mr. Barber. Only the fact that his son was holding him saved Mr. Barber's life. He was knocked down under the weight of the hay and is suffering acutely from a wrenched shoulder and badly bruised side and arm, but is recovering as well as can be expected. He is confined to his bed.—Boyne Citizen.

PARKER WINS CITY TOURNEY

DEFEATED OBIE SMITH IN FINALS MONDAY AFTERNOON

Mrs. S. P. Frankel of New York Best in Women's Singles—Event Was Decided Success

W. Gordon Parker, dean of Charlevoix tennis players, walked away with the men's singles trophy of the Charlevoix's Tennis Club's first annual tournament Monday afternoon at The Inn clay courts amid the applause of a large and appreciative gallery, defeating Obie Smith of Indianapolis, Ind., in straight sets, 6-4, 8-6, 6-1.

It was a deserved glory for the veteran Parker, whose steady, easy returns the tricky service drew the hard driving Smith out of position time after time and made him miss. Matching experience and wit against youth and smashing force, Parker made the younger man play his game and defeated him. Parker showed the same form which won him 25 championships in the United States between the years 1894-97, when he was among the high ranked players of the country.

In the first set Smith led the games 3-1 before Parker struck his gait. Parker came from behind again in the second set, which he won 8-6 after losing set point several times. In the third set, the champion allowed Smith but one game.

Mrs. F. P. Frankel of New York City won the trophy in the women's singles event by defeating Mrs. H. S. Lion of Cincinnati, Ohio, in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3. Mrs. Frankel played excellent tennis ability all the way through the tournament and won her way through the finals with little difficulty.

The girl's singles trophy was won by Miss Freda Birge of St. Louis, Mo., who defeated Jane Finn of Cincinnati, Ohio, in the finals, 6-2, 6-8, 6-3.

William Connett of St. Louis, Mo., proved the best in the boy's singles, winning from Edward Rosenberg of Detroit, 6-2, 6-3.

The junior boy's singles trophy was won by M. Alexander of Detroit, who defeated Harry Begley of Popular Bluff, Mo., 8-6, 6-0.

At the close of the tournament Monday afternoon, A. I Creamer, manager of The Inn and donor of five beautiful trophies, presented cups to the winners of each event.

The tournament just closed speaks well for the ability of G. E. Ash as recreational director. Entries exceeded all early expectations and the event was more than a success. Large galleries witnessed the matches each day and tennis of no ordinary caliber was witnessed. The tournament will be made an annual event and will no doubt increase in popularity in following years.

OLD-FASHIONED PICNIC AT YOUNG STATE PARK

Springwater Beach Owners Will Give Free Lot on That Day

On Saturday, July 30, at the Young Park near Boyne City, there will be held an old-fashioned picnic. A good program is being arranged for the education and entertainment of all, and an opportunity will be had to witness the actual well drilling operations on the Stutzman farm, located nearby.

Alpena, Gaylord, Petoskey and East Jordan will be well represented and an exceptionally large crowd is expected to attend. Boyne City stores will be closed from 10.00 a. m. until 1.00 p. m. on that day, so that citizens of that city may attend.

Fred Merritt, who is one of the geologists in charge of oil activities in the Horton Bay district, is hurrying the installation of machinery at the well, the most of which is now ready for action. The derrick is completed and drilling will begin not later than Saturday of this week.

The owners of Springwater Beach are also joining in on the day's festivities and will give away a free lot on Saturday afternoon, July 30th, at 4:30 fast time. Each visitor over 18 years of age coming on the plat on that day will be given a ticket on the free lot. The winner must be present in person at the drawing, otherwise the person having the next number drawn will be declared the winner.

Visitors will be welcomed to Springwater Beach at any time and are especially invited on July 30th.

VANALLSBURG MARKET SUFFERS HEAVY LOSS

Damage Amounting to $3,000.00 Caused by Fire Tuesday Night

Fire thought to have started either from defective wiring or chimney sparks, caused damage estimated at $3,000.00 to the stock, fixtures and machinery in A. VanAllsburg & Son's market and grocery store Tuesday evening.

The entire rear end of the store, where surplus stock and machinery were located, was destroyed. When first discovered, it was thought that the smoke house was afire. Investigation revealed that no fire had been used in the building that day. The market and restaurant in the adjoining portion of the building both opened for business Wednesday morning. Mr. VanAllsburg stated that his loss was partially covered by insurance, but will be severely felt at this busy time of year.

A small roof fire at the Clark cottage on Nichols street, called the department out last Saturday afternoon. Little damage resulted from the blaze.

TWO INJURED IN AUTO SMASHUP

ACCIDENT OCCURRED LAST THURSDAY ON U. S.-31

Mrs. I. L. Dice and Mrs. John Alward Recovering Nicely at Charlevoix Hospital

Mrs. I. L. Dice of Norwood and Mrs. John Alward of South Bend, Ind., were quite seriously injured last Thursday morning when a car in which they were riding was driven off the highway and turned over in a ditch on U. S. 31.

Other occupants of the car besides the two injured women were Kenneth Alward of South Bend, Ind., owner and driver, Sam Alward and Mrs. Will Alward of Norwood. The party had been to Norwood and turned onto U. S. 31 to proceed south. Another car, driven by B. H. Stever of Findlay, Ohio, was going in the same direction ahead of them. According to witnesses, a side sun shade dropped from the Stever car and the driver slowed down to a stop to pick it up. Alward was viewing the scenery while driving and did not notice that the other car had stopped. He was blocked from going to the left by another car approaching from the south, and, swinging to the right, crashed into the Stevor car and then into a ten-foot ditch with the result that the car turned turtle a couple of times before coming to a standstill.

Mrs. Dice received bruises about her hips and was badly cut by broken glass. Mrs. John Alward suffered a severe blow across her chest and was picked up in an unconscious condition. Both women were brought to the Charlevoix hospital and are recovering nicely. Other members of the party were more or less shaken up and bruised. The car top was completely smashed and it is maraculous that they escaped alive.

Neither Mr. or Mrs. Stevor, nor their son, Jimmy, were injured, although the car was badly damaged.

CHARLEVOIX MAY HAVE HEATING GAS

Petoskey Gas Company Surveying City and Its Needs

A representative of the Petoskey Gas Company was in the city last week, making a preliminary survey, the intent being sooner or later locating here and supplying the city with gas for heating and lighting purposes.

A complete canvass of the city will soon be made, and if sufficient consumption is pledged, it is quite likely Charlevoix will be provided with this important commodity.

STATE GRANGE OFFICIAL TO BE PRESENT

Grange Members of County to Meet With Deer Lake

Mrs. Dora Stockman will meet with Deer Lake Grange, Saturday evening, August 6. All grange officers are requested to be present for a conference. Other members are also invited to attend.

This promises to be a fine meeting and the grange is very fortunate in having Mrs. Sockman in the county. It is hoped that every grange will be represented at this meeting.

ENTRIES FOR REGATTA COMING IN

TWELVE FROM NEIGHBORING RESORTS ALREADY ENTERED

Official of M. V. P. B. A. Will Preside as Starter—All Time Records Will Be Official

Twelve outside entries have been made with the Charlevoix Association of Commerce for the second annual regatta of the Charlevoix Boat Club. Eleven of these are in the three outboard motor classes and one in the free-for-all hydroplane class. It is freely predicted that when all entries are in, including those in the 50 h. p., 100 h. p. and sailing events, the list will be well over the 50 mark.

Those entered so far are listed below according to their classes:

Class C Outboards

"Baby B," M. Roy Brady, Charlevoix.

"April Fool," Perry Rae, Traverse City.

"Baby Stepper," George M. Oberauf, Mullet Lake.

Class B Outboards

"Is-It," Frank A. Hoard, Traverse City.

"Duck Soup," I. C. Murray, Traverse City.

"Apple Sauce," H. W. Brown, Traverse City.

"Misty," Ed Olson, Spider Lake.

"Spark Plug," Dr. E. F. Sladek, Traverse City.

Class A Outboards

"Dynamite," Ben Samuelson, Traverse City.

"Alert," Ed Olson, Spider Lake.

Free-For-All Hydroplane

"Star," M. C. Jewett, Traverse City.

"Miss Charlevoix," M. Roy Brady, Charlevoix.

Other boats from Harbor Springs, Big Rapids and other lake ports will be entered by the end of this week. Local people will read with interest that an entry has been made in the free-for-all hydroplane class, thus furnishing competition for the "Miss Charlevoix." Extra effort is being made to induce the owner of the "Baby Bandit," holder of the Colonel Greening Trophy, most coveted of outboard motorboat prizes, to enter the local regatta. This boat is at Crystal Lake near Beulah for the summer. Another speedy entry in the outboard classes is "April Fool," owned by Perry Rae of Traverse City. This boat beat the "Baby Bandit" at a recent regatta near Traverse City.

There seems to be dissatisfaction in some quarters over a decision to award the John Koch permanent trophy to the winner of a 150 h. p. Chris-Craft race. There is but one boat of this design in Charlevoix and no certainty of any outside Chris-Craft entries. It would seem more fair to offer this excellent cup in a 100 h. p. race, where more entries will be in and no restriction as to make of boat. There is already an excellent trophy offered for the winner of a free-for-all displacement race, which covers boats of Chris-Craft type. It looks like someone is trying to "hog" things.

The course over which the race will be run is to be measured by the city engineer and all distances will be correct and official. An official of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association will preside as starter and time keeper, all time records will be official and if any records are broken they will be recognized internationally.

WILL OBSERVE 25TH ANNIVERSARY

SEQUANOTA CLUB WAS ORGANIZED 25 YEARS AGO

Special Two Day Program of Music Pageant and Water Sports to be Held

In the early spring of 1902 a group of people who had for several years been at the Ironton resort, purchased the farm just north of Ironton on the lake front and in April began the erection of the cottages known as the Sequanota Club.

Beginning Saturday, July 30, a proper celebration of this, the 25th anniversary will be inaugerated. The public is cordially invited to attend any of these events.

Saturday evening, July 30, farce entitled "For The Love of Pete," beginning at 8:15 o'clock in the club rooms.

This play is under the direction of Gora Townsend Dickinson of Hubbard's Woods, Ill.

Sunday, July 31, a special service in the Ironton church at 11 o'clock. Dr. Shelby Vance of Pittsburgh, Pa., will preach the sermon and Dr. F. K. Fass of Cincinnati, O., will speak in memoriam.

Special music will be rendered, Prof. John Winter Thompson at the organ and a quartet of singers, Miss Edyth Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Smith and Prof. Wm. Bentley.

Sunday evening at 7:30 at the Vesper service Dr. William Lampe of St. Louis, Mo. and Dr. George Butterick of New York City, will give the addresses. The same group of musicians will furnish music as at the morning service.

Monday, August 1st, from 2.00 to 4:00 p. m. will occur a water carnival under the direction of the athletic director, Mr. Chas. Dickerhoff.

Monday evening at 7:15, an out door pageant written especially for this occasion by Mrs. Dickinson and under her personal direction, will be given on the green in front of the club house.

Many other features for club members only will be enjoyed, closing with a banquet Tuesday evening after which reminiscent talks will be given by several of the members.

CONG. BOHN WAS HERE ON VISIT

Made Splendid Record as State Senator at Lansing

The eleventh district's new congressman, Dr. Frank P. Bohn of Newberry, visited friends in Charlevoix last Wednesday and Thursday. He was accompanied by Mrs. Bohn and their daughter.

Congressman Bohn enters on his Washington duties on December 1 at the opening of the December term of congress, unless the president calls a special session prior to that date.

Father of the bill which created the Mackinaw state ferries and sponsor of the vital primary bill now held up in courts, Congressman Bohn created a creditable record as senator from the thirteenth district, which landed him a winner in the primary last fall over Frank D. Scott of Alpena, who had held the position for twelve consecutive years.

Congressman Bohn has the best wishes of his constituents, who are almost unanimous in predicting that he will serve them faithfully and conscientiously at the nation's capital.

Business Will Be Carried on by Old First National

The consolidation of the two banks of Boyne City namely the First National and Peoples State Bank was finally perfected last night. The directors of both institutions, believing that Boyne City can be better served with one bank, have been working toward this consolidation for some time. The business of the combined institutions will be carried on at the business office of the First National Bank on and after this date.

Leo Smith remains as cashier, C. E. Rohr as assistant cashier, H. C. Fox and Mrs. Ruth Cahlentz, formerly with the Peoples State Bank, and now with the First National Bank as assistant cashiers and the management of the bank extends to the public an invitation to call and become acquainted and can assure their patrons that everything in the power of the officers and manager of the institution will be done to assure complete satisfaction in their business dealings.—Boyne Citizen.

RESORTER DIED AT HOME HERE

DAVID MAY VICTIM OF HEART ATTACK LAST FRIDAY

Summer Home One of Most Spacious In Charlevoix—Was Pioneer Summer Visitor Here

David May of St. Louis, Mo., died at his summer home here last Friday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. A special train carried his body to St. Louis. Sunday evening, where it was held at the May home until Tuesday, when funeral services were held at the temple Israel in that city.

David May had been afflicted with asthma for some forty years. Of late attacks of heart trouble developed, which were the direct cause of his death, according to Dr. R. B. Armstrong of this city, who attended Mr. May at his death. Within the past six months his condition had grown critical.

Failure of Mr. May's health was the cause of his departure from Los Angeles for the home of his daughter, Mrs. Martin Straus of Chicago, early this spring. Some two weeks ago the May family opened their summer home here where it was hoped Mr. May would recuperate. For a time it seemed as if the brisk northern Michigan climate would improve his health.

At 2:00 o'clock Friday afternoon Mr. May was joking and talking with his family and seemed in excellent spirits. At 2:30 an attack of heart trouble caused his family to call the local physician. Mr. May was resting easy at 2:40, apparently sleeping. At 3:00 o'clock, however, he quietly passed away.

At the bedside at the time of the death were his wife, Mrs. Rosa May, his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Morton May; his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Straus.

The David May family are among the pioneer summer visitors of this city. Their cottage on Michigan avenue is one of the most spacious in this part of the state, backed by the bluffs that rise some fifty feet above Lake Michigan. Next door to the May home stands the colonial mansion of his life long friend, Col. Sidney Shoenberg of St. Louis, who died last winter. This year was the first time in two years that either of the cottages have been occupied.

WAGE WAR ON RUST BARBERRY

CAMPAIGN OF ERADICATION IS NOW ON

Government Men Finish Work Near East Jordan and Move to Boyne City

Good progress has been reported thus far, in the barberry eradication campaign which is being conducted in Charlevoix county this year. The territory around East Jordan has been completed and the squad has moved on to Boyne City. Many acres of escaped areas were located in the territory around East Jordan.

The campaign is being carried on by the United States Department of Agriculture. The common barberry against which the campaign is waged is the cause of the black stem rust on oats, wheat, barley, rye and other grains and grasses. It is interesting to note that there has been a noticeable check of black stem rust in the last two years, over the entire area in which the campaign is being carried on. This is largely due to the fact that over fifteen million common barberry bushes have been killed which means that there are just that many less places for the original inoculation to spring from. Thus the black stem rust cannot get started in a big enough way to do any great damage as it has in the past.

The common barberry is a tall, erect, spiny bush. The leaves are purple or green in color and have saw toothed edges. The spines are usually in groups of three or more. The red berries which are borne in clusters, like currents are quite conspicuous. The bark is grayish and the wood is yellow.

If you fish you must have the right kind of tackle. Come in and let us outfit you right. Staley Bros. Hardware.—Adv. 27tf.

The RECLUSE of FIFTH AVENUE

"Planning my ruach in California. I shall keep horses. I'll get one for you with a nice easy gait."

"I had a curious adventure with a horse once," Malet said. "It must have been almost thirty years ago. I went with some friends into Mexico to do some sketching. Naturally there was a revolution on, and we got into the middle of it. We were all mounted. I remember when my horse was allotted to me, I felt distinctly disappointed. He lacked the graceful curves of the smaller horses. He was tall, long, thin, elderly, and a pessimist. It was only when we were being chased by guerillas that I saw he was different. Whereas my friends were captured, my aged beast raced clear away and I was the only one who hadn't to pay a considerable ransom."

"Ah," cried Barnes, his eyes lighting up, "that tall, long beast you were on was thoroughbred, or I'll take to water drinking."

"It was," Malet said. "He was a broken-down steeplechaser which had been brought out to Mexico City by an English mining magnate."

"What happened to him?"

"He ran until he dropped dead," Malet returned. "I'm not a horseman. I had no idea how fer or fast a horse could run."

"That's the thoroughbred strain," Barnes said. He passed into a discussion on feats of thoroughbred horses and dogs. It was a hobby with him.

"Is there a thoroughbred strain in men, too?" Malet asked.

"You bet there is," Barnes said promptly. "Put the thoroughbred to the test, and, whether he be man, horse, or hound, he'll respond."

"Barnes," Malet began, when the subject was exhausted, "haven't you yet found out that Nita is in love with young McKimber?"

"Impertinent puppy," Barnes stormed. "If I'd been in your place instead of being cast for a d—d flunkey, this would never have happened. I'm not sure but you couldn't have stopped it if you'd tried."

"Stopped it?" Malet returned. "You talk like a fool. I could just as easily have stretched out a hand and dammed the Colorado river in flood. Robin McKimber's been a better man than you have. What have you done all your days but loaf until you were so scared of the sight of Lippeky you took those long hikes which put you in condition? Don't scowl at me. I know you could lick me easily, but that won't make you worthy of your daughter, will it?"

Barnes listened to the story that had been told Milman and Bradley.

"What's the good of telling me this?" Barnes said. "Do you suppose I want to go back to Peekskill?"

"You won't have to. You are six hundred dollars to the good, your wardrobe is enlarged, and you've Nita. Milman admits that what we have done leaves us less clear than we were—"

"It won't hurt me," said Barnes. "You wouldn't notice it on my hide."

"I'm not approaching you from that angle," Malet said craftily. "I'm reminding you that you are winning success at Nita's expense. I'm not in the least doubt about you. With Bradnay and Milman there was a much greater chance of defeat."

"What the devil are you counting on?" Barnes demanded.

Malet put his arm on the bigger man's shoulder.

"On the thoroughbred strain in you. I'm relying on the fact that when the test comes the thoroughbreds respond."

He watched Barnes, who sat silent for almost five minutes. Barnes did not break the silence until he had torn up the copious notes he had made concerning ranch in California, over which he knew now he would never ride.

"I'll do what the others want me to," he said.

• • • • • • • •

Malet knocked again at Bradley's door.

"Barnes has come through," he said, smiling. "I know you despise men given over to sport and athletics, but when it comes to a showdown they have the right kind of heart. God protect me from a world governed by intellect. Good night."

• • • • • • • •

Next morning Malet went into Milman's room before breakfast.

"Before you say anything," he began, "I may as well tell you that Barnes is on my side, and Bradley ready to do what you say."

"I thought they would be," said Milman. "I have not slept, and I tried in vain to convince myself you were wrong. I give in. I have had a great deal of figuring to do to meet the changed conditions. Tell me, how would you like to live just outside Florence?"

"You ask me, a sculptor, how I should like to live there, near the Bargello and the Uffizi?"

"I did not tell you, I think, of my villa there. It lies on the hills to the west of the city and overlooks the gardens of the Villa Palmieri. It has about twenty rooms, and was well furnished. The gardens are productive and charming. Years ago I gave it to a distant cousin. She died recently, and it comes to me again. I find, after settling my affairs, there will be enough for us all to live comfortably in Italy, where the exchange rate favors us very much."

"I don't understand you," stammered Malet. Was this indication that Peter Milman had deliberately thrown away this New York home?

"I sent Sneed to Nita's room with a request that she would give me five minutes after you left last night. You were quite right. I shall always remember you were the first one of us to do the right thing. I could never live in this house happily knowing that to do so was the price of her unhappiness. I am growing older, but I do not think I am growing bitterer. It is sometimes better not to succeed. Perhaps our reward may be that we have got out of our rute. We were all plodding along deep furrows, seeing nothing ahead. I had almost forgotten the villa outside Florence until I saw it mentioned in Loddon's bill. We shall live very comfortably in a house built on a meadow that Dante once owned. My cousin, poor lady, essayed to model in clay, and there is an excellent studio. For Barnes there will be a change—and Chianti. Bradley shall write a book or do what he chooses. I am not to be left alone. I have come, after years of isolation, to depend on you." He broke off abruptly as Nita came in.

"Well, my dears," she said, "what plot have I interrupted? I came to see why the coffee was getting cold downstairs."

"We are on our way to Florence," said Malet.

CHAPTER XIII

Floyd Malet's movements for the next few days were rapid and successful. He found himself for the first time in the city of Rochester. The McKimbers had a big place in its most fashionable residence section, a city block of it where most were contented with a hundred-foot frontage.

Robin McKimber on his way from the works to his home was passed swiftly by a man of middle size whose carriage seemed familiar. The stranger did not observe the scrutiny. Robin felt he was not deceived; the bogus viscount had shorn off his mustache and imperial. He had now a brisker way of walking. Actually, Robin noted, the impostor whistled gaily.

Floyd Malet felt a harsh grip on his arm. He was spun around to stare into the cold face of young McKimber.

"Well," said McKimber, "how is your friend, the duchess of Green-Cheese?"

"Much better," said Malet, undisturbed. "She can now sit up and drink in the view."

"D—n it!" Robin exploded. "Don't shake hands with me."

"I came to your fair city for no other purpose. I want to see your father at once."

"My father isn't well," said Robin. "He doesn't see strangers."

"He will see me," said Floyd Malet airily, "because I bring him back his youth, his reputation, and his future." By this time they had come to the car which Robin had parked by the curb. "If this is your automobile, let us lose no time."

"Look here," said Robin, "you definitely lied to me about Miss Brown's address. I cabled to England and Lady Horsham had never heard of Miss Agatha Brown."

"I didn't give you her aunt's address," said Malet. "I referred you to a duchess traveling in Tuscany."

"Her aunt?" Robin cried.

"The countess of Horsham is the aunt of the lady we will call for the moment Miss Agatha Brown. She spoke truly in not having heard of such a person."

"I've got to know more about this," Robin exclaimed.

"You will not while you grip my arm like that. I have come to see your father. Until I do see him I shall not say any more."

Ten minutes later Malet was in McKimber's private room. The man who was now working as Raxon dictated showed very markedly his depression.

"I think I'd better see you alone," Malet suggested.

"Why?" said McKimber slowly. "My son is my full partner in everything."

"Even in your St. Louis affairs?"

"I don't know what you have to do with St. Louis, but he knows everything that happened to me there."

"This simplifies matters very much," said Malet. "Now, gentlemen, if you will listen carefully, you will hear a most enthralling story, the first essay in serious crime of men hitherto undistinguished in the crook's Who's Who."

When the recital had ended a new McKimber stared into Malet's eyes. It seemed that he had shed years. In place of depression was hope and a returning health.

McKimber senior had an iron grip. "Young man," he said to Malet, and subtly flattered him, "never yet has anyone done me a good turn and lost by it. This goes for you and the others." He turned to his son and commanded him to get three numbers on the long-distance wire. "I'm interested in Peter Milman's association with Brewer. Maybe I can get something back out of the wreck. But don't tell him that yet. When can I see him and the rest?"

"We thought if you could be at Milman's place three nights hence we would arrange to have Raxon there. Bradley and I have staged rather a pretty little scene. Of course, Raxon won't expect to see you or anyone but Milman."

"Can I come?" Robin McKimber asked anxiously.

"I think it might be arranged," Malet smiled. He could say no more, because McKimber bombarded him with questions and made innumerable notes. He was a shrewd and hard-headed man. Malet took the midnight train back to New York feeling he had made a friend. Robin's changed attitude was amusing. He listened with the greatest deference to Malet's remarks and thrust something into his hands as he boarded the train.

"Thank you," Malet said, "but I don't deserve a tip."

"It's a letter for her," Robin flushed a little.

On Thursday evening, which was for ever afterward memorable in the lives of Peter Milman's guests, Paul Raxon walked down Fifth avenue wondering for what purpose he had been asked to confer with the recluse. Over the telephone Milman had said it was a matter of urgent import and had to do with his political ambitions. Ordinarily Raxon would have suspected deeper, but not where Peter Milman was concerned.

A French Manservant Admitted Him.

The Milmans had been a great family intermarried with those who wielded immense financial power. Their prestige was undoubted in New York. Perhaps Peter Milman, brooding over his misfortunes, had some scheme to utilize the influence of his kin. The message was given in such a way as to enlist Raxon's lively interest. It was impossible to think of a visit to this austere mansion as in any sense perilous.

A French manservant admitted him. The financier was shown into a splendid drawing room. The brilliant group which Malet had done many years before took Raxon's eye immediately, although he was ignorant of the sculptor's name. He was examining the group closely when Peter Milman entered. Raxon looked at him intently. He saw a slim man of late middle age wearing the correct garb for the evening. There was a coldness about Peter Milman's manner that was not reassuring. It was almost as if the presence of Raxon were an offense. Milman looked toward the sculptured group.

"I see you are interested in that."

"I am," Raxon responded. "Who did it?"

"One who should have been our greatest sculptor but for an unjust accusation which ruined him." Milman saw Raxon's eyes narrow. "Floyd Malet."

"Malet?" Raxon repeated slowly, as if searching his memory. "Oh yes, I think I call his case to mind. Wasn't he mixed up in a studio orgy where a woman was killed, or died under mysterious circumstances?"

"Something of the sort," Milman answered. He pointed to a seat. "Please sit down, Mr. Raxon."

"I'm wondering what you can possibly have to say to me."

Peter Milman smiled.

"I'm quite sure you are. It has to do with your political future mainly. It seems you wish to go to the senate from this state. My grandfather was a senator for many years, and I still retain an interest in politics."

"You didn't ask me to call just to hear that," Raxon said idmily.

"There is more to come, much more."

The door opened and Fleming Bradley came in. He had been compelled to shave off his few days' growth of beard. Raxon looked up at him, frowning.

"Professor Bradley," said Milman genially. "One of our great physicists now brought down by unkind circumstances to being footman in the houses of lesser men. No, not in this house, Mr. Raxon. Here Professor Bradley is an honored guest." Milman turned to Bradley. "This is Mr. Paul Raxon, who aspires to high office."

Paul Raxon turned on his host with a snarl. He had been tricked.

"If you are harboring a dismissed servant, of mine who left under circumstances which point to his dishonesty, let me remind you it's a dangerous thing to do."

"After a lifetime of orderly quiet one welcomes such dangers." Peter Milman's eyes peered into those red-flecked ones of his guest.

The door opened again and Neeland Barnes, in evening dress, entered.

"This is Mr. Neeland Barnes," said Milman. "Perhaps you know him best under his name of Eury. He tells me he enjoyed every minute of his stay at your delightful home."

Paul Raxon, who had staged so many unhappy scenes for the men he had enmeshed, was now to experience the unpleasing sensations of the victim. He saw, very plainly, that he must suffer what these men chose to inflict and hear what they chose to say. He had not the physical power to escape. Not idly had they sauntered into this room.

"Ah," said Neeland Barnes, with a large gesture, "this is the little fellow I had to throw off the pier at Narragansett years ago. It was my intention to drown him as one does unwelcome kittens, but some misguided Samaritan of the sea defeated my purpose."

Raxon said nothing. But he had not come to his present eminence by being physically above the average. He had risen because of a brain more skilled in craftiness and cunning than the majority. These were not the sort of men to hurt him. He must keep his nerve and let them commit themselves to verbal follies.

Barnes had hardly finished when another entered whom he recognized, despite the absence of mustache and imperial, as M. le Vicomte Raoul de Guillain.

"This is Mr. Floyd Malet," said Peter Milman. "I think you are indebted to his knowledge for ridding your house of period forgeries."

SPEAR IS RELIC OF BARBARISM

NOTED AUTHOR MAKES PLEA FOR FISH CONSERVATION

Stop the Killer Before Too Late—Human Selfishness Has No Place in Present Day

By James Oliver Curwood

That there is a percentage of people in Michigan who still demand the privilege of employing the spear in the killing of fish is one of the greatest proofs of human selfishness in the manner of the conservation of our natural resources. In this day of diminishing wild life the man who will go after fish with a spear is either totally ignorant of the devastating history of that barbed destroyer, or he is willing to rob and diminish basic supply that his own personal greed may be satisfied—the type of a man who fought against and still fights against the one buck law; the kind of a man who would use his bird dog on the last grouse; the type of a man who loves to have his picture taken loaded down with dead things, and who is against every movement which tends to place an obstacle in the way of his personal whims and pleasures.

There is no "half way" point in the use of the spear. The spear is an outlaw from the tip of the barb to the end of the shaft. As long ago as 1878 it had brought destruction among the seven thousand lakes of New York state. Forty-five years ago it had created such havoc in Pennsylvania's magnificient river systems that it was banned forever. State after state has added its verdict to the general condemnation. Willard Parsons, director of conservation for the state of Maine, writes me that "it is hard to find a spear now anywhere in Maine," and "Michigan will be taking a long step downward if it allows the use of that murderer of fish life." Linus Leavens, director for Vermont, writes, "The spear is an outlaw. Good results have followed its elimination everywhere." George N. Mannefield, Superintendent of fisheries for Indiana writes me: "It is unlawful to take fish with a spear or to possess a spear anywhere in this state, even for use in a private pond. We hope you keep spears out of Michigan." W. H. Fell, of New Jersey says, "When the spear was used we found it terribly destructive to game fish life, even when only suckers and carp could be speared legally. No spear is permitted in our state." James F. Gould, director for Minnesota, writes, "Every true sportsman in Minnesota hates the spear and we are fighting to rid ourselves of the small hold which it still has on this state." From New Hampshire comes the word, "You are taking the right step in outlawing the spear entirely," and the same opinion comes from state after state.

In times past hundreds of Michigan's lakes and streams were made barren by the spear. In the lumbering days Houghton Lake was depopulated by it, almost before it knew what a fish line was. Only a few years ago the tragedy occurred again and the legislature was asked to intervene. For over a period of ten years we have been fighting the spear, and the time has now come when we should outlaw it absolutely. For every person who wants to use the spear there are a hundred real sportsmen who do not. Yet it is the exception, the one man who wants to slaughter, who is raising a stir at Lansing, who is getting in petitions. It is time for the other hundred to act, to express their voices, to demand that the fish life of Michigan be kept for all the people and not be handed over to a comparatively few fish murderers who have no thought for future generations. These despoilers make the most commotion, both in the state legislature and in the matter of petitions. It is because the hundred are inactive while the one who is hunting for personal pleasure puts all the force he can gather behind his propaganda. The conservation department of the state of Michigan wants to hear from those who think a great deal but whose habit has been to remain silent. Let every organization, social and civic, as well as sportsman, give us the value and co-operation of its written opinion. Only in this way can the conservation department serve the people of the state as it wants to serve them. Without this co-operation it is not fair to say that it is responsible for what may appear to be its shortcomings. The present conservation commission is not a political organization and there is not a politician in its personel. It has no favors or prejudices. It wants to serve the men and women of the commonwealth to the best of its ability, and in order to do this it must have closer contact with them. Isaak Walton Chapter and Sportsmen's associations work with us continually, giving us their advice, recommendations, their help. Why not Rotary clubs, Kiwanis clubs, Exchange clubs, Women's clubs, schools, church organizations? Why should the most vital of all questions, that of conservation, be of active interest only to those who use the rod and gun?

May we have your help—and your resolutions and opinions as they refer to the work which is ahead of us.

NEW CHURCH DEDICATED LAST SUNDAY

Rev. C. E. Pollock Spoke at Morning Service

The dedication services for the rebuilt East Jordan Methodist Episcopal church were held last Sunday, July 24 in that city. Services were continued all that day and were followed by a public banquet supper Monday evening.

At seven o'clock Sunday morning, a young peoples meeting was addressed by Rev. C. E. Pollock, pastor of the Charlevoix Methodist church. At ten o'clock, Dr. L. R. Eckardt, professor of philosophy at De Pauw university, Greencastle, Ind., delivered the sermon.

At three o'clock p. m., the church was dedicated according to the ritual of the Methodist Episcopal church. People from all over northern Michigan attended. Dr. Chas. J. Kruse of Petoskey, preached at the evening services. The East Jordan edifice was destroyed by fire recently.

THREE OFFENDERS PAY COURT FINES

Cases Heard in Justice Court Late Last Week

Three offenders were brought before Justice Cooper during the latter part of last week and fined for various offenses.

William Thorpe, arrested last Saturday on complaint of Nowland Everett, who claimed that Thorpe struck him while intoxicated, was fined $10.00 and costs of $15.00. The warrant issued charged him with being drunk, disorderly and using bad language.

Frank Cheney, arrested last Thursday on a charge of drunkeness, was ordered to pay a fine of $10.00, together with costs of $10.00. He must also make an account of his earnings with Justice Cooper at intervals for the next six months.

Eugene McRobert, arrested on a warrant charging him with driving while intoxicated, was sentenced to pay a fine of $50.00 together with costs of $10.00, and his drivers license was revoked for 90 days.

BAPTIST CHURCH

People from Porto Rico, Oklahoma, Iowa, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, several towns in the south part of our own state, and many strangers whose residence we did not learn, were in our audiences last Sunday. A Charlevoix audience in July surely covers a great territory and should give no uncertain sound in its Gospel message.

The Ladies' Aid are guests today of Mr. and Mrs. Allie Moore on their boat, "The Golden Rule." Their hospitality is greatly appreciated and the ladies will doubtless enjoy a good meeting.

The usual services will be held next Sunday. Preaching at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Bible school at noon and B. Y. P. U. at 6:30 p. m.

A cordial invitation is extended to all not worshiping elsewhere.

Last Sunday was a busy day for the pastor of the local Methodist Episcopal church. At seven in the morning he delivered an address at the church dedication services in East Jordan, on the subject, "Facing Forward." At ten-thirty he preached in the local Methodist church in Charlevoix, his theme being a discussion of the "Eternal Qualities." At two-thirty in the afternoon he held the quarterly meeting at the Indian mission church, preaching at this service on the subject, "Dynamic Faith." At seven-thirty the great climax service of the day was held in the Charlevoix Methodist church, when he preached on the subject, "Under New Management." At this evening service the Yinger Quartette from Albion college assisted with the musical program, singing several appropriate selections and rendering a song story based on the Parable of the Prodigal Son. The pastor's sermon emphasized the bible ideas that under the new management of Christianity a life is cleansed, spiritual, right motived, glad and useful. Neglect of religious duties, forgetfulness of God and Sabbath desecration are due to paganism rather than to Christianity, and are deplorable.

It is somewhat significant that the deposits of this Bank have grown from $461,420.00 on July 18, 1922 to the total of $724,494.00 on July 18, 1927, or an increase of 57 per cent.

These are facts that tell a story of satisfied depositors; of clients well served.

In soliciting your business, we offer ourselves not simply as a depository for your funds, but as a service giving institution, able and willing to co-operate with you in the promotion of your own business activities.

New Way of Handling Sweet Clover

Many interesting comments have been heard during the past few weeks from people driving through the country upon noticing the many fields having been cut with a grain binder and shocked up. Upon first thought it surely must be grain, but goodnight it couldn't be, it was too early for grain. Well then what was it, strange to say it was sweet clover, being bandled the new way.

Farmers have always liked sweet clover for hay, but in the past the great stumbling block has been the difficulty in properly curing it, which has been instrumental in cutting down of the acreage of the most valuable crop for soil building and pasture.

Farmers have worried more about sweet clover than any other hay crop. Before sweet clover could all be cut it would always get too far advanced. Then as a result of the difficulty in curing it, the alfalfa and other hays would also be too advanced for high quality hay.

With the use of the ordinary grain binder the curing of sweet clover is very simple. It is cut with the binder when the time is right, in small bundles, tied as loosely as possible, immediately shocked up and forgotten for a period of from one to three weeks, during which time the other hays can be cut and cured, then in odd times draw in the sweet clover hay without loss of time or labor.

Here are a few reasons why we can heartily recommend this new system:

1. Sweet clover can be cut at right stage. In the old way some gets too coarse and woody, making poor quality hay.

2. It does not lose its leaves, as the bundles hold the contents intact. In the old way a good share of the leaves are lost by too much handling.

3. It cures much better and easier. Other methods allow sun to wilt the leaves, which dries up the hay instead of curing. The sun never strikes inside of the bundle.

4. Rain does not penetrate the bundles and causes discoloration. In other systems rain does penetrate, bleaching the hay and making necessary extra handling of hay for curing purposes.

5. It saves time, labor and expense, as the operations necessary are diminished, cost much less, and labor can be better utilized for other hays.

6. It permits more hay being placed in the same space and in a much easier form to feed.

There are several other reasons in favor of the new system, but space does not permit them, but by all means see your neighbors that are using the new way, watch their results this winter, then use your own judgment next year.

Five Farm Homes Landscaped

The visit of O. I. Gregg, specialist in landscape architecture, of M. S. C., last week was very instructive and beneficial to several families interested in making their homes more attractive.

In the one day Mr. Gregg was only able to work with five co-operators and make plans for the improvements to be made. This new phase of work proved to be so popular that many requests for the work had to be turned down for lack of time at this season. The following homes were visited: Fred Mason, Charlevoix; Arlo Wickersham Charlevoix; Wesley Dilworth, Horton Bay; Harry Behling, Boyne City and Wm. Tindall, Boyne City.

In a short time two places will be selected from the county and next spring public demonstrations will be given, personally supervised by Mr. Gregg.

Plans are being made for another visit by Mr. Gregg, sometime in October, when two or three more farms can be landscaped, and in addition three or four meetings held so that more interested people can attend and receive assistance in improving the appearance of their home.

We are very fortunate in having the Charlevoix County Nursery located in the county, where any and all of the shrubs, bushes, flower, etc., can be purchased. Geo. H. Hemingway, its proprietor, is very anxious to co-operate and lend his efforts in making the homes more attractive and pleasing in appearance. Have you ever visited the nursery and enjoyed the most beautiful surroundings to be found anywhere in this section?

Mr. Hemingway is planning on entertaining the public at an early date, and urges all lovers of beauty to spend a day as his guests and inspect his nursery. Watch for further announcements.

Normal human blood is too thick to be drawn through the mosquitoe's small piercing tube. They must first inject a thinning fluid. In that way disease germs are set afloat in the blood stream—bacteria of burning fever and crippling disease. There is also the danger of streptococcic infection (blood poisoning) from scratching the bite. Mosquitoes must be killed. Health authorities advocate Fly-Tox, simple instructions on each bottle (blue lable) for killing ALL household insects. Insist on Fly-Tox. Fly-Tox is easy to use. Safe, stainless, fragrant, sure.—Adv. 30-t1.

STATE MOVES TO GET WHITE HOUSE

GOVERNMENT OFFERED BIG DAY FORESTS AS HOME

Piece considered Finest Nation Affords—Contains Nearly Twn Thousand Acres and Lakes

A permanent summer White House in Michigan, for the refuge of the presidents of the United States from their duties in Washington, appears possible.

The site proposed for the permanent summer capitol is the famous Bay forest, 1,800-acre strip of scenic timber land between Green Lake and the shores of Lake Michigan.

It was learned last week that an offer to donate the tract to the government has been made and that the owners have taken up with Governor Green, Senators Couzens and Ferris and Representative J. C. McLaughlin the matter of placing the offer before congress.

The spot has been described as the most beautiful in America and Green Lake is generally considered one of the scenic treats of the country. The forest is near the center of population of the United States and is accessible by water, land and air.

The climate is ideal. The water setting, the great forest, the moderate temperature of the region swept by the prevailing westerly winds of Lake Michigan, combine, the owners believe, to make the site desirable over all other undeveloped properties within the nation's boundries.

The tract borders Lake Michigan in the vicinity of Sleeping Bear point and the Manitou Islands.

The land rises, gently, 350 to 500 feet from the shores of Green Lake to the south and east, and from Lake Michigan to the north and west.

The owners believe it would provide a perfect setting for both a summer White House and a regular government capitol building.

The work of developing the tract into a residential estate has been started but if congress should decide to accept the land, the owners believe the development undertaken will in no way mar the desirability of the site.

AT THE MOVIES

Vivid Contrasts in New Picture

Three contrasts of life are afforded in the powerful comedy- drama of father-love "The Prince of Headwaiters," Sam E. Rork's latest production for First National Pieturcs and featured on the program of the Palace Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

Extra Screen Comic Compared to Paddock!

Paddock, Nurmi, Hussey, deMar, Wide—all runnors—but for a man who's "running wild" one has to turn to the Palace Theatre Friday. If you've seen the Paramount comedy now being shown "Running Wild" you'll understand why W. C. Fields is referred to as the champ of them all.

Armies often form the background of war films but it is seldom that a military camp is used as a picture background for a peace-time film. Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer, however, has used the citizens military training camp at Del Monte, California, as a background for its newest and one of the most clever farce comedies of the year, "Rookies," coming soon to the Palace Theatre. The leading roles are taken by Marceline Day, Karl Dane, George K. Arthur, Tom O'Brien, Frank Currier and other well known players.

Cattle Rustlers, Cowboys Seen in "The Last Outlaw"

"The Last Outlaw," Gary Cooper's second Paramount Western, is coming to the Majestic Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday to provide Charlevoix with new thrills and throbs. It is a tale of rustlers and honest men. It tells of a crooked sheriff who thieved on those he was suposed to protect and a young chap who took justice into his own hands. It relates how Buddy Hale rode into town and became the new sheriff. It discloses how Buddy made Janet Lane's acquaintance when rescuing her from a runaway horse and how he lost it when he was told to arrest her brother for murdering a thief. It shows the methods which the ranch ers were forced to use in protecting their property and—that only starts describing what'll be seen when "The Outlaw" comes to town!

New York City Hall Seen in Paramount's "New York"

The City Hall of New York broke into the movies recently. For the first time in its history, the beautiful old building, erected more than a century ago, served as the background of a motion picture drama. Both its interior and exterior were photographed.

The attractions for the crowd were Ricardo Cortez, Lois Wilson and Estelle Taylor. The picture was "New York," Director Luther Reed's Paramount production which also features William Powell and Norman Trevor, and comes to the Palace on next Monday und Tuesday.

Paul Raxon rose to his feet.

"This reception," he said, stimulating a yawn, "grows wearisome. I seem to be a guest at a manservants' club. What is it staged for? Money? If so, there's absolutely nothing doing."

"Sit down," said Peter Milman suavely; "you will be told when to go."

The next to enter was Sneed, who had been his own tailor. Raxon saw clearly that by some ruse yet to be discovered his house had been entered by a band of confederates. They had defeated him there.

"Mr. John McKimber," Sneed announced.

When Raxon had seen McKimber a week before he had looked upon a crushed man from whom ambition had fled. The McKimber who once in was again the big, dominating type, radiating confidence, sure of himself and his position. This bearing could only mean that McKimber knew of the theft of the stolen page from the register and the letters. He understood that the weapons with which Raxon had threatened him were gone. The scum of danger was about Paul Raxon, and he comprehended his position with horror. Somehow or other they had tricked him, but he would pay them back. What a scandal it would be which would involve Peter Milman in a conspiracy of this sort.

"This is the Raxon who wished to go to the senate," Milman explained.

"Wished," Raxon repeated. "Who isn't to be kept out of it by the fool tricks of you amateurs."

"He's trying to keep his courage up," Barnes volunteered. "He knows he's beaten. You can see it in his face. The man's white as chalk."

"One can't blame him for trying to bluff it out," Bradley exclaimed impartially. "The cornered rat fights, invariably."

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," Peter Milman said, "remember that at the present minute Mr. Raxon has no idea that he is beaten. I can see him scheming a thousand plans of revenge, all of which seem reasonable because he has no idea what we hold over him."

"You don't hold anything," Raxon snarled.

"In the interests of truth I must contradict you," said his host. Milman took from his pocket a blue manilla envelope.

"I have here," Peter Milman went on, "those documents with which you threatened Mr. McKimber."

"You stole them," Raxon cried, "and that's a penitentiary offense."

"Stole them?" Milman returned. "You pain me, Mr. Raxon. They were offered to me for sale just as they were offered to you. You bought them in the first instance, I in the second. You are not yet aware that every word of that long interview in your tower with Mr. McKimber was taken down in shorthand by an expert and transcribed. I have three copies, of which the one in this blue envelope is only a carbon. One copy will be given to Mr. McKimber, and the original is in my safe deposit vault at my bank. I am afraid you were a little careless in search- he search of our house. On one occasion on my bookcase an op[illegible] was greatly afraid lest you should shoot."

"I don't believe it," Raxon cried hoarsely.

"I thought you would not. Perhaps you will realize your mistake when you hear a few paragraphs."

Raxon listened in distressed silence. There was no doubt that someone had been listening and had taken the conversation down accurately. He had no room to doubt. The place where he had [illegible]rd what he thought was a rat, the place where he had been thrust, bound and gagged, had been prepared for one end—his downfall.

Raxon saw McKimber open the envelope and look at the page cut by Raxon's private detective from the register. This page, never to be replaced, together with the letters bought from relatives of McKimber's first wife, were torn into little pieces and dropped in the blazing fire. Then McKimber turned to his enemy.

"You'll get a whole lot of help from me now," he jeered.

"You daren't run for office," Raxon cried. "You've nothing on me."

Milman waved his hand warningly and elevated the incipient verbal warfare to a higher level.

"You shall judge," he said urbanely. "I may tell you this embodies the work of years. It cost time and money, again Mr. Raxon's own words, but it was money well spent. I have here, for example, an affidavit from Thomas Minaerly, formerly elevator boy in the studio apartment where that poor girl died. He says, under oath, that you paid him money for services the details of which are set forth. There is also the confession of Patrick Ford, once a well-known jockey, but later a stableboud at Pimlico, who was badly burned in a fire there and died later from injuries. He implicates a trainer named Acheson and Paul Raxon in the plot which disgraced Neeland Barnes. And I have the testimony of Edward Nygren, who was the go-between in the matter of offering a bribe to Professor Bradley. In all I have seven documents, each one of which will prevent you ever from running for office. Do you care to see them? I dare not put them into your hands for fear that you might throw them into the fire, but Mr. Barnes will no doubt secure your arms while I show them."

Raxon waved the suggestion aside, and Barnes sat down disappointed.

"And there are other things," Milman went on. "Your attorney Lodden, when heated with wine, has been more than indiscreet. I have had his conversations transcribed. If I were you, I think I would employ another lawyer, one not given to boasting of his influence over his chief client. Truth, you know, lives under a cork."

Raxon said no word. This man Milman, whom Lodden hated, had tricked him in the end.

"We shall see about it," he said, striving for calm. "I'm not the sort of man that you can try this sort of game on. What I know about McKimber I know and the world shall hear of it."

"Would that be wise?" Milman asked solicitously. "You see, you have no evidence. In order to give credence to your story you would have to explain the ordering of that page to be cut out. Very awkward, Mr. Raxon, as you will find, to tamper with vital statistics. That is not all. If Mr. McKimber finds you are acting against him, either directly or indirectly, he will see that the opposition papers get copies of the affidavits in this envelope. You are defeated at every point. Salvation for you lies in abandoning of all political ambition."

Paul Raxon knew Milman spoke the truth. Here, definitely, once for all, was the end of his ambitions. He realized as he went down the stone steps into the avenue that he dare make no move against the men who had invaded his home and brought him low.

McKimber, sitting before the fire, felt as one might whose death sentence had been respited at the last moment. He had been told to come as though he already knew he was of [illegible] not convinced himself. There were tears in his eyes when Nita came in.

"My dear," he said, "you are too good for any son of mine, but if you will marry him you'll make me happier than I ever thought to be again."

Someone put a strong, firm hand on his shoulder. It was Robin.

"It's all right," said Robin gleefully. "She is going to do it."

McKimber looked up at his son and smiled.

"Robin," he said, "never forget what you owe to Mr. Milman. I can never repay him, never."

McKimber took from his pocket a long, legal envelope. He balanced it in his hand a moment.

—"It would give me great pleasure, Mr. Milman, if you would throw that on the back of the fire. It's something I want to get rid of."

"Certainly," said Peter Milman courteously. "It seems to amuse you."

he added, seeing McKimber's face break into a smile.

"Do you know what you've done?" McKimber demanded. "You've burned up the mortgage I hold on this house. Yes, sir, I bought it yesterday, and now can't collect."

"Really," said Peter Milman, reddening, "I could not possibly accept such a thing—no, indeed."

McKimber waved his hands. "You can't help yourself. I've more to say. I've had my lawyers going through the Hazen Brewer affairs, and you didn't lose all your money. There will be enough saved out of the wreck for you to live on here." For a man who prided himself on his word, McKimber lied with prodigality and fluency. "Lodden trimmed you, but Brewer was honest."

McKimber turned to Bradley. He felt like a super-Santa Claus handing out presents for the deserving young.

"You may not know it, professor, but I've a lot to say in the management of a small upstate university." He did not tell them he was its most munificent donor and chairman of trustees. "We want to specialize in one thing which will put us on the educational map in a national sense. I've suggested your name, and that was approved, too. All you have to do is to signify your acceptance or rejection to me."

"Rejection?" Bradley cried, his eyes lighting up. "Mr. McKimber, you are offering me my career."

"As for the father of my future daughter-in-law, if he cares to run my stock ranch near Sacramento, I want a good man at once. He can go as soon as the wedding is over. What about it?"

"Man," said Neeland Barnes earnestly, "there isn't one chance in a trillion I'll refuse." He turned to the others. "And how I hated him for the ice water he drank!"

Floyd Malet, standing in the background, saw another man reborn in the former Barry. Not again for Neeland Barnes would there be the life of little things and daily financial worries. Malet looked on the scene with no spirit of envy. That there was no place in McKimber's plans for him seemed of little consequence. Nita had won her happiness, and that was enough.

He looked up as the girl came to his side.

"Dearest of my uncles," she whispered, "do you think I don't know who gave me my Robin?" She kissed him before them all.

"My friend Floyd," Milman announced, "is going to live at his house near Florence, where he will do the great things we expect from him."

"My house?" Malet cried.

"Your house," said Peter Milman firmly. "The deed of gift will be drawn up as soon as possible. It is useless to me. I—I shall remain here." Milman looked about him. "There are some trees that cannot be transplanted and some men who die if they are uprooted." He embraced the others in his gaze. "I wish I could tell you what a different man you leave from the one who asked you to join him."

Never before had Peter Milman been so genuinely affected. The envelope upon which Raxon had looked with such horror, that envelope containing the affidavits that would forever hold him inactive, Peter Milman threw into the golden fire. McKimber saw the action too late. There was no possibility now of saving infinitely important documents.

"Man," he cried, "don't you realize what you have done?"

"Better," perhaps, than you," said Peter Milman, smiling. "I have destroyed an envelope containing a dozen sheets of blank paper."

LOCALS DROPPED TRAVERSE GAME

PLAY MACKINAW CITY HERE NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Lack of Local Support Causes Rumors That Team Will Disband —Turn Out Sunday

The Charlevoix baseball team proved no match for the hard-hitting Traverse City aggregation and went down to defeat last Sunday by a score of 10-6.

Traverse City started right after Grigsby, the Charlevoix pitcher, and scored five runs in the first two innings on long distance hits. Grigsby lacked control and after getting in the hole with the batter was forced to groove balls, which Traverse socked all over the place.

Charlevoix scored one run in the first inning on Knight's two-bagger, and successive infield outs. Charlevoix had a chance to even the score in the fourth, but lost at least three runs by poor base running. The locals hit the ball fairly consistently all through the game, but could not overcome Traverse City's early lead. The entire local infield played errorless ball with the exception of Knight's muff of a foul fly. Vincent-Hallett accepted 10 chances without an error, while Marshall cut off several sure hits. C. Grigsby caught a splendid game for Charlevoix, and gathered two hits to drive in several runs.

Moore and Pray starred for Traverse City.

The attendance at this game was very disappointing. It seems queer that such a popular resort city cannot support a baseball team.

Charlevoix has a game scheduled with Mackinaw City for this coming Sunday, July 31st. Zimmerman will pitch for the locals, and if his showing against East Jordan two weeks ago, when he beat them 6 to 4, is any criterion, he should have little trouble with Mackinaw City. The visitors come here highly touted, having won 9 of 12 games this season.

This will be the last chance for fans to boost a local team, for no attempt will be made to schedule future games unless there is a good attendance Sunday.

MAKING PLANS FOR INDIAN CAMP MEET

Entertainment at Methodist Church To Raise Finances

There are a large number of Indians in Charlevoix county and the surrounding counties who are of the Methodist affiliation and who are very religious. They desire very much to hold a camp meeting for a week in a nearby grove. The date has been chosen for August 21-28, inclusive. Indian preachers who are bilingual have been secured and plans have been nearly perfected for this camp meeting.

One item that always disturbs the Indian's plans and is frequently embarassing to his white brother, is the item of finance. Where to get the money to finance such a program as the camp meeting requires for the Indian, is a present item of consideration for our local Ojibwa tribe. They plan to solve their problem by giving a unique entertainment in the local Methodist church, the proceeds from which, they hope will reach at least four hundred dollars. The entertainment will consist of five acts, depicting the native Indian method of training a boy to be a brave, training a girl to be a good squaw, an Indian courtship, an Indian wedding and a native Indian christening of the new baby. Indian costumes that are real and most beautiful, Indian music and ancient Indian trophies will help to make the entertainment a great occasion. It probably will appeal to our summer guests as well as local people.

Rev. Dr. J. O. Randall of Traverse City, has general oversight of these Indians as their district superintendent, while the local Methodist pastor will devote some careful consideration to the entire program and have charge of handling of the finances. The date of the entertainment will be about August 10. Ticket sellers, with proper credentials, will visit the people of Charlevoix and the surrounding localities and give everyone an opportunity to make the Indian camp meeting a possibility.

WORLD RECORDS BROKEN SUNDAY

OUTBOAD MOTOR A RECORD SMASHED

SAMUELSON'S "DYNAMITE" BETTERED PRESENT RECORD

Two Spills Featured Class C Race—Brady Lowers 725 Hydroplane Class Record

One world's record was literally "smashed" Sunday afternoon in the annual Charlevoix regatta held on Lake Charlevoix when the A class outboard "Dynamite," owned by Ben Samuelson of Traverse City, stepped off 2½ miles at the rate of 15.32 miles per hour, bettering by nearly three minutes the former world's record of 12.35. Her time was 9 minutes 47¼ seconds with a 3 h. p. Johnson motor. Samuelson finished nearly three minutes ahead of his nearest competitor, the "Alert," owned by Edward Olson of Spider Lake.

Thousands of eager spectators lined the shores from north of The Inn piers south to Parmelee's lumber yards. Cars lined the bluff overlooking the lake, hundreds saw the regatta from anchored boats and seating capacity at The Inn park was taxed to the limit. From row boats, canoes and small pleasure launches to palatial yachts were anchored off the shore line to witness the event.

The first of the afternoon's program was the free-for-all race for sail boats. Shortly after this race had started, class A outboards took the course with the above stated results. Nine outboards entered the class C event. "Bill's Boats," owned and driven by H. W. Hart of Detroit, took an early lead and held it to the finish. Her time was 13 minutes 31 seconds. Second place went to H. W. Brown's "Apple Sauce," a Traverse City entry, time 13 minutes 43 seconds.

Five boats entered the class C outbonrd race, which was featured by unfortunate accidents to the two favorite entries. Charlevoix' leading contender, "Baby B," M. Roy Brady's entry, was put out of competition before reaching the first flag when she capsized after hitting swells from the other boats. Brady had a slight lead when the accident occurred. The other spill occurred when an unnamed boat, entered by C. F. Higgins of Detroit, Evenrude representative, and driven by Geo. Schwab of Nashville, Tenn., cut the southeast buoy too close on the final lap and lost her motor. This boat held a commanding lead until the accident occurred and would have won easily. First place went to the "Mary Louise," owned by H. D. Smith of Bellaire. H. W. Hart's "Bill's Boats" took second place and "April Fool," Perry Rae's Traverse City entry took third. The winner's time was 11 minutes 47 seconds over a 7½ mile course.

The 100 h. p. runabout race was won by J. M. Baker's "Punk" from Traverse City, time 15⅕ minutes for 7½ miles. Second place went to "Patricia;" third to R. Lowanstein's "Amalo," and fourth to "June Bug," James Well's entry from Northport.

George Schwab of Nashville, Tenn., in the "Miss Tennessee III," nosed out Julius Gilbert's "Jay Gee" to win the free-for-all displacement race by a margin of nearly eight seconds. Their times were 12 minutes 19⅕ seconds and 27 seconds respectively.

Due to the fact the "Star," entered by M. S. Jewett of Traverse City in the hydroplane class failed to appear for her run with "Miss Charlevoix," no competitive race was held. However, Mr. Brady thrilled the vast throng of spectators by stepping off the first lap of 2½ miles at slightly less than 65 miles per hour, officially timed from the judge's boat. The writer had the honor of riding with Mr. Brady and will vouch that she "Does Step."

Results of the races were as follows:

Class A Outboards—2½ Miles

1st—"Dynamite," Ben Samuelson, Traverse City, 9.47¼.

2nd—"Alert," Edward Olson, Spider Lake, 12.18.

3rd—"J. S.," John Stewart, Chicago Club, 16.40 1-3.

Class B Outboards—5 Miles

2nd—"Apple Sauce," H. W. Brown, Traverse City, 13.43¾.

3rd—"Duck Soup," J. C. Murray, Traverse City, 13.52½.

4th—"Mary Louise," Wm. Wessell, Bellaire, 14.4¾.

5th—"It," George Schwab, Charlevoix, 15.39.

6th—"Is It," F. A. Hoard, Traverse City, 15.42.

7th—"Wagon Box," N. C. Naylor, Boyne City, 16.31¾.

Class C Outboards—5 Miles

HOSPITAL TAG DAY SATURDAY

BUY A TAG AND THEN ANOTHER ONE IS MOTTO

Charity Dances and Other Benefit Affairs Scheduled This Week Along With Drive

The annual tag day drive for the benefit of the Charlevoix hospital will be held this coming Saturday, August 13th.

This annual event is put on for the purpose of raising funds to help carry on the work of the local hospital which is partially dependent upon outside help to defray its operating expenses and the deficit must be raised from other sources if the hospital is to continue doing business.

The Charlevoix hospital has established itself as an indispensible part of the community life. It has been transformed from an impossible and unsightly structure to an institution of beauty and efficient service, and with its beautiful grounds and situation of eminence is one of the beauty spots of our City-the-Beuutiful. When making these statements we do not forget our debt to the summer resorters and town people, whose unselfish and whole-hearted support have made this transformation possible. Every charity affair held to raise funds for the hospital have met with spontaneous response from the people of the town and surrounding country and it is this splendid spirit that has made the institution a success from the very start.

So when we make announcement that the annual Tag Day will be held on Saturday of this week, it is with the knowledge that no urging is necessary to make it a success as in former years.

The Tag Day drive is in charge of Mrs. M. A. Levinson, chairman. Those wishing to sell tags may report to her Levinson's store where the returns will be received after the day's drive. Substantial prizes for those taking in the greatest amount of money are as follows:

Boy's 1st prize, $5.00 in gold.
Girl's 1st prize, $5.00 in gold.
Boy's 2nd prize, Kodak.
Girl's 2nd prize, Table Lamp.
Boy's 3rd prize, pair golf socks.
Girl's 3rd prize, Kodak.
Boy's 4th prize, pen knife
Girl's 4th prize, box of candy.
Boy's 5th prize, water canteen.
Girl's 5th prize, fancy basket of candy.

These prizes have been generously donated by the business men of the city and are now on display in the window of Levinson's store.

Other affairs for the benefit of the hospital are scheduled for this week and next.

If you fish, get the big ones. We have the tackle that will get them. Poles, lines, artificial lures. Staley Bros. Hardware.—Adv. 27tf.

Adding to the glory for Charlevoix achieved when Samuelson's "Dynamite" smashed the world's record for Class A outboards last Sunday, comes the announcement that M. Roy Brady's "Miss Charlevoix" established a new record for 725 Class hydroplanes when she stepped one lap of 2 1-2 miles at the speed of 64.512 miles per hour, officially timed. The record has been filed with A. T. Griffith, secretary of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association at Peoria, Illinois, and will stand official the world over. The former record of 61.02 miles per hour was held by Dr. L. D. VanZant of Peoria, Illinois, and was established at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, July 5, 1924. VanZant's "Doc" is also holder of the King Albert of Belgium trophy awarded to the 725 class hydroplane making the fastest time for one mile. VanZant's time was 61.77 miles per hour, established October 11, 1925. Brady's boat bettered both these records by a comfortable margin.

BENEFIT CONCERT IS FOR IRONTON CHURCH

Camp Charlevoix Musicians Will Render Program August 16

The Ironton church dedication began this week with the big dinner and bazaar by the Ladies' Aid Society on Wednesday, August 10. The second feature will be the dedication service as featured in the church notice elsewhere in this issue.

The culminating feature will be a dedication concert to be given in the church at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, August 16, by members of the staff of Camp Charlevoix, who are musical artists of unusual culture and ability. The program will open and close with numbers by the camp orchestra of ten pieces. Don Wheeler of Lansing, violinist; Mrs. L. C. Reimann of Ann Arbor, pianist; Mrs. Grace Johnson Konold of Ann Arbor, Redpath lyceum artist, soprano and George Alder of Ann Arbor, tenor, will present a program which will delight all who hear them.

Mr. Wheeler is from State College, East Lansing; Mrs. Konold, Mrs. Reimann and Mr. Alder are from the university school of music, Ann Arbor. The orchestra is composed of their talented boy campers.

The generous service of these musicians is given freely to the Ironton church, so that the proceeds will go to the benefit of the church.

INDIANS PLANNING FOR SECOND ANNUAL PICNIC

Program at Auto Park Four Days, August 18 to 21

Plans for the second annual picnic of the Ottawa Chippewa Association of Michigan, to be held at the Charlevoix auto camp August 18 to 21, are now being completed. The picnic is a revival of the old-time Indian fetes formerly held at Cross Village and last year drew large crowds to the tourist camp each afternoon and evening.

The program which lasts four days, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 18, 19, 20 and 21, will consist of talks by Indian speakers, sports and games, races, war costume dancing, Indian christening, basket weaving and handicraft work and tug of war, Indians vs. whites.

A special program by Indian actors as given at the governor's meeting at Mackanac Island recently, will be presented at The Inn casino Friday and Sunday evening, August 19 and 21st.

The annual picnic draws Indians from all parts of the state who gather for the four day's outing.

UNUSUAL PROGRAM FOR POMONA GRANGE

Grange Leaders Booked and Fine Program Prepared

Pomona Grange will meet with Wilson Grange, Saturday, August 13. It is hoped that a large crowd will be present, as an interesting program is being prepared. Eugene Kurschski, leader of the Boyne City band, is going to have several numbers by a part of the band.

Arthur Secord and B. C. Mellencamp are going to debate on the McNary-Haugen bill. Several monologues and recitations are being prepared.

Miss Dora Stockman, state grange lecturer, plans to be at the meeting. She always has something worth while to give. It is also hoped that Miss Jennie Buell, education specialist of M. S. C., can be persuaded to stop on her way from the upper peninsula. It is also possible that Miss May Stewart, former county commissioner of schools, will be present.

Grangers should all make an effort to make this a record meeting in attendance and helpfulness.

BIG EVENT PLANNED AT CAMP CHARLEVOIX

Campers and Staff Will Present "Hiawatha" August 20th

The circus held at Camp Charlevoix last Thursday was a huge success. More than 300 people visited the camp and enjoyed the show put on by the boys and the staff.

The next big event of the camp season will be on August 20, when the play "Hiawatha" will be given under the direction of Prof. Nelson of Ann Arbor. Mr. Nelson has been active in dramatics at the University of Michigan for many years. The boys will take the parts and will be assisted by the staff and the Ottawa Indians.

The public is invited to visit the camp and enjoy the play with the campers.

The first upset of the day came when T. B. Kaiser Chicago, sixth ranking star, defeated Jack Harris in straight sets 6-1, 6-4. Kaiser, a very unorthordox player, forced Harris out off position repeatedly with his uncanny backhand returns. The first set was a walkaway, but Harris

PIONEER RESIDENT IS DEAD

ROMEO A. EMREY SUCCUMBED AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

Had Served City and County In Various Capacities During Residence Here.

Charlevoix is saddened today by the death of Romeo A. Emrey, pioneer business man and esteemed citizen of this city, who passed away at his home on Clinton street at 11:15 Tuesday evening, after an illness of about four weeks. Most of his family were present at his bedside when the end came.

Deceased was born in Galesburg, Illinois, July 20, 1862. In 1864, with his parents, Andrew Jackson and Rose Terwillger Emrey, he came to Forester, Sanilac county, Michigan, where his father was for five years superintendent for the Smith-Kelly Lumbering Co., he being also an ordained Methodist Episcopal minister. The family later resided in Au Sable, Saginaw and Manistee.

Mr. Emrey came to Charlevoix when eighteen years of age, obtaining employment with his brother, J. Reed Emrey, in the Upright & Emrey general store as clerk and bookkeeper. Later he entered business in the building now known as the Fagan building in partnership with his brother, Andrew, under the name of Emrey Brothers. Mr. Emrey was later agent for the Michigan Transit Company for 15 years, during which time he served as alderman of the first ward. He also served as assessor, supervisor and deputy sheriff. He was later elected county register of deeds of Charlevoix county and served in this capacity ten consecutive years. He then became agent for the American Railway Express company at Muskegon, Michigan, and after the world war was transferred to the Charlevoix office, where he remained as manager to the time of his death.

In 1885 Mr. Emrey married Jessie Carpenter, daughter of the late Egbert Carpenter. To this union were born four children, Ruth Emrey Donahue of Hancock, Mich., Lillian Emrey Preston of Petoskey; Marion Emrey Carey and Charles H. Emrey of Charlevoix, all of whom survive. AT THE MOVIES

Dame Nature Lends Brenon Hand Filming "Beau Geste"

That the gods are not always aligned against motion picture companies was demonstrated to Herbert Brenon by a sandstorm on the Great American Desert during the filming of "Beau Geste," his latest effort for Paramount, which comes to the Palace Theatre Friday, Saurday and Sunday.

With Ronald Coleman, Neil Hamilton, Ralph Forbes, Noah Berry and Norman Trevor as the principals, two thousand minor players and an equal number of horses and mules, Brenon and a corps of assistants prepared for the filming of an important sequence in the picturization of Percival C. Wren's romantic thriller of the French Foreign Legion. A battery of cameras under the supervision of J. Roy Hunt was lined up to "shoot" the action, supposedly transpiring on the Sahara Desert.

Pola Negri's "Barbed Wire" Treats of Life Behind the Lines

Cast in a role that displays to the highest advantage her talent as a great emotional actress, Pola Negri is to be seen at the Palace Theatre where her latest Paramount starring vehicle "Barbed Wire," opens Monday.

"Barbed Wire" is undoubtedly one of the most unusual motion pictures to come out of the war, since it deals with an angle of the great conflict hitherto untouched by motion picture producers, life behind the battle lines. It was adopted from Hall Caine's novel, "The Woman of Knockaloe," considered in many critical circles as the war's greatest novel.

Don't Miss "Chang!" Popular Prices at The Palace

"Chang" is in town. If you miss it you have only yourself to blame. This department recommends it with hearty praise! "Chang" is the Wildest of the Wild and the Mightiest of the Mighty!

Paramount can well cut another notch in its belt. Producers Merian C. Cooper and Ernest B. Shoedsack win places in the film hall of fame. It is not very often that a picture of the magnitude, entertainment value or true epic bigness of "Chang" comes along. Because of this, it towers ahead and shoulders above practically everything which has come to local screens during the past year.

"Chang" tells no ordinary tale. There is nothing at all stereotyped about "Chang." It is just one thrill after another, a whole series of them; one gasp after another, a whole parade of them. Palace Theatre, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 17-18-19.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Visit the Home Convenience Truck

Ask any woman what she wants first in improving an unhandy house and she will say "running water and a drain in the kitchen."

A septic tank is so arranged on the truck that everyone can see the actual work done by the tank. A glass front has been erected in the construction which gives a detailed view of the interior arrangement and how it operates.

Women in Charlevoix county will have the opportunity to see two model kitchens on the home convenience truck when it stops at the following places.

1st. Horton Bay, next to the store at 2:00 p. m. fast time on Thursday, August 18th.

2nd. W. K. Straw, 2 miles south of Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m. fast time on Friday, August 19th.

3rd. Dan Swanson, 4 miles north of East Jordan on Charlevoix road at 2:00 p. m. fast time on Friday, August 19th.

No room is of more pride to a good housekeeper than her kitchen when it is both convenient to work in and pleasing to look at.

How to make a handy work shop from a badly arranged room is the problem that is the despair of many a housewife. Floors that are not injured by the grease, water and dust of daily traffic over them, and are yet pleasing to look at and comfortable to stand on, are an important beginning toward the ideal kitchen.

How shall we finish the walls so to clean and yet add to the beauty of the kitchen?

The correct placing of a cupboard, the re-location of the stove or the making of a new window for light in a dark corner will many times turn a dreary room into a pleasant one which saves steps for the housekeeper. An architect has figured that in preparing 1085 meals a year, a woman will travel 200 miles, if the distance from the range to the dining room is 25 feet.

Lectures explaining the water system and cost of installing, how to lay linoleum, and suitable wall finishes for the kitchen will be given by the home economics and agriculture engineering specialists who will accompany the truck.

Don't forget to mark the dates on the calendar now and see the traveling kitchen at your nearest stop.

FRED LADUE OF ATWOOD A PIONEER

Death Takes Place After Long, Lingering Illness

The community was shocked last Thursday to hear of the death of Wolfred LaDue, who passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Hofman at Atwood. The deceased had been gradually failing in health and strength for some time and was confined to his bed for about three weeks before he died.

He was a pioneer resident of Antrim county, having settled on his homestead two miles south of Atwood fifty years ago. He will be greatly missed by those who knew him as he was very kind and always had a pleasant word for his friends and was always ready to lend a helping hand where it was needed.

Wolfred LaDue was born in Clinton county, New York, September 29, 1845 and died at Atwood, Michigan, July 28, 1927 at the age of 81 years, nine months and 29 days. He enlisted in the Civil war when about 20 years of age and served five months in the army. Later he was married to Miss Louisa La Barre and came to Michigan to live.

He is survived by one daughter and seven grand children. His wife passed away several years ago and he has since been living with his daughter.

Funeral service was held at the Catholic church at Charlevoix Saturday morning. Interment at the Catholic cemetery south of Atwood. —Tradesman.

The old fashioned kid yho used to turn a sickly sea green from smoking a few dried mullen leaves out back of the barn, now has a son who proudly announces he'd walk a mile any time.

New England Honor to Jefferson Davis

Bowdoin college, situated in the village of Brunswick, Maine, in 1858 bestowed upon Jefferson Davis of Mississippi one of the college's highest honors, an LL.D. degree. Davis was soon to become President of the Southern Confederacy. Only six short years before Harriet Beecher Stowe, wife of a Bowdoin professor, wrote her famous antislavery novel, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The only other Bowdoin LL.D. in 1858 was conferred upon Senator William Pitt Fessenden of Maine, Davis' opponent in Washington on practically all political matters.

Why did Bowdoin college thus honor Davis? Was it because he was spending the summer in Maine and had won many hearts by his personal charm? Was his degree, as contemporary Republican newspapers say, "an evidence of toadyism" or the result of wire-pulling by certain influential Democrats desirous of "promoting their own personal aims"? Was it through the influence of Davis' friend, former President Franklin Pierce a Bowdoin alumnus, and that of Leonard Woods, president of Bowdoin, an abolitionist sympathizer? Or was it because of Davis' really distinguished services as United States senator and as former secretary of war? Was it, then, a generous and nonpartisan tribute to ability and national accomplishment? —Christian Science Monitor.

Protecting Fruit Trees From Rabbits, Mice, Rats

The best method for protecting young fruit trees against rabbits and other animals which live above ground is to use rather fine mesh gravel screen, forming a cylinder around the base of the tree. Wooden boxes are sometimes built around the trees extending up to the lower branches and being about six inches square. If the trees are bothered by mice or rats, about the most effective remedy is to bring the earth up around the base of the tree to a height of about 12 or 14 inches. Even a better method is to poison or trap the mice or rats. A young orchard under clean cultivation is seldom bothered by animals.—Farm Life.

PROTECT THE SPIKEHORN BUCK

CURWOOD PLEADS FOR COMMON SENSE PROTECTION

Sensible Action Will Mean Better Hunting Later—Only Killers Enter Protest

By James Oliver Curwood

I am positive that even those hunters who now oppose the protection of the spikehorn buck would be wholeheartedly for its protection if they netually knew the conditions.

* * * * * * * * * * *

* Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of articles on the conservation of fish, game and wild life in Michigan, written by James Oliver Curwood, chairman of the Fish, Game and Wild Life Committee of the Conservation Commission of the State of Michigan. Other articles will appear in early issues.

* * * * * * * * * * *

That is, unless they happened to be of that Old Guard who fought against the One-Buck law, who fight against every protective and progressive measure and who would like to legalize the spear, which has been outlawed in every progressive state. The members of this Old Guard, the killers who would see the last grouse die before they would voluntarily close a season, that greatly minority among real hunters and fishermen who look upon all natural resource as their own until the last hair and feather are gone, are now sending their protests to the Conservation department at Lansing against the protection of the young spikehorn.

But the great mass of the hunters, those hundreds of thousands of real sportsmen who want hunting to become better—and better, who want constructive laws, and who made the One-Buck law possible, are not expressing themselves in the overwhelming way in which they should. The Conservation Department at Lansing should be inundated with their requests, both as individuals and as organizations, for the protection of the spikehorn, and for the following reasons:

We will, as an illustration, take an individual spikehorn born in April or May. By the beginning of the following winter he is still a fawn, with little nubbins beginning to appear on his head. During all of the next summer and the beginning of the following autumn, when he is nearly a year and a half old, he is still fawnlike in many of his habits. The rutting season, if early, may begin in October, but it is not fairly under way until November, when the shooting season begins. The spikehorn does not realy start his activities as a breeder until late in November or December, the majority of them delaying until the end of the rutting season, which is after the shooting season.

Therefore, in allowing an open season on the spikehorn, we slaughter the young breeders in those very weeks when they are getting ready to propogate. This is not conservation. It is destruction. An inexcusable crime. It is no more excusable than wringing the necks of young partridges still in their nests and using them for squabs. Those who say there are enough deer in Michigan are wrong, dead wrong. We can have three times our present deer population and still have room for more. We can have far better hunting than we now have, and we will get it only through intelligent protection.

There are two other important reasons which call for the protection of the spikehorn. We cannot guide ourselves entirely by what the real sportsman does in the woods. If we are to conserve we must guard ourselves against that minority who, if given half an excuse, will take chances in killing which the real hunter will not take. It is almost impossible to see the spike on a young buck at a distance of a hundred feet, half that if he is running, and there are hundreds of killers who deliberately take their shots with the hope that what they are shooting at may be spikehorns and not does. As a consequence hundreds of does are killed for spikehorns each year.

A third reason for the protection of the spikehorn is that early in the second year of his life he still retains much of the fawn's curiosity and the does lack of caution, so that he is an easy victim to the killer.

Save the spikehorn, and then, with our One-Buck law, we will have better deer shooting in Michigan than we have ever had.

Reports this year show that an enormous number of does were dry. Opinions run as high as fifty percent. I personally spent six weeks investigating every day during the fawning season and am positive that at least thirty percent of the does were dry, which is an absolute proof of what the killing of our spikehorns is doing for the birth-rate.

Protecting the spikehorn will not lessen our deer-hunting sport, as some of the Old Guard killers maintain. It will mske better sport. And it will be following that conatructive program which is looking ahead to the day when all of upper Michigan from the tier of counties north of Line Twenty will be one vast out-of-doors paradise which will offer sport and recreation to millions of men and women where it now calls to hundreds of thousands.

To bring about increasingly better hunting snd fishing conditions in Michigan the real conservation sportsmen, who are in the vast majority, must be heard at lansing. It is the man who has a personal axe to grind who usually lets his voice be heard. The present Conservation Commission is for a great out-of-doors in Michigan, and we need the backing and the voice of the real sportsmen and conservationists.

RANKING PLAYERS IN LOCAL TOURNEY

put up a hard battle for the second. On account of his late arrival, Kaiser was not included in the seeded players.

The first junior seeded player to meet defeat was Raynor Fields of Pontiac, seeded 3, who was defeated by Dell Liebsohn of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in straight sets, 6-2, 7-5. Fields was unable to match the hard line drives of his opponent in the first set and won only two games. However, he forced the second set to duce and for a time looked like a winner. Liebsohn tightened his play and won the last two games for the match.

Prospects for mixed doubles are likely at the present time as many have expressed their desire of such an event.

From the present outlook, all final matches will be played off Sunday instead of Saturday as formerly figured. The large entry has made completion of matches impossible before that time. Full results of the week's play will be contained in next week's issue.

CHAPTER II

At daylight the challenge of the airedale waked the sleeping man. With hair erect on mane and back, the dog squeezed through the lashed tent flap to break into furious barking.

"Shut up, Shot! Etienne's dropped in for breakfast," called Guthrie.

Presently, weighted down with his load of wet geese, a bent figure pushed through the alders accompanied by the leaping airedale.

"Good morning, Etienne! You had a bad night of it in the bush."

The wiry half-breed curbed his load on the platform above his head, and grinned. "I mak good camp wen de spruce wid beeg fire, an' roast some goose."

With difficulty the men boiled their tea and a kettle of goose; then, to avoid the flying sand, went into the tent to eat.

"We ought to be starting for Elkwan, Etienne. I don't like to leave her too long, sick as she is."

The swart face of Etienne Savanne grew grave as he nodded.

"She nevaire see de snow once more."

"That's why I hate to leave her alone with old Anne. I'd never forgive myself if—" Guthrie paused to stare at the tent wall.

The black eyes of his companion softened. "You ben good man, m'sieu'. Dat girl die long ago ren de bush."

"Yes, the condensed milk has kept her alive—but she should have gone to the mission at Albany."

The other shook his head; then struck a match and lit his pipe before replying.

"You nre new man in dees countree. You don' know Injun squaw. At Albanee—wildont you—she not be happy."

Guthrie reddened under his deep tan. He knew only too well. "But they would have taken better care of her," he protested.

Etienne slowly shook his head. "Too late, m'sieu. She live more long here dan at Albanee."

All day while the norther flayed the west coast, Guthrie and Etienne dressed and salted geese. Deep in the winter, when the caribou had drifted back from the coast, the geese, freed from the salt by boiling, would be a welcome change from the fat bacon of the company's stores. The wind held into the night, but when the men turned out of their blankets at sunrise the blow was over.

At noon the goose hunters launched the canoe and driving her through a quarter sea, pushed down the coast for the shelter of Akimiski island. They were rounding the low headland of Elkwan point when Guthrie, slaving in the bow, was aroused by an exclamation from the stern man.

"Look! A boat!" Etienne pointed his dripping paddle across the yellow strait to the shore of the island. "Shipwrecked—somewhere! Dey use de oar."

In the distance, crossing to the mainland, Guthrie made out a boat.

"Dey wave to us!" cried Etienne. "Dey see de canoe!"

From the craft, still miles away, showed a flutter of white.

"We'll come up with them on the lee side of the point," and Guthrie, whose thoughts were at Elkwan, whose arms were driven by fear—fear that in his absence tragedy had had its grim way, lunged viciously with his paddle.

In the quiet waters beyond Elkwan point, the two boats approached within hailing distance. In the ship's dory four men were rowing, while two figures sat in the stern. The crew of the boat rested on their oars.

"Hello, canoe!"

Guthrie answered the hail, and shortly the Peterboro came up with the larger craft. "You've lost your ship?" he began.

The black bearded figure in the stern of the boat, ignoring the question, demanded: "You're Hudson's Bay people?"

"Yes, we're bound to the Elkwan just below here. You've lost your ship? Where did you leave her?"

Guthrie's curious glance shifted from the bearded spokesman to the girl at his side wearing a pea jacket and a sou'wester, below the brim of which fluttered a plume of dark hair. As the boats swung together, the airedale, mane and tale stiff, growled menacingly at the strangers, but a low command from his master silenced him.

"Our schooner's ashore on the outside of the island. We left Fort George day before yesterday, and were off Cape Jones when the blow struck us. It crippled our rudder and drove us straight across the bay. We couldn't head into it."

"You were lucky to get ashore in that blow," said the surprised Guthrie. "Your boat must have got a pounding on those flats."

"It did, but we struck at high tide and managed to get most of our stuff off her. Then, this morning, we fell into the hands of a pirate."

"Pirate!" Guthrie exclaimed.

"Oh, Archie," protested the girl, "that's hardly fair. He paid for what he took, and helped with the last of the stores."

"Who were they—where from?"

"They were in a little sixty-foot power schooner, the Ghost, St. Johns, and the leader was a red-headed ruffian with a mutilated face—horrible!"

The black eyes of Etienne Savanne snapped as they met the backward glance of his chief. "McDonal'. Ha! Ha!" said the half-breed with a grin that mapped his swart face with lines.

"What?"

"Yes," nodded Guthrie. "Your pirate was undoubtedly the famous Laughing McDonald. The Indians call him 'McDonald Ha! Ha!' because of the grin—from that scar."

As he spoke, Guthrie was aware that the grave eyes of the girl were curiously studying him—the second man with a scarred face she had met since her shipwreck on the west coast. Instinctively he got the impression that those sober eyes had themselves looked on suffering—tragedy. The blood rose to his forehead as he went on: "They think he's sort of a superman—the Indians. He's hypnotized them; but," and he met the girl's straight look, "you say he treated you fairly?"

"I think he did," she said, and, as she tucked the loose lock of chestnut under her cap, while the color showed faintly at her temples, he wondered if she had read his thoughts.

"Treated us fairly," exploded the bearded man. "Well, I call that—"

"How many men were with him?" roughly interrupted Guthrie.

"Four. There was an Eskimo, too."

"One a big, bearded chap?"

"Yes! The others I took to be sailors."

Guthrie nodded to Savanne. "That's the Newfoundland whaler who brought him into the bay last year," he said; then continued to the stranger, "You had the honor, sir, to meet the man who has stampeded the fur trade from Whale river to Fort Churchill. He took fifty thousand dollars' worth of fox out of the bay last year."

"Hum! Why didn't you drive him out—arrest him?"

Guthrie laughed. "Arrest him for what? He has as much right here as we. Then, you know, there are not many who would relish the job."

"Relish the job! Bah! I thought you fur men were—"

The speaker was interrupted by a voice suddenly grown hard with impatience. "It's getting late. My name is Guthrie—this is my assistant, Etienne Savanne. You'd better step that mast. You'll need the sail or you won't make Elkwan before dark."

"I'm Dr. Archibald Quarrier, sir, geologist. We've been prospecting for iron and copper on the east coast," snapped the other, visibly annoyed. "This is my sister, Miss Joan Quarrier. How far did you say we were from Albany?"

Guthrie smiled into the amused eyes of the girl, who seemed to enjoy the discomfiture of her brother.

"You're ninety miles from Albany. Your boat can't be headed like a canoe. It would depend on the wind." Then, as he glanced at the sun, dread of what he might find at Elkwan led Guthrie to finish abruptly: "Follow me into the river mouth. Our accommodations are limited, but you are welcome." And delivered of this lie, with a sweep of his paddle, he separated the boats.

"How about my stuff over on the island; it's very valuable?" called Quarrier after the retreating canoe. "Can you send men for that and bring it to Albany?"

But the paddles of the now fast-moving Peterboro lunged and swung in unison, the question ignored.

Beyond the river valley the muskeg was smothering a sun veiled in haze when the Peterboro approached the log landing below the huddle of buildings on the high shore, which was Elkwan. The problem of caring for the guests which the storm had brought Guthrie had been swiftly crowded from his thoughts by solicitude for those he had left at the post, a week before, when the necessity for beguiling the hunt of their winter supply of geese had compelled his absence. He was overdue, and Anne was old and ignorant. He would never forgive himself—never cease to be haunted by the eyes of the doomed girl he had left in the care of the Cree women. If— But no! It was unthinkable—too hideously tragic that it should have come to her, alone with old Anne. Fear of the thing had depressed him on his summer trip to Albany—had harassed him through the last two days, a prisoner to the wind. The ache of his own loneliness through the first weeks at the sanatorium had lent him deeper understanding of the frightened look in the eyes of the girl whenever of necessity he had left her, even for a few hours, in the care of old Anne. But always he had returned to find her, and the joy in her wistful face had been fit recompense for his haste to turn back—to keep his word to a waif of a half-breed, that he would be with her at the end.

Guthrie leaped up the cliff trail to his quarters. Opening the door, he announced his coming in a voice that belied his fear.

"Back again! How's all my family?"

A squat Indian woman shuffled into the living room, her wide mouth splitting a swarthy face in a grin of delight.

"'Allo! We glad you come!"

Guthrie expelled a deep breath of relief. A voice from an adjacent room called faintly:

"Nin'; nin'! You come back? It ees long time!"

"Yes, Ninda." He bent over the cot where lay the wraith of a girl in whose face, thin to emaciation, great dark eyes glowed feverishly as she smiled up to him in her joy.

Guthrie drew a chair to the bedside and took in his the hot hand which lay on the coverlet. The fever was worse.

"It was the storm, Ninda—the wind. We could not travel."

The blue-black hair, heaped in braids on the pillow, accentuated the pallor of the dusky skin, shot over the high cheek bones with the flush of fever. She had failed rapidly since he left, but in her hour of extremity she would not be alone.

"You go—no more?" she whispered, searching his bronzed face.

He shook his head. No more, Ninda."

Anne came in with some hot condensed milk. The girl sipped a little, then smiled at the pitying face of the man with its scar furrowing the right cheek.

"You here all time now, Ninda sleep." With a sigh her eyes closed. As Guthrie left the room, he looked back. On the plucked oval of her face hovered a smile.

"Where the boat, Etienne?" he asked, huskily, entering the trade-house, which stood in the clearing outside the dog stockade.

"She come slow along the shore—not far now."

Guthrie went down to the landing to meet his guests. The lack of space at his quarters—at first thought embarrassing—was now a source of satisfaction, for there would be room for Miss Quarrier, only. Her pompous brother and the rest would sleep in the trade-house. He would take Quarrier in to meals and the others could eat with Etienne.

And then, there was Ninda.

Guthrie fiercely resented the presence of the people whose boat was slowly approaching the landing. Why had they been sent him at this time—these strangers? This bearded ass of a geologist would spread himself all over the place, demanding attention; would doubtless ask him to go to Akimiski and save the stuff salvaged on the beach. Well, he would pack them off to Albany at once. But the sister seemed a different sort—nice eyes she had, straight, direct, but something said about them; a sense of humor, too, for she laughed flat in Quarrier's face at the McDonald story. So the free-trader was in the bay still? Strange, that! Did he mean to winter there? If he did, it would cut into the Christmas trade in foxes—would be bad for Elkwan. Daring chap, this McDonald. Who was he, anyhow?

The arrival of the boat cut short his ruminations.

"I see you brought plenty of food," commented the factor with a smile, as the sailors, under the direction of Etienne, began unloading boxes from the heavily freighted craft.

"Yes, we didn't want to run short before reaching Fort Albany," replied Quarrier.

"But the excess weight will bother you on these tide-flats." Then he continued, "Doctor, I regret that I shall have to put you in the trade-house with your men. I have a spare bedroom for Miss Quarrier. You will eat at my quarters, of course."

"Oh, we don't expect much at a small trading post, Mr. Guthrie," replied Quarrier, magnanimously. "If you can make my sister comfortable, it's perfectly satisfactory."

The girl laughed. "As sister has put up for three months with a most uncomfortable two-by-five berth on a wobbly schooner, Mr. Guthrie," she said, "I know I shall revel in your hospitality."

She had shed her coat and sou'wester and Guthrie's eyes measured her with a quick glance. Taller, he thought, than she seemed in the boat, and cleanly made. The eyes which had seemed black, he saw were brown. Young, too, she was; much younger than her brother, and what hair!

As he led the way across the clearing he wondered how the presence of this white woman would affect the girl with the dark skin who was slowly coughing her life away. He found himself embarrassed—at a loss for an explanation of the situation to his guest.

Why Had They Been Sent Him at This Time?

"Miss Quarrier," he forced himself to begin, "we have a very sick girl in the house—it is unfortunate we are so crowded, but I have no other room. I'm giving you mine."

He had stopped as he spoke, and stared down at his moccasins; then continued, while her questioning eyes studied his face.

"She came here at the spring trade—very sick—would have flickered out in weeks without proper food. Old Anne and I have done our best, but canned milk and broth are all we had for her. And now it may be any day—I was terribly anxious about her—to get home. You noticed it—when we met you?"

"Yes, I noticed it," replied the girl. "I knew you were worried about something. I'm so sorry, Mr. Guthrie. We shall be a great burden at such a time."

"No, it's not that. I have room for you, and the others don't matter. But it will be unpleasant for you—in the house."

Too Much "Acid?"

Excess Uric Acid Gives Rise to Many Unpleasant Troubles.

AUTHORITIES agree that an excess of uric acid is primarily due to faulty kidney action. Retention of this toxic material often makes its presence felt by sore, painful joints, a tired, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backache and headache. That the kidneys are not functioning right is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Thousands assist their kidneys at such times by the use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Doan's are recommended by many local people. Ask your neighbor!

Miss Quarrier straightened, threw back her head and held his embarrassed glance as she quietly said:

"Would it help you to know that I was a nurse overseas through the last three years of the war?"

He went red under the deep tan. She would not mind Ninda, then—she, to whom agony and death had been commonplaces.

"I am glad—you will understand. You see—she, somehow, wants me with her at the end—fears I'll not be there. I've promised her."

As he spoke, the quizzical look of the girl softened to one of pity.

"I know. I will help you."

* * * * * * * * *

Under a sky flushed with the rose of the northern twilight, Joan Quarrier and her brother stood on the high shore of the Elkwan, whose flat surface caught and held the warm tones of the heavens. On guard before the factor's house, inside the stockade, lay the great alredale, satisfied, since his introduction, that these people were at Elkwan with the consent of his master, but nursing, nevertheless, a deep dislike of the man with hairy face, who had dared attempt to rub the ears of the former mascot of the First battalion, Royal Moutreals.

"So there's a dying Indian woman at the house?" Quarrier was saying.

"Yes. He asked me to see her. She has a frightful pulse and temperature. It's a matter of days—hours, I should think."

"Matter of squaw-man, also," sniffed Quarrier.

The girl's straight brows contracted with irritation. "No, I don't think so. It's a matter of big heart. Old Anne, the Cree cook, found her sick in a tipi, when the Indians were here in June for the trade. Out of sheer humanity, they took care of her."

"You believe that story?" scoffed the man of science.

The eyes of the girl hardened. "Well, Mr. Grundy, it's none of your business or mine, is it?"

"I should distinctly say it was my business—to have my sister, without so much as an apology to me, sharing his house with his—squaw," protested Quarrier in tones of outraged dignity.

"Very well. How would you like to have me sleep with you and the men in the trade-house? He's given me his room. What more could he do? And I'd advise you as a guest of Mr. Guthrie to be careful what you say. Did you notice his face?"

"You mean the scar?"

"No. I mean the mouth and the eye."

"What about them?"

"Just this, blind man. I'd feel very sorry for the person who was the cause of Mr. Guthrie losing his temper. Whether it's pity or affection, I don't know, but rather than have the last hours of this poor child disturbed, he'd throw you into the river and the rest of us with you."

"Nonsense. I'll report him to his superiors at Albany if he comes any high-handed business with me."

"Arch!" she taunted, "you know that you're really a bit timid, under-neath." The man flushed angrily, and stalled to reply, but the girl stopped him with her raised hand. "You were pretty scared when that blow struck us rather lost your head, brother." Then she said, soberly: "I advise you to be very careful how you bluster to the factor of Elkwan."

Guthrie appeared at the door of his house and called them in to supper. As Dr. Archibald Quarrier followed his sister into the living room where the table had been set for three, little in its meager furnishings escaped his roving eyes.

"We are very primitive here, you see," Guthrie said as he watched the geologist's minute inspection of his quarters, which terminated at the bookshelves. "And I cannot guarantee Anne's bread; it varies, but her caribou stew and broiled whitefish I hope you will like."

"My brother, as a scientist, Mr. Guthrie, is nothing if not thorough in his inspections," apologized Joan Quarrier with a grimace which failed to conceal from her host her embarrassment. "And I shall revel in your whitefish."

Quarrier turned petulantly. "There you go again, Joan, always making remarks at my expense," then addressed Guthrie. "I see from your books that you are not interested in science."

With a significant glance at the girl, Guthrie soberly answered: "No, I fear I haven't the scientific mind. I waste my time up here reading fiction and history—poetry, too."

"Poetry?" With silent deprecation, Quarrier shook his head as he took the chair Gordon offered at the table.

Old Anne shuffled in with the steaming stew and crisp whitefish, her wide, wrinkled face alight with pride in the dignity of her office. Quarrier was deep in the narrative of his summer voyage to the east coast of Hudson's bay in the interest of a Toronto syndicate, which had been formed to explore the region and to exploit, if commercially practicable, the copper and iron deposits known to exist, when the sound of coughing from an inner room brought Guthrie to his feet.

"Pardon me," he said, and left them.

Quarrier's thick eyebrows knotted. "He's paying the piper now. How an educated man, as he seems to be, can come up here in this Godforsaken country in the first place, and then take up with a squaw—Pah!"

The girl he addressed sat tense, with chin up, listening, as though she had not heard. In a moment Guthrie opened the door, his face gray with anxiety.

"Could you come—a moment?" he asked the girl who had risen from the table. "You said you could help—she's pretty bad?"

Joan Quarrier hurried to her medicine kit in Gordon's room, emerged, and followed him. There, to the annoyance of the man who ate heavily of Anne's cooking, they stayed until he had finished. At length, when the opiate had brought respite to the sufferer, Joan and Guthrie returned to the living room.

"I'm sorry, sir," said Guthrie, "that you should be disturbed—that I should need the services of your sister, but she's been a godsend."

Quarrier nodded stolidly, without removing his pipe from his mouth. Then, as if spurred by a sense of duty to the performance of a task not too disagreeable, cleared his throat and began:

"Mr. Guthrie, may I ask how you, a man of education and family, find yourself in a—minor position, so to speak, with the Hudson's Bay company?"

A corner of Guthrie's mouth lifted. His rather deep-set eyes shifted from the questioner to meet the glance of the girl, half amused at the abrupt question, half wondering at his answer.

GROWTH

When an institution shows a healthy gowth over a period of years, the reason is apt to be found in the character of the service it renders its clientele.

It is somewhat significant that the deposits of this Bank have grown from $461,420.00 on July 18, 1922 to the total of $724,494.00 on July 18, 1927, or an increase of 57 per cent.

These are facts that tell a story of satisfied depositors; of clients well served.

In soliciting your business, we offer ourselves not simply as a depository for your funds, but as a service giving institution, able and willing to co-operate with you in the promotion of your own business activities.

CLEVER SWINDLERS

They are working in Michigan again—tho clever swindlers who claim to be selling genuine imported Turkish rugs, which have been smuggled into this country, and which are being offered at but a fraction of their real value. They were in Ionia last week and suceeeded in capturing a number of victims. They elect to do their work after nightfall, when dim lights adds to the secrecy of their work, and incidentally makes detection of their fraud more difficult. Many who thought they were cheating Uncle Sam by getting genuine imported fabrics woke up the next morning to discover them the poorest of imitations, not even fit for the floors of the humblest homes. Fake Canadian sailors, peddling broadcloths, Irish lassies dealing out real Irish lnce, are also working in this state. If any of this crowd calls at your door, detain them on some pretext until officers can be summoned. It is then you will find out their hoax.

FARM ELICTRICITY

From the University of Minnesota comes the statement that the age of electricity on the farm is rapidly approaching. There are rural electrification projects in 25 states, all experimenting with application of electric energy to the peculiar tasks of agriculture.

There is a whole lot more to this farm use of electricity than the city reader may realize at first. In addition to lighting their homes and running their cream separators with it, farmers are beginning to use electricity to operate threshing machines, ensilage cutters, pumps, hay lifts, barn ventilators, feed grinders, milking machines, saws, grain cleaners, root cutters, and refrigerators.

Sticking dairy products in a bucket down the well or out in a small spring house is no longer adequate. Hence the study of electrically run cooling systems on the dairy farms.

PRIVATE INITIATIVE

The success of American industry and America's growth in wealth, is based on privnte initiative. The foundation of her present development was layed in a system in which free play was givin to the energy and initiative of the individual and which at the same time encournged competition and permitted organization in industry.

Whether we shall continue to grow and expand depends upon whether we pursue an intelligent and constructive, or a hostile and destructive policy toward those forces which have brought about our present development.

A sound industrial policy must square with economic laws. And a consistant policy is neccessary in order that capital, labor and the public may know what to expect.—Andrew W. Mellon, secretary to the treasury.

PIONEERS OF PROSPERITY

Glancing at the map of the United States, with 250,000 miles of railroad traversing it in all directions, one has difficulty in believing that the same vast territory, only a century earlier, was virtually without a single mile of railroad.

Railroads were bold ventures in the beginning. Men pinned their faith to these costly enterprises before any one could be sure that they would not become the indispensable arteries of trade and travel which they afterward did become. Wildernesses were penetrated and subdued by the railroading pioneers. Without the vision and practical aid of thoso auspicious spirits, it is inconceivable that this vast nation could haye been knit together with political and social and economic ties as it is today.

DEMOCRACY

Democracy is not so much a form of government as a set of principles. other forms of government may be equally efficient,—know better ways of integrating and purifying administration than we have yet learned. We must learn what we can, nnd yet scrupulously square everything that we do with the high principles we brought into the world: that justice may be done to the lowly no less than to the great; that government may serve its people, not make itself their master,—may in its service heed both the wishes and the needs of those who obey it; that authority may be for leadership, not for nggrnndizement; that the people may be the state.—Woodrow Wilson.

READY MONEY PREFERRED

I like to pay my debts promptly; not for a noble reason, but because I hear deadbeats abused so much. For fifty years or more I have heard collectors growl viciously at deadbeats; so I like to pay promptly. I not only clean up every debt I owe at the end of the month, but when possible, I prefer to pay cash as I go. No one's credit is actually as good as his money. I know hundreds of men who are being injured because of collectors "talk" about them. Most of these men finally pay in full. If a man intends to finally pay his bills, it is extremely foolish to bo slow about it.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

SWAT THE HOUSE FLY

The dangerous house fly needs attention now. The fly is born in filth and would spend its days in filth if it could have its way. It takes only a comparatively few days to raiso a generation of flies, and in the ordinary warm summer season seven generations may be produced. Most homes are now fairly well protected nguinst this disease spreading insect. Screens, traps and fly paper are in general use in the fly season. The pest cannot he abated entirely, however, unless its breeding places are cleaned up. Every patron should insist on protection from flies of food and drink in stores, restaurants and dairies. If every citizen will set a good example in fighting the fly with every means at his command, community action will come in time.

FRESHENING BREEZES

Looks as if it was about time that Aimee was kidnapped all over again.

A pioneer is the fellow who can remember when the boys used to walk to and fro from work.

The first airports were the hollow spots the ice cream man used to slip into the center of the container.

What has become of the old fashioned sinner who used to predict the end of the world about every so often?

Our idea of a prominent business man is the gent who makes it a practice to turn down all fake advertising solicitors.

Keeping sand out of sugar and applying it to business principals has saved many a grocer from failure.

Money and time are the heaviest burdens of life, and the unhappiest of all mortals are those who have more of either thnn they can use.

Ain't nature grand. The old-fashioned girl who used to wear a sun bonnet at the sea shore to keep the tan off her nose, now has a daughter who is all tan.

An incident we never expected to hear about, but did, was the action of the Vienna Chorus girl who refused to go on the staga with bare legs.

Life evens things up. The rich works like slaves trying to solve tha servant problem.

MORE INTELLIGENT VOTING NEEDED

We have it may be said, fifty per cent of our citizens who go to the polls to vote. How much of the voting is automatic? How many of them for sentimental or traditional reasons, vote a partisan ticket in which they have an interest from the point of view of the good of the state, or vote automatically without any knowledge whatever? How many of our citizens voting at even a Presidential election know the important, economic, financial and political factors involved in the election of candidates? When it comes down to the percentage of voters who cast their ballots with a definite idea and intention, we are afraid that the figures would be rather humiliating to us as a nation. Citizenship is a great privilege and exercise of the voting power is a patriotic duty. Is there not some way of trying to teach even in a small way, citizenship in our schools, high schools, colleges, and universities? It is not difficult to implant an idea in a child's mind, and as the child advances to manhood or womanhood emphasize it in the higher departments of learning. Only a percentage of the seeds so planted would be bearing fruit but even that would be an improvement on present conditions. Business has a great steak in this education of our people in better citizenship, and business should take an active part in trying to solve the problem of a broader education of our people in the necessity of intelligent activity in public affairs.

COMMUNITY FORESTS

In some parts of the Eastern United States there are community forests. The idea has been adopted from Europe, where certain towns own forests that are used as playgrounds and which through careful management provide raw material perpetually for small mills nearby. In one city in Germany the citizens went tax free for many years because the forest paid the tax for them. In Massachussets the community forest idea is being worked out successfully, and Fitchburg, the first city in the United States to establish a true city forest, is a splendid example of what may be accomplished. This forest has been carefully maanged over a period of years. It paid expenses soon after it was established. It now turns in a profit that will grow in the years to come.

In Michigan the development of municiple forests should be a comparatively simple proposition. Seedings of native trees could be produced in great numbers once a market was created for them. In addition to being valuable as woodlots; or plots from which timber could be sold, they would also become parks and public playgrounds or would help to attract tourists. The community forest idea should be give serious thought as in this way it would be possible to reforest thousands of acres.

"ONLY THROUGH EDUCATION CAN THE BEST VALUES SURVIVE"

The following is quoted from Antioch Notes, February 15, 1927, the official publication of Antioch College:

"Any single generation creates very little of its own culture. Customs and opinions are the accumulations of ages. Once originated, a custom or outlook continues indefinitely until interrupted by some other influence. Much of what we call inborn racial character is but a social tradition.

"Follow back the gentleman with his cane, and he merges back into the savage with his war club. The Christmas tree is an unbroken tradition from north European tree worship. Metropolitan New York's eve orgies trace back without a break to the Roman Saturnalia. The war spirit and excessive nationalism herd solidarity. Chivalry, generosity and friendship are similarly transmitted.

"Whether good, bad or indifferent, traditions continue indefinitely, unless contact with the past is broken, until they are crowded out by other usages. As communication spreads over the earth, people come into contact with a continually increasing variety of competing traditions, of which they can absorb but a small part.

Some of these are stimulated by commercial exploitation. The most recent inventions are used for transmitting the oldest outlooks. Prurient tabloid dailies, suggestive magazines and vulgar movies perpetuate traditions which probably have continued without a break from prehuman times. Because of their widespread circulation these agencies threaten to standardize American minds on their level.

"Against these destructive elements stand the home, the state, the church and the school. At their best they fight for those traditions which count for fineness and strength. In different periods different institutions are supreme. Today it is education.

"In the relentless competition of custom and tradition for lodgment in men's minds, education is the great selective agency. If it does its work well, superstition, prejudice, bad taste, vulgarity and indulgence is crowded out, and intelligence, integrity, critical inquiry, good will, self-control, and a sense of beauty find room. Only as education makes wise selection can the best values survive."

NECKTIE PLAN FAILS

To the newspapers of the country rightfully belongs the credit of exposing and forcing out the business of the St. Louis concern which for some time has flooded the country with neckties backed by a charity appeal. The flood of neckties which went out of St. Louis under the direction of Jacob K. Karchmer, promoter of things with a charity appeal, has stopped. Creditors of his $100,000 corporation, the Mississippi Valley Knitting Mills, St. Louis, ended the flood.

A creditor's committee took charge of the firm this month. The firm owes $280,000 it is claimed. Karchmer's protege "Necktie Tyler," the Blind Tie Salesman," the medium through which ties were marketed by the hundreds of thousands, has ended a short career. Newspapers, aroused by the complaints that were coming into their offices, appealed to their organizations and investigations revealed the true conditions. The papers then warned their subscribers, outlined plans that would trend to stop the practice, reported the various methods used in other communities and secured a statement from the postoffice authorities that persons receiving unordered merchandise through the mails were under no obligation to return the same.

Various methods were suggested by the newspapers as a counterirritant. In some cases doctors sent back an unordered prescription for a nerve tonic in full payment for the ties, others returned the ties with a "storage" or "packing fee of 25 cents which was in most cases paid, newspapers in some instances sent Tyler a few months subscription to their paper, and in many cases the ties were simply pigionholed to await developments.

Simi ar plans in the past have gone over big but with the adverse publicity that attended this scheme its failure was seen from the start.

WE ALL NEED IT

Most business and professional interprises ask for the protection of the law.

For instance the druggist asks that the promiscous sale of aspirin over the counter of grocery and other stores be prohibited. It is a sensible request and today aspirin cannot be bought except at drug stores or at other stores at least two miles away from a drug store.

And the lawyers complain that the banks make out papers, execute documents, look after estates and do other things that only lawyers should be allowed to do, and the state bar association says that offenders will be prosecuted.

Now if the newspaper men can get the druggists and the lawyers to see that the government stops printenvelopes at less than cost, we shall be happy.

QUICK THINKING

If every human being could be in full possession of all the faculties that that control self-preservation, there would be no safety problem, but civilzation has numbered those faculties. We do not anticipate danger, We merely combat it when it develops, generally too late to be effective. Making laws to fit the lack of precautionary measures of the individual is an impossibility. And that will be the only method of establishing safety where highways and railroads cross.

Old papers for sale at Courier.

Boyne City and the surrounding territory is now being scouted for common barberry by the federal field man. So far, they report that only a few of the bushes have been found in the city. In the country they have completed Bay township and Wilson township had have found very few of the bushes. This territory is decidedly different from that around Charlevoix and East Jordan where here were numerous common barberries including one of the largest areas in the world which is located in the vicinity of the Loeb farms. This large area was completely cleaned up last year.

The common barberry spreads the black stem rust to oats, wheat, barley, rye and other grains and grasses. This rust is very predominant in all of the thirteen principal grain growing states of the union and destroys millions of dollars worth of grain every year. The campaign against the common barberry is being carried on by the United States Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the State Department and Michigan State College.

It is interesting to note that antrim and Charlevoix counties have been chosen for the last two years as the best place to obtain rusted barberry leaves. These leaves are used for educational work being placed in glass fronted envelopes and then distributed to all the rural schools throughout the United States. At the present time over 150 thousand specimens have been mounted at the plant which is located this year near Central Lake.

All that, and then some!

When Goodyear announced "The Greatest Tire in the World" we sat up and took notice.

Knowing Goodyear, that seemed to us a pretty sensational statement for such a solid, long-established company.

Now that we've seen the tire, tested it, and tried in vain to find something the matter with it, we add our bit to Goodyear's statement:

It's the most wonderfully designed and built tire we have ever seen. It's everything Goodyear said, and then some!

Summary of Regatta as Seen by the Courier

A brief summary of the regatta will show some interesting facts:

The event drew the largest entry list of any regatta ever staged in Northern Michigan.

It was the first official regatta ever held in this section of the state, and consequently established a world's record for class A outboard boats. This fact gave Charlevoix unlimited publicity in the leading newspapers in the country and will give her an outstanding place in the eyes of the motorboating world.

Through sale of programs the regatta financed itself for the first time, reflecting credit upon the management and committees in charge of the event.

The Inn pier and Pere Marquette park accommodated the largest crowd in its history. Comfortable seats were provided for spectators. Every facility of the park was thrown open to the vast throng, thanks to The Inn management. The entire shore line was also thronged. The Belvedere pier accommodated a scattering number of spectators, members of the association, we presume.

The U. S. coast guards patrolled the racing course throughout the program, rendering assistance where needed and kept non-participating boats out of the course. Consequently good order prevailed

Music by the Charlevoix city band added interest and entertainment for the vast throngs. Their services were very much appreciated.

It appears to us that another year non-participating boats, yachts, etc., might be anchored outside the racing course, allowing spectators on the shore a better view of the races.

J. W. Sackrider, official timer for the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association, stated that Charlevoix had the most wonderful course for motor boat races he had ever seen, which, by the way, is quite a compliment for our beautiful Lake Charlevoix.

Upon request of the regatta committee we extend thanks to R. E. Olds of Lansing, who kindly gave the use of his yacht, Reomar, as judge's boat.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brady also deserve due credit for their efforts in securing the largest entry list ever to take part in a Charlevoix regatta. We take our hat off to them and wish the city had many more boosters of their type.

EAST JORDAN MAN DIES AT HOSPITAL

Was Fire Chief in Neighboring City for Years

Lorenzo Bingham, who has been seriously ill for some time past and confined to the Charlevoix hospital, passed away at that place at an early hour Monday morning, August 1st. The remains were brought to his home in East Jordan.

DEFENDING CHAMP DOWNS O'CONNELL

CLARA ZINKE VICTORIOUS IN WOMEN'S SINGLES

Young Bill Irwin of Grand Rapids Captures Junior Single Title

John Hennessey was once more crowned the western Michigan men's single titleholder here Sunday when he downed George O'Connell of Chicago, 6-2, 6-8, 6-2, 6-3, in the finals of the annual district meet. O'Connell gave him stiff competition carrying away one fast set from the defending champion and druwing his opponent out of his sluggishness. Hennessey left Sunday night for the Davis cup tryout.

Young Bill Irwin of Grand Rapids romped through a match with Dell Leibshon of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2, to take the junior singles title. Irwin was an easy winner. Throughout his matches he has exhibited a brand of tennis far superior to that of any of his opponents. He played a swift, sure game with accurate placements that completely outguessed the Iowa intercholastic champion.

Miss Zinke Wins Title

Clara L. Zinke of Cincinnati, is the new women's titleholder. She defeated Ruth Reise of Saginaw 6-1, 3-6, 6-1, after the latter had entered the final round by defeating Helen Cansfield of Detroit, 6-3, 7-5 in the semi-finals.

Miss L. Zinke was also a member of the winning women's doubles team. She and Miss Reise defeated Josephine Connable of Kalamazoo and Helen Cansfield of Detroit in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4.

The junior doubles title went to William Irwin and his team mate, Colby Ryan, both of Grand Rapids, who defeated Winston Hathaway and William McCnll of Muskegon in three straight sets, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

The men's doubles finals between John Hennessey, Indianapolis-Jack Harris, Chicago and Walter Hayes-Jay Chappell, both of Chicago, was called so that the team might make train connections. Each team had two sets when the match was called. The scores were, 4-6, 1-6, 6-2, 6-4.

The Michigan Tennis Championships, which closed Sunday afternoon on The Inn clay courts, was by far the largest tournament ever held in Michigan with the exception of the National Clay Court Championships at Detroit recently. Entries reached well over the two hundred and fifty mark and included some of the foremost tennis players of the United States. John Hennessey of Indianapolis, Ind., who won the men's singles title by defeating George O'Connell of Chicago, Sunday afternoon, is the tennis sensation of the year. It is predicted he will be 4th ranking player in the country in the 1928 rating. Hennessey left Charlevoix Sunday for the Davis Cup try-out in the East, which is one of the most important tennis events of the United States. Before leaving he made the remark that no matter what position he may gain in the tennis world in the future, he will play at Charlavoix each year, because he likes it here. He will always be assured a welcome.

One of the main factors insuring success of the tournament is the splendid cooperation given by The Inn through its manager, A. I. Creamer, and other members of the staff. The use of their courts, which are the finest in Northern Michigan, was given freely and were kept in first class condition by C. Y. Marshall, caretaker, who worked day and night. The Charlevoix Golf Club which gave tournament players free privileges of their course, should be highly commended for their splendid spirit.

G. E. Ash, clerk of courts, handled matches to the satisfaction of all. The value of having someone acquainted with such events, and who could be on hand at all times, was proven in the excellent way the affair was handled this year. Credit is also given to Harold Cartier and W. Gordon Parker, who gave their time and affort during the week. The committee also extends thanks to the Belvedere Club for the use of their courts.

FREE TREES TO BE GIVEN VISITORS

Anoual Inspection Day at Charlevoix Nursery

People in general are not acquainted with local enterprises that are of such importance that people come miles to inspect and to make purchases. The Charlevoix County Nursery, located at Ironton, just east of the ferry, operated by George Hemingway of Oak Park, Ill., is this kind of an enterprise and yet many people have not availed themselves the opportunity of driving through the extensive grounds and viewing the beautiful flowering shrubs and ornamental trees.

The nursery specializes in home landscaping and is always glad to render service to beautify homes either in city or country.

It consists of large and small specimens of evergreens, flowering shrubs and ornamental trees. There are some sixty varieties all of hardy varieties, which have stood the winters of this section for at least two years.

The nursery plans to give free to each family, inspecting the grounds on August 25th, a choice of a hard maple (sugar) tree, or a Mountain Ash tree or a Persian Lilac bush. Trees will be tagged as selected and may be taken during planting season this fall.

MORE THAN 22,000 VEHICLES REGISTERSD SUNDAY

Junction North of Kegomic Has Heaviest Register for Day—Many Trucks, Busses

Charlevoix folks frequently comment on the heavy traffic on U. S. 31 and the following article taken from a recent issue of the Petoskey Evening News not only confirms their comment, but gives interesting facts regarding the number of cars passing certain locations in and near Petoskey. The article follows:

"Nearly ten thousand cars were recorded last Sunday by the state road census takers, stationed at the intersection of highways U. S. 31 and M-131 just north of Kegomic, according to the reports just compiled and sent to the office of the Emmet county highway department. The figure to be exact, was 9,768. Of the passenger autos listed 6,751 were Michigan licensed cars while 2,748 were from other states.

"The next heaviest count was on the Charlevoix road at the Resort town hall, where the resort pike joins with the highway U. S. 31. There the total count was 5,806, with four horse drawn carriages listed. Michigan passenger cars numbered 4,576 and those from other states totaled 1,095.

At the village of Brutus, where the east and west county road crosses the highway U. S. 31 there was a total of 3,554 cars. The census tnkers recorded 36 horse drawn carriages and wagons, 655 passenger cars from other states und 2,771 Michigan licensed pussenger autos.

"The fourth highest figure was recorded on the road use map at Levering, including the Cross Village road and U. S.-31. Here the total vehicles recorded was 3,152. The record shows five horse carriages, 2,592 Michigan cars and 508 cars from other states.

"A total of 60 busses were registered on the count along with 277 one and a half ton trucks and 145 heavier trucks. Fifty two trailers were noted on the list.

JAS. D. CURWOOD DEAD AT OWOSSO

VICTIM OF DISEASE OF ILLNESS OF WEEK

Was Widely Known for His Stories of Canadian Northwest—Noted Cooservationist

James Oliver Curwood, nuthor and noted conservationist, died at his home in Owosso ut 11 o'clock Saturday night after an illness with streptococcus infection, which had confined him to his bed since a week ago.

In an effort to stny the ravages of the infection two physicians from the Henry Ford hospital at Detroit were rushed by airplune to the Curwood home and a daughter, Mrs. Antonio P. Jirus of Detroit, submitted to a blood transfusion operation.

With him when the end came were Mrs. Curwood and Mrs. Jirus and a son, James Oliver Curwood, Jr., a schoolboy. Another daughter, Miss Viola Curwood, is convalescing from an illness at Albany.

James Oliver Curwood, novelist, naturalist and conservationist, whose books on wild life were to literature what "scenic shots" are to the motion picture, was born at Owosso on June 12, 1878, the son of James Moran and Abigail Griffin Curwood.

His literary productions and later his public services were devoted to the portrayal and preservation of the wild life of the North American continent, especially of Alaska and the Canadian northwest.

"Next to God and religion," Curwood said near the close of his life, "the two greatest words in the languages of all the world are conservation and propagation of all natural resources and especially forests.

"There was a time when I took pride in the wideness and diversity of my killings. I was a destroyer of life. Now I am lighting for wild life harder than I ever hunted."

Wins State Position

Years after his literary position was secured his matured championing of progressive conservntion won him recognition of the state of Michigan, which made him a member of the state conservation commission in 1927.

In that cnpacity he fought a constant battle for stricter state laws regulating the rights of hunters. One of his most bitterly contested issues involved a demand that the commission invoke its discretionary powers and prohibit the shooting of spikehorn deer.

Curwood worked his way through the University of Michigan from the proceeds he made by trapping after he was expelled from high school. For the next seven years he labored at journalism at Detroit, and then left the fourth estate definitely to take up literature as a career.

From 1908 through to and including 1926 there was not a year passed that did not see at least one new novel from his pen. Beginning with "The Courage of Captain Plum" in 1908 and ending with "The Black Hunter" in 1926, 24 novels based chiefly upon the wild life of the northland were placed by Curwood on the shelves of the world's nature lovers.

Several Screened

Several of Curwood's novels later were screened, including "God's Country and the Woman," "Nomads of the North," "The River's End," "The Valley of Silent Men," "The Flaming Forest," "The Country Beyond" and "The Alaskan."

A contemporary critic once said, "Europe saw America through the eyes of Jack London and James Oliver Curwood."

During his early literary career Curwood spend months of each year in the northern wilds with his wife, gathering material and writing novels virtually out-of-doors. He came to be regarded as one of the outstanding authorities on the Canadian northwest, and was the first American ever employed by the Canadian government as an explorer and descriptive writer of its own natural resources.

Reviewers estimated that more than 1,000,000 copies of his novels were sold in America and abroad. Before "The River's End" was off the presses in 1919, advance orders for 100,00 copies were placed, establishing a "best seller" record up to that time. In later life his interest took him to the semi-tropical districts of America where he was gathering material early in 1927 for still another novel.

His other novels included "The Wolf Hunters," "The Great Lakes," "The Gold Hunters," "The Danger Trail," "The Honor of the Big Snows," "Philip Steele of the Royal Mounted," "Flower of the North," "Isobel," "Kazan," "The Hunted

RECORD OFFICIALLY CONFIRMED

PUBLICITY FROM ANNUAL REGATTA FAR REACHING

Letters of Praise Received From M. V. P. B. A.-Officials For Our Course

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brady represented Charlevoix at three different races over last week end with their new outboard boat, Brady's Boats," which takes the place of the "Baby B." sold last week to a Flint party. Their new boat was winner in the Class B race during Charlevoix's regatta and was purchased from H. W. Hart of Detroit.

Friday they placed second and third, respectively in the Class C and B outboard races at Traverse City. They again competed Saturday in the races at the annual resort carnival at Beulah, taking second place in the Class C event. The "Mary Louise," Fisherman's Paradise entry, took first place. On Monday of this week Mr. Brady raced his boat in the regatta at Conway, placing third in Class C competition. Brady's participation in neighboring regattas will assure Charlevoix a large number of boats for the coming regattas.

The following communication received from A. T. Griffith, secretary of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association, confirms the world's record for Class 725 hydroplanes, established by "Miss Charlevoix" at Charlevoix's annual regatta. The letter follows in part:

Mr. M. Roy Brady,
Charlevoix, Mich.,

Dear Mr. Brady:—Your favor of the 9th with additional time sheet attached at hand. Very glad to get this as I had noticed the time made by "Miss Charlevoix" was not indicated on the sheets which Mr. Sackrider forwarded me.

As far as I can see everything is now complete and you can announce that your boat holds the world's record for the fastest time ever made by a 725 class boat, on a 2½ mile course. We will print it that way in the coming issue of "Boating."

Please accept my congratulations on the record with my best wishes to Mrs. Brady and yourself, I am

Very truly yours,

Sec. M. V. P. B. A."

Another letter received by the Bradys from J. W. Sackrider, official timer of the M. V. P. B. A., who presided at our annual regatta, speaks in glowing terms of Charlevoix's water course for boat races. Mr. Sackrider has presided over races in all parts of the United States, and his words carry considerable weight. His letter follows in part:

"Mrs. Maude E. Brady,
Charlevoix Boat Club,
Charlevoix, Mich.

Dear Mrs. Brady:—I am expressing myself to the press with the fact that you have one of the nicest water race courses two and one-half thera is in the country and with the hill on the north side of the course running almost parallel with it gives one of the finest places for large crowds, I have ever seen. I cannot speak too highly of your course and surroundings, and I want you to appreciate that all I could say would be the best for your regatta which we held last Sunday. I also want to thank you and the committee for the nice way in which we were able to pull it off.

Try Breakfasts that "stand by" you

Say Business Heads If Draggy Mornings Hold You Back—Quaker Oats Widely Urged

RECENT commercial investigations show that almost 70% of the day's important work in offices, stores, etc., falls into four short, before-luncheon hours. Likewise, 80% of the day's important classes in nearly every school and college in America fall, too, into the same period.

Thus breakfasts of well-balanced, complete food—food that "stands by" you through the morning—are being urged widely today by experts.

Quaker Oats, containing the excellent food balance of protein, carbohydrates, minerals, vitamine "B" and the essential laxative "bulk" of oats is ideal food for that purpose.

No other cereal grown compares in food balance. Delicious and enticing, Quaker Oats corrects the mistake of inadequate breakfast eating.

Start now with Quaker breakfasts. Note then your mornings. Grocers have Quick Quaker (cooks in 2½ to 5 minutes) and regular Quaker Oats.

Charlevoix Cow-Testing Association Reorganizes

After completing four years of highly successful work, members of the Charlevoix County Cow-Testing Association have reorganized for the new year, which started the first of August. The new officers are: George Meggison, Charlevoix, president; Elmer Murray, East Jordan, vice president, and E. J. Edwards, Charlevoix, secretary-treasurer. Edgar Miteen, who has very efficiently and satisfactorily done the work of testing and keeping records of the some 300 head of dairy cattle in the association, has resigned and the services of Cecil Dobbin of Fremont, Michigan, have been engaged for the new year.

During the last year 84 unprofitable cows have been sold for beef, including many purebreds, 11 purebred sires were purchased by members, 22 out of 27 members are using purebreds of known production back of them. Large increases in sweet clover and alfalfa acreages have been noted in the annual report.

Members have had their cream separators tested and it is found that three members discovered their separators were losing them better than $5.00 per month at the present time. The following are the members of the association with a few additions to be made later.

"Your question is a fair one," he replied. "I came here for my health. I came back from overseas with gassed lungs."

"Ah, I see. Where was your home, may I ask?"

"Montreal."

"You—you can't be a relative of Charles Guthrie?" demanded the other, his interest suddenly aroused.

"Brother."

"You, a brother of Charles Guthrie!" Quarrier's prominent eyes bulged in amazement at the factor of Elkwan.

"You are more flattering to my brother than to me," and Guthrie joined Joan Quarrier in an amused smile.

"But you're not staying in this country—this business, since you've regained your health?"

"I don't know. I rather like the life."

"Charles Guthrie is a member of the syndicate which sent me to the east coast to examine those iron and copper deposits. He'll be interested to hear from you at first hand."

Again the firm mouth of Guthrie shaped a faint smile.

"I'm not so sure of that. He's rather given me up as a black sheep, you know."

"For staying up here, I presume?"

"Yes, for not coming home—this summer."

"Um!"

Guthrie rose, and lighting a candle, for the September night had fallen, carried it to the sick room, where old Anne was on guard. Returning, he lit the small living-room lamp. And in the mind of the woman who watched, surmise followed surmise concerning the factor of Elkwan, for in the room he had given up to her were three autographed likenesses of a beautiful girl.

Then Quarrier described in detail the accident to his power schooner off Cape Jones, the wild night on the bay with an improvised and useless rudder, and the stranding on the beach of Akimiski island.

"It was the next morning that this red-headed pirate, McDonald, discovered us and sent a boat ashore."

"You say he took some of your stuff?" asked Guthrie.

"Yes, he said he needed flour and gasoline."

"And he got it?" suggested the other, with a laugh.

"Yes, but instead of paying what it's worth here, on the bay, he paid me St. John's prices."

"Well, for a pirate, he was rather liberal, wasn't he? He hails from St. John's, they say. Has been up here two summers, but always went back in the autumn. This year he told some of the Indians that he would winter in a cove at the south end of the island. Akimiski is famous for silver and black fox."

"I can't understand why the company doesn't run him out of the bay if he's hurting their business."

Guthrie laughed. "Why, man, he has as much right here as we, or the Revillon Freres. And as to running him out, I'm inclined to think that McDonald would take a lot of running. Did you happen to go aboard his schooner?"

"Yes, I went board to get my money."

"You didn't notice a machine gun or two lying around?"

"No!"

"Well, the Crees say he has them. Evidently, he has come to stay."

"So you're going to sit calmly here and let him get the fur?" snorted Quarrier, contemptuously.

"That's it," agreed Guthrie. "You see, we're a bit afraid of this wild man with the scarred face. The rumor has drifted up here that he had an impressive war record."

The irony was lost on the geologist.

"Afraid to fight for your rights, eh?" he ridiculed, oblivious of the bullet-furrowed cheek of the man who faced him.

At the reproach, the face of Guthrie lit with amusement, but a glint in the half-closed eyes prompted Joan Quarrier, mortified by her brother's gaucherie, to intervene.

"To a Canadian veteran that remark is positively insulting. I fail to recall anything of a warlike nature in your manner with our pirate, Arch. As a matter of fact, you seemed quite overawed."

"Overawed? Ridiculous!" snapped Quarrier. "I was afraid to sell flour and gas we couldn't take with us."

Guthrie's twinkling eyes met those of the girl. "They say his scarred mouth is rather awe-inspiring. Possibly scars are repulsive to your brother," he suggested. "They are—to some people."

The tone of the last—the sudden tightening of face muscles—the swift sobering of the eyes, spurred the quick intuition of the girl to pierce the armor of his raillery, to surmise what the scarred cheek of the speaker might have brought to him of bitterness, and pain. But why? she wondered. The red line from eye to ear only lent dignity—distinction, to the cleanly modeled features. Why should this badge of service be the source of secret humiliation? But she was confident that it was.

Quarrier changed the subject. "By the way, Mr. Guthrie, when can you send for the stuff I left on the beach and take it to Albany? I can pick it up next spring when I return to the bay."

Evidently deeply occupied with his thought, for a space the man addressed made no answer; then he said, indifferently: "Some time this winter, possibly, when the ice sets hard in the strait."

"What? Not before then? There are some valuable ore specimens and stores—boxes of them. That pirate will come back for them."

"We'll be hunting geese until cold weather drives them south."

"You're not hunting geese here, are you? Why couldn't you go before you go on your hunt—tomorrow, in fact?"

"Archie!" The sharp challenge of Joan Quarrier at the callous insistence of her brother was checked by the level tones of the factor.

"Because, at present, my duty is here, as you can see."

Then the man, whose intimate knowledge of the inanimate had seemingly taught him little of men, laughed rawly:

"Your duty? Yes, I suppose when you fur people get yourselves into a mess of this kind," he nodded toward the door, "you feel you have to see it through."

"You're Not Hunting Geese Here, Are You?"

Joan Quarrier rose from her chair, stunned by the stupid brutality of the remark—fearful of the retribution it deserved. Eyes black with anger, Guthrie glared at his guest, who, sensible of his mistake, grinned sheepishly, then flushed to the roots of his stiff hair. The muscles in the face of the factor knotted, the veins in the brown neck above the flannel shirt swelled with blood in his efforts at self-control.

"I—I went too far," Quarrier mumbled. "I didn't mean, of course—" But he was cut off short with:

"Your bed is in the trade-house! You know the way!"

The long arm of Guthrie pointed to the door.

For a space Quarrier stared into the cold eyes; then, stung by the outrage to his dignity, got to his feet in angry protest.

"What do you mean? You dare insult me—order me out of your house like no, in color?" But there was then in the face of the man whose arm still indicated the door which swung the Ishpar from the geologist as water is wrung from a rag.

"You'll hear from this—this conduct of yours. I'll report this to your superiors," protested Quarrier, as he stormed out of the room.

Guthrie turned to the girl, who was visibly swept by shame—stirred by an emotion which left her weak, clouded eyes fixed on the man who said in a voice still thick with anger:

"I'm sorry, Miss Quarrier—so sorry. He—went—too far."

"You were right—he was impossible," she agreed in a voice raw with disgust, with a slow nod of the dark head. "He has always blundered—always failed to understand."

"I want to tell you about her."

She turned on him almost fiercely. "You—you didn't—do not understand?" she demanded.

For a space he watched her tense, white face; then a mood of crystalline, "You have served with the wounded; it is enough."

He went to the door and whispered to old Anne. Then he began:

"She came here in June with some Ojibwas, from far beyond the Elkwan headwaters, for this is a Cree country. They were not her own people, I am convinced, but one of the men claimed to be her father. She was not sure, for she had grown up with them—didn't even know her age, but she can't be more than eighteen. Old Anne found her sick in a tipi—half fed—neglected. We took her in, and for a time the canned milk and the broth worked a miracle. She was happy—too; that helped.

"When the trade was over and the Indians started for their summer camps, they demanded her—and she could hardly walk a hundred yards without resting. Of course, they didn't really want her; their purpose was to hold me up. They asked for everything in the store. They always do when such a thing happens—an Indian girl stays behind, at the factor's quarters.

"You see they thought this was the old situation—so did the Crees—in spite of what Anne told them. They couldn't understand. Well, I finally got rid of her people—kicked them out. For weeks she was so happy."

Guthrie tiptoed to the sickroom door, looked in, and returned.

"In her last conversation with the Indian who called himself her father, I heard her repeatedly say 'Nin da, nin da!' She was so earnest about it, I asked Etienne what it meant, and he told me it was Ojibwa for 'I stay here.' Pretty, isn't it? Nin da, I dwell here. She has chosen her home. So we called her Nin da. She was one of us.

"Miss Quarrier," went on the man whose face had softened—grown boyish, "it fairly tore my heart—the happiness, the gratitude of that sick child. Those big eyes of hers followed me like a dog's. I had rescued her, no doubt, from unspeakable misery. . . . It was only natural, I suppose.

"After a few weeks she began to fail, and in August, when they called me to Albany, I couldn't throw off the memory of the despair in her eyes when I left. You see she feared she would not live until I returned—wanted me there when it came. Her eyes haunted me—every mile of the coast.

"This last time when I went, she bade me good-by—was sure that it was the end. But we needed the geese—we had to go. . . . I've seen men die—my friends; but those wistful eyes! . . . It's tragic. . . . and she so young."

Guthrie stopped his pacing to run his fingers nervously through his dark hair.

"Oh, the dumb misery, here in the north! Think if she'd stayed with her people, to die in a tipi—neglected! I'm thankful if I've eased the loneliness—the pain—for one."

The sound of coughing, followed by Old Anne's frightened face in the doorway, summoned them to the other room. The effects of the opiate had worn off. The woman who had "served with the wounded" wiped the crimsoned lips that moved in vain attempt at utterance, as the large eyes, bright with fever, clung to the face of the man who sat beside the cot.

"You go to bed, Anne," said Guthrie to the wrinkled Cree. "I will be here the rest of the night." With muttered protest the old woman shuffled from the room.

Presently the dry lips of the sick girl again moved. "She wants to say something," said the nurse, and left them.

Guthrie bent over the pillow.

"You—go—no more?" he faintly heard.

He smiled into the questioning eyes, as he shook his head. "No more—Nin da."

The heavy lids slowly drooped.

Through the slow hours of the night they sat beside the waif, who, out of the wilderness had come to Elkwan, and was now—returning. And in the intervals between her ministrations to the life which was slipping away, the guest of Guthrie learned much of the man with whom she shared the night watch.

In the candor of his explanation of the presence of the Indian girl at Elkwan, he had unconsciously revealed to the curious women who studied him, intimate glimpses of heart. The emblem of the Distinguished Service order, which he wore in the photograph in his bedroom vouched for his valor as a soldier. But why, she mused, did the brother of the rich Charles Guthrie linger in the wilderness of the west coast when a girl of such loveliness as her three photographs suggested waited for his return? For the nature of their relations was established beyond doubt by the written sentiment on the photographs. Yet, his health returned, he seemed to be deliberately staying on in the north. What was behind it all, wondered Joan Quarrier; not pity for this poor child, who, in the manner of her kind, had given him worship for the only kindness life had vouchsafed her. That, clearly, would have anchored Guthrie at Elkwan while Ninda lived, but in face of the fact that the girl was desperately ill—could not live into the autumn, he had prepared to winter on the west coast. Why?

So, together, they kept their watch, where, through the halting hours, the spirit of the waif of the forests hovered, awaiting release. Once, after a paroxysm of coughing, the veil of delirium lifted and there was a moment of consciousness. He leaned to her and the four which looked from the groping eyes faded as she recognized the scarred cheek. The wraith of a smile touched the drawn mouth.

As the stars paled above the purple tundra of Akimiski, again she recognized the face of Guthrie. Her lips moved. His straining ears caught a faint "Bojo," the Ojibwa farewell. . . . Then a crimsoned froth welled from the tortured lungs.

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.

IN the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretions are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of users and endorsers who acclaim the merit of Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

PHEASANTS EAT CUT WORMS

A farmer in Ontario thought that the phensants were eating his corn. The game department killed two of the birds and examined their corps, in which were found 200 cut worms and no corn. It is a well known fact that pheasants prefer insects to grain food whenever they can get them.

ROADSIDE MARKETS

A unique situation is pointed out by the publicity bureau of the National Grange when it calls attention of members to the growth of the roadside market as a new menace to marketing. Declaring the Grange to have been one of the first agencies to foster the roadside market, it now reverses itself and asserts that instead of proving an agency for the promotion of direct buying by the consumer, it now has become a "runaway" project rapidly getting away from the farmer and becoming the outlet by which unprincipled racksters are buying low grade produce on city markets and then carting it to the country to be attractively arranged and sold as "fresh from the farm." The result, of course, is dissatisfied customers and an inclination on the part of the city dweller to buy from reliable dealers in the city as formerly.

Instead of weeding out the "exhorbitant profits of surplus middlemen," the fact is, according to the Grange publicity bureau, the honest to goodness farmer finds roadside selling not too profitable in the face of shyster competition and now urges a licensing of all roadside markets as the remedy.

Here again is another matter in which the Grange will soon find itself reversed. The question of allowing a grower to offer his own products for sale at any time and place is rather well settled and especially will the licensing of a farmer to sell his own produce from his own dooryard be a ticklish business for any legislator to attempt to license.

An excellent idea would appear to be a campaign of education in which the offering at the home market of any but the best of the season be discouraged. The buying public will soon be educated to buy of the grower at his door if such a plan be followed.

FORESTS AND DROUGHT

Eminent foresters take the position that the cutting of Michigan forests has had much to do with the lowering of lake levels throughout the state in recent years. They contend that the forests serve as reservoirs for holding the moisture, letting it out gradually during the dry season and preventing floods when heavy rainfalls come. They claim that the steady seepage from the woods keeps the lakes at a uniform level, while the moisture in the depth of the woods is drawn up by the sun, causes local showers and keeps a perfect rotation of the water supply. If this is true the forests play an important part in the success or failure of our agriculture interests. Our various farm crops must have ample rainfall if they are to hold up to standard and if the rainfall is decreased by the cutting of our forests we are not only losing the timber but we are cutting down our other crop production as well. If it is true that by depleting our forests we are reducing the rainfall we are also seriously affecting our navigation and water power possibilities. If these foresters are right in their contention that timber depletion is responsible for the lack of rain in recent years we already have paid a handsome price for our wastefulness and should take immediate steps to overcome this handicap that we have acquired as the result of our own folly.

DOLLARS DON'T GROW ON TREES

The manner in which taxes are mounting and the staggering burdens they are putting upon all the people should give concern to every individual who has any interests in the future. It seems to be easy to incur obligations and get into debt and correspondingly difficult to curtail extravagance and get free from our bond and interest burdens.

While federal taxes have been reduced, state and local taxes have risen twice as fast as federal taxes have been reduced. Local taxes of municipalities and districts of one sort and another, which are organized on various pretexts for the purpose of levying some new form of tax, are responsible for the orgy we are passing through.

Every tax dollar comes from the pockets of the people. It does not grow on money trees. Every dollar wasted or spent unnecessarily is a dollar of capital destroyed. It has ceased earning, developing and producing.—Northfield (Minn.) News.

DOES COURTESY PAY?

Courtesy to the tourists is an investment of something tangible that brings big results. During the recent several instances of where folks came back to this section for their summer vacations mainly because they liked the people here, and were so well pleased with the courteous treatment they received. Not only the outing attractions which they find in Michigan, they state, brought them back, but the congenial treatment received on other occasions induced them to seek this section again this year.

Merchants and their clerks, garage and other operators along that line, police officers, hotel folks and all others will find great return by exercising more than ordinary courtesy and attention to the nomads from other parts who find their way through this section, and following that policy constantly would easily earn for Michigan the title of "The Courteous State."

A DRIVER'S RESPONSIBILITY

The man at the wheel of a speeding motor often fails to appreciate the grave responsibility he assumes for other lives. What is true of the road hog and the reckless speeder is also true of the driver who tries to beat the train. All too often it is not alone the lives of such drivers and their passengers that are sacrificed to criminal folly, but trains are wrecked with loss of life among their crews and passengers.

EDUCATED FAULTFINDERS

Men of letters and of thought are habitually too much given to declaiming at their ease against the delinquencies of men of action and of affairs. The inevitable friction of practical politics generates heat enough already, and the office of the thinker and critic should be to supply, not heat, but light. The difficulties which attend his own unmolested task, the task of seeking after and proclaiming salutary truths, should teach him to make allowance for the still more urgent difficulties which beset the politician—the man obliged, amid the clash of interests and temptations, to practice from hand to mouth, and at his peril, the most uncertain and at the same time the most experimental arts.—Sidney Colvin.

CARE AT CROSSINGS

Large increases in automobile accidents at railroad crossings are shown in a summary of reports of all large railroad lines. Such mishaps last year numbered well over 3,000, and fatalities totaled 1,292 compared with 1,154 the year previous. This compilation did not include the short line or interurban, so that the sacrifice of life to carelessness was really much larger than figures indicate.

Many drivers of automobiles make the mistake of depending upon the crossing flagmen. They forget that watchmen are only human and are subject to all the human weaknesses. An inspection of the Long Island railroad in New York recently disclosed eighteen grade crossing watchmen asleep, out of eighty-five crossings visited during the inspection.

TRAVEL

Travel, in the past, was a luxury which only the very rich could afford. The majority of men and women were born, lived and died in the same place. They inhabited a universe ten miles wide; beyond its borders lay the unknown. Today even the poor can take small journies; the moderately prosperous are familiar with whole continents. The mind is nourished by its impressions from without; to enlarge one's physical world is to enrich one's mind. Machinery, in the form of transport, is providing for larger and ever larger numbers of human beings a form of liberal education.—Aldous Huxley in the August Harpers.

FRESHENING BREEZES

A Southern Michigan man dropped dead in the postoffice after reading a letter. It was from his son in college, telling him not to send a check that week.

Out in Wichita, Kansas, the women staged a gasless day to protest gas rates. The big story will break when the dressmakers raise their prices.

Next to a line fence there is nothing that will start a battle like trying to relocate the county seat.

If experience could be secured on the easy payment plan we wonder how many would benefit by experience?

But will Chicago be interested in any fight where they don't use machine guns?

For fear the world might become over populated they started building excursion steamers.

We have made our place in the world through the Union and the Constitution. We have flourished as a people because of our success in establishing self government. But all of these results are predicated upon law abiding people. In whatever direction we may go, we are always confronted with the inescapable conclusion that, unless we observe the law, we cannot be free.—President Coolidge.

AND NOW IN CLOSING—

The most discouraging in the world is the fellow who refuses to assume his share of community uplift. Going to prosperity by hanging onto the coat tails of the other fellow, is like carrying your religion in your wife's name—a most shameful spectacle.

A LECTURE

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE
Entitled Science and Religion
by
William D. Kilpatriek, C. S. B. of Detroit, Michigan
ember of the Board of Lectureship f The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

All here to-day, I take it, are more less familiar with the rapid and nparalleled growth of Christian cience throughout the world; and It , I presume, a reasonable assumpon that those of you who are not hristian Scientists are here to find at, if possible, what it is that is ntacting men and women in all walks f life and in all quarters of the lobe to a religious movement which as been so strikingly free, in its ately goings, from those dramatic, nsational, and spectacular methods nployed by so many present-day reionists to attract public attention. omething aside from emotion and nsntionalism is prospering this gosel of freedom—this gospel of "on arth peace, good will toward men"— s no other teaching has prospered nce the days our Master trod the ills and valleys of Judea, and it is explain to you, so far as possible, hat this something is that this lecure is given.

The question as to why mankind gradually turning its gaze towards hristian Science finds its answer in ne fact that because Christian cience is a return to the simple achings of Jesus the Christ it is giving to poor, sick, suffering humani some hope of release from its sorows, its poverty, its sickness, and its rdidness. It is saying to the world -day in the loving words of the aster, "Come unto me, all ye that abour and are heavy laden, and I ill give you rest." It is saying to ou who are sick, you who are bowed down with the sorrows and cares f the world, you who are bound by ne fetters of sin, you who are struggling with the specter of want or isfortune, in the words of Isaiah, Ho, every one that thirsteth, come e to the waters, and he that hath o money; come ye, buy, and eat; ea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price."

THE MISSION OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Not only is Christian Science a rict presentation of the teachings f Jesus, but, in the light of latteray events, it would seem that its ppearance has been timed to the urpose of saving the Christian religion from complete annihilation or, t best, a long night of darkness. utside of Christian Science the end of much religious and so-called cientific thinking seems to be sadly way from the simple truths taught y the humble Nazarene. Surely, od in His wisdom has provided this resent-day salvation that true hristianity may not only be saved o humanity but that it may be restablished with men in its pristine urity to the end that once again do e see the sick healed, the lame made walk, and the blind to see as was itnessed in Jesus' time. The time ad come when something had to appear to prevent the utter loss to huanity of a pure religion based upon ne platform of Christianity as given the world by Jesus, and Christian cience is the answer to that necesity,—an answer, I am convinced, as ertainly God-sent as was the appearnce of Jesus the Christ the answer the spiritual necessities of two housand years ago.

Christian Science does not for a oment belittle the importance and he place of the divine economy of he work of the Christian Church hroughout the intervening centuries ince the days of Jesus. Briefly, following the history of the Christian hurch since its inception as a consequence of the teachings and practice f the Master, it is found that in the arly centuries of the Christian era some three or four hundred years fter the time of Jesus) the pure religion given to the world by Jesus as closely adhered to, with the result that the healing of all the ills f mankind, physical or what not, ere the "signs following" which esus said should mark the religious tatus of a true Christian. But as ime passed and the multitudes began o flock to this new religion, popularity so engulfed the Church that he spiritual import of Jesus' words as lost in the maze of pomp and eremony, and creed and dogma surped the place of simple uplifting alth and the healing which, of necesity, followed, and always will follow, the spiritual understandings of he teachings of the Master. Notwithstanding all of this, however, hroughout those many dark years a park of true Christianity has burned, simetimes very dimly, in the conciousness of mankind and has been arried on down through the centuries by the aid of the Christian hurches, breaking into fuller effulence here and there as some pure onsciousness has been enlightened y the truth. And thus has the esence of the Christ teaching been aved to humanity until, through the piritually clear vision of Mary Baker ddy, the Discoverer and Founder of hristian Science, this smouldering lame has been fanned into its full adiance, and this new-old truth has ome to the world to restore to mankind a religion of good deeds in place f creed and dogma.

MARY BAKER EDDY

The struggles, the privations, the ersecutions, the disappointments, nd the bitter travail which were Mrs. ddy's in bringing to birth this wonlerful revelation would many times ave turned back one less imbued with the sanctity of the trust. Her nessage was one born of a life of levotion to God and her love for her rother man. Hers was a message ent from God and it was her duty o give it to mankind for Truth's ake. Her natural sensitiveness, her neekness, and her gentleness shrank from the buffets which this revelation drew from a world of sin, but her devotion to duty, her love of God and man, her faithfulness to her trust, and her Christianity impelled her ever forward against the most discouraging and seemingly fearful odds, to the glorious end that once again the standard of Truth been placed in the hands of men and the banner of the Christ unfurled to the winds of heaven for an eternal guide to humanity out of the Egypt of a darkened understanding into the Canaan of spiritual freedom.

Mrs. Eddy's discovery of God's law of freedom was by no means an invention of her own creating, any more than was Newton's discovery of the law of gravitation the embodiment of a law of his devising. Mrs. Eddy's was the discovery of a truth that is as ancient as "the ancient of days" and one for which she claims no inventive genius of her own. Hers was a discovery made possible by her own purity of purpose and her devotion to holiness. She endured and triumphed against odds which you and I will never have to meet and which we can but faintly comprehend. But we can, with propriety and certainly without any undue sense of personal adulation, give humble thanks that some one has been able to withstand the shafts of evil and persecution which were the inevitable accompaniments of a revelation of so much importance to the world, that you and I might know of this great truth which Jesus came to give, whereby we may come into our spiritual heritage of freedom as children of the living God.

Something had to come to save Christianity from the failure of sectarianism, and it came in the year 1866 with Mrs. Eddy's healing and her discovery of Christian Science. This discovery was given to the world by her ten years later through her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the textbook of Christian Science.

CHRISTIANITY THREATENED

Christianity has been sorely threatened from two directions. On the one side it was fast becoming the helpless victim of mere ecclesiasticism, while on the other side it had been the object of violent attacks at the hands of scholasticism. One familiar with the Bible and especially with the tenchings and works of the Master will hardly disagree with me in the assertion that present-day tendencies in our educational and religious institutions lead thought away from the purely spiritual import of the teachings of the Man of Galilee. The growing tendency in our great educational institutions to discredit the teachings of Jesus on the ground that they do not square with so-called natural science, the efforts of the Christian churches to evade their plain responsibility to heal the sick in conformity with the command of Christ Jesus on the ground that such healing was a dispensation intended only for his time, the schisms in the churches,—their creedal differences and wars,—would portend the rapid decline of the Christian religion were it not that God has sent us that which will not only save Christianity but which will, in addition, restore it to us in all its purity of purpose with "signs following."

Some time ago I attended the meeting of the alumni of one of our great institutions of learning where there was under discussion a project to establish a school of religion in connection with that institution. During the course of the meeting one of the sponsors of the movement made the assertion that "The proposed school of religion finds its necessity in the fact that the youth of our country is growing into the man's estate without the slightest knowledge of religion and that to remedy this the student body should be made to see that Christianity and natural science are not at disagreement, but that they are in strict conformity with each other, and thus will it be encouraging to give more thought to the religious side of its education."

Now, my friends, in that brief statement, made with the very best of intentions and with the most lofty purpose, do we find the crux of the whole matter. It is because latter-day religions and scholasticism have so traduced the pure Christianity taught and practiced by Jesus, in their endeavor to harmonize the teachings of Jesus with the teachings of so-called natural science, that mankind is halting and faltering at the word religion.

CHRISTIANITY VERSUS PHYSICAL SCIENCE

The error of latter-day thinking—that is, the error from which has arisen the present deplorable tendency to discredit both the words and works of Jesus in the teaching of our religious and educational institutions—is twofold:—

1. The attempt has been made to square the teachings of Jesus with the teachings of physical science, and

2. Because this cannot be done the difficulty is being circumvented by explaining away the teachings of Jesus, and consequently the holy import of the Scriptures, by declaring that the recorded works of the Master, being unnatural and unexplainable from the standpoint of physical science, are not only impossible of repetition but were untrue in the first place.

Now that is exactly the situation as it exists to-day. Erudite theology and scholasticism are declaring to the world that the miracles of Jesus and his apostles and disciples, being unexplainable from the standpoint of physical science, are necessarily untrue and incapable of proof of repetition. And right there is the point of divergence between Christian Science and the material theories held and taught by most religious teachers. Christian Science, taking the opposite position and reversing these destructive attacks on the words and works of the Master, declares that the teachings of the Bible, spiritually discerned, can never be made to accord with the teachings of natural science; that there is not one law of so-called natural science that Jesus did not completely set aside through his understanding of God and man's relationship to God; that the asserted laws of physical science are not God's laws and give no evidence of God's creation; that with the right understanding of God and man one may completely disannul so-called natural law, and that the statement of Jesus, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also," stands as inviolate to-day as when it was uttered.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE REVOLUTIONARY

Christian Science is revolutionary. It is revolutionary to just the extent, in the same way, and for the same purpose, that the teachings of Jesus were revolutionary. Christian Science, in line with the purpose of the teachings of Jesus, is turning the thought of mankind away from a material basis and directing it to the spiritual. As Jesus lifted the human concept of God from the material to the spiritual so does Christian Science. As Jesus lifted the human concept of man and the universe from the material to the spiritual so does Christian Science. Hence, the first step in gaining a pure understanding of Jesus' work and teachings and in gaining a demonstrable understanding of God, man, and the universe in the light of Jesus' teachings is to dematerialize our sense of God and His law in our thinking.

St. Paul, in his first epistle of the church at Corinth, draws a clear line of demarcation between the teachings of Jesus and those of physical science when he said: "The foolishness of God is wiser than men. . .But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world (the material world) to confound the wise; . . . that no flesh (no matter) should glory in his presence." And farther along in this same epistle Paul writes: "And my speech and my preachings was not with enticing words of man's wisdom (material wisdom), but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power: that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." And then he proceeds: "Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth (material wisdom teacheth), but which the Holy Ghost teacheth(spiritual understanding teacheth). . . . But (note this) the natural man (the man whose concept of creation rests in the material) receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

To dematerialize our sense of God means to spiritualize it and to do this our understanding of God must rest wholly in the spiritual and not in the material. To illustrate, in a way, what I mean. Some years ago I dropped into a church where a minister was preaching a sermon against Christian Science. In the course of his remarks he said that when he died he fully expected to walk straight into heaven and to go right up and shake hands with God. Now that may somewhat exaggerate popular opinion about God, but I do not believe it is very far removed from the thought of God commonly held by most men of the Christian faith. In any event, it will furnish a foundation from which to explain what Christian Science teaches about God and man and their relationship to each other. To Christian Scientists the Bible, spiritually interpreted, contains no foundation for the concept to a material God or of a God humanly circumscribed or in any way similar to this fleshly, sick, sinful concept of man. It may be that because in the first chapter of Genesis it is recited that God made man in His image and likeness, it has been concluded that God must be like this mortal concept of man, but that would completely reverse the statement. It is not there recorded that God is made in the image and likeness of mortal man. It is stated rather, that man is made in the image and likeness of God. Consequently, before we can ascertain what man is it is necessary to ascertain what God is, and we can never gain this understanding by reasoning from the basis of a mortal man back to a God who is Spirit.

It is possible a material concept of God finds its inception in the Biblical statement, "The Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear," or the statement from Deuteronomy wherein it is affirmed that "underneath are the everlasting arms," or any of a number of such helpful similes which we find in the Bible. But if one is to make a literal application of such allusions to the divne Being what are we to do when we come to that passage in Psalms where the declaration is made, "He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust"?

Of course, mortals may believe anything they wish to about God. They may believe that God is the sun, which belief is held by some people. They may believe that God is like a graven image or that God is a humanly circumscribed personality with a material habitation in a far distant somewhere called heaven. Some may go so far as to believe that Jesus is God, or, even that there is no God at all. In fact, all of these beliefs about God are held by some people, but the Bible, spiritually interpreted, gives no excuse for believing any of the things about God I have just enumerated, and we will cease to delude ourselves with these and other mistaken concepts concerning God and man in just the proportion that we do our own reading of the Bible and our own thinking rather than depend upon creeds and dogmas for our information, or allow others to do our reading, our thinking, and our interpreting for us.

SUNDAY'S CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE

GOD

Now just what is God and how is He to be made vital in our individual lives—in our homes, in our business, in the sick room, and so forth? One of the terms used by Mrs. Eddy in her definition of God is "Love." Christian Science teaches that God is Love. "Oh, yes!" some one may say, "That's not new, that's old. We have always known that." Let us see. Have we always known that? In I John we read, "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him." Now, how do we dwell in love, or God? Why, obviously. St. John's explanation that "God is Love" is plain and unequivocal. He does not say that God is a loving God. He says that God is Love itself and that to know God—that is, to express God as His image and likeness—is to reflect Love. To think is purely a function of the mind, is it not? Hence, to love mankind is to know or reflect God as His image and likeness, and is wholly an exercise of right thinking, and is not a product of the five physical senses. Love, in the sense in which it is used in the Bible and in Christian Science to define God, does not involve a personal, sentimental type of affection. It has to do with that sense only which sees man as the image and likeness of God,—pure, upright, and undefiled by sin and mortality. And it is only as we see our brother man to be a child of God, regardless of what the outward evidences may bear witness, that we establish ourselves as His children and thereby come into our God-given heritage of freedom from the ills and woes of the world's giving.

If the fact that "God is love" is an abiding conviction with us we can never for one instant harbor any sense of hatred towards our brother man; we can never for a moment look with envy upon the good fortune of our neighbor; we can never be conscious of any sense of resentment or indignation at a seeming affront or insult at the hands of another; we can never be guilty of criticizing our brother man or of finding fault with him regardless of the nature of his offense against us. We most assuredly will not be found speaking ill of any one if we watch our thinking. We govern our health, our happiness, and our prosperity by our own thinking, and while it may not be of great concern to our neighbor what we think about him it matters a whole lot to us what we think about him, because our own thinking about our brother man has to do largely with what happens to us. We might hate another ever so much and not do him a particle of harm but that very act of hating our brother might bring on us disaster and disease. From the standpoint of our own self-protection we should never think anything about another we would not wish to be true about ourselves.

Now, another term employed by Mrs. Eddy, in her definition of God, is "good." Christian Science does not teach simply that God is a good God. it affirms, as does the Bible, that God is good. Christian Science teaches that God is good itself,—not that good is simply a quality of God but that good is God. What is goodness? Is it physical or mental. It is primarily and finally mental. Therefore, to express good in our thinking is to express or reflect God as His image and likeness, is it not? Jesus said, "Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God."

In Deuteronomy we are told that "he (God) is thy life" and Jesus said that to know God is life eternal. If God is Life, and life consists in knowing God, and knowing God is purely mental, then life is not physical but is, rather, spiritual, for spiritual also means mental. Hence, Mrs. Eddy's definition of God as "Life" and her assertion that Life is Mind, or God. Life, then, if the Bible is to be taken as authority, resolves itself into a state of consciousness rather than into a physical or material state. We think Life. St. Paul takes life entirely out of the material and places it squarely in the realm of the mental or spiritual when he says: "To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."

You will recall the incident of Jesus' talk with the woman of Samaria at the well of Jacob on his journey from Judea into Galilee when he said, in explaining God to her, "The hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father . . . . God," he said, "is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." That is, God is neither here nor there. He is not a person located in some particular locality or place. He is, rather, infinite Being, filling all space, and must be so understood. Hence, Mrs. Eddy's definition that God is "infinite Spirit." To conceive God as infinite, filling all space, we must dematerialize our sense of Him and this process is distinctly mental.

In the book of Deuteronomy reference is made to Deity as "a God of truth" while the words of Jesus, just quoted, "They that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth," clearly define God as "Truth," one of Mrs. Eddy's terms for God. Truth is unquestionably mental, is it not? As you and I express, in our thinking, truth or true thoughts, we must be expressing the image and likeness of a God that is Truth.

St. Paul in his various epistles emphasizes clearly the freedom which is vouchsafed mankind from all the ills of mortality by individual conformity to the law of God. In his epistle to the Romans he says, "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." If God then is Love and Life and Truth and Spirit, as the Bible declares, and these are all expressed or reflected by man in thought, word, and deed, then such thinking and acting brings one into harmony with this law of God which makes free, and this law of God Mrs. Eddy describes in her definition of God as "Principle." In the term "Principle" we have included all spiritual phenomena, all causation, being, continuity, and effect, all the spiritual concomitants of a creation resulting from our expressing an eternal, unchangeable law.

Now, if God is Love, as the Bible declares, and love is expressed in right thinking; if God is Life, as the Bible declares, and our life consists in knowing God, and knowing God is purely mental; if God is Truth, as the Bible declares, and Truth is expressed in right thinking, or in truthfulness; if God is Spirit, or infinite, as the Bible declares, and infinity can only be comprehended mentally, then most certainly Mrs. Eddy's definition of God as Mind has its full authority in the Bible and in the words and works of the Master. In I Corinthians reference is made to "the mind of the Lord." Thus, by understanding God to be Mind and Mind to include all reality we come into our true heritage of freedom and dominion as children of God, through having, as St. Paul puts it, that mind in us "which was also in Christ Jesus." "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee," writes Isaiah.

Therefore, taking the Bible for our sole authority we find God to be Truth, Life, Love, Spirit, Principle, and Mind. And thus, with the aid of the Bible, we have dematerialized completely our sense of God and find Him without a single material or bodily accompaniment or part. And we find Him available right here and now in just the proportion that we express or reflect Him as His image and likeness in our individual thinking. We begin to govern our own lives and experiences by spiritual thinking. In the operation of latter-day radio contrivances we extend our material aerials in a way that our receiving instruments record messages which fill the air, even though we are not physically conscious of the presence of these messages. Their presence is made manifest and audible to us through the aid of the aerial and the receiving instruments when properly adjusted. So in our thinking. Our mental aerials determine what our bodies, our receiving instruments, record,—good or bad. If our mental aerial be one of hate, superstition, fear, worry, envy, lust, criticism, sin, discouragement, pride, greed, arrogance or any one of the myriad forms of evil thinking, then our re-

A Word of Warning

The Standard Oil Company [Indiana] feels in duty bound to warn its thousands of patrons in the Middle West to beware of "bootleg" gasoline.

Due to an overproduction of crude oil the market is flooded with unbranded gasoline sold at a cheap price. It is high at any price. It is neither uniform nor dependable.

When you buy gasoline you are buying transportation for yourself and your family. We suggest that you buy dependable transportation.

Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline will give you a maximum of power, flexibility and speed. It costs a few cents more per gallon but it "knocks out that knock".

Our famous economy fuel, Red Crown Gasoline will give you a maximum of power at a minimum of cost.

Both products are sold everywhere in the Middle West and everywhere the same—at a price which is fair, just and equitable, consistent with quality, uniformity and dependability.

ceiving instruments, our bodies and our lives, become subject to the many forms of evil which constantly lurk in the shadows of mortal ignorance, and these forms of evil are in turn recorded in discordant bodily conditions, such, for example, as sickness, disease, sorrow, sinful habits, poverty, misery and the like. But let our mental aerials be those of love, compassion, trust, tenderness, thanksgiving, charity, gratitude, humility, forgiveness, sweetness, and the like, then our lives are filled with the gentle influence of ever present divinity, hallowing our very experience and blessing us with health, happiness, freedom, peace, and plenty.

GOD'S UNIVERSE

Now, with our concept of God completely removed from the realm of materiality, what must be concluded as to His creation? What must be the natural subsequent to a spiritual antecedent? The answer is obvious. To dematerialize our sense of God, the Creator of all, means that we must dematerialize our sense of man and the universe, and that is exactly what Christian Science does. To assume that God, or Spirit, could be evidenced or reflected by matter or physically, by mortal man and a material universe, involvea the impossible. According to the true account of creation given in the first chapter of Genesis we find that man and the universe created spiritually and perfect, and so they must ever remain, as perfect and eternal as their Creator. Any other account of creation depicting man as material, sick, sinning, fallen, and dying is false and must ever remain so. The Bible, spiritually understood, is devoted to the task of drawing the distinction between the true creation and the false and material concept of creation. Now do not misunderstand this point. The Bible does not depict two creations. It points to the spiritual as the only true and permanent creation and instructs mankind how to proceed out of the bondage of a material misconception of things, into their freedom as children of God. The Bible, spiritually interpreted and rightly understood, does not teem with ambiguities, but contains a clear and concise method of escape from the bondage of man-made theories into our God-given freedom. God, or Spirit, never created a mortal man or a material universe, and hence the necessary contradiction between a science which revolves a knowledge of material things and a science which recognizes the material to be the unreal and the spiritual to be the true and the real.

THE MATERIAL UNIVERSE

But, some may say, how is one to believe that the material is untrue and unreal when the five physical senses bear constant evidence of the reality of matter? Do we not see, feel, taste, smell, and hear materially? True enough. In fact the only evidence we have of a material universe is through seeing, feeling, tasting, smelling, and hearing materially. That being settled, the question, then, of the reality of matter, or that which we see, feel, taste, smell, and hear, revolves around the trustworthiness of the five physical senses. Let us see how trustworthy and reliable these five physical sense are. All will agree that, whatever an omnipotent and eternal God has created must be everlasting and eternal, and not subject to change or the mutations of time. If God has created the five physical senses as mediums through which His universe is to be recognized, then these senses cannot be subject to any influence but that of God, and must be as permanent and unalterable as God himself. Just how unalterable and changeless are these senses? Why, they may be changed in almost an instant to bear opposite testimony to that which they are now bearing! They may even be obliterated entirely. For instance, place a man under a hypnotic spell, which is frequently done by those familiar with hypnotism, and the victim can be made to see, feel, taste, smell, and hear just the opposite to one not so influenced. It should be borne in mind that hypnotism is purely a mental process and involves nothing but the operation of the human mind, and yet it can be used to control the entire mechanism of the physical body. I have seen men under hypnotic influence do all sorts of things and think all sorts of things which a man in his right senses would not do or think.

To carry the illustration farther, if a man were placed under the influence of a drug or an opiate he may be made to see, feel, taste, smell, and hear nothing at all, in which case his physical senses have ceased to function entirely. Now, what has happened when one is placed under a hypnotic or soporific influence? Have his organs of seeing, feeling, tasting, smelling, and hearing been changed or altered in any way or in any particular? Not at all. He still has his eyes, his ears, his nose, his mouth, his nerves, his brain, and so forth; and yet, in the case of the drug, or the opiate, he can see, feel, taste, smell, and hear nothing whatever, and in the case of hypnotism he sees, feels, tastes, smells, and hears that which does not exist at all or that which the hypnotist wills him to see, feel, taste, smell, and hear. What has taken place? What has been changed? Why, simply the victim's thinking. In the one instance,—that of hypnotism,—one so-called mortal mind has been taken possession of by another so-called mortal mind and one person does the thinking for another, which shows conclusively that the mortal or human mind may be subject to any kind of misconception, maninulation, misuse, or abuse, and in the other case,—that of the drug,—the individual mortal mind has been completely silenced, showing that his human mind has not the permanency and trustworthiness of a creation of an omnipotent God, or eternal Mind. In the case of a surgical operation the patient is placed under the influence of an anesthetic to silence pain. Now, what does the anesthetic do to the patient to silence the pain? Why, it simply stops the patient's thinking. That's everything in the world it does. As soon as the influence of the anesthetic begins to wear off the patient begins to think, and as soon as he begins to think he begins to feel the pain, showing plainly enough that the pain is not in the body, or matter, but in the thinking or the human mind. All, then, that has to be done to prove the utter unreliability of the five physical senses, which furnish the only evidences of a material universe, is to change or silence mortal thinking. And is not this sufficient evidence that our material concept of creation, which is cognizable only through the five physical senses is evidently the product of mortal thinking or the mortal mind which St. Paul describes as the carnal mind, which he says "is enmity against God"? In the eighth chapter of the book of Romans this entire subject is handled in a most conclusive manner where it is written: "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded (to think materially) is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But," it goes on to say, "ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you."

Then a little farther along in the same epistle is this: "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live."

In this last sentence Paul gives the full and adequate remedy for this entire material dilemma. He says plainly enough, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die." That is, if we believe in the reality of a material universe evidenced by the flesh or the five physical senses, we are then subject to all of the so-called laws of materiality which ultimate in sin, sickness, and death. "But," he says, "if ye through the Spirit (through the understanding of God and Spirit and man and the universe as spiritual) do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." What are the deeds of the body? Why, seeing, feeling, tasting, and hearing materially.

In the clear light of Scriptural authority and of Paul's concise statement that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God," why waste valuable time in speculating on the so-called theory of material evolution or in the attempt to prove or to disprove that this mortal man, this so-called man of flesh and blood and bones, had his origin in the jungles of darkest Africa with an ape, a baboon, or a monkey for his ancestors?

Whatever our material antecedents may have been, the question as to the identity of the progenitors of mortals loses all of its importance in the light of Jesus' most pointed statement, when, referring to this mortal or fleshy man, he said: "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it."

PRAYER

It must be perfectly evident that if the material sense of the universe is the product of the carnal or mortal mind then its concomitants, such, for example, as sin, sickness, poverty, sorrow, and death, must be the product of that same mind. And it must be equally clear that as fast as we can cast off this carnal mind which brings us all these woeful conditions and in place thereof put on the mind of the Lord, we, in a corresponding degree, come into our birthright of freedom as the children of the eternal Mind, or God. As we have it in Romans: "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." Which St. Paul states again in a somewhat different manner in II Corinthians, where he writes: "Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord. . . . We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." The process, then, of putting off this old man with his deeds, this man of flesh and blood and bones, this carnal man, and of putting on the new man, or man of God's creating, is one entirely of mental transformation, and the process of mental transformation is accomplished only through prayer. With St. Paul, the Christian Science recognizes that prayer without ceasing is the only avenue of escape from the ills of mortality, and that the harmony of true existence becomes an abiding reality with us in proportion to the time spent in prayer. Praying without ceasing does not mean a never ending period of supplication to a distant, unknown deity; it means, rather, the constant purification of thought wherever we are and whatever our task may be, to the end that we may ever have before us the image of the true and spiritual. It means that our gaze must so constantly rest on God and His creation that that which is not of God will cease to have an influence in our thinking and living.

In "Miscellaneous Writings," page 185, Mrs. Eddy tersely puts the situation thus: "Self-renunciation of all that constitutes a so-called material man, and the acknowledgment and achievement of his spiritual identity as the child of God, is Science that opens the very flood-gates of heaven; whence good flows into every avenue of being, cleansing mortals of all uncleanness, destroying all suffering, and demonstrating the true image and likeness. There is no other way under heaven whereby we can be saved, and man be clothed with might, majesty, and immortality."

MIRACLES OF JESUS NATURAL

It was from this basis, and this basis alone, that Jesus proceeded to prove to a skeptical world that all so-called science based on matter or the testimony of the five physical senses is not an eternal science, with the result that there is not a single so-called law of physical, or material, science that Jesus did not prove utterly powerless and void in the presence of a clear understanding of God and man created in His image and likeness. No so-called law of physical science was employed by Jesus when he turned the water into wine at the wedding feast, when he walked the waves, when he fed the thousands in the wilderness with five loaves of barley bread and two small fishes, when he instantaneously transported the ship across the Sea of Galilee, when he passed through closed doors, and when he healed the sick; but, to the contrary, every so-called law of physical science was thereby broken completely. And in his work of overcoming all phases of mortal existence Jesus finally proved that death is not an open sesame to the kingdom of heaven, but that heaven is attained in exact proportion to our spiritual or mental regeneration.

DEATH AND HEAVEN

Just where the fallacy ever arose which would induce one to believe that death and heaven have anything in common I do not know. Most certainly not in the Bible. Throughout the Bible death is a concomitant of sin rather than an outcome of righteousness. Sin is most clearly pointed to as a key to death. Then why, in the light of everything Scriptural, assume that death can ever get us any nearer heaven than we are right now? In the book of Proverbs it is written: "In the way of righteousness is life; and in the pathway thereof there is no death." And Jesus said: "If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death."

Therefore if we are living in a righteous manner,—thinking rightly,—we are defeating death, are we not? And if death is a stepping-stone to heaven,—and that is what the world has been taught these many centuries,—then we are keeping ourselves out of heaven by righteous living. If the righteous man can never experience death, as we are told in Proverbs, then something is radically wrong in the teachings of a theology which declares that we go to heaven when we die. If we go to heaven when we die, then, according to the Scriptures, the righteous man can never go to heaven because he can never see death. Jesus called death an enemy and St. Paul tells us that "the wages of sin is death." If sin leads to death, as the Bible tells us, and death is an open door to heaven, as the theologians tell us, sin, then, is the key to the kingdom of heaven. If heaven is a desirable ultimate, and we all admit that it is, and death leads us into heaven, as we have been so long time taught, was not Jesus defeating the very ends for which he came, among us when he brought Lazarus back from the grave, when he raised from the bier the son of the widow of Nain, when he restored to life Jairus' daughter, and when he walked forth free from his own rock-bound tomb the third day after his crucifixion?

AN ILLUSTRATION

Thus we see how incompatible, from the standpoint of Holy Writ, are the teachings and practices of Jesus with those of so-called natural science or a science based upon matter as a reality or creation of God. Christian Scientists are rapidly learning the futility of endeavoring to work out one's salvation from the basis of both matter and Spirit, and are learning that absolute reliance on the teachings of Jesus is the only means of salvation from all the ills of the flesh. They are finding that

BIG SHORTAGE IN GRAIN CROPS

SILOS LIFE SAVERS FOR CORN THIS YEAR

Intelligent Feeding Will Be Required on Account of General Shortage in Crops

A marked shortage in the grain crops fed to farm animals is shown in a survey of feed situation just completed by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute of Chicago. This coming shortage of the grain prices Blue Valley predicts will call for the use of an intelligent feeding practices than are ordinarily used during average crop years. During the next twelve months he who feeds best will profit most. The outlook for corn is the worst feature in the situation. The acreage has been cut materially. Much of the planting was from two to four weeks late and the weather has been cool and a growth. The crop had a poorer start than in 1924, when only 2,309,000,000 bushels were produced. The best that can be expected this year is 2,200,000,000 bushels. That would be the smallest crop since 1901. Oats and barley are five to seven per cent under the ten year average, but about as good as last year. Cottonseed probably will be under last year's figure. Hay and pasture crops, however, are better.

In its summary of the feed crop situation of the country the institute points out the following salient features:

1. Grain crops promise to be smaller, especially corn.

2. Carryovers of grain are light.

3. The small cottonseed crop, higher prices for feed grains and stronger demand for mixed feed manufacturers probably will result in higher prices for protein feeds than last year.

4. Supplies of hay and other rough feeds may be ample.

5. The decline of 161,627,000 head of cattle and 500,000 horses on farms compared with a year ago will be counterbalanced by the increase of 481,000 hogs and 2,043,000 sheep. As hogs are great corn consumers, the shortage of this crop will be further accentuated.

The corn crop supplies as much sustenance for livestock as all other harvested crops combined. In the past five years production has averaged 2,767,000,000 bushels. The crop this year may fall 500,000,000 to 600,000,000 short of the average. This means a decrease of 15,000,000 to 17,000,000 tons of all concentrates compared with the consumption of all concentrates by the stock of close to 160,000,000 tons annually.

There are other factors which tend to put the price of feed grain higher in the next twelve months than they have been in the past year, according to the institute. Surveys show that stocks of old corn on farms are much smaller than last year, especially in the usual surplus states. The visible supply which reached record proportions in the winter have been greatly reduced. The new crop situation is the worst in the sections which sell most of the corn entering commerce.

Fortunately for the dairy farmers, there should be enough corn in most sections to fill the silos, and according to the institute's experts, this is the most effective utilization of the crop and should be used to capacity.

One way to overcome the shortage of feed supplies, says the institute, is to dispose of the "star boarders," the non-producing animals on the farm.

Dairymen and stock growers who use better feeding methods within the next 12 months need have no worry about net profits, but the farmers who feed just any old way will likely find the higher feed costs cutting down their profits over a year ago.

AT THE MOVIES

Billie Dove is Glorification of Womanhood

Decidedly not a flapper, not a "clinging vine," but that screen rarity a young but mature and benutiful woman—that is the distinctive personality which is brought to the screen by Billie Dove, First National's new star, whose latest picture, "The Stolen Bride," is coming to the Palace Theatre Saturday and Sunday for an engagement of two days.

Don't Miss "Stark Love!"

His girl the newly wed wife of his father! That's one of the dramatic situations found in "Stark Love," Karl Brown's thrilling tale of life in the Great Smoky Mountains. There, hundreds of miles from what we call civilization, when one woman dies, another is immediately needed to step into her place. The working of the farm and raising of children can not stop and no man will stoop to do such menial labor. Man is master and woman the slave!—Palace Theatre, Thursday and Friday.

Zane Grey's "Drums of The Desert" Well Done

In "Drums of the Desert," Paramount's screen adaptation of Zane Grey's "Desert Bound" which comes to the Majestic Theatre next Saturday and Sunday for a two day's engagement, is again told the story of the Navajo Indians that so dominated that earlier Zane Grey production "The Vanishing American."

Night Clubs and Night Life Seen in "London"

See "London" when it arrives at the Majestic Theatre Wednesday and Thursday. Dorothy Gish enacts the limehouse slavey as only Dorothy can. Herbert Wilcox, the man who made "Nell Gwyn," directed. British National Pictures, Ltd., are the producers. Paramount is releasing "London," on the side of the Atlantic.

"The Rough Riders" Was An "Exclusive Regiment"

All types are seen in Paramount's Dramatization of "The Rough Riders" written for the screen by Hermann Hagedorn, biographer for Roosevelt, and directed by Victor Fleming. The picture, made under associate Paramount Producer B. P. Schulberg's supervision, comes to the Palace Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with a cast including Mary Astor, Charles Farrell, Charles Emmett Mack, Noah Berry, George Bancroft, Frank Hopper as Roosevelt, Col. Fred Lindsay as Leonard Wood and Fred Kohler.

Woman," "The Grizzly King," "Baree, Son of Kazan," "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," "A Gentleman of Courage," and "The Ancient Highway."

Often Impetuous

In private life Curwood was inclined to act impetuously upon his conviction that he was right. In 1926 he abruptly resigned as a director of the Izaak Walton League of America "because of the dishonorable deposement of Bill Dilg at the Chicago convention." Dilg was president of the organization.

Curwood once threw the state conservation commission meeting into an uproar by openly charging his colleagues with appearing to place more credence in "the word of a bootlegger" than in his own, and said, "If that is to be so, it is time for this commission to resign and let some real men do the work."

The incident occurred at the height of Curwood's fight to induce the commission to curtail the hunting season on four types of wild life, including spikehorned deer. The commission unanimously adopted all but the spikehorned proposal, which held over until a later meeting with every indication a majority of the members would vote for it.

Curwood was descended from an Indian princess on his mother's side of the family and through his father he was related to Capt. Frederick Marryat, British sea novelist of the early nineteenth century. He was married and had two daughters and a son.

HAGENBECK-WALLACE CIRCUS AT PETOSKEY

Hagenbeck-Wallace Big Wild Animal Show to Be There August 27

Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus, proclaimed as the foremost trained wild animal show of the universe, will shortly be in our midst. Billers have finished their work in this territory and bright and highly colored posters tell of the coming of Hagenbeck-Wallace to Petoskey on August 22nd.

Many new innovations have been created by Hagenbeck-Wallace for the 1927 tour. "The Geisha" said to be the grentest musical spectacle ever produced will open the exhibition, while "Blazing Glory" a patriotic presentation will bring the program to a close. Several hundred characters in "The Geisha" and the wardrobe and costuming is said to be the most pretentious of any circus spectacle.

The Hagenbeck standard in trained wild animal numbers has also been maintained and such noted subjugators as Clyde Beatty, Capt. Bernard and Bob MacPherson will send their jungle charges through sensational routines in the big steel arenas. In addition to the wild animal groups, there will be displays of domestic beasts. Several groups of Liberty Horses will appear in the rings, while the hippodrome track will be the scene of a horse show, second to none. Forty singing girls and forty prancing steeds appear in one display.

Other noted features include the Orrin Davenport Family of Equestrians, the Ward-Kimball Troupe of Flyers and Cheerful Gardner and the original Hagenbeck elephants. Plenty of clowns, to be exact fifty, will work all during the performances, which starts promptly at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m. The double menagerie includes specimens from all portions of the globe, including fifty valuable giraffes.

any attempt to mix the medicine of Mind, or God, in other words, the Science of Christianity, with the nostrums of matter, or material science, will avail nothing. To compromise the truth to satisfy fear or custom will prove disastrous. A case in point came to my attention some little time ago. A lady aged seventy-five or thereabouts was suffering with what physicians had diagnosed to be heart trouble. She had been under this sentence for some years and was rapidly growing worse. Finally she had to be taken to a sanatorium where she could be given the attention and nursing her case required. She was gradually failing and on several occasions it seemed as though the end had come. She was under the constant care of a physician, until finally the situation arrived at that stage where it seemed that nothing further could be done through material means. The doctor advised the nurse that nothing he did would help matters, and that all that remained to be done was to keep the patient as comfortable as possible until the end. At this point the patient decided to try Christian Science, and at her request treatments in Christian Science were began. At first she improved quite perceptibly. Then she lapsed back into her previous condition of helplessness. Then she improved again, and again slipped back. This condition of improvement and relapse continued for some time when she decided to go back to her doctor, saying she had given Christian Science a trial and was afraid to stick to it any longer. Her physician was again called, but he could do nothing for her. She grew rapidly worse. Finally, as a last resort, other physicians were consulted, but after due examination they pronounced the same sentence of incurability as the first one. They frankly and kindly stated there was nothing they could possibly offer of assistance, and she was given up. Then, virtually, at the brink of her grave, this lady again called for Christian Science treatment. She said she was convinced that nothing offered any hope unless it might be Christian Science, and in asking for treatment the second time said she had a slight confession to make. She then related to the practitioner that while she was under Christian Science treatment the first time, with the aid of the nurse, she had secretly kept on hand a little bottle of heart stimulant the doctor had left her, and that whenever she became fearful of a severe attack she would take a dose of this medicine to help out the practitioner. Now she said she was ready to give Christian Science a fair trial and would resort to nothing material to assist her; she would rely solely on Christian Science, which she did. This was in the early part of the week, Monday or Tuesday, I believe. The work was begun and on Friday or Saturday of that same week this old lady who had been an invalid for years, in her bed most of the time, and had been given up to die by several physicians, walked several blocks to a business section of the city. She completely recovered from that condition and has never had a return of it.

Now, that healing, in itself, is no more wonderful than those which are taking place every day in every part of our land under Christian Science treatment, but it shows how purely mental the entire question of healing is, and how righteously exacting are the laws of God. It illustrates how absolute reliance on the one Father will win where a wavering, dishonest, halfway position will ultimate in disaster. Truly, in the words of the Master, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."—Spirit and matter.

CONCLUSION

The pure simplicity of Jesus' life, his loving kindness, his tender compassion and forgiveness, furnish us the foundation upon which to build our own superstructure of spirituality, health, happiness, and prosperity. In learning to love, to forgive and to forget, as did Jesus, lies the secret of success. There is not a single inharmonious condition, physical, moral or financial, that has not its immediate remedy in the teachings of the Master, and a right and happy solution of all our difficulties is ever knocking at our door. The humility, the meekness, and the unselfed love of the mighty Jesus—this man who overcame every material law known to mankind, this man who held the wind in his grasp and the waves in the palm of his hand, this man who could have escaped the part he played in the tragedy on Calvary, this man whose power of spiritual understanding could roll away the stone of materialism from the door of the tomb of mortality—should put to shame the arrogance and egotism of him who thinks to succeed without the Christ.

My friends, I cannot ask more of your time. There is so much to say about Christian Science, so much of good, so much that makes for true joy and rest and peace that one short hour is all too brief to unfold the riches of this treasure-chest of Spirit. Certain it is that God never made you sick, or sinful, or unhappy, or poverty-stricken, and just as certainly will God make you well and pure and happy as successful if you will only let Him.

Mrs. Eddy, through her great discovery of Christian Science, given to the world in her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," has unlocked for us the secret of spiritual law contained in the Bible and especially in the teachings and works of Jesus the Christ, so that, instead of being a book of mystery, the Bible has become a chart of life and peace and hope and happiness,—a chart by which mortals may guide their frail crafts away from the shoals and rocks of sin, sickness, poverty, and death into the quiet waters of Spirit, where sin and evil have no abiding haven, and God's goodness reigns supreme.

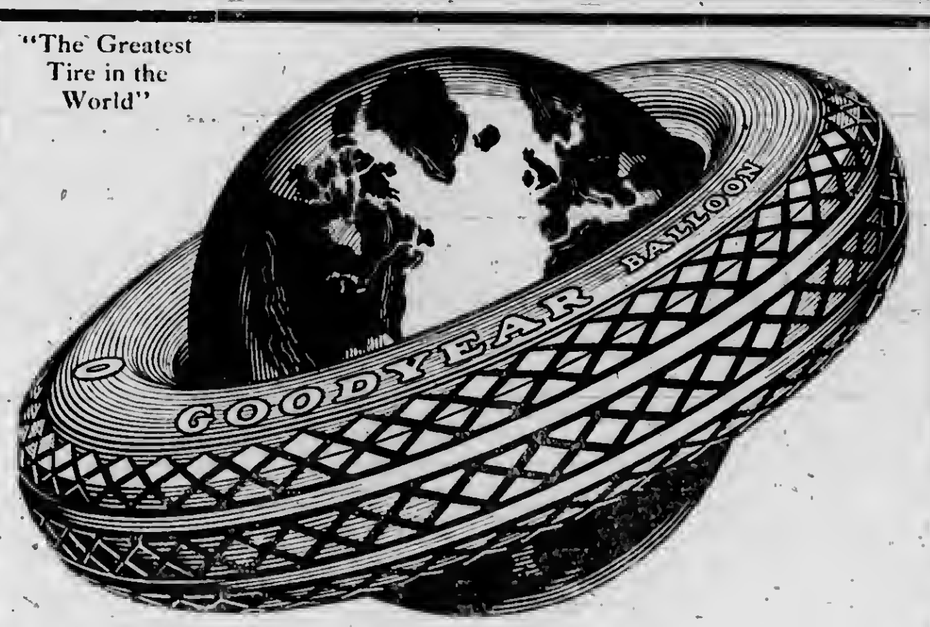
"The Greatest Tire in the World"



All that, and then some!

When Goodyear announced "The Greatest Tire in the World" we sat up and took notice.

Knowing Goodyear, that seemed to us a pretty sensational statement for such a solid, long-established company.

Now that we've seen the tire, tested it, and tried in vain to find something the matter with it, we add our bit to Goodyear's statement:

It's the most wonderfully designed and built tire we have ever seen. It's everything Goodyear said, and then some!

You ought to catch up on tire news. Get the 1927 story. Come in and see just how a new specially-designed tread, and the Goodyear Supertwist casing, brings a new day in balloon tire performance.

NUMEROUS FIRES KEEP DEPARTMENT ON JUMP

Edward Olach Loses Cow and Car When Barn Is Destroyed

Five fires over the week end kept local fire fighters quite busy during that period of time. Not any of the blazes resulted in heavy damage, although had it not been for quick response and effective work on the part of the department, any one of them might have been more serious.

Just before noon Saturday a small blaze was extinguished in the repair room at the rear of O'Neil's taxi line building. The damage was slight.

A fire of undetermined origin at the Blue Bell cottage owned by G. E. Hollingsworth of the Belvedere Club, called the fire lads out again Sunday shortly after noon. Only chemical was used to extinguish the blaze and no material damage resulted.

Ed. Olack's barn, together with its contents, was destroyed by fire Monday evening. It is not known how the blaze started and it had gained such headway before the department arrived that nothing could be saved. A number of pigs in the barn were driven to safety. Olach lost a valuable cow and a second hand automobile he had recently purchased.

Fire presumably starting from defective wiring at the Paddock cottage on Michigan avenue, entailed quite a heavy loss Monday. Partitions were burned through on the third floor and a section of the roof was also destroyed. The fire department was forced to use water to extinguish the blaze and the loss was subsequently heavier to furnishings in the cottage.

WAREHOUSE BURNS WITH HEAVY LOSS

Hankey Milling Co's. Mancelona Plant is Ruined

The warehouse belonging to the Hankey Milling Co. and located just south of the Mancelona marketing Association's warehouse was destroyed by fire at 1 o'clock Monday morning.

Fire was discovered in the warehouse Saturday afternoon and was flooded out. The fire was in a quantity of straw—maybe two bales in all—and was thought to have been set unintentionally by boys smoking cigarettes. There was about 100 grain doors for box cars stored in the warehouse, and a little crating and similar material.

A little fire in the straw was found about supper time Saturday but nothing further was noted until the building was discovered in flames about 12:30 Monday morning.

The warehouse was built by Bert Gifford for a crate factory a number of years ago and was acquired by the Hankey Milling Co. six or seven years ago. For a couple of years it has been used very little.

The crew of the southbound passenger train pulled out a string of box cars and gondolas on the siding alongside the warehouse, but they were of steel structure and had sustained little damage.—Mancelona Herald.

STATE FERRY REVENUES ARE ON INCREASE

July Shows Increase of Approximately 35 Per Cent

An increase of approximately 35 per cent in the revenue from the state ferries at Mackinac through the month of June, 1927, as compared with the same period in 1926 is the report by the state highway department. This means a proportionate increase in the number of tourists entering the upper peninsula. For the season until July 1, 1926, the revenue was $24,738. For the same period this year the revenue totalled $38,153.25. There was a large increase in June traffic. In June, 1926, the revenue was $17,568.50. In June, 1927, it was $24,062.25.

POULTRY FACTS

HEN EGGS STAND HEAVY PRESSURE

That an ordinary hen's egg will stand heavy pressure was proved in an exhibit which the poultry department at the College of Agriculture at Ithaca displayed at the New York state fair.

A 16-pound steel sledge hammer was arranged so that it came down on the egg once a minute, being raised and lowered automatically. The egg was placed on a scale which registered the pressure; extra weight was applied and the egg stood the weight of 23 pounds, or all that the scales would register. A special trial was made when still more weight was applied on the handle of the sledge, and it is estimated that the egg stood more than 30 pounds pressure before it broke.

The purpose of the demonstration was to show the pressure that an ordinary egg would stand, and to show why it was desirable to produce eggs with strong shells. Strong shelled eggs ship best, and evaporate least; this prolongs their freshness, and pleases the consumer, because a greater proportion of them reach the market in good condition.

"This is the first time such an arrangement has been used to demonstrate the strength of the shells of hen eggs," according to C. K. Powell, in charge of the exhibit. "Usually, the breaking strength has been tested by pressing the eggs between two hardwood blocks."

Breaking strength of eggs indicates, to some extent, breeding and feeding of the hens. Minerals must make up a part of the ration, and, in this connection, it is said that cod liver oil aids in the assimilation of the minerals by the birds.

Tobacco Dust Useful to Destroy Worms in Flock

Placing 2 per cent of tobacco dust in the mash is a common remedy for removing worms from poultry. Then once each week give epsom salts to the flock at the rate of a pound per hundred birds. The salts can be given in the drinking water or in the amount of wet mash that the flock will eat quickly, allowing as even a distribution of the medicine as possible.

Some poultrymen are using the commercial worm capsules with good success, as it insures every bird receiving the proper share. Keep the droppings removed from the houses, and distribute them as far as possible from the poultry houses and range. This helps to keep down the infestation of worms.

Laying Hens Need Good, Palatable Grain Mash

A good mash should be fed to laying hens, according to G. L. Stevenson, head of the department of poultry husbandry at South Dakota State college. The mash used at State college consists of one-fourth part of oilmeal to one part each of bran, middlings, tankage, ground oats and cornmeal when it is not too high. Ground barley is now being used in place of cornmeal. Two pounds of charcoal are also mixed with each 500 pounds of meal, and about one-half pound of salt is mixed per 100 pounds of meal. The salt makes the meal more palatable.

NO TIME TO QUIT

"Now is the time to 'hang on' says Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, in a survey on farm conditions in that district. To begin with, the survey revealed that farm property is moving, gaining momentum. "Whatever discouragements may have beset the farmer in the past, today is rich in its promises of crop prospects; in a stronger interest in land and improved farming and in the more hopeful viewpoint of the farmers themselves," says the report, adding the moral that "now is the time to hang on—that under no circumstances ought the farmer to surrender through failure to meet installments or interest payments when due."

LOEB FARMS WILL CEASE OPERATION

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE PUBLIC BY ERNEST G. LOEB

Disposition of Live Stock, Machinery and Property Will Be Made In Near Future

According to an announcement just made public, Charlevoix in all probabilities will lose what has been one of its chief show places for a oumber of yenrs past. The following letter received by the Courier from Ernest Loeb, manager of the Loeb Farms, covers the situation as it now stnnds:

"We have decided to cease operation of the farm this fall. Ernest G. Loeb, the present manager, is leaving Charlevoix this winter because of business in Chicago which will require his entire time and attention. Before he goes the complete herd of pure-bred Holstein cattle, Belgian horses, Duroc Jersey hogs and all of the farm machinery will he sold at public auction some time late in September or October. The dnte and details of this auction sale will be announced in this paper at a future date.

"The farm buildings and acreage is now for sale, including all the Loeb property except the houses of Mrs. A. H. Loeb and Ernest G. Loeb, which will be retained as summer homes. The Loeb family intends to sumnier in Charlevoix in the future the same as in the past."

This announcement comes as a considerable surprise to the Courier as well as Charlevoix citizens. The Loeb Farms have been an established institution in Charlevoix back to the year 1917, when construction work on the large house was begun. The barns were built in the next year, 1918, and each year since that time work has progressed to beautify the property. The fame and beauty of Loeb Fnrms has spread over the entire country during these years and it has been visited annually by thousands upon thousands of tourists. An extensive mail order business in farm products has been established and produce of various kinds has been shipped all over the country.

It is not known at this time in just what manner the property will

WE CAN'T HELP BUT AGREE WITH THIS EDITOR-MAYOR

The absence of proffessional beggars, posted around the city in front of business places sitting on the sidewalks and posted on prominent corners perhaps has been noticed of late and in explanation will say that the architect of these columns, who also haopens to be mayor of the city has long considered the city could well do without the presence of this class in our midst, and has criticized past city officials for permitting them to operate in our midst and in the manner in which they did. It would be inconsistent now that we are on the inside looking out to continue what we have all along believed to be a nuisance, therefore the chief of police nod his assistants was notified on Thursday to clear the streets of these alms solicitors and keep it cleaned hereafter, we don't feel that it contributes anything to the attractiveness of Main street to have it littered up with a miscellaneous collection of blind, maimed and unfortunate looking individuals all begging alms of passersby or selling some little jim cracks as an excuse to evade the begging laws. Besides those parties are none of them a product of our own community, but come here in annual pilgrimages to prey upon the sympathies of a soft hearted populace. It is very unfortunate to be as badly bungled up as some of these people appear to be but society provides for the care of all that cannot care for themselves and in most instances these people could find other means of support did not this plan being followed by them appear to be the most lucrative way.—Cheboygan Democrat.

Even a newspaper man has convictions and is not afraid to not only express them, but back them up. The mayor of Cheboygan is also the editor of that city's leading paper. We agree with him in regard to his stand against beggars. Charlevoix's streets have been lined with them all summer. Some of them get rather nasty if our good summer people do not contribute every time they pass his stand. We can well get along without them—and should.

JESSE SHAY WAS WELL KNOWN HERE

Boyne City Resident Died Suddenly Last Week

Jesse Shay, who has been suffering from heart trouble for a number of years, died very suddenly, Wednesday evening at his home in Water street.

Mr. Shay, who was born in Sebewa, Ionia county, in 1872, came to Boyne City when a lad of 10 years to make his home with his grandmother, Mrs. Davis.

He lived with her for many years on what is now the Wm. Deadman farm north of town, and attended the Boyne City school. In later years he engaged in business and had a store on Lake street. In 1908 he was united in marriage to Mrs. Dolly Smith. Two children were born to this union, a son Kin and a daughter Virginia.

Mr. Shay, who was 55 years old at the time of his death, had spent 45 years in Boyne and leaves many friends who were shocked to learn of his sudden death.—Boyne Citizen.

Mr. Shay was well known here.

FIRE DESTROYS FOUR LAUNCHES

ROWBOATS AND CANOES BURNED IN BELVEDERE BLAZE

Timely Work On Part of Department Probably Saved Many Surrounding Buildings

Six boat slips on the east wing of the Belvedere boat house were destroyed Tuesday evening at about 9:30 by a fire of undetermined origin, which for a time threatened the entire structure as well as nenrby cottages.

We understand that the fire was discovered by Ed. White of Boyne City, who is employed by Geo. R. Collett to run his launch. White, after turning in the alarm, ran to the boathouse with the intent of trying to save the boat. When he kicked the door open an explosion occurred which knocked him several feet and burned him badly about the hands and face. He is now at the Charlevoix hospital, where his condition is reported to be fair.

Slips belonging to the Birge, Bemis, Parmelee and Mathews families were destroyed. The losses represents a launch owned by Walter Smith of St. Louis; a rowboat belonging to the Riddle family; a rowboat and canoe owned by the Birge family; the Bemis rowboat and launch moored in their slip; a small launch and rowboat in the Parmelee slip beside the Geo. R. Collett launch; and a rowboat owned by Leonard Mathews, of St. Louis. No insurance was carried on the boathouse and we are not informed whether it was carried on any of the boats burned.

Splendid work on the part of the fire department saved the entire boathouse from destruction. The Belvedere hotel and all surrounding cottages, even up on the first terrace were showered with clouds of sparks. A small blaze starting from sparks were extinguished on the roof of the Moorehead cottage and careful vigilence was necessary for some time. It is understood that the boat houses will be rebuilt in the near future.

Particular attention of readers is invited to the conservation advertisement of the Michigan Press Association appearing in this issue of the Courier. During the past two years the Michigan Press Association has given much time and thought to the subject of conservation which is of vital importance to all people of the nation, and particularly to the residents of Michigan who desire to have the "Playground of the Nation" preserved for themselves and their posterity. Read the ad carefully, tell your friends about it and invite them to join you in observing the rules outlined to protect and preserve the beauties which nature has so bounteously bestowed upon us.

FRENCH BROKE COURSE RECORD

VISITING PROFESSIONAL SCORED 66 ON PAR 71 COURSE

Annual Caddy Excursion Looked Forward To As Event of Coming Week

A new record on the Charlevoix Golf Club course was established last Saturday, when Emmett French, the well known golf professional who has charge of the Southern Pines Country Club at Southern Pines, North Carolina, shot a 66 on the par 71 eighteen hole course.

Mr. French, who is a guest of A. I. Creamer, manager of The Inn, made his record score while playing a twosome with R. B. Wilkinson before a large gallery. His score on each nine was 33, bettering the course record of 68. He played the par 4 first hole in two and his brilliant game throughout the entire eighteen won hearty applause and admiration from the large gallery.

Negotiations are now under way to bring either Al Watrous or Walter Hagen, both well known professional golfers, to Charlevoix this week for exhibition matches on both the Belvedere and Charlevoix Golf Club courses.

The Charlevoix Golf Club is said to be this year in the best condition since it was built. James Gaskin, caretaker, deserves great credit for the fine condition in which he keeps the course. There were over two hundred players in one day last week and the average number per day has been up to the standard for the season. The Belvedere Golf course has also attracted a great many players, both local and visitors, and in another year will have no equal in Northern Michigan.

The annual caddy excursion, which each year is provided for the boys by players at the Charlevoix Golf Club, is an event of the coming week. The boys will leave Charlevoix at 6 o'clock Monday morning in automobiles for Mackinaw City. The forenoon will be spent in sports such as baseball, horse shoe pitching and other forms of amusement. It is planned to visit the former site of the old Fort at Mackinaw City after lunch and then the boys will either make a trip to Mackinac Island or St. Ignace aboard one of the ferries in the afternoon. They expect to return in the evening. Caddy Master Cleveland Roe will have charge of the outing.

HALF-TONE PLAT FINE BIT OF ARTISTIC WORK

Shows Beautiful Views of Boulder Park Addition

A center two-page spread in the last issue of the Northern Michigan Magazine is gaining considerable attention and is surely deserving of such.

The spread in question is a half-tone reproduction of sixteen beautiful views taken in Earl Young's Boulder Park addition, artistically arranged in groups around a center view of an entrance to Boulder Park entitled "Gateways to Summer Happiness." The plate speaks well for the creative genius and photographic ability of Mr. Young, who took the views and arranged the plate.

OBSERVED THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

MANY HONOR REV. AND MRS. HERMAN BURNS

Esteemed Couple Surrounded by Relatives and Friends Monday Evening

Dr. and Mrs. Herman Burns were married at Lockport, New York, August 22nd, 1877, and with their friends celebrated the 50th anniversary of the event at their home, 102 Hurlhut avenue, Charlevoix, on Monday evening.

Guests to the number of about 150 gathered and enjoyed a delightful social evening. Among them were two brothers, Newton Burns and wife from St. Louis, Michigan, one of the prominent residents of Gratiot county, and Elmer Burns of Madison, N. J., a few miles from New York City. This latter brother is an engineer with national experience and the reunion of these three brothers was the occasion of many reminiscent stories of experiences in Mexico, Cuba, Alaska, Vancouver, British Columbia, and in the mining sections of our western country.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Gilbert of Detroit, and Mrs. H. M. Burns and daughters of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Barker, connected with the Detroit Free Press, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Prescott of Detroit, Rev. and Mrs. Geo. H. Waid, secretary of Michigan Baptist state convention, Rev. Chas. E. Ehle of the Lord's Day Alliance, Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Leisman of Gaylord, Michigan, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Porter of Williamston, Mich., and others whose names and addresses we did not get were present.

Congratulations and felicitations were extended by Rev. Leisman, Rev. Dr. Ehle, Mr. Saltonstall, Mr. Black, Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Ingalls, Mr. Barker, Anthony Clark, Miss Alice Chew and Galo Chew. Songs were sung by Newton Burns, Harker Kirby and the Barnard quartette. The Ladies Aid of the Baptist church served one of their usual happy way.

The mails and wires were busy bring congratulations and good wishes from a host of friends over the country, who have known and learned to appreciate this esteemed couple. Though the announcement said "no presents" their friends remembered them with a very fine radio set, many other pretty gifts and about $150 in gold coin.

The house was beautifully and profusely decorated with golden colored flowers. The occasion was thoroughly enjoyed by all present and the wish of all was that Mr. and Mrs. Burns might be spared to enjoy a Diamond wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Burns have gone to enjoy a "wedding trip" of a few weeks in the southern part of the state among their many friends.

Norwood Resorter Dead

Mrs. Lafayette Brown of Keokuk, Iowa, died at the Norwood summer home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. E. Wright of Chicago, Tuesday. With her at the time of death were Mrs. Wright and her other daughter, Miss Eleanor Brown of Keokuk. The passing of Mrs. Brown was wholly unexpected and came as a shock to her family and others who knew her. The body was shipped to her home Wednesday afternoon.

ANNUAL MASQUERADE SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR

Nearly Thousand Dollars Raised For Belvedere Golf Club

The annual masquerade ball sponsored by the entertainment committee of the Belvedere Club at the casino last Saturday evening, was a very decided success from both a financial and entertainment standpoint.

The casino was crowded with merrymakers. Many costly cleverly originnl and beautiful costumes were worn. Music by the combined Belvedere and Harbor Point orchestras was of high quality and in keeping with the general atmosphere of the affair. Beautiful decorations were rampant and the general march led by Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford and Mr. and Mrs. Sol. Tramel was a feature of the evening. A large group from the Chicago Club caused much merriment and applause when they appeared at the casino in convict costumes and chain gang style.

Between nine hundred and a thousand dollars was raised for the benefit of the Belvedere Golf Club.

INDIAN PICNIC GREAT SUCCESS

ESTIMATED 5,000 PEOPLE ATTENDED DURING EVENT

Troup of Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus Indians Took Part In Sunday Program

A very successful event of the past week was the second annual picnic of the Ottawa and Chippewa Association of Michigan, held at the Charlevoix auto camp August 18 to 21.

Indians from over the entire state of Michigan were present for the festivities and large crowds were present each afternoon and evening to witness the dances and ceremonies which we now associate with Indians of school-book histories. War dance and costume dances—evidences—of the persistent barbaric traditions that civilization has been unable to efface, were given. It was interesting to observe how the technique of these ceremonies, which are now only seen through the medium of circuses, rodeos and wild west shows, have been reserved by these people, who are anything but "show" Indians.

Of great interest was the Indian christening and the giving of names to those whites who desired. Other interesting features were the medicine dance, Indian songs, exhibitions of handicraft work, ceremony dance, dialogues, etc.

A fine program was given at The Inn casino on Friday evening of last week and another Sunday evening. At the Sunday evening's entertainment a group of Souix Indian actors traveling with Hagenbeck-Wallace circus which showed in Petoskey Monday, joined in the program. Their costumes were probably the finest display of Indian rainment ever seen in Charlevoix, and their presence added considerably to the interest of both the entertainment at The Inn Sunday evening and at the camp grounds Sunday afternoon. This same group of Souix Indians showed before President Coolidge in Dakota during the summer.

Officers of the association are: Pres., Joe Foster Otto, Petoskey; vice-pres., Wm. A. Shomin, Charlevoix; clerk, Frank Greenleaf, Petoskey; treas., Christine Otto, Petoskey. Peter Walker as chairman of the Charlevoix district. The 1927 election will be held at Petoskey next month.

MICHIGAN PARKS IDEAL FOR SUMMER OUTING

Estimated That Over Four Million People Will Visit Them During 1927

An interesting story of the efforts being made to provide suitable recreation places where our citizens can spend a part of their vacation period each year, is told by P. J. Hoffmaster, superintendent of state parks in Michigan. Lake frontage in Michigan is rapidly passing into private ownership, and but for the far-sighted vision of the Department of Conservation the time would shortly arrive when the great mass of our citizenship would be denied this most pleasant part of the entire year. Here is an interesting story by Mr. Hoffmaster of the great work that is being accomplished in preserving for the people this valuable heritage:

"Were it possible for all of us to enjoy the privileges of our lakes, streams and forests only through our actual private ownership of certain lands, many of us would be disheartened and justly so. To own and maintain a summer place in connection with a ten-month-of-the-year home is quite impossible for a large majority of us. Such an arrangement like the ownership of an automobile ten years ago constitutes luxury. But unlike the automobile of today and especially ten years and more hence the owning of a cottage on the lake is not financially possible for the majority of our citizens. Quite naturally as population increases, this majority will increase for lake frontage is limited. Though we have several thousand miles for example, its manufacture like Fords or Whippets is impossible.

"In order that the public be not shut out from our lakes and streams, state parks are being established. Fifty-seven sites have already been established, 48 of which are now available to visitors. Of the present total 21 of the sites are on Great Lakes, 28 on inland lakes and rivers. Only eight do not have surface water privileges. Mindful of the desirability of our lakes for recreation purposes and the rapidity by which the public is being excluded, our state parks are considered of great importance. Besides the sites already established, effort is being made to swell the above number with several more sites of highest quality.

"The first records of persons using the parks were kept for the summer 1923. For that season some 220,000 people visited the parks open—at the time 23 in number. Total attendance for last season (1926) was upwards of 3½ millions of which there were more than 105,000 campers. These campers consisted of all races—men, women and children in the parks for a night or longer. Persons desiring to camp are permitted to do so free of charge in any of the parks opened, for any desired length of time up to two weeks. At the end of this period, camps must be moved and a new permit obtained. Other rules and regulations governing the parks are posted therein.

"The improvements made and features provided for in our parks are I feel rather current information. But briefly, they provide for camping privileges. Where possible swimming and boating are provided for. Picnicing seems to be a mainstay in social centers. More and more parks are being used for this. Hiking and nature study are two excellent means of enjoyment that can be carried on in these parks. In the larger ones, bridal paths beneath the extended beech and soaring pines are proving popular. Horseshoe pitching, baseball, tennis, children's playgrounds—all are now being enjoyed in certain of the parks and without dismay to the participants. "Private property" and "No Trespassing" signs are fast driving the people to the publicly owned areas.

"Some singular forms of enjoyment are also realized in certain of our parks. The sand dunes for example—along Lake Michigan and the west coast of our southern peninsula are a string of these and sand mountains some 350 miles long. There are intermittent brakes—clean as the snow—drifting, here and there covering the releasing woods. Immediately at hand for bathing and fresh cool breezes is Lake Michigan.

"Should you desire to intimately acquaint yourself with these dunes visit the Van Buren, Muskegon, Silver Lake and D. H. Day State Parks. Other sites of our most typical dunes are now being acquired.

"A less formidable but quite as unique and complete series of dunes can be visited in the P. H. Hoeft State Park. In the making of, these not a single ridge, valley or gup was omitted. Neither were any of the trees, plants or shrubs omitted. So with this completeness and their being less difficult to climb, these east shore dunes are enjoyed quite as much as those of the west coast. For children and women they are even more enjoyable. Here too is a great lake—Huron—for various refreshments.

"At other places along these lakes are sites with less pronounced contours. The foliage and shade is quite as thick and the turf usually more frequent than in the dunes. But the one feature that prevails in all the parks on the Great Lakes is a broad expanse of sand beach. This with the never failing exhilarating breezes will justify the participant's trip of consideruble mileage most any time but surely in the heat of summer.

"Fort Wilkins, bordering on Copper Harbor (Lake Superior) and Lake Fanny Hoe is in a cluss by itself. Hero is a site almost on the tip end of the Keweenaw peninsula. Keweennw peninsula extends from the main peninsula some 35 miles out and into the lake of lakes—Superior. This in itself is unique, for without going to the Isle Royal some 55 miles off main land one connot possibly occupy a point more advantageous for the enjoyment of this great lake and her peculiar atmosphere. The 35 mile drive from Calumet is also a revelation,—mine shafts, abandoned mines, streams, spruce covered valleys, hills and rock cliffs together with a most entrancingly curved road. Those conditions accompany you to the Fort. There you are again charmed by this old gem of history surrounded by a romantic environment. These prevalent features force the writer to put this site in the Fort Wilkins State Park class.

"For boating and fishing our inland lakes and streams offer more opportunities. Their depths are shallower and waves less treacherous. So with their more restricted boundaries they are less ferocious in time of storms. While the gamer fishes are caught from both our inland and Great Lakes, the latter do not carry the numerous fishermen for sport and enjoyment as do our inland lakes and streams. As was previously atated, 28 different state park sites make many of these bodies of water accesalble to the public.

"The Indian lore in Michigan is not by any means extinct. Much that should have been preserved was destroyed, but there are still mounds, trails, burial grounds, orchards, gardens, relics to jog your curiosity. In the Onaway park several of these features are yet conspicious and being in the park will be preserved. In the J. W. Wells site their garden beds are decidedly plain. The P. H. Hoeft state park has part of a trail established by the Americans. Scattered about the state— a few in our parks—are numerous such signs as will serve balm for the curious and relic collectors.

"Civilization in its onward sweep has taken a heavy toll of the wonders that nature placed here for man. Virgin forests have been hewn down and roaring falls have been harnessed, all to make way for the vast industrial system that supports our present day society. This system in time has created leisure for man the worker and now he is looking back to soothing nature for recreation and enjoyment. Nutural beauty has been preserved for him in the great system of state parks in Michigan, they offer an inviting refuge from the clang und clatter of the industrial city, they offer rest to run down nerves—truly they are places of enjoyment."

RED CROWN ETHYL GASOLINE

THERE is an overproduction of crude oil. This has encouraged the opening of numerous small refineries. Many of these are operated by men unskilled in this work. The consequence is that in gasolines there is a wide variance in quality and performance.

Red Crown Ethyl is a new gasoline built upon an old, established brand. Red Crown Gasoline is the peer of any motor fuel made from pure petroleum. By adding Ethyl anti-knock compound to this splendid fuel, Red Crown Ethyl is produced.

Red Crown Ethyl does away with that annoying knock—the engine delivers a steady, smooth, flexible flow of power—it gives the car a snappy start, a quick pick-up, and enables it to attain any speed the machine is capable of developing.

It has made the high-compression engine possible—and it makes your engine perform better.

Take no chances with your car—fuel it with Red Crown Ethyl. The brand is your protection.

Remember carbon in your cylinders decreases the space in the firing chamber, and of course increases the compression. But to hold this compression, thus enabling the carbon to work for you, be sure that your valves are clean and are seated properly—then Red Crown Ethyl will sing you a song that will delight.

WHY A SPEED LIMIT?

We were never quite sure that entirely wiping out the speed limit for automobiles was good sense. It savors of a liberty that encourages recklessness if not lawnessness. With everyone else we understand that the law has not been observed, yet it was there, sort of a legal gesture, at least suggesting caution. No law can add or subtract from the mental capacity of the driver which fact somewhat supports the position that speed laws are of no special protection in these days of highway self preservation; each passenger for himself. If some plan could be devised to protect the innocent from fool drivers it might help but the difference between thirty-five and forty miles an hour will not be noticed unless the undertaker has some sort of a gauge that will register the heart beats of the deceased during his last few seconds before he was hurled over the fence into Kingdom come. Go to it, the mere matter of getting killed should not be surrounded by too much legal red tape. If we had had any part in wiping out this protection we would have provided for club rates for Sunday calls by undertakers. The repeal has all the ear marks of class legislation and yet the Ishpeming Iron Ore with fine courage declares:

"Itis a very good law, but is not intended to permit reckless driving, particularly at a high rate of speed. There will be just as much need for sane driving as before and the road officers have more authority than ever. They will be the judges of the manner in which cars are driven. So, drive carefully, keep well to the right, make wide left-hand turns, slow down in going around curves, and obey the city ordinances in the towns. It will also be wise to keep well insured because the moonshine-loaded driver is numerous on the highways."

CHARLEVOIX LOST CLOSE GAME SUNDAY

Return Game Here Next Sunday Will Be a Fast One

Going into the ninth inning with a lead of three runs, Charlevoix was overtaken and beaten by Petoskey last Sunday, 6 to 5.

Two bad decisions by the umpire were made, so instead of two out and no men on, Petoskey had men on first and second and nobody out. A walk, two hits and an error by Knight did the rest. With all due credit to Petoskey, Charlevoix was certainly "gyped" out of the ball game.

Vern Zimmerman pitching for Charlevoix had a big edge on his uncle, who was pitching for Petoskey, and should have won the game hands down. Grigsby was the batting star for Charlevoix, gathering a double and triple in three trips to the plate. "Pete" Hallett played errorless ball at second and collected one hit.

Charlevoix plays another game with Petoskey on Sunday, August 28th, at the North Side park. A good umpire will be secured and Charlevoix will make every effort to prove which is the better team.

INDIAN PICTURES NOW ON DISPLAY

Collection a Credit to Owner, Mr. L. Winternitz

About as fine an exhibition of Indian pictures as one will ever see is now on display in the windows of the Central Drug Store. They are the work of our well known summer visitor, L. Winternitz, who calls Charlevoix his summer home and spends his winters at some southern point.

A greater portion of the exhibit is of the Seminole tribe, and were taken in Florida. Some local views are also shown, just a part of the large collection Mr. Winternitz has taken.

The collection on exhibition, are duplicates of those presented by Mr. Winternitz to the Field Museum of Chicago, the state museum at Gainsville, Florida, and the museum for Indians of America in New York He also presented a number of these pictures to the late President Harding.

Mr. Winternitz is an expert with the camera, and he has greatly assisted the Charlevoix Association of Commerce in the production of its numerous folders, advertising the beauties of Charlevoix.

Tides in Inland Seas

There are tides in both the Mediterranean sea and the Gulf of Mexico. In the Mediterranean they are so slight as to be almost imperceptible; in the Gulf of Mexico they run from two and a half to four feet. A delta is an alluvial plain formed by a deposit of sand and mud carried down a river. As the stream enters quieter waters the deposit falls to the bottom and increases in area and height until it reaches the surface and is raised by floods and tides above the high-water mark. The delta of the Ganges and the Brahmaputra has an area of 50,000 square miles and that of the Nile is 200 miles wide and 100 miles long. The Mississippi delta, which encroaches at a rate of 200 feet a year, has an area of 12,300 square miles. Great deltas are only found in comparatively tideless seas, because the deposits would not otherwise have a chance of accumulating.

Cinderellas of old got in trouble when the clock struck twelve. The "modern Cinderellas" got caught because the clock struck twenty-one.

Men Marooned

by George Marsh

COPYRIGHT by The PENN PUBLISHING CO. W.N.U. SERVICE

Joan Quarrie with his dead.

When she returned with Old Anne crooning her grief, she touched him on the shoulder.

"You must go now. We will care for her."

For a space he stood beside the cot, then said:

"Goodby, Ninda. As you wished it, you will stay—here, with your friends." He turned cryptically to the nurse. "She was a soldier; she did not flinch from wounds," and went out, followed by the puzzled eyes of the other.

Then, outside, in the cool dusk of the clearing rose a wail, mournful, unearthly, followed by another and another.

Joan Quarrier's face appeared in the doorway of the living room.

"It's too ghastly," she said with a shiver. "How do they know?"

"They always know—always wail for the dead." And he went out to quiet the dogs.

At the gate of the stockade stood the airedale, joining the huskies in their threnody under the fading stars. At Guthrie's command, the dog stopped and trotting up, with a muffled whine thrust his moist nose into his master's hand.

"Ninda's gone, Shot."

CHAPTER III

Daylight found man and dog on the high river shore. At times the man spoke to the airedale, who, sensing his master's mood, repeatedly returned from short excursions to nuzzle Guthrie's hand. Again and again, before the light came, the whimpering huskies had taken up their wailing, to be checked by the man on guard, whose thoughts traversed the swift weeks of the summer.

Out of the silent places, this doomed child of the valiant heart had come, and now—into the silence had gone. What must have been her despair, he thought, to have left her people and sought sanctuary among strangers. But it had been friends she had found.

But what a miracle to have had that schooner driven on Akimiski with the girl who had shared the watch with him! What a solace and rock she had been—those fine, straight-gazing dark eyes, and capable hands. It was because she had understood—had resented his thinking it necessary to explain the situation at Elkwan that he had been able to talk so freely of Ninda. She had proved her mettle—she, too, was a soldier. He pictured Ethel, with her horror of the ugly, thrown into the situation which Joan Quarrier had calmly met with delicacy and skill.

That afternoon Etienne and Guthrie erected a spruce cross over the fresh grave in the little post cemetery and on the white wood of the arm, Guthrie burned with a hot iron the inscription: "In Memory of Ninda—A Soldier," which for years was to be the cause of much shaking of puzzled heads among the whites and the Crees who saw it.

At dawn the following morning, Guthrie's York boat with a Peterboro canoe in tow, slowly picked its way through the river mist of the Elkwan delta. In the stern, steering with a sweep hewn from a spruce sapling, stood the wiry Etienne, who knew the channels of the river mouths and the depths of the shoal coast from the Raft to Albany. To give the craft steerage way on the first of the ebb, the sailors of the shipwrecked schooner manned four long oars. In the bow, the geologist, still smarting from his humiliation, talked in low tones to his sailing master. Beside the steersman stood Guthrie, holding a compass, for the shores were invisible. Near him, with forefeet on the roll the airedale pierced into the white wall of mist, his black nostrils dilating as he caught, at intervals, on the moist air, scents vague, illusive, enticing.

"You are losing valuable time from your goose final by taking us to Albany in your boat," suggested Joan Quarrier to Guthrie, who had found a seat beside her.

"After what you've done, I could not send you off in that ship's boat. You might have been days making Albany—had serious trouble getting ashore to make camp if the wind changed. It's a tricky coast. You're not much like your dignified brother," he answered, his face lighting in amusement as he glanced toward the sulking Quarrier. "He's hardly worrying about our goose supply for the winter."

The clean-cut mouth of the man beside her curled in the smile she had come to associate with the factor of Elkwan. Then her eyes, shifting to the dim ribbon of spruce edging the marshes, saw the face of the girl of the photograph at the post, and she wondered what was behind it all.

He studied the profile of Joan Quarrier, the musing eyes with the strongly marked brows, the half-parted lips, the frame of chestnut hair shot with gold. Fine, it was, he thought with the beauty of expression; but above its comeliness of line and skin—the stamp of strength, the essence of character. The absent look faded from her eyes.

"I can understand on a day like this," she said, "what you mean by this gray coast holding you. It's so untouched—so primeval. It seems almost as if we were the first to see it."

"It's like this for a thousand miles—the west coast," he replied, "with a few fur posts at the mouths of the rivers."

"A thousand miles of silence—except the cull of the geese."

"You won't be here for the Black Brant and the Grand geese. They are the last to reach the west coast—they and the swans."

"Swans?"

He nodded. "You haven't heard the voice of the raw solitudes if you've missed the trumpeting of the swans, high against the October stars."

"Man, you're growing poetic."

"The swans and the gray geese," he went on, "typifying it all—the silence, the loneliness, the beauty."

For a space she sat, chin in hand, heavy brows contracted. Then she looked up with: "Like so many, the din and excitement of the war—the disillusion of its aftermath, has left you with abnormal nerves. This loneliness which attracts you now will make a hermit of you—a brooding eccentric. Go back to Montreal before it's too late."

"Not until I've had it out with Laughing McDonald," he laughed.

"But whatever do you do in winter here? You'll admit it's forlorn enough then. Is it hard to keep warm in this terrible cold?"

"Cold? Why, it's colder on the north shore of Superior, and there's not as much snow. Of course when the wind blows it's cold on the sea ice. It's cold anywhere then."

"And so you're actually not lonely," she persisted, "I've heard of men going mad."

"Oh, of course, there are times—"

"You See Ha Faund Twa of Us."

His wind-horned face darkened as he avoided her look. "But there are compensations, you know. Shot!" The airedale left the rail and pushing between Guthrie's knees, lifted his whiskered muzzle with a throaty rumble, his eyes searching his master's face.

"Here is one. I couldn't be lonely with Shot, could I, old man?"

His tail beating the air, the nose of the airedale wrinkled in a display of formidable face smiling down at him.

"He worships you, doesn't he?" said the girl.

"We went through the last months together—comrades. You see he found two of us—gassed—and brought help."

The brown hands of Guthrie rubbed the airedale's small ears. Closing his eyes, Shot granted in ecstacy.

"No, but we tire of pork, so when the goose is gone, go after caribou."

"And that is what keeps you here this winter," she hazarded, "when it might be Montreal; your love of hunting—the wilderness?"

She is thinking of the pictures of Ethel, Guthrie surmised, and wonders why I stay.' As the York boat travelled, pushed by the following breeze, his gaze swept the shimmering waters of the gray strait to the sunlit barrens of the island. Then he faced her frankly.

"I'm not sure what keeps me here. It pulls me—the country, this life. After the war, everything was changed. Montreal had grown callous. No one cared for anything but pleasure—and money. It seemed as if the whole world had forgotten them—the ones who 'went west,' and what they died for. I grew to hate it—the office. My nerves were a bit jumpy from the gas, I suppose. I was off color, of course, but everybody who had been in it had a hard pull to readjust—to settle into the grind again. It was all new to me—business, the works, and I wished I was back with the battalion—with the mud, and the rest of it."

She nodded. "I know just how you felt. There were times after I returned when I was simply homesick for my wounded and the hospital life. I've really dreamed of it."

"It gets you, doesn't it? although you curse it while you're in it?" His gray eyes lit with memory.

She smiled in understanding. "It was hard, and awful—yet it does get one, as you say. It was life in the raw, stripped of the veneer—the shams. That is the reason, I suppose."

"Yes, stripped of the shams—that's it." He frowned, then went on. "Shot, here, misses it terribly—the noise, and excitement, and the men. He fights it all over again in his dreams. I know when he hears the guns or sees a Fritz. He looks like a mad porcupine—all quills, as he thrashes in his sleep. Eh, Shot? . . . Stand to!"

With a low rumble in the hairy throat, the war dog leaped back, stiffening from nose to cocked tail, ears pricked, quivering nostrils testing the air, as the hair lifted on mane and back.

"Bravo, Shot!" she cried, reaching to pat the tense head of the dog. But the airedale ignored her, his small terrier eyes questioning Guthrie's face for the reason for the familiar "Alerte," which stirred wild memories of black nights shot with flashes of light; of noises great and small; of men crawling—running; of men lying still.

Guthrie calmed the excited dog. "You see, like the rest of us, he hasn't forgotten."

"Good old Shot!" And Joan Quarrier stroked the head of the dog who had returned to them. But her thoughts were of the girl in Montreal, and the riddle of Guthrie's exile.

• • • • • • • •

Through the September day the York boat followed the coast south. In mid-afternoon Guthrie anchored off the Big Willow river and going ashore in the canoe, made camp that Joan Quarrier might have hot tea and food, and sleep, while he and Etienne, with the sailors, stayed with the boat.

The following afternoon, on the high south shore of Albany Island, they saw the quaint, square roofs of the Oblate mission, and that night three men sat in the traderoom at historic Fort Albany, where each autumn, for two centuries, men had watched the lost wedges of the gray geese fade into the south; seen the coming of the long snows and the ice bridge the river channels; starved or feasted through the slow heat of the desolate days. Here, in the red years of the Seventeenth century, the old log fort, built by the English, was stormed, retaken and stormed again. In the bitter war with the French for the fur trade. Here, generations of men had lived and loved and died, marooned in the James bay silences.

The talk of the three men in the traderoom centered on the meeting of the free-trader with Quarrier and the news that McDonald was to winter on the west coast.

"Major," said Hugh Comeron, the factor, dubiously shaking a grizzled head, "this fellow's wintering at Akimiski will ruin our fur trade. He'll be so handy to their traplines that they'll dribble in their pelts as fast as they get 'em, for his trade goods and groceries."

"Etienne counts on the loyalty of the older hunters. We intend to keep in touch with them."

"Keep in touch? How're you going to cross that strait before January? It'll be full of drifting ice."

"The ice won't be set hard, but we intend to make it with a canoe on our sled. We'll carry the sled in the canoe or the canoe on the sled, as the conditions change."

"Risky—that's a bad piece of water. I've seen the ice set and break up again three times before January. And when you get there, how're you going to keep them away from his schooner?"

"We'll make a try, anyway," replied Guthrie. "Etienne and I don't intend to let our share of the trade slip through our fingers by hugging the fire at Elkwan."

Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

FIRE PREVENTION METHODS

Matches — Be sure your match is out. Break it in two before you throw it away.

2

Tobacco—Be sure that pipe ashes and cigar or cigarette stubs are dead before throwing them away. Never throw them into brush, leaves or needles.

Making Camp—Before building a fire scrape away all inflammable material from a spot 5 feet in diameter. Dig a hole in the center and in it build your camp fire. Keep your fire small. Never build it against trees or logs or near brush.

Breaking Camp — Never break camp until your fire is out—dead out.

Brush Burning—Never burn slash or brush in windy weather or while there is the slightest danger that the fire will get away.

No one would knowingly cause forest fires. Yet 725,928 acres of timber land were burned last year, in Michigan alone. Thoughtlessness caused practically all of it.

Every resident of Michigan and every visitor to Michigan enjoys and profits by Michigan's resources. And everybody loses when timber, one of the greatest of these resources, is destroyed.

Three great losses come from timber fires: (1) The timber loss itself, (2) the cost of fire suppression, (3) the loss of beauty,—wooded lands are despoiled of their attractiveness, and this in turn causes partial drying up of lakes and streams.

You can help by making these facts more widely understood. Then care will replace thoughtlessness. Our forests will be used and enjoyed but not destroyed.

"Well, good luck to you," sighed the old trader. "Since the French company came to the bay, the Indians have forgotten the years we kept them from starving. They're out of hand now. Do what you can."

For a space Cameron seemed to dream of the past glories of the company he served, then suddenly asked: "You know what he did in August?"

"No."

"Why, he sailed into Charlton Island and tried to buy gas and flour at the depot. McMann laughed at him, of course; but that red-headed freebooter coolly announced that when he needed it, he would come and take it—said if we wouldn't sell it to him, he had government authority to seize it."

"He was right there; Ottawa's made that ruling, you know," suggested Blaikie, Cameron's clerk.

"Yes, they've made the ruling," rasped Cameron, "but do you think he'd get supplies from me when he's gone into the bay to rob us of the trade?" The columns of smoke that the factor blew from his mouth were the measure of his irritation.

"Oh, by the way, Guthrie," asked Blaikie, with seeming innocence, "what was your trouble with this puffy old boy, Quarrier, you brought here today?"

Alive to the fact that the story of Ninda and his summary handling of the geologist had received due embellishment when Quarrier met Cameron on the arrival of the York boat, Guthrie suspected the motives of the clerk, and he had no intention of discussing the Quarrier episode or of subjecting the memory of the dead girl to the comment of a stranger.

"I've made my report to Mr. Cameron," he said with finality. "You heard Quarrier tell his story this afternoon. What are you after?"

Blaikie choked with anger, but the scarred cheek and the war record which had followed Guthrie to James bay in a letter from the Montreal headquarters of the company had made its marked impression at Albany. The clerk retreated behind a cloud of pipe smoke.

"Now, since that's settled," said Cameron, loudly clearing his throat and meeting Guthrie's look with a wink, "let's get back to business. Where do you suppose this McDonald gets his backing?"

"There are plenty of people in Newfoundland who'd back him after the haul he made last year on the east coast."

"He's going to be a thorn in our side, Guthrie. He's no ordinary chap; he's got nerve and ability. Queer thing happened when he came into Charlton. One of the half-breeds there stared at that face of his and laughed. McDonald grabbed the Indian by the throat and shook him like a rabbit; then roared: 'Laugh, d—n you! It's funny, is it? A thousand Canadians died the day I got that!'"

Profoundly stirred, Guthrie's sympathy went out to this stranger with the twisted mouth. What raw torture, what secret agony must have been his—facing the world with a grimace! How well he sensed the impotent fury—the bitterness of this man, doomed to the pitiless stares—the callous curiosity of the rabble.

"I wonder what day that was," queried Guthrie, aloud, unaware that his fingers touched the cicatrix on his cheek.

"If he'd only do something illegal," Cameron hastened to say, "the company could run him out of the bay."

There was a glint, frankly combative, in Garth Guthrie's eyes as he heard the future of a Canadian veteran so cavalierly disposed of.

"That might not be so easy. From what the Indians say, he carries Lewis guns. Do you know any of our people who would relish meeting Laughing McDonald at the butt end of a machine gun?"

"He wouldn't dare fight us—shed blood on this bay!"

"Cameron," said Guthrie, and the glitter returned to his eyes, "I'm inclined to think that the company had better avoid any attempt at force with an overseas man with a mutilated mouth. He's apt to run amuck—to forget the war's over."

As he studied Guthrie's brooding eyes, Cameron knotted his thick brows, vaguely aware that the scar on the face of the speaker had prompted the remark.

"Well, however that may be, he's a dangerous competitor. After dropping that scaled company Indian like a bag of salt, according to McMann, he asked if there were any more slackers who wanted to laugh at the kiss of a Hun shell—There weren't any!"

Guthrie smiled; his thoughts colored by memories.

"Yes," continued Cameron with a sigh, aware that the man he addressed was not listening, "it looks bad for Kapiskau and Elkwan this year."

Later, by the light of a candle in the small room assigned to him by the factor, Garth re-read two letters he had found waiting at the post. The letter of his brother, dictated to his secretary, and typewritten, expressed extreme shock at the failure of the wanderer to return; deplored his indifference to the future of the Guthrie Steel company and to his own; condemned his callous and shabby treatment of the lovely girl who worshiped him; had grown horribly eloquent in its emphasis of the distinction lately conferred on the Guthrie family in Charles' knighthood, and resented profoundly the blot which its hitherto stainless escutcheon had sustained by Garth's inexplicable action.

In the name of his proud war record, his honor as a gentleman, and his future participation in the councils and direction of Guthrie Steel, now almost a household word in the Dominion, Charles commanded his errant brother to return where love and duty called.

Holding this intimate communication, which the busy Charles had seen fit to share with his secretary, over the flame of the candle, Garth grimly watched it burn.

Clara, characteristically, had approached from a different angle. Although his letters, she wrote, had not mentioned his health, she was confident that he was still ill. He had tried that cold, cruel north. Why not give the country near home a chance, where his devoted family and a broken-hearted girl pined for him. If he could have seen how stanchly Ethel had taken the blow. She was showing a brave face to the gossips—was going everywhere, but hiding a wounded heart. They called her "The Widow," and, of course, people were mystified, but she and Clara were only counting the days when dear old Garth would return to them.

She finished with: "Ethel and I are like sisters, inseparable. And she's so proud of Charles' new honor. 'Think of it!' she said the other day, 'to be the sister-in-law of the great Sir Charles Guthrie!' So you see, Garth, she is still the same old Ethel, loving you—forgiving all."

"Yes," the man who read agreed, a corner of the mouth lifting, "she's the old Ethel." And he blew out the candle.

Earlier, at the Church of England mission, where Joan Quarrier and her brother were staying until Cameron could send them to Moose, he had said good-by, for at dawn he was to start for Elkwan. The manner of Reverend Swan, who opened the door to Garth's knock, was distinctly cool, but as he had avoided the missionary during his year at Albany, and developed a warm friendship with Pere Rousseau, the Oblate, the inhospitable reception was anticipated and ignored. The little man with the pale hair and eyes, fidgeted with embarrassment at the appearance of Garth.

"I am in doubt as to whether Miss Quarrier's brother would wish her to see you," said the clergyman, with as brave a show of dignity as his five-feet-four could command in the snubbing of the man whose eyes twinkled in frank amusement at the effort.

Then, in a voice which Garth knew would be clearly audible to the girl, he wished to see, he said: "Miss Quarrier will decide without her brother's assistance whether she wishes to see me. Will you tell her I am here?"

Holding his position in the doorway, undecided as to his next move, the missionary reddened with anger at the trick. Then footsteps sounded behind him and the low voice of Joan Quarrier asked: "Is there someone to see me, Mr. Swan? Oh, it's Mr. Guthrie! Good evening." And she pushed past the disgruntled missionary to take Garth's extended hand.

"Do you mind talking outside? Mr. Swan fears that your brother doesn't approve of me," Guthrie flung at the figure in the door as he moved away with the girl, who sensed what had passed. "You see, your good brother has already poisoned the clerical mind," laughed Garth as they walked slowly to the clearing. "I'm leaving early tomorrow and came to say good-by."

The moon was up and Guthrie's sidelong glance caught the sobering of her face. She was looking straight ahead and the light which drew a shimmering trail over the quiet surface of the Albany brushed her heavy hair with silver.

"You're worried about your geese—it was fine of you to waste precious time bringing us here."

"I am still in your debt, Miss Quarrier," he said, and as he watched the profile of the girl walking beside him, with its straight nose and firm chin, the realization that she was passing out of his life—this woman whom chance had thrown into the tragedy at Elkwan—came swift as a blow. The old sense of loss, felt so often in the days when a friend—a comrade—"went west," returned to him. The vivid color and tang of her personality—the splendid strength of her—were stirring him with an appeal hitherto unsensed. Now that the brief days of their comradeship were over, the memory of Joan Quarrier's instant comprehension of the nature of the pity, approaching affection, which Ninda inspired in him—of how the salve of her sympathy had eased the raw bitterness—judgmently returned.

And now this friendship—born of chance—was to be cut short off by the wall of a thousand miles of forest.

She glanced curiously at the man who walked beside her in silence.

"I shall think of you often up there with Etienne, and Shot, and old Anne."

"It Seems So Lonely and So—Unnecessary."

she hazarded. "It seems so lonely and so—unnecessary."

But Guthrie avoided reference to the cause of his exile. "We shall remember you—all of us. Without you, it would have been unthinkable."

"It was strange—that storm, and meeting us we did. Poor little Ninda!" she said, dreamily watching the silhouette of a belated canoe from the whitefish nets drift into the path of moonlight.

"It was an act of Providence. I wonder," he hesitated, then went on, "if you would care to send word of yourself to an exile, this winter?"

He saw her brows contract in thought. For a moment she seemed in doubt, then turned to him, tense in her earnestness. "You are not merely courteous—you really wish to hear from me?"

His face reflected his pleasure. "You will write then, to the exile?"

There was a sudden gleam of white teeth, a whimsical flash in her eyes, as she asked: "Wouldn't it be ungrateful to refuse so modest a request from one who has rescued the shipwrecked?"

"It would be most ungrateful and cruel," he laughed. "If you'll write, I'll have a little spruce waiting for the Christmas mail, and hang your letter on the tree, with candles."

"Unread?"

"Unread till Christmas morning. Then Shot and I will read it together—our Christmas, from you."

"And the other letters?" she queried, avoiding his quick glance.

"The others? Oh, they'll not be interesting—with their criticism and advice and news of my distinguished brother's doings."

"None of them?" Joan Quarrier's voice was strangely throaty as she gazed out over the shimmering river.

"None of them," was the quiet reply. He thrilled to the realization of the absolute sincerity of his answer.

Without meeting his eyes, she turned impulsively to the airedale who accompanied them. "Good-by, Shot! I'm going to miss you, boy!" And she took the head of the dog in her hand. As Shot's tail beat the air, his hairy throat rumbled. Then he bared his great fangs and made little snaps at the girl bending over him.

"Why, you've made a conquest!" cried Guthrie. "He does that with no one here."

The girl looked up as she rubbed the dog's ears. "He's only saluting a brother—I mean a sister—in arms."

"One who served, as he did, with the wounded," added the man.

They were at the door of the mission.

"Good-by! The days will drag up there in the snow, waiting for the Christmas mail," said Guthrie, puzzled at his emotion—strangely reluctant to leave her—wondering at himself.

"Good-by, Mr. Exile!" She gave him her firm hand.

Hardly conscious of his purpose, he bent to search the dark eyes, frankly meeting his look. She smiled, he thought, wistfully as he said: "What you did for a comrade in distress—he will never forget. Good-by, Healer of Wounds."

Her eyes widened. Groping for his meaning, she watched him straighten, bring his hand to his forehead in a military salute, and turning, walk rapidly away. Until his tall figure was lost in the shadows, she stood, lips parted, wondering; then slowly opened the door and went in.

Mr. E.N. Dickey,

Dear Sir:

We are great believers in the long distance telephone for keeping practically a personal contact with our customers.

I find that when some dispute comes up between us and our customers, I can usually settle it when I talk personally to my customers over the telephone.

Also when we have something of special importance that we want to get over to a customer in a distant city, that our business is increased, due to the fact that the writer or one of the managers of our different departments uses the telephone to put the proposition before the buyer.

As stated in the first paragraph, we are great believers in the use of the long distance telephone.

Sincerely yours,
C.J. Litscher, Pres.

Our business is increased due to the fact that the writer or one of the managers...uses the telephone to put the proposition before the buyer.

Long Lost Comic!

It took film producers several years to discover that Jack Mulhall could display a sense of humor on the screen.

Now that his talent as a comedian and farceur have been found, he has become infinitely more popular than as a straight leading man of dramatic productions.

His latest light comedy role is in "Smile, Brother, Smile," the First National Picture co-featuring Dorothy Mackaill, which comes to the Palace Theatre Friday.

Tom Mix Plays Phantom Falcon in Fox Feature

Tom Mix, as the Phantom Falcon of the Texas Rangers, disguises himself and holds up a stage coach so that he may get into the lair of the bandits in "The Outlaws of Red River," his latest starring drama for Fox Films, which will have a showing at the Majestic Theatre Saturday and Sunday.

Clara Bow, Esther Ralston Co-starred

Clara Bow and Esther Ralston are co-starred in Frank Lloyd's sensational Parnmount picture, "Children of Divorce," which arrives at the Palace Theatre Wednesday and Thursday. As Kitty Flanders and Jean Weddington, both players are said to do their very best work.

Smart Clothes Worn in Film

What is the difference between the Parisian "gold digger" and our own American variety?

The answer is—their clothes.

Rene Hubert, famous Parisian gown designer, for three years with Gloria Swanson, solved this riddle in designing the costumes for "On Ze Boulevard," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's hilarious French farce coming Monday and Tuesday to the Palace Theatre, for he had to design entirely different wardrobes for Renee Adoree, playing a restaurant cashier, and Dorothy Sebastian, playing the "gold digger" in question—and still both had to be perfectly chic and smart.

"Soft Cushions" Three Years in the Making Says MacLean

It took Douglas MacLean three years to make his latest comedy "Soft Cushions."

One of the elements in "Soft Cushions" that particularly appealed to the comedy star is the new type of character it permits him to play. Instead of the timorous, easily embarassed young American business man he has usually portrayed, in this new story the star plays a dashing, devil-may-care young oriental thief who stakes his life on his quick wit to win the favor of a black eyed slave girl.

An unusually large and very capable cast supports MacLean in "Soft Cushions" which will be the feature attraction at the Palace Theatre next Saturday and Sunday.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
by B. C. Mellencamp

Septic Tank Demonstrations

Farmers in Charlevoix county will have the opportunity during the four days of Sept. 6, 7, 8 and 9, to actually see four tanks of the latest design constructed by specialists from Michigan State College, one on each day.

A sewage disposal system is fundamental to the installation of other conveniences in the farm home. Before running water can become possible, or at least practicable, it is necessary to provide some means of removing the waste water. A septic tank and tile system provides that means, and at the same time provides the best possible methods of safe-guarding the water supply against contamination from these wastes.

The septic tank and tile system is to the farm home what the sewer system is to the city. It provides a satisfactory means of disposing of the wastes from the kitchen, laundry and bath room.

Its cost is not prohibitive and its construction is little more difficult than the building of a concrete water tank. You will be interested in attending your nearest meeting during one of these four days and see how simple a matter it is to construct one of these tanks. Watch the next paper for further details and the places where demonstrations will be held.

Nobody is perfect these days. Some of the ablest men in America couldn't name the six leading hitters.

Our dumb friends are not all in the zoo.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

TO BE SUCCESSFUL IN SPRAYING FRUIT TREE

The manner in which spray materials are applied is all-important, observes a Clemson college writer. The first essential is that every fruit and leaf on the tree or vine should be covered with a thin film of spray; and to do this the spray must be applied with sufficient force to produce a fine mist which covers and adheres to the fruit and leaves. The nozzle on the end of the spray rod should be set at an angle of about twenty-five degrees. This will enable the operator by turning the rod to force the spray upward as well as downward in order that both sides of the fruit may be covered.

The foliage and fruit on the branches near the center of the tree should be thoroughly covered with the spray by thrusting the spray rod through the opening in the branches from at least three or four positions. In applying the spray it is necessary to take advantage of the wind. Otherwise the spray will be driven away from the tree rather than toward it. With a little experience in handling the spray rod, one will soon understand how this is done.

While every portion of the fruit and foliage should be covered with spray, the nozzle should not be held in one position long enough to drench the foliage, but should be moved slowly to prevent loss of spray by dripping from the foliage.

The effectiveness of the spray will depend to some extent on the weather conditions. Frequently rain will prevent the spray being applied at the proper time, and it is during this moist period that the fungous diseases develop most rapidly. When heavy rains occur immediately after the spray has been applied and before it has had time to dry, a second application should be applied as soon as possible.

Must Spray While Fruit Trees Are Still Dormant

Those orchard owners who have not already sprayed for San Jose scale are reminded by the college horticulturists and entomologists that this work, to be effective and free from injury to trees, must be done while the trees are still dormant.

The presence of San Jose scale in an orchard may be recognized, says Prof. A. F. Conradi, entomologist, Clemson college, by a grayish incrustation on the bark. This is caused by the insects completely covering it. Rubbing the bark with a knife handle or the thumb nail will cause an exudation of a yellowish liquid caused by the crushing of thousands of these orange-colored insects. On the fruit it may be recognized by reddish spots. When the bark is cut it shows a reddish color, and trees heavily infested are dying back.

One of the approved winter sprays should be given without delay. These sprays cannot be given in the summer when the trees are in foliage and should be applied before the buds start.

The two sprays most effective are lime-sulphur spray or oil emulsion. The lime-sulphur spray may be purchased in the market or it may be made at home either by steam or in an ordinary kettle, as directed in Information Card No. 31, which may be had upon application. The oil emulsions may be purchased in the market or they may be made at home according to directions furnished upon application.

Should Spray Back Yard Trees in Proper Season

Back yard fruit trees should be sprayed in proper season to insure good fruit and freedom from disease. For oyster-shell, scurfy and San Jose scale on apple or pear trees, spray when trees are dormant, using two quarts of lime sulphur to five gallons of water. Cover the trees thoroughly. For apple scab, curculio, spring canker-worm or green fruit worm, spray when the blossom buds have separated but before individual blossoms have opened, using one quart of lime sulphur to five gallons of water, or bordeaux mixture to which two and one-half ounces dry arsenate of lead is added. The second application should be made when 95 per cent of the blossom petals have fallen, using one pint lime sulphur, one and one-half ounces dry lead arsenate to five gallons of water. This should catch the codling moth in addition to the pests mentioned for the first application. Another application should be given two or three weeks after the petals have fallen, to make a clean job of it.

Cows Mean More Profits in Diversified Farming

How is dairying going to make diversified farming more profitable?

Diversified farming means the growing of larger areas in grain crops, legumes and other hay and forage crops. If these are sold directly from the farm large amounts of soil fertility will be carried away in these crops. By feeding these crops to dairy cattle at home and thus retaining most of their fertility on the farm for soil building, the farmer gets a profit in growing the crop and another in feeding it.—Ohio Agricultural College News Notes.

Barley for Fattening

Barley proved to be worth slightly more than corn for fattening calves at a test recently completed at the Colorado experiment station. The rate of gain for the corn and barley fattened calves was practically the same. The two lots under comparison were fed corn silage, linseed cake and alfalfa hay in addition to the grain ration. There was a considerable saving in alfalfa hay with the barley-fed calves. The calves fed barley outsold those fed corn.

Poultry Hints

Let the breeding flocks have the range when you shut up the hens for winter eggs.

• • •

Watch the water supply. Poultry should never be allowed to drink frozen water.

• • •

For hatching eggs breed from the best of the laying hens, rather than from the prize pets.

• • •

Be on guard for the first sign of colds or roup in the poultry, and to separate the afflicted from the rest.

• • •

It is not well to force heavy egg production through feeding where birds are to be used for breeding pens.

• • •

It is a good scheme to plow or spade up the poultry runs each spring in order to get rid of worms that cause gapes in chickens.

• • •

Nature's way of rearing her feathered family is to let them rear a family. Turkeys and chickens are both better for the season of rest.

• • •

Turning hens out of the warm hen house on a cold wintry day, or with a cold wind blowing or with snow or ice on the ground, opens the way to wheezing roup before midnight.

• • •

If you shut up the pullets they may lose their appetite. Coax them along with frequent grain feedings and a moist mash once a day.

• • •

Cement makes the best floor for a poultry house. When properly built it is economical, easy to clean, rat proof, durable, and free from dampness.

Breed only from birds producing eggs of a uniform size and as near chalk white in color as possible. Trap-nest pullets during first winter and mark birds producing poor type eggs.

One of the largest and by far one of the most difficult areas of common barberry to eradicate has been found during the last week in Charlevoix county. This area is located in the south end of Walloon Lake just west of Walloon village. It is about six miles square starting right at the lake shore and running back through the densely underbrushed land. The bushes vary in height from six inches to eight feet. It is estimated that it will take well over seven tons of salt to do the eradication work.

Due to the smallness of some of the bushes and the ease with which they might be missed every foot of this territory will be strip scouted carefully. In strip scouting the men on the barberry squad proceed through the territory about four feet apart and comb every inch of the land thus no chance barberry will escape their eye.

The common barberry against which the campaign is being waged causes, the farmers of grain growing states many millions of dollars worth of loss every year. This bush spreads the dreaded black stem rust of oats, wheat, barley, rye and other grains and grasses. By eradicating the common barberry this rust can be completely done away with. This scientific is being carried on by the federal Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the state department of agriculture and Michigan State college.

Yes, there is no doubt that the common barberry spreads the black stem rust and that this rust may be done away with by the eradication of the common barberry is proven by the case of Denmark. In Denmark in 1903 they passed a law requiring the removal of all common barberry bushes. This work was done by the farmers in cooperation with the government almost entirely during that year. Before these bushes were removed almost annually there had been nearly complete destruction of their grain crop by black stem rust but since they have been removed there have been no serious outbreaks.

LIVE STOCK NEWS

PROFITABLE AGE TO BREED GILTS

The majority of gilts used for breeding purposes are bred in the late fall of the same year they were born, farrowing the following spring at approximately one year of age. What influence does this early conception, pregnancy, and motherhood have on the ultimate development of the animal thus handled? Does the bearing of young at this early age affect the later development of the sow or does it affect the size and vigor of the first litter born?

The general consensus of opinion and observation among swine producers would say that breeding gilts no older than six months of age is too young.

Mumford of the Missouri station conducted an experiment to determine the influence of early breeding on gilts and their offspring. This work covered a period of more than 12 years during which time one group of gilts and their offspring were bred as soon as they came in heat; other sows and their offspring were bred for the first time at about eighteen months of age while still others were bred for the first time at thirty months of age. All pigs and sows throughout the experiment were liberally fed on well-balanced rations.

It was found that immature gilts bred at five months of age and twice a year thereafter developed into smaller animals at maturity than if they had not been bred until later. This decreased size is the result of the heavy drain on the sow during the lactation period rather than due to pregnancy.

Mumford says, "The diminished size of mature sows bred at such an early age has no very important practical significance in the production of swine for market, since the difference in size at maturity between animals bred at a very young age and those bred at a later age, is not significant."

Concerning the effect of early breeding on the pigs of young mothers, Mumford concludes that the main difference that might occur would come because of the failure of young mothers to supply a sufficient amount of milk for the most rapid growth of the pigs. This effect is not commercially very significant. The pigs from very young sows will require about ten days longer to reach 250 lbs. weight than will pigs from more mature mothers.

The foregoing discussion has to do with sows and pigs that were well fed. The results would not be the same where gilts are bred at a very early age and this followed by scant feeding.

Coming Spring Pig Crop Must Have Proper Care

Success with the coming spring pig crop depends to a large extent upon the manner in which the bred sows are being handled at this time. During the winter sows should receive feed that will support their own bodies, as well as supplying material for growth of the litter. It must be remembered, however, that sows must not put on excessive fat during the gestation period.

There are very few home-grown feeds that cannot be fed with safety to the pregnant sow. Corn and oats can be used as a base for different rations, adding tankage, middlings, bran or shorts, skimmed milk, etc., according to the individual requirements. Barley may be cheaper than corn, and can be used to good advantage. With any ration exercise is of vital importance. Give the sow plenty of exercise, and force the gilt to take some each day if necessary.

Fresh fruit from your back yard! Why not?

One rabbit can girdle a dozen trees in a day unless precautions are taken to prevent it.

• • •

Rabbits attack trees that are from one to six years old and also injure trees of any age. It is better and cheaper to protect the tree trunks now than to try to save girdled trees next spring by bridge grafting.

BABY BEEF GAINS ON CORN FODDER

Practical cattle feeders have learned from experience that corn fodder is not satisfactory as the only roughage. Many have fed it as a supplement to legume hay and silage with good results, but its value compared to corn silage was apparently a question.

Colorado made a study by feeding two lots of baby beeves, in which one lot received corn fodder and the other corn silage. In addition both lots received barley, linseed oil meal and alfalfa hay.

From one acre 3.82 tons of dry cut corn fodder was obtained, which cost $15.45 a ton in the bin. The cost of one acre was $59.02. The corn silage received from one acre amounted to 11.7 tons, which was figured at a cost of $7.50 a ton. One acre yielded in corn silage $87.75 worth of feed. Both lots of calves were fed 208 days. The corn fodder lot gained 2.01 pounds per head per day, while those receiving corn silage gained 1.89 pounds per head per day.

In order that cattle feeders may figure the cost of gains at their own prices, the amounts of feed required for 100 pounds of gain are given here. The calves receiving corn fodder required 345.9 pounds of barley, 205.5 pounds of corn fodder, 51.6 pounds of linseed oil meal and 236 pounds of alfalfa hay for 100 pounds of gain. The corn silage calves required, for 100 pounds of gain, 250.7 pounds of barley, 52 pounds of linseed oil meal, 462.9 pounds of silage and 246.7 pounds of alfalfa hay. At prevailing prices when this test was made cheaper gains were put on by the corn fodder fed calves.

This test indicates that corn fodder will put on greater and cheaper gains than corn silage, in a ration of barley, linseed oil meal and alfalfa hay for baby beeves.—R. W. Fairbanks, Extension Live Stock Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Culling Demonstrations Given on Western Ranges

The old order is slowly changing on the open range in favor of the modern cattleman who substitutes quality for quantity to satisfy the changing demands of the consuming public for lighter weight and better quality beef. To help the cattlemen make this change, spelling demonstrations are being conducted in the western range states by the United States Department of Agriculture all the way from the irrigated valleys of Washington and the mountain ranches of Montana and Wyoming south to the desert ranches of Arizona and New Mexico. These demonstrations are conducted on isolated ranches sometimes 75 miles from a railroad or at the shipping pens, using herds at hand, and are attended by cattlemen who often come 100 miles to learn how to cull and grade their cattle.

The financial benefits of marketing cattle by grades and the benefits of national standardization of grades, so that cattlemen everywhere may know what is meant by a certain grade, are being emphasized. In some of these remote valleys or isolated desert ranges are found remarkably good stock of good blood lines, type, and conformation.

Exercise Is Essential for Ewes During Winter

An abundance of exercise for the ewes during the winter months is an important factor in making the breeding flock profitable. When given little opportunity to get out in the open, weak lambs, lacking thrift and vigor, are sure to be produced. A goal toward which the sheep man could profitably aim, is to so plan the feeding that his breeding stock would be obliged to walk as much as two miles every day. This often can be accomplished by scattering roughage over a wide area when the weather is clear. Another suggestion is to close the barnyards from the flock during the day, obliging the sheep to rustle for feed in the field.

Sheep Care at Lambing Time Is Very Important

In a few weeks the lambs will begin to appear, and now is time to get ready for them, advises E. G. Godbey, associate animal husbandman, who says that since sheep go through most of the year without much attention, there is a tendency to neglect them at lambing time, when they really need a little care and feed, yet every time a ewe fails to bring a lamb or loses a lamb the profit on that ewe is lost, for while her wool may pay the board bill, it will not return much profit.

Feeding Iron to Pigs

One of the newest adventures in live stock feeding at Iowa State college is the feeding of iron to pigs. This has been fed in the form of iron oxide to fall fattening pigs and to spring gilts that are to be kept over. It has been found that the iron causes the pigs to make more rapid gains at lower cost. The experimenters called attention to the fact that iron is one of the important constituents of the red color in blood, which is associated with vigor and vitality.

LOCAL HORSES AT EMMET FAIR

WELSH EXPECTS TO TAKE SEVERAL FAST RACES

Horse Lovers Will Have Opportunity to See a Number of Fast Events This Fall

Charlevoix race horse lovers are watching plans being made for the races at the Emmet county fair at Petoskey, September 6, 7, 8 and 9, when Frank Welsh of this city will have at least two fast steppers in competition, and perhaps three or four.

Last year Frank had the other northern horses eating his dust on several ocasions at the Petoskey agricultural event and local people who attended enjoyed the sport very much.

Frank, along with Bob Shannon of Elk Rapids and Jesse Davenport of Traverse City will stake their racers against those of Fred and Frank Sifert of Petoskey, Scotty McLeod of Cheboygan and Fred Clemens of Onaway, along with the Gaylord racers.

There may be stiffer opposition this year for it is understood several horses from the fair at the Soo next week will come down to race at Petoskey, and perhaps come over to East Jordan for Charlevoix county's great fair and go on to Onaway and Gaylord for the other northern events.

It was announced today that there are to be three ball games at the Emmet county fair between the Petoskey, Kegomic, Mackinaw City and Conway teams the winners from Wednesday and Thursday, playing again on Friday, September 9, the last day of the fair. The fair is to be open day and night, assuring all a chance to see the exhibits and free acts and hear the band, visit the midway, etc. Many from Charlevoix usually attend both afternoon and evening and usually report a lot of fun and good exhibits. In return Petoskey and Emmet county send many to various doings in Charlevoix and to our own county fair each fall at East Jordan.

FARM POULTRY

RIGHT CARE AND FEED FOR EGGS

In the summer the farm hen may forage for a supply of animal feed and garner all the available bugs, worms, and green feed needed to replenish worn-out body tissue and to produce an abundant quantity of eggs. But winter has come now and the bugs are gone. So has the green feed on many farms and the hen must be fed if she is expected to produce eggs in profitable quantities.

"Eggs are high-priced in the winter because so few farm hens are laying at this season, says Dr. R. F. Knapp, head of the poultry department at South Carolina State college. "The two usual reasons for low egg production are found in the poor producing power of the hen and also because she may not have the proper food and care. If the hen comes from a high producing strain and is not laying as she should, it is possible that she may not have a comfortable house, or that she is not free of parasites, and does not have the right kind of feed and other care."

Doctor Knapp states that eggs are low in price during the spring months because everybody's hens are laying then. Eggs always go down in the spring and the farmers' organizations should store eggs at that season. In the winter eggs go up to 75 cents and $1 per dozen because the hens are not laying. Then the storage houses bring out the cheap spring eggs to sell at a good profit.

The poultry department has prepared extension circulars 155, 156 and 158 which tell how to put the farm flock on a paying basis. These bulletins are free and will tell how to cull and feed the birds for winter eggs. It should be remembered, states Doctor Knapp, that laying hens must have mash before them at all times. The mash must contain crushed grains, minerals, fish or meat meal, or the surplus milk of the farm. Tender, green feed is also needed each day. Water should be constantly before the birds and the grain feed given them twice each day.

Most Poultry Diseases Can Easily Be Conquered

A broom, shovel, scraper and a spray pump with some crude oil or other good spray material will conquer most poultry diseases. The University of Nebraska lists these remedies as the best for most poultry diseases. Unfortunately, they also require energy and initiative on the part of the flock owner. It is much easier to put pills or dope in the drinking water after the hens are sick than it is to scald the fountains and clean up the house.

Of course, poultry yields to treatment the same as other live stock but why allow sickness to gain a foothold in the first place? Furthermore, the fellow who puts too much faith on bright-colored, strong-smelling medicines usually forgets to remove the cause of the trouble. A little study usually proves it to be over-crowding, poor ventilation, filth and vermin. Disease will cure the overcrowding, but it is an expensive method. Just plain prevention is all most poultry raisers need to avoid losses.

Profits Increased From Hens by Use of Lights

Tests at the Nebraska experiment station last winter on two pens of 90 leghorns each showed that electric lights increased the income from 90 hens $25.44. The hens in both lots were as near alike as possible and both groups were kept in ordinary houses.

Both pens received exactly the same care except that one was lighted at 5 o'clock each morning and the other was not. Pullets well matured and ready to lay by November 1 respond to lights all winter. Yearling hens that have molted late should not be forced before January 1. Morning light proved more practical from the standpoint of feed and management. Scratch feed was scattered in the litter at night so the hens could go to work in the morning as soon as an alarm turned on the lights.

Breeding Pens

Although the average poultry man cannot afford to trapnest his hens, he can greatly improve his flock by making a special breeding pen of his best male bird and a few choice hens or pullets. In choosing these breeders both egg producing and standard qualities should be kept in mind. By toe-marking or banding chicks hatched from this pen it will be found that the chicks hatched from the eggs from this pen will be superior to those from the general flock.

Dry Mash for Hens

The amount of dry mash that the hens eat is usually determined by the amount of scratch feed given to the flock. Satisfactory results are obtained by feeding twice as much scratch feed as mash during the winter months, the ratio being reversed during the summer and spring months. It is a good plan to give the heaviest feed late in the afternoon. Succulent feeds like alfalfa, clover, sprouted oats, etc., are rich in vitamines, and have an excellent effect on the digestive system.

WINTER SPORTS HOLD ATTENTION

PROGRAM FOR COMING SEASON IS BEING ADVERTISED

Lake Charlevoix Winter Sports Club Organized Tuesday and Officers Elected

Lake Charlevoix winter sports nre the talk of the Northern resort country this week. Although plans for winter carnivals are in the making throughout the northern district this season, Charlevoix hns taken the lead und launched an advertising and booster campuign to let our summer visitors know that our beautilul city is equally nttractive during the months of Janunry, February nnd March as at the present time and that as a plnce for nmusement and healthful recreation, is on a par with any other loention in tho country.

Slides showing scenes from last winter's carnival have been shewn in local moving picture houses. Large display cards telling of various forms of sports to he had here have been posted throughout the city. By far the most successful and attractive stunt has been the displays in store windows on Bridge street. Space does not allow us to describe each one separntely and in detail, but collectively they deserve mention. One would hardly expect to see a display of winter sports togs, snow shoes, toboggans, sleds, skiis, etc., in summer, but this divergence from the ordinary is what attracted the attention of thousands during the past week. Questions have been asked and answered and a large number have expressed their intention of visiting Charlevoix next winter.

Another important move towards annual and permanent winter sports in Charlevoix was completed Tuesduy evening by the organization of the Lake Charlevoix Winter Sports Club nt a meeting in the council rooms. Articles of incorporation and by-laws were adopted nnd officers elected as follows: President, James Bemis, St. Louis, Mo.; vice-presidents, G. E. Hollingsworth, Renslaar, Ind., W. B. McIlvaine, Jr., Chicago; Alvin D. Goldmnn, St. Louis, Mo.; John Knight, Kalamazoo; D. T. McHugh, Charlevoix; secretary, Geo. E. Beeman, Charlevoix; treasurer, G. W. Richardson, Charlevoix. The following directors were elected: Mrs. Logan Thomas, Hamilton, Ohio; Ayers Boals, Winnetka, Ill.; Mrs. A. H. Whiting, Chicago; Geo. Hemmingway, Oak Park, Ill.; R. E. Olds, Lansing, Charles Gale, Archie Livingston, R. C. Hammet, Jr., R. L. Lewis, E. A. Young, Clair Webster, Frank Bird, Robert Bridge, Charles H. Emrey, Edward Edwards, H. A. Craig, Ralph Price, of Charlevoix. Resident hostesses chosen were the Mesdames Robert Bridge, Meyer Levinson, Edward Edwards, Harley Ochs, Clnrence Wood, Clinton Cooper, Archie Levingston, W. W. Mitchell, Ralph Price, Ray Faulkner, A. L. Fitch, F. F. Wilkinson, Clarence Bridge, R. B. Armstrong, F. F. McMillan, James Gaskin, Lisle Shanahan, and Arthur Bergeon.

A membership of two dollars gives any person the rights and privileges of the club for one year. The activities of the club will be limited to the Lake Charlevoix region and it shall be a non-profit association. It is expected to have at least two hundred members in the club before winter and have a definite program laid out for the months of January and February.

Enthusiasm in winter sports the coming season is rampant among Charlevoix residents as well as outside visitors and it is expected Charlevoix will be as famous along this line of activity in years to come as it now is as a summer resort.

BELVEDERE TOURNEY DREW LARGE ENTRY

Men's Singles Title Won Again By Austin Leland

A record entry list was attracted in the Belvedere tennis tournament, due largely to the efforts of Austin Leland, who was in charge of the event.

Jane Fuller, Wisconsin university champion, won the women's singles after a hard fight with Dorothy Bemis of St. Louis. The men's singles cup went to Austin Leland of St. Louis, who defeated Ed. Tausig in the finals after a 5-set match.

The feature match of the tournament was the men's doubles in which Fox and Fox defeated Leland and Knight after 5 grueling sets. The winning team proved too steady and came out on top in spite of occasional flashes of unbeatable tennis by the losers. The mixed doubles title went to Marion McIlvaae and John Knight. Mrs. McIlvaine showed some of the prettiest tennis ever displnyed on the Belvedero courts.

The girl's singles was won by Frieda Birge, whose stiffest opposition was from Jane Wallis. Jos. Ferguson of St. Louis defeated Bill McChesney, also of St. Louis, for the junior singles title. The boy's singles event went to Bill Connett of St. Louis after a 5-set battle with Biran Valie.

MOVE TO LESSEN TRAFFIC PERILS

ROGERS ORDERS CHANGES ON STATE TRUNK LINES

Sharp Turns, Narrow Bridges and Rough Shoulders Must Be Fixed or Marked

Increased efforts to eliminate dangers for traffic on state trunk line highways are being made by maintenance men, following orders from Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner. The increased number of accidents, many of them fatal, on highwnys of the state during the past month brought about the order for the safety campaign, Commissioner Rogers stated.

Sharp turns on highways contributed to the fatalities in many cases, it has been shown, and the elimination of sharp curves on trunk line routes has been ordered, the work to be taken care of as rapidly as possible.

All highway department division engineers in the stnte have been instructed to give increased attention to the safety measures. Narrow bridges on trunk lines, sharp turns in the road, grades of high and insufficient width, rough shoulders and other dangerous spots on the highwnys are either to be remedied or marked with special signs, according to instructions issued the engineers.

Division engineers have been requested to submit reports of the most dangerous locations on their routes. The reports will be listed in the order of their importance and an estimate will be made at once of the probable cost of correcting the situation, C. C. Dillman, deputy commissioner, chief engineer of highways, has announced.

Mnintenance equipment may no longer be opernted on the left hand side of trunk line highways, according to nn order issued last week. The practice of operating the equipment against traffic is regarded as dangerous by state road officinls, particularly on steep grades nnd on curves.

The rapidly incrensing traffic on trunk line highways has multiplied dangers of accident, and the department has been forced to work out new plnns to take care of the situntion, officials declare. All the undesirable menaces in traffic will he repaired if possible, the officials say, although some time will be required to prepare estimates and complete the work.

HORSE SHOW WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

ATTENDANCE WAS LARGE AND VERY ENTHUSIASTIC

Large Entry In Every Evant On Program—Proceeds Given To Charlevoix Hospital

The Charity Horse Show and Gymkhana held last Friday, August 26th, at Hooker's paddock on the north side, was by far the best ever attempted. Many prominent lovers of horseback riding took part in the various events and the interest shown and liberal response manifested more than we paid the sponsors.

The judges were Fred Pratt of Traverse City and R. R. Carpenter of Detroit, who showed excellent judgement in their selection of winners.

Winners in Class 1 (15 hands and over) were: 1st, "Jiggs," ridden by Joan Dissette; 2nd, "Redbird," ridden by Clare Hyman; 3rd, "Lady Francis," ridden by Justine Godcheaux; 4th, "Vision," ridden by Mrs. G. Rosenthal. Class II (under 15 hands) winners were: 1st, "Lennox," ridden by Elaine Joseph; 2nd, "Lassie," ridden by Louise Ederheimer; 3rd, "Arrow," ridden by Susan Hartman; 4th, "Ringletree," ridden by Joan Dissette.

Perhaps the most outstanding event of the horse show was the children's fancy dress costume ride. The costumes worn by the young entries were marvelous beyond description. Judges in this event were Mrs. C. Pike, Detroit; Miss Alma Clark, St. Louis. Winners were the following: 1st, Rose Bud Block; 2nd, Ann Lnzarus; 3rd, Joan Lazarus; 4th, Susan Hyman. In the lady's saddle tandem, Clare Hydman won 1st; Justine Godcheaux 2nd; Joan Dissette 3rd, and Louise Ederheimer 4th. Little Harriet Rotz, granddaughter of the Hookers, won a blue ribbon for expert horsemanship in the child's class.

Ribbons and printing were donated by Mrs. George Rosenthal and other prizes were kindly donated by Mrs. S. Karger, Mrs. S. J. T. Strauss, Mrs. Fred Lazarus, Mrs. Simon Lazarus, Mrs. Sultzberger, Mrs. E. J. Block, Mrs. Ederheimer, Mrs Wineman and Mrs. M. A. Levinson.

The Charlevoix band played music during the program and refreshments were served by M. B. Hooker & Son and A. W. Sanskey, manager of the paddock. Prizes for selling the greatest number of programs were awarded to Jack Goldman for boys and M. McCoy for girls.

John R. Wineman presented prizes to winners in the various events in a very gracious manner and was very active in promoting the affair. Mr. Sankey was presented with a cup from the committee in charge at the close of the program. The show was successful beyond all expectations and the Charlevoix hospital will be richer by $250 as a result.

The following day at Elk Rapids he took first place, winning the William Alden Smith trophy of $50 in gold. Second place went to "Poke-a-long" of Northport and third to "Mary Louise" of Bellaire.

Mr. Brady then drove to Ludington, where a very successful regatta was staged on Sunday at Arcadia Camp on the Upper Hamlin Lake. "Brady's Boats" showed her heels to the rest of the field, winning another cash prize of $50. Second place went to "P. M. 23" und third to "Miss Humlin," the favorite in that locality.

M'MANUS MILL THRU FOR YEAR

COMPLETE 51 YEARS OF CONTINUOUS WORK

Has Timber to Keep Going for Many More Years. Product Goes Into Blocks

Completing a cut of over three million feet of hardwood and hemlock logs, the George B. McManus saw mill, Petoskey, suspended operations recently for this year.

Founded in 1876 by William L. McManus, father of the present proprietor, the McManus saw mill has seen 51 years of continuous operntion, being one of the few remaining lumher manfacturers of Northern Michigan.

Mr. McMnnus plans to operate a number of years yet, nnd has had little difficulty in stocking his mill with the raw material. While other saw mills have gradually quit business, owing to the diminishing supply, the McManus mill has yearly secured a surprisingly excellent quality of logs, a part of them being barged in from Beaver Islands, nnd the balnnce coming in directly to the mill on snow und trucks.

A large portion of the McManus output is for the Michigan Maple Block company, which operates in the south city limits and furnishes year-round employment to a steady crew of employees. Their product, butcher blocks, all kinds of cutting blocks, heavy duty tables and dies nre shipped all over the world, the Northern Michigan Maple being specially adapted for that use on account of its exceptional hardness.

A disastrous fire in 1913 destroyed the flooring mill of the McManus companies, that end of the industry not being rebuilt.

NEW SUB-DIVISION TO BE BEAUTY SPOT

Plat on North Side Will Be Improved and Put On Sale

Judging from the manner in which John Koch has beautified the grounds surrounding his Colonial Club, we are lead to believe that his new subdivision, to be known as Rosewood Addition, will be one of the beauty spots of Charlevoix when buildings and other improvements are completed.

Rosewood Addition comprises an 8-acre plat located on the east side of Meech street between Petoskey road and Division avenue. Mr. Koch announces that roads will be graded, cement sidewalks constructed, sewers laid nnd electric light lines installed. In other words, all modern facilities will be accessible to the twenty lots. There is already one house completed on the northwest corner of the plat and two more are under construction.

The new sub-division is well located within a short distance of the Charlevoix Golf Club, and should prove attractive to prospective seekers of summer home sites. The houses and lots will be placed on sale through a local real estate agent, valuation to be announced later.

Card of Thanks

We wish to extend our thanks and appreciation to those who so kindly offered sympathy, assistance and floral offerings during our recent bereavement. George Brown and family.—Adv. 35-t1pd.

SCHOOLS OPEN SEPTEMBER 12

LARGE ENROLLMENT IN PROSPECT FOR COMING YEAR

Officials Glad to Help Out Those Who Wish to Enroll From Out of Town

All departments of the Charlevoix public schools will open Monday, September 12, for the 1927-28 school term. Present indications point to another large enrollment.

Considerable has been done during the summer to beautify the buildings and grounds. Many needed improvements have been made at the central, high school and ward buildings and everything will be in readiness for the opening of school.

Work on the new grade building and gymnasium is progressing very satisfactorily. Some delay was caused on the former structure on account of stone not getting here, but this lost time will soon be made up. It is expected to have the new gymnasium ready for use for the second semester of school. This new and needed nddition is expected to attract many boys from Charlevoix and surrounding counties to high school this year.

Non-resident students from the surrounding community who are interested in high school are urged to write for courses of study and information. The superintendent nnd principal will be in their offices durin the week previous to September 12 and will be pleased to consult with parents and prospective students.

As far as we can learn at the present time, only four new teachers will be on the faculty this year. Superintendent George H. Coverdale is in the southern part of the state this week engaging the remainder of the teaching staff. Vacancies caused by the marriage of two former instructors and two that have left for other schools must he filled.

Miss Velera Keller will return for her history classes; Mrs. Leona McKinley for English; Stewart Coleman for mathamatics and science; Miss Elizabeth Hood for home economics; Bayard Bucken as athletic instructor, coach and mathmatics; Miss Eleanor Thomas as commercial teacher and girl's athletic instructor. Pearl Brigge will he principal of the Charlevoix county normal this year with Gertrude Dick as critic.

Teachers in the grades will include the following, although we can make no statement as to their grades until Mr. Coverdale's return: Miss Rocina Wilson, Sophia Manson, Jaunita Secord, Hazel Stewart, Walter Alexander, Florence Little, Gertrude Young, Martha Seeberger. Four vacancies in the grades are to be filled.

PRETTY WEDDING SATURDAY MORNING

Miss Arvilla Allard Becomes Bride of Eugene Lampani

Miss Arvilla Allard, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Allard, formerly of Charlevoix, and Eugene Lampani, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lampani of Grand Rapids, were married Saturday morning at St. Mary's Catholic church by Rev. Fr. Odelo, the pastor.

The bride was attired in a suit of pink flannel and was attended by her sister, Miss Eileen Allard who wore a suit of old rose flannel. Both the bride and bridesmade carried corsages of fall flowers.

The groom was attended by Harry Robinson of Grand Rapids.

A wedding breakfast was served to relatives of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Lampani will return to Grand Rapids after a motor trip through the north and make their future residence at 116 Fountain street.

The out-of-town guests include Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Allard, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Allard, Mrs. Allen Steffens and children, Miss Eileen Allard, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robinson and daughters, all of Grand Rapids.

Incidentally, Saturday the 27th, the wedding day of Mr. and Mrs. Lampani, was also the tenth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, who were married in the same church and at the same hour ten years ago. Mrs. Robinson is a sister of the bride and a former resident of this city.

Dr. Leahy, the optometrist, will be at the Hotel Charlevoix next Tuesday, September 6—one day only. Glasses guaranteed to fit.—Adv. 35-t1.

An Adjustable Steering Column to Suit Your Convenience

Buick for 1928 is extremely thoughtful of feminine comfort. One indication of this consideration is Buick's new steering column, which may be adjusted to the most comfortable position for women, as well as men.

And in addition, Buick for 1928 has a new steering wheel—slender to fit feminine fingers—yet deep and solid to provide the firm grip men demand.

Buick for 1928 pleases women because it is easier to drive—because it is more comfortable to ride in—and because it is the acknowledged style-leader among motor cars. That's why you see so many Buicks at fashionable gatherings and on the smartest boulevards.

Septic Tank Demonstrations Next Week

The first opportunity for Charlevoix county farmers to actually see these tanks erected will be possible on September 6-7-8 and 9th, when four actual demonstrations will be conducted by specialists from the Michigan State College co-operating with B. C. Melencamp, county agent.

The first demonstration will be at the farm of Bert Lumley on the Deer Lake road, three miles from Boyne City on Tuesday, September 6th; the second at the farm of Frank Russell just east of Star school on the Peninsula, on Wednesday, Sept. 7th; third at farm of Leonard Dow, two miles west of Boyne City, on Thursday, Sept. 8th, and last demonstration at the farm of Geo. Hanson, about three miles south of Ironton ferry, on west side of the arm, on Friday, Sept. 9th.

During the forenoon of each day the forms for the tank will be constructed and the other materials assembled and everything in readiness for the demonstration in the afternoon when the tank will be erected. In order to receive the maximum benefit everyone interested in the demonstration should be present by 2:00 fast time and watch the various operations necessary for the complete installation.

The septic tank and tile system is to the farm home what the sewer system is to the city. It provides a satisfactory means of disposing of the wastes from the kitchen, laundry and bath room.

Its cost is not prohibitative and its construction is little more difficult than the building of a concrete water tank.

Don't fail to mark your calendar right now for these demonstrations and attend the nearest one.

Gaylord Boys and Girls Club Camp "Great Success

The Northern Michigan Boy's and Girl's Club Camp was held the week of August 15th and was attended by some 300 club members from counties in this section.

The camp is supervised by members of the State Club staff, club leaders, and county agents and a week of club instructions, contests, and fun is in store for all club members who attend. The members are housed in the buildings on the Ostego county fair grounds; furnished cots free of charge and given all conveniences that any camp can afford.

Talk about fun, why, boys and girls you don't know what fun is, until you join club work and spend a week at this camp. If you don't believe this just ask any of the following boys and girls who spent the week at Gaylord what they thought of it: Alfred Larson, East Jordan; Eddie Ornland, East Jordan; Frank Severance, East Jordan; George Johnston, W. More Wheat and Rye if Weather Conditions Permit

An increased acreage of wheat and rye is to be sown in Michigan this fall, if weather conditions permit, according to a survey made by Herbert E. Powell, commissioner of Agriculture and Vern H. Church, Agricultural statisticinn of Michigan. The intended increase in wheat amounts to 15 per cent which would make the planted acreage 1,090,000 acres compared with 948,000 planted last fall and 920,000 harvested this year. In the fall of 1926, an intended increase of four per cent actually became a decrease of ten per cent because of unfavorable weather at seeding time. The present drought is making plowing difficult and much depends upon future weather as to the acreage that will actually be sown this fall. For the north central group of states, an increase of 16 per cent is reported. If the country's intentions were actually carried out, the total acreage would amount to 48,637,000 against 38,185,000 harvested this year.

Michigan farmers report an intention to increase their ryo acreage by 13 per cent which would result in 220,000 acres being planted in comparison with 195,000 last year. For the entire country, an acreage of about 20 per cent is intended which would give a total of 4,629,000 acres. Last year's acreage was 3,860,000, which was considerably less than intended because of continued and excessive rains at seeding time in several states.

INFORMATION COLUMN

Mint jelly may be made by flavoring gelatin with mint.

To make mint sauce for lamb, chop ¼ cup of mint leaves very fine, put them into ½ cup of vinegar with 1 tablespoon of sugar, and let stand an hour before serving.

Rice and potatoes are not exactly the same food in value, although both are rich in starch. Potatoes contain some minerals and vitamins in addition to starch. Milled rice is entirely lacking in these. However, when plenty of fruit and vegetables are used in the daily meals, using rice instead of potatoes makes little difference in nutrition.

To cook tougher cuts of meat, either the meat may be finely ground, cutting through the connective tissue which causes the comparative toughness, or the meat may be simmered slowly for a long time to soften and gelatinize the connective tissue as in cooking stew or pot roast. The same principle applies whether the meat is boiled, stewed, braised or smothered.

Spider corn bread is so-called because it is baked in a heavy iron spider or skillet instead of an ordinary baking pan. Custard corn cake and spoon bread are varintions in the proportion of the different ingredients, resulting in breads of different consisteney, nll of which are soft enough to be served with a spoon and eaten with forks.

Strong alkalis dissolve both wool and silk and even washing soda or strongly alkaline soap often seriously injures these fibers. The only alkalis that should be used in laundering or removing stains from wool or silk are the milder ones like borax or dilute solutions of ammonin. With the exception of nitric acid, dilute acids do not attack wool and silk readily. Blenching agents containing chlorine are very destructive to both wool and silk and should not be used. The use of very hot water should also be avoided. Excessive rubbing felts wool and shrinks it, while silk fabrics are likely to be torn. The removal of stains from wool and silk must be done with great care.

Don't feed your cows ear corn. Grind it either with or without the cob. They fail to digest about 20 per cent of the corn when fed whole.

Washing eggs reduces their keeping quality and results in losses, especially if they are to be placed in storage. All very small, very large or very dirty eggs should be used at home or sold to local consumers and not included with those shipped to market.

The United States Department of Agriculture always advocates the use of both purebred and sires and dams in raising hogs for market. While a good purebred sow will cost more than a scrub or grade, experience has shown there is a distinct saving of feed in fattening purebreds as compared to grades.

The quantity of whole milk produced in this country last year is placed by the United States Department of Agriculture at 120,766,487,000 pounds compared with 116,505,395,000 pounds in 1925, an increase of more than four billion pounds. The quantity of milk used for household purposes is estimated at 56,417,000,000 pounds compared with 54,325,776,000 pounds in 1925. This increased consumption of milk has been due to its greater use by the city population.

Fur farming, or the raising of fur animals in captivity, has steadily developed until the investment in the business in the United States and Alaska is about $30,000,000, and in Canada about $11,000,000. There are more than 4,000 fur farmers in these countries most of them raising silver or blue foxes. Fur farming is also being undertaken in European countries and in Japan, where it is having a steady growth.

About three days before farrowing the sow should be confined to the pen or house she will occupy during the farrowing period. Thoroughly clean the pen, which should be about 7 by 7 feet in size, and see that it is dry, well ventilated, and privided with guard rail made by placing 2x4 inch pieces around the inside of the pen about ten inches from the floor and from four to six inches from the sides. This will often prevent the sow from crushing a pig when she lies down. Remove all bedding, sweep the floor and sides, and wash with scalding water and lie. When dry, bed the pen with good, clean, dry bedding, such as wheat or rye straw, short or chopped hay, and shredded corn fodder. Do not use oat straw, as it retains moisture and becomes foul too easily.

The poultry industry of the United States is a billion dollar industry. In fact, according to Roy C. Potts, chief poultry marketing specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, it has passed well beyond that value and has become one of the leading agricultural industries of the country. Chicken egg production on farms is in the neighborhood of 2,000,000,000 dozen annually with a value of $600,000,000 or more while the number of poultry raised each year is approaching three-quarters of a billion with an approximnte value of $500,000,000. These production and value figures include farm production only and do not embrace the village and city production, which, if its extent were known, would undoubtedly swell the totals considerably.

Cottonseed meal should not be fed to young calves.

LOAD LIMIT PLACED ON STAGE FERRIES

Danger To Passengers Main Reason For This Move

A state inspector spent a day in St. Ignace last week inspecting the state ferries. The number of automobiles that can be taken on each trip was cut down to fifty so as to make room for the passengers to walk between cars without the danger that was ever present when the boat was loaded to capacity.

Heretofore automobiles were crowded in as closely as they could be, one against the other, and passengers had no room to walk between the cars.

In case of fire there would be no means of escape. The inspector could see this danger and ordered the cut down. Another year it will be necessary to have a third ferry on this run.

A locomotive has the right of way and can generally prove it.

Film Version of Camille May Inaugurate Modern Treatment of Classics

Will Norma Talmadge's stellnr production of Alexandre Dumas classic, "Camille," in strictly modern form, be the forerunner of other mudernized screen versions of famous plnys and novels of past centuries?

In this question is found the essence of the interest that has focused the uttention of the entire motion picture industry on Miss Talmadge's latest starring vehicle, booked as the feature nttraction at the Palace Theatre, Wednesday nud Thursday, September 7 nnd 8.

It is considered quite possible that Norma's "Carmille," regarded as one of the most brilliant screen performmnces of her carter, will establish a vogue for the substitution of sleek limousines for stnge coaches, and bobbed tresses for powdered hair.

Appearing as Norma's new leading mam in the role of "Armaud," is Gilbert Ronald, a young Spanish actor, who is the first virtually unknown player to be cast opposite the stur. Other members of the supporting cast are Lilyan Tashman, Rose Dione, Hnrvey Clark, Alec Francis, Helen Jerome Eddy, Albert Conti, Michael Viseroff, Evelyn Selbie and Etta Lee.

Chaney, Finds His Finest Role

All the climntic drama of the Russian revolution rages about Lon Chaney in "Mockery," his latest stnrring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which opens Saturday and Sunday, September 3 and 4 at the Palace Theatre.

"Mockery" affords the master of makeup a thrilling new characterization, thnt of a strange, brooding mujik who, by a queer turn of fate is thrown into a position of power nnd uses it to rend and tear the thing he loves. The climax is dramatic and unexpected. The peasant, fired by lust and passion, is redeemed by love and sacrifices his life to dever t a disaster that he, himself, has brought on.

The supporting cast is one of exceptional nbility, headed by Barbara Bedford as leading lady and Ricardo Cortez as the romantic lead. Others in the cast include Emily Fitzory, Charles Puffy, Kai Schmidt and Mack Swnin.

from her family. It was the kind of tale only too readily believed. Judging from the coolness of Swan, the missionary, Quarrier, without doubt, had published it in Albany; soon it would be the property of the whole west coast. Poor, loyal Nicda! Then, the thought of one who had seen and understood came like a breath of clean, air from the spruce. He saw her again, her heavy hair touched by the moonlight, her fine, dark eyes with the questioning look, as she said: "Good-by, Mr. Exile!"

CHAPTER V

The winter wood cut, the geese salted and cached, the whitefish platform grouning with the spoil of the nets which would not be lifted until the ice. Guthrie and Etienne sat in council of war.

"How many of our people are wintering on the Island?" asked Garth.

The half-breed closed his small eyes, his face contracted into a network of lines as he counted the families which had, through the summer, crossed the strait to hunt on the great island, instead of taking the river trail for the forest and muskegs of the Elkwan headwaters.

"We got twelve—fifteen hunter dere. Attawapiskat and Kapiskau got more dan dat."

"That means a lot of fox pelts if the mice and rabbits are plentiful, and the litters come through the summer."

Etienne scowled. "We not get mooch of eet," he muttered. "Dem people greeve de hunter beeg price."

It was true. Cut off from the island until the ice set hard, as the post was, while the hunters could reach the schooner wintering at Seal Cove and get more for their fur, the outlook was indeed gloomy. But Garth had no idea of allowing these strangers to come into his territory and take the valuable fox trade of Akimiski away from him without a struggle. While he remained in the employ of the company, he would give the best that he had of loyalty and service. His pride was involved; and as he searched for a solution of the problem which the presence of this schooner presented, the desire to beat this free-trader in his bold try for the priceless silver and black fox of Akimiski obsessed his thoughts.

From Graham at Attawapiskat and Boucher at Kapiskau, he anticipated little aid or comfort. The former was an inactive, oldish man with a large up-river trade, and Boucher, according to Cameron of Albany, already in a panic over the power of the machine guns aboard St. Denis's schooner. So Garth had decided that he would ignore his colleagues on the coast south of him and play a lone hand.

For a space the pipe in Etienne's thick lips fi[illegible] the face of the white man straight[illegible]

"Soul Soucl!" he cried. "Why didn't we [illegible] We'll take [illegible] to see [illegible] He's got two [illegible] Tis [illegible] of [illegible]

Slowly a cloud of smoke through his teeth, the half-breed grunted his disapproval. "De winter on de Little Elkwan up over de Winisk countree Eet weel take long time to find heem."

"I know it will be difficult to get [illegible] the strait before the ice. But we'll put him over somehow."

"We get frozen een wid our canoe up riviere," protested the hard-headed Iroquois.

"We'll take a birch canoe and leave it—carry the little toboggan to come out with—the dogs can follow the shore going up," urged the enthusiastic Guthrie.

Knowing the country, Etienne realized only too well the difficulty of traveling between seasons; breaking the young ice in the quiet reaches of the river until compelled to abandon the canoe; then the wait for the closing of the stream and the snow. For weeks the thin ice of the Elkwan would be a trap for the unwary dog team. To the trail-wise Etienne, it was a foolish venture; to the man whose only thought was the salvage of the fox trade, a necessity.

"How you get heem to de island?"

"If the channel and strait are open, we'll take him in the York boat. We can wait for the wind and if there isn't too much flow ice, we'll get him across."

Etienne knocked out his pipe. His bright eyes snapped as he looked at Guthrie. "Eef you say so, I go. But we are two dam' fool."

"But we've got to give these people a fight for that fur—it's worth thousands to us."

"All right, boss, we fight." But when the veteran voyager told his wife of the mad purpose of Guthrie, her dark face grayed with fear at the thought of the November journey over the thin ice of the Elkwan.

For a week, with his two best huskies, Castor and Pollux, and Shot, following opposite banks of the river to avoid fighting, Garth and Etienne poled and paddled and tracked past black spruce and poplar grown shores from the latter of which the frost had stripped the leaves.

At the mouth of the Little Elkwan the winter suddenly shut down, locking lakes and deadwaters with a shell too thick for their battering poles to break a channel through for their canoe, and the men in search of Saul Soucl were prisoners. Somewhere up the little Elkwan ran the trap-lines of the man, to reach whom they had slaved for days with ice-crusted poles and paddles, and freezing hands, while their hot breaths rose in columns on the keen air; but until a fall of snow, or some bitter nights to bridge the river trail, they could not move. However, there were five hungry mouths to feed, so they hunted back in the muskeg for caribou. At last, when severe frost had sealed the slower flowing reaches of the river with three-inch ice, they hitched the huskies, and started. Shot, who the winter previous had learned to draw Garth's trapping sled, refusing to team with the larger dogs, ran loose.

The second day out they learned from an Indian that Soucl's main camp was two sleeps up the river. And thanks to the trained eyes of Etienne, the sled avoided the traps of shell ice over the swift water and the second night turned in to a winter camp.

At the challenge of his dogs, Saul Soucl, Treaty Chief of the Elkwan Crees, lean, grizzled, taciturn, with bony features, over which leather-like skin lifted with wrinkles was tightly drawn, pushed through the flap of his tipi.

"Bo-jay!" he said, showing no surprise at the strange appearance of the Elkwan people one hundred and fifty miles inland at a time when no sane man would have crossed the river. The three [illegible] hands and, first feeding and [illegible] the dogs to trees, entered the [illegible] tent where Saul's wife and [illegible] were eating from a copper [illegible]

ON TO SCHOOL

With the summer vacations drawing to a close, pupils of our schools and their parents should turn their minds to the important business of continuing youth's education.

The recent flight of Lindbergh is an inspiring example of seeing the task through. Just as Lindy turned his plane east and set out for Paris, so must the student turn his thoughts toward our education institutions, with the determination, "On to School."

We should employ as much determination, zeal and thoroughness in continuing this great adventure as Lindy did in his flight to France. The happy partnership of Lindy and his plane, which he termed "we," finds parallel in our partnership with our schools. We should unite the spirit of youth with the spirit of education, just as Lindy joined the "Spirit of America" with the "Spirit of St. Louis."

Lindbergh did not make his trip primarily for gain but for accomplishment. However, the former proved a valuable by-product. Let us follow his example, and, as he did, continue our flight in education for the good of the nation and the cause of progress, as well as for the returns to youth. Though the impulse is unselfish its fruits are substantial, for out of such enterprise springs the inspiration that generates creative power. A hundred plans in aviation are maturing because of Lindy's signal achievement. A thousand advantages accrue from the achievements of education.

Pupil no less than aviator must follow through to attain success. Lindy did not stop with the acclaim of the world ringing in his ears. He had just begun his start on a constructive career. He had finished but one lap of the race. The same application can be made to commencement and promotion in our schools; they are but steps to a higher service.

Parents are reminded that Lindberg's backers had no guarantee of any returns. Loyalty and admiration for the spirit of this youth and he [illegible] a compliment inspired [illegible] to make long term sheriffs [illegible]. The should become attitude of parents and taxpayers who appreciate that education is the foundation for life.

It is timely, then, right now, when school days are just ahead, to turn our eyes toward our schools, also toward our boys and girls called on for an important decision, and sound the slogan, "On to School."

LABOR DAY IN MICHIGAN

Monday, September 5, is Labor Day. In spite of a world-wide charge that Sacco and Vanzetti were victims of capitalistic greed, Labor Day will find millions of prosperous citizens celebrating the event, especially here in this state, where conditions have combined to make this one of the most fortunate states in the Union. In no other country in the world is labor so prosperous, so well paid, or wealth better distributed than it is right here in the United States. In this country our labor is our capitalism. This editorial was penned by a laboring man; laborers will read it in the finest homes the fruits of labor have ever provided in the world's history; we aim to be one large, happy individualistic family, all independently seeking life's greatest blessings, yet bound together through sympathy and understanding. Labor in the United States has been dignified, it has been given a purpose, and whether you be a farmer, banker, manufacturer, publisher, laborer or merchant, your problems are closely allied with all others in this great national march to better, cleaner and higher things. Beautiful Michigan, transformed to its present day loveliness by the hands of labor—the common tie that binds us all together.

EXPERTS ON THE JOB

The usual reports of small fires in northern Michigan woods scarcely give a complete picture of the precarious situation with which the State Conservation Department now is coping or of the excellent record made to date. Not in many years have the woods been as dry as now. Sweet fern and brush growth is shriveling from lack of moisture. Grass is brown. Leaves on the oaks are brittle. The whole picture is a fire setting. Only a spark from a locomotive or burning cigarette stub is needed to set the woods flaming. Yet, in the face of this condition, a stage set for conflagration, there has been not a single extensive forest fire this season. Small fires have been numerous. That is inevitable so long as railroads operate through dry woods and the public refuses to take all precautions. But these fires have been extinguished in incipiency. Vigilance has prevented them from getting sufficient start to spread over large areas as did fires two years ago in the vicinity of Clare and farther north.

It is perhaps too much to anticipate that if the drouth continues there will be no serious fires. But the record to date is itself occasion for [illegible] conservation department [illegible] a forestry expert and the new chief fire warden is a scientifically trained man. That the fruits of their knowledge and their appreciation of forest values have produced a more efficient forest fire fighting machine than Michigan has had heretofore is revealed in the impressive record made in the face of menace to date.—Grand Rapids Herald.

HEALTH EDUCATION CONSIDERED FUNDAMENTAL IN LINCOLN

Two of the credit hours required for the graduation of senior high-school boys, and one of the credit hours required of the senior high-school girls in Lincoln, Nebr., must be in after-school sports. Health education is considered fundamental, and in its work the city board of education acts in close cooperation with the home and the welfare organizations of the city. The health program includes discovery and removal of health handicaps, periodic examination of all school employees as well as of pupils, and enrollment clinics for the pre-school children; teaching projects for better food and health habits, and physical training for all pupils. In the annual inspection of pupils' eyes, ears, nose and throat are examined by specialists; teeth by a dentist; and vision and hearing by a nurse. These inspections are required by law. Height and weight are recorded at least twice each year; and special examinations, including heart and lungs, are given each year to pupils who wish to engage in competitive athletics or enter physical education classes. Three systematic inspections are given each year for contagious diseases, and measures are taken for immunization. Provision is made in certain schools for open-window classes and properly equipped rest rooms.

CAST OUT THY FERRET

Warning is being sent out by the State Department of Conservation that keeping ferrets will not be allowed after September 5. The last Michigan legislature passed an act making it unlawful for one to have ferrets in his possession after that date. The old law allowed the possession of ferrets on one's premises for the purpose of destroying predatory animals, although he was forbidden to hunt with them. This failed to work out, hence the new statute which provides that the only place where they may be lawfully kept is at the state game farm at Mason. Hereafter, the farmer wishing to rid his orchard of rabbits will make application to the department and a game warden with ferrets will be sent to his farm and the work of extermination carried on under state supervision. Owners of ferrets must either send them outside the state, or else to the game farm, where they will be taken care of by the wardens. A severe penalty for non-compliance has been placed in the new law.

RECKLESS DRIVING

From now on the reckless driver is going to have a much harder time convincing the authorities that he was not to blame. Under Michigan's new traffic law the old excuse, "I was not driving over thirty-five miles an hour," will no longer go. Cutting in and out of traffic, passing other vehicles on curves or on a hill will be prima facie evidence of reckless driving. And the penalties for reckless driving are going to be far more severe than in the old days. True, out in the wide open stretches on country lanes, where there is no traffic to speak of, one will be permitted to let his conscience be his guide, but it behooves him to have his car under control at all times. The old law fixed an approximate speed in the minds of motorists regardless of circumstances. The new law advises them to adjust their speed at all times to probable circumstances. It will be far better if one sees that his brakes are always kept in proper condition and that they regulate their course with judgement, rather than just a desire to get somewhere in a hurry.

WORSE THAN WAR

Information released last week discloses the fact that more American people have been killed by automobiles during the eight-year period which ended December 31, 1926, than lost their lives in the World war.

These statistics are somewhat alarming in view of the fact that the accidental death rate is on the increase, 1926 having the most ever recorded. Numerous accidents reported so far this year would seem to indicate that the average will be kept up.

Carelessness on somebody's part is nearly always the cause. Maybe it is on the part of one of the great army of automobile owners, whose numbers include practically everyone who can dig up enough money for the first installment. He will probably get blamed for it.

However, it could have just as well been the fault of the pedestrains if there is one in the accident. America has an infinite number of things to its credit, but having by far the greatest number of auto casualties and by far the greatest per capita of homicides are not included in the list.

GETTING THE GAME

These tourists are great for the crows.

But bad for the rabbits. These little bunnies get out in the road and are run over. The next morning the crows gather around for breakfast.

A crow has some virtue even if you do not like his voice.

And it's astonishing how much wild life is killed by motor traffic. The drunken driver is the only thing that gets by.

Merchants throughout the county have been giving free tickets to their customers for some weeks past, good for a drawing to be held two days of the fair. The first drawing will take place on Wednesday, September 14, at 11:00 a. m. The person holding the lucky ticket will receive $20.00 in gold. At another drawing held at 3:00 p. m. the same day, some one will get a registered Holstein cow.

Two drawings will also be held on Thursday, the 15th. At the 11:00 p. m. drawing the prize is a Shetland pony, buggy, harness and saddle. At 3:00 p. m. the same day the grand prize will be awarded to the holder of the lucky ticket—a $1500.00 Studebaker sedan.

CHAPTER IV

Little did those whom Garth Guthrie had brought to Albany in his York boat sense what this act of friendliness to strangers might mean in days of drudgery—precious days lost from the goose hunt which was nearing its end—for the men from Elkwan. As the boat drifted down the south channel of the delta past the scrub-grown shores of Albany Island, Guthrie's thoughts traversed the days since the storm and the meeting with the girl back at the Albany mission, who was going down the coast and out of his life, as the "wavies," from the Arctic, linger through the soft September weather, until the sting of the first norther sends them down the wind. But the "wavies" return. There would be no return to the west coast for Joan Quarrier.

He had left her, the night before, puzzled by the elation her promise to write him by the Christmas mail had aroused. And, always, as he strove to analyze the nature of his response to the appeal of her genuineness—her level-eyed meeting of life—the blond loveliness of Ethel, with her shrinking—from the unpleasant—the inevitable—intruded with the knowledge of disillusion. Ethel was growing so vague—so shadowy—here in a land where raw life admitted of no subterfuge—no compromise. And yet, Ethel would wait for the brother of Sir Charles Guthrie, he told himself, with a tightening of the lips; of that he had no doubt.

The York boat reached the open water of the bay as the sun lifted, bringing an easterly breeze. As they worked up the channel to the post, a sense of loneliness chilled the heart of Guthrie. There would be no welcome, which, through the weeks of the summer, he had grown to cherish, on his homecoming—no joy in the wistful eyes of the girl who waited. All that remained to him now was the memory of a devotion—self-immolating; complete. Poor little Ninda!

Old Annie and the wife of Etienne stood on the shore while the voyagers made the boat fast to its buoy. As the men paddled in, it was evident that news awaited them.

"Sonet'ing happen," said Etienne. "Marie ver' mooch excite' w'en she not stan' still."

"Bon jour, ladies!" rolled Guthrie, as he approached the chattering women on the beach. "What seems to be on your minds?"

"Oh, dey have come here—dos men!" cried old Anne.

"What men?"

"De man in de beeg boat—she was here. Dat one wid de bad' face—McDonald Ha! Ha! de Injun call heem."

Guthrie and Etienne stared incredulously at the speaker.

"What did he want?"

"He want talk wid you. He leave dis." Old Anne handed Guthrie a folded sheet of paper. Opening it, he read:

"The Hudson's Bay Company, Elkwan:

"This is to save you a trip to the island after the stuff left on the beach by that walrus-faced geologist, Quarrier. I can use most of it, and will pay St. John's prices for it on my return home. Have made an inventory.

"McDONALD."

"Well, he's a cool one!" commented Guthrie.

Etienne shook his black head. "He steal dat stuff, he steal all de fur on Akimiski."

"Not if I know it! If he thinks he's going to get our share of the Akimiski hunt, he'll have to fight for it. He'll find he can't bluff us," replied Guthrie, with increasing irritation at the thought of the high-handed methods of the unknown. In the north a cache was inviolate, and the stores of Quarrier on the Akimiski beach had not been abandoned, but cached, to be recovered later. McDonald's appropriation of them under the circumstances was a distinct breach of northern custom. If this was a sample of what could be expected from him later, in the fight for the Akimiski fox trade, the winter and spring would hardly be dull on the west coast. As soon as they had shot their winter supply of geese, he would have a talk with Graham and Boucher, at Attawapiskat and Kapiskau.

"Too bad, Etienne, we were not here to meet Mr. Laughing McDonald. What did you think of him, Anne? He's a big man with red hair, isn't he?"

"Oh, ver' beeg, strong man, wid hair lak fire. Hees face!" Anne stopped to shudder. "He got de crazy face all tom, from hees hurt mout'."

"Poor devil!" thought Guthrie, "branded for life with that grin! Then he asked: "Who came ashore with him?"

The question was a signal for an emotional outburst from Marie. "Dey were bad men, M'sieu Guthree. One beeg one, wid de barbe noir, black beard, he try kees me, de femme of Etienne Savanne." The black eyes of the lonely wife of Etienne flashed with anger at the memory.

"W'at! Dey try dat wid you, dees people?" The sinewy fingers of the half-breed worked nervously as if groping for a knife handle. "W'at you do, Marie?" he demanded.

"McDonal' Ha! Ha! broke in Anne, "he talk ver' cross to de black beard—give heem push lak he was littl' boy. Dis McDonal', dey all scare of heem, dose men. Den dey paddle out to de boat."

"Good enough! McDonald seems to be boss all right," laughed Guthrie. "Black beard; that must be the Newfoundland whaler, Etienne, the captain of the schooner."

The face of Etienne hardened. "He mak mooch trouble on dis coast—dis McDonal' Ha! Ha!—mooch trouble."

"It looks like a lively winter for us, eh, Shot?" And the factor of Elkwan bent to rub the ears of his dog.

* * * * * * *

It was early October on the west coast, hunting weather, when the geese restlessly crossed and recrossed the wide flats between the timber and the sea, and the duck, in flocks of thousands, endlessly rose from the shallows to skirt for a space, the rim of the tide, only to settle again, and shortly repeat the flight. When they had shot two back-breaking loads, Etienne and Guthrie started for their camp out where a boulder-strewn sandspit thrusting seaward rendered the launching of a loaded canoe possible at the height of the tide. A mile from the tent on the sandspit, Etienne lifted his lowered head banded by the tump-line which held the flour bags filled with geese. Then he swung round to the bent figure following, eyes on the ground.

"Boat at de camp."

Guthrie straightened until his range of vision included the sandspit. Below the boulders at the nose of the spit lay a ship's boat. A boat could come only from the schooner of McDonald. What were they after?

Nearing the camp, the packers dropped their loads and continued with their guns. If these people had abused Shot, chained to his stake—Guthrie's pulse quickened at the thought. Near the tent three men idled, evidently waiting for the owners.

"You keep out of this, Etienne. You're sore. Let me do the talking," warned Guthrie, as he approached the camp. Suddenly breaking into a run, he shouted: "Stop baiting that dog, or I'll turn him loose on you!"

Standing out of reach, a young sailor tossed sand into the face of the infuriated airedale, straining at his leash.

"All right! Turn him loose," was the truculent reply, and retreating, the sailor cocked his shotgun.

"Put down that gun, you young fool!" commanded the elder of the three strangers to the boy, as Garth reached the camp.

"What are you people after—trouble?" demanded Guthrie, fighting for his self-control, for the badgering of his dog had left him hot.

The man addressed grinned good-naturedly and extended his hand. "Good day, Mr. Hudson's Bay; we ain't runnin' away from none. We saw your tent and rowed in to get some shells. If you have any—to sell."

Guthrie took the hand of the speaker, a heavily built man, with a beard. The anger left his face as he said: "Oh, you're not going to take the shells, then?" He was conscious, as he spoke, of the curiosity in the eyes of the man he faced, as they lingered on his scarred cheek.

"No," drawled the other. "You must think we're pirates. We pay as we go."

"But you robbed that cache on McDonald will pay for that stuff—it would spoil in the rain."

"Well, we don't touch a man's cache in the north. By the way, where is this McDonald from?"

"We all hail from St. John's, Newfoundland."

"But McDonald?"

"Well, he hails from there, too," was the reply, but from the tail of his eye Guthrie caught a look in the face of the companion of the spokesman which belied the accuracy of the statement. "You say you'll sell us some shells?" continued the speaker.

"No, we can't give you any!" It was Guthrie's turn to smile. "We need every shell we've got."—He glanced at the muzzles of the guns of the strangers. "Our shells wouldn't fit those cannon of yours, anyway. We use twelve gauge guns with No. 6 shot. At close range it gets more geese than this big stuff.

"McDonald gets 'em with a Lewis—fires a burst into a flock and kills a half dozen."

"So you've got Lewis guns, eh?" abruptly demanded Garth.

"Oh, yes! We're heeled. If you people should take the notion to try to run us out of the bay."

"Why, man! you've got as much right here as we have, but if you don't play straight, we'll run you out—that's all."

The blue eyes of the sailor met the chill gaze of the soldier in a long, unwavering stare, and from that mutual appraisal, the reaction in the mind of each man was identical.

"You may—but you'll sweat some. Now, I want to give you fair warning that some of your people have come to us this summer of their own accord. There's an Injun who claims you stole his daughter—"

"What! That skunk of an Ojibwa? He tells you that?" Guthrie sickened at the thought of Ninda's memory being made the catspaw of Indian gossip.

"That's what he claims. It's none of my business, but he's got it in for you, so don't blame us. He's working for us, of course, for the fur."

"A girl he claimed as his daughter came to Elkwan in June, dying with tuberculosis," said Garth quietly. "She couldn't travel—we took care of her till she died. He tried to hold me up—for stuff. I kicked him out, so he wants his revenge. Just tell him, Mr. —" "Skene," prompted the other. "Just tell him for me, Mr. Skene, that I'll give him to the dog if he shows up at the post. He knows Shot."

"Looks like a tough old veteran!" commented Skene, admiringly, glancing at the airedale, tense as a statue, hair and tail up, bristling at his stake.

"He is. He's an overseas man. He'd tear that Indian's throat out in one snap."

"There's another matter, too," continued Garth. "When your people came to Elkwan when we were down the coast, one of them—fellow with a black beard—tried something that will get him knifed if he shows up at the post again." At the words, Etienne slowly moved up to a position beside Guthrie, his right hand resting carelessly on his hip, the fingers touching the bone handle of his sheath knife. The bearded leader of the sailors glanced curiously at the flint-like face of the half-breed, and smiled indifferently at the threat. "Just tell him for me, will you, to keep away from Elkwan?"

"Oh, you mean Black Brenult. He's sailing master—owns the schooner. I'm the mate. He's a bit rough, I'll admit, but don't make any mistake about who's boss. McDonald's running this party."

"That's why I'm asking you to tell McDonald that we won't stand for

"I Kicked Him Out, So He Wants His Revenge."

manhandling women on this coast," insisted Guthrie.

"Right-o, I'll tell him. Well, we'll be off," said the big sailor, offering his hand, which Garth shook. "I'm glad to meet a reasonable Hudson's Bay man and one who wasn't sitting snug on the bay when we had our backs to the wall in front of Amiens."

And as Garth stood pondering the remark, Skene turned and joining his men, walked to his boat with a limp. He, too, thought the man who watched, is wearing his service stripe. The sailors launched their boat in the rising tide, and poling it out to the deeper water, rowed away.

So the memory of Ninda was to be mouthed on evil tongues? The story was going out among the Crees that the factor of Elkwan had taken her

CHARLEVOIX TRIMMED PETOSKEY'S OUTFIT

Pulled Out of Eighth Inning Tie For Win, 6-4

Charlevoix clearly demonstrated its superiority over the Petoskey team last Sunday by winning a close, hard fought game 6 to 4.

Going into the eighth inning with the score tied 4-4, Zimmerman got a hit, stole second and came in on Coatta's single. Coatta stole second and scored on McCann's drive to right. McCann was out stealing, ending Charlevoix's scoring.

Knight wns the batting star for Charlevoix, collecting three hits and a sacrifice. Zimmerman pitched a steady game, although his own ragged fielding handicapped him at times. Shields played errorless ball in center field and featured with several excellent catches.

No game has been scheduled for next Sunday yet, and in all probabilities the team will play at Beaver Island.

CEMENT ON M-75 NOW COMPLETED

Will Be Ready For Traffic In Couple of Weeks

Marsman & Tabor of Grand Rapids, who have contract for building the cement road toward Clarion completed the State street end of the road last Saturday, August 20. The new road is completed from the top of State street hill to the Worfel corners, a distance of one and six tenths miles. A portion of the road from Cozynook farm to Worfel is already for use while the west end will be allowed to season two weeks longer.

The road makers are equipped with improved machinery which made possible the rapid progress. In one day they laid 672 feet of cement pavement seven inches thick in the center tapering to nine inches at each edge.

The gravel is hauled to the foot of State street by the B. C. G. & A. R. R. It is taken from the car with a power shovel and deposited on a truck along with six bags of cement to a load and hauled to the mixer which is on the highway where the new road is being built; the truck load is made immediately into cement and poured. This week the same force is blasting the cement on the hill of State street and will relay 315 feet of the old cement road that undermined and partly destroyed last spring. Otto Arnston, foreman, is handling the crew of 25 men and Inspector Stack of Boyne Falls, is looking after the interest of the state. Next week they will move to Walloon Lake and cement work on the north end of M-75 and work towards Boyne City.—Boyne Citizen.

An interesting and helpful evening service will be held at 7:30. The public is cordially invited.

1,000 AIRPORTS BY 1928 IS PREDICTED FOR U. S.

Paved Fields Urged for Heavier Commercial Planes

More than 1,000 airports and intermediate fields will dot the United States from coast to coast and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico by the end of 1927, according to the Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce.

A survey just completed by the Air Information Division shows 865 permanent fields now in use, with 187 cities definitely considering the establishment of municipal airports. Of present fields, 207 are municipally owned. Chambers of Commerce, business clubs and other civic organizations are cooperating in the effort to build up a complete airway and airport system, it is stated.

Many authorities are urging permanent construction for airport buildings and especially for field runways. Planes for projected passenger lines, carrying as many as thirty passengers, such as the Ford line between Chicago and Los Angeles, and seven or eight ton freight planes will require rigid landing surfaces. Turf and cinders, it is claimed, will not stand the wear.

Capt. Donald E. Keyhoe, flying aide to Colonel Lindbergh on his tour of 75 cities, recommends runways of concrete 100 feet wide, and Commander Richard E. Byrd, U. S. N., suggests that entire fields be of concrete, particularly since this permits landing and "take off" regardless of weather conditions.

European fields are leading in the use of concrete, runways of this material being reported in service at the Croydon Airdrome in England and at airports at Dessau, Germany and Tempehof, near Berlin.

TENT-CATERPILLARS LIKE BRIGHT LIGHT

This Formation Leads Way To His Destruction

A hungry tent-caterpillar, if given his choice, will forsake a luscious apple-branch to feed his soul on the beauty of a pale yellow electric light. Therein lies a possible means of thwarting the pest, according to a report from the state experiment station at Geneva, N. Y., received at Ann Arbor by the public utility information bureau.

As part of a study of the reactions of insects to light of various colors, apple tree branches have been arranged to radiate from a central point toward lights of different colors. Insects and caterpillars are placed at the hub and permitted to choose their own paths to the light which attracts them most.

Tent caterpillars, despite their ravenous appetites, passed along the succulent branch that led to a pale yellow light, and did not pause to eat. Some even left the twigs to gather on the glass behind which the light shown. Some chose a deeper yellow. Red light appealed only to a few.

THIEF ADMITS ROBBING KILNS

Harry Theodoro, Bay Shore Indian, Held for Burglary

Herman Kays, of the Northern Michigan Protective agency, reported last Friday afternoon that Harry Theodore, Indian, had confessed to the robbery of the tool house and gasoline supply sheds at the Northern Lime and Stone company kilns at Bay Shore. The robbery occurred Monday night. Theodore, who is 22 years old and single is being held for trial.

He explained to the officers that he broke into three buildings at the kilns seeking tools and gas. He returned the gasoline supply can and tools. The locks were broken off the doors. The kiln was shut down for a few days for repairs and most of the men were absent from the night shift at the time.

Working on the theory that some of the unemployed Indians of that village might be involved, Mr. Kays soon discovered Theodore was not working but was ablo to keep his car running. He was at once suspected and questioned, making the confession.

POLLOCK GOES TO BIG RAPIDS

WILL LEAVE CHARLEVOIX LATTER PART OF THIS WEEK

His Two Year's Pastorate Here Has Been One of Many Great Accomplishments

Rev. Cecil E. Pollock, for the past two years pastor of the First Methodist church of Charlevoix, has accepted a call from the Methodist church at Big Rapids, Michigan, and will leave this week to take over his new charge.

During his two year's pastornte here Rev. Pollock nnd family have made a host of friends who greatly regret their departure. The church has prospered under his diligent and faithful work. He has been active in all matters pertaining to a better community and it was hoped that he would remain here.

That Rev. Pollock has been unusually active and accomplished much during his stay in Charlevoix may be gathered from the following resume during that period:

Fifty-seven members were received into the Charlevoix church membership; baptized 57 at Charlevoix; officiated at 17 weddings; during the last year delivered more than 300 sermons, lectures and addresses; taught "The Religions of Mankind" and "Work of Making Sermons" in the summer school of theology at Albion; arranged and superintended the Indian camp meeting at the Carlevoix Indian mission; tnught in correspondence course of instruction, during the entire year, for the undergradnate pastors of the Michigan conference; tutored two young men during the month of August, taking one through the first two books of Caeser's Gallic war and the other through three orations of Cicero; served as conference secretary for the Michigan annual conference at Battle Creek in September; attended many funerals and cared for all the other work incident to regular pastornte.

During the first year in Charlevoix Rev. Pollock, in addition tn the regular work of the pastorate, prepared and wrote a master's thesis on "The Lord's Supper in the New Testament" which was accepted by Northwestern university as a completion of post graduate studies, for which the university granted the degree Master of Arts.

The work of the church has prospered as follows: Installed additional radiation in the auditorium and church office; re-plastered the ceiling of the auditorium; re-decorated the basement and front entrance of the church; papered the parsonage; inaugurated and carried out the program of providing and paying for the winter's supply of fuel the summer before it is needed; maintained the largest Epworth Lengue the year around on Grand Traverse district; organized and maintained a large junior church; published a hulletin of church news each week; utilized feature services for Sunday evenings, which increased the church attendance, many times crowding the building to capacity; maintained a men's club during the winter and spring with an average attendance each week of more than fifty and many times with more than a hundred present; staged a father and son banquet with 225 present; maintained three thriving woman's organizations, besides a Sunday school that has been well attended. The church is out of debt, in a flourishing condition and officered as follows:

Board of Stewards—Mrs. James Simons, Earl Shapton, Oluf Nordrum, Charles Arnold, Mrs. Charles Arnold, Mrs. P. D. Campbell, Mrs. Margaret Washburn, Mrs. Edward Stewart, Mrs. Oluf Nordrum, Edwin Cook, Mrs. F. F. McMillan, Arthur Edwards, Frank Bird, Mrs. Laura Courier, Geo. Priest, William Poole, Orson Everts, LaVerne McGhan, Mrs. Arthur Edwards, Mrs. Mary Reinhart, Mrs. Jones Durance, John Macey. Board of Trnstees—H. B. Jacobs, Martin Block, Edward Stewart, Albert E. Edwards, Dr. F. F. McMillan. William C. Palmer is local preacher; Mrs. A. C. Belding, chorister; Frank Bird, president of men's club; Mrs. M. B. Hooker, president of Ladies' Aid Society; Mrs. Laverne McGban, president of Ladies' Literary and Sewing Club; Mrs. Ada Beeman, president, of woman's Missionary Society; Vera Belding, president of Epworth League.

Charlevoix people will miss Rev. Pollock and his family and they leave with the best wishes of the communiey following them.

JOHN PESEK TAKEN ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Formerly Served Six Months For Similar Offense

John Pesek, who two years ago served six months at Ionia for violation of the liquor law, is again in trouble.

Pesek, who resides on U. S. 31 about five miles south of Charlevoix, was arrested last Saturday by Sheriff Vaughan on a warrunt charging him with keeping a place where alleged moonshine was manufactured and sold. We understand that the two young men employed at The Inn this summer have confessed to officers that they purchased liquor from Pesek.

Unable to furnish $300 bail sit at his heuring Saturday, Pesek is lodged in the county jail.

DRILLING TEST HOLES AT OLD LIME QUARRY

One Outfit in Operation and Others Expected This Week

Two men employed by the Newaygo Portland Cement company, which owns large lime rock deposits south of the city, and owns the former Charlevoix Rock Product company's holdings and equipment, are engaged in drilling test holes in the old quarry this week.

We have been unable to find out the reason for such drilling or what they are drilling for. We understand that two more drilling outfits will be added to their present equipment some time this week. Large quantities of pipe have been taken to the old quarry and a pipe line run to Lake Michigan to secure a water supply.

Whatever their reason may be, we hope it will eventually result in some permanent activity which will give employment to local men.

Monday, October 3, is the date when Dr. J. Leaby, the Optometrist, will bo at the Hotel Charlevoix. Hours: 8:30 to 4:30—Adv. 38-t2.

STATE FERRIES NOT ADEQUATE

PRIVATE INTEREST MAY OPERATE NEXT SEASON

Dock Sites Have Been Acquired at Both Ports—Boats Will Have 65 Car Capacity

It is indicated that another auto ferry will be put on the run across the straits next season. The promoters have secured sites at both Mackinaw City and St. Ignace, have arranged for a boat, and expect to start construction of docks this fall.

The following statement has been issued by the organization.

"Act No. 106 of the Public Acts of 1923 authorized the establishment and maintenance of a ferry service across the Straits of Mackinac as a part of the highway system of the state. The service was inaugurated in the month of August, 1923, according to the terms of the above act. The steamer, a small boat, was put on the run. In the year 1924, the Areal was replaced by the two steel steamers, Mackinaw City and St. Ignace, with a capacity of 35 cars each. In the yenr 1925, the traffic increased so rnpidly that it was evident something more must be done. It was finally decided to enlarge the two boats already in the service. Their capacity was enlarged to 50 cars each.

Rapid Increase

Prior to 1923, automobiles were carried by the railway ferries. Statistics covering the last ten years show the following: 700 cars carried across the straits in 1918; 1600 in 1919; 3,472 in 1920; 4,731 in 1921; 9,326 in 1922; 19,820 in 1923; 38,681 in 1924; 60,322 in 1925; 80,000 in 1926; 100,000 in 1927 (estimate.)

There is u population of more thnn twenty million within a sixteen hour traveling radius of the straits subject to intense heat. These people welcome the invigorating atmosphere and cool breeze of the Strnits of Mackinac. When the highways into Mackinaw City are paved, the stream of automobiles clamoring to cross the straits will approach a flood within the next five years.

The Detroit Free Press in its issue of August 25, 1927, giving credit to the Bay City Times, says: 'But the state has failed to keep pace with the progress of the automobile and therein lies an opportunity for much improvement. The twn ferry boats have been unable to meet the demands made upon them.

To meet the situation, a company has been organized, composed of men from the Soo, St Ignace and Detroit to own, operate and maintain a ferry service for the rush season of 1928. They have secured a bont with a capacity of 65 automobiles. The dock site at Mackinaw City is the foot of Jamet street and on the St. Ignace side, the old Martel furnace dock. The crossing distance will be reduced by three miles for each round trip. Construction will be begun as early as necessary permits can be secured."

SPUD DIGGING SOON TO START

EARLY HARVESTING WILL PREVENT INJURY BY FROST

Suggestions Offered by Association Official as to When and How to Handle Crop

The Top O' Michigan will soon be in their potato harvest. With the month of September half gone and assuming we will have a normal fall, freezing may take place at almost any time.

One potato buyer in Ohio recently made the statement that he would buy no seed potatoes dug after the first of October because there would be chances of frost injury. This might also injure table stock that is not consumed immediately.

But this is the point, when you dig—if this month or next, remember that the Top O' Michigan Potato and Apple Association is going to hold the biggest show it has ever held, at Gaylord, on November 2, 3 and 4. They are going to celebrate their fifth anniversary with the biggest premium list they have ever had.

Every potato grower will want to make one or more entries and there is no better time to select exhibit material than from the field at digging. Select four or five bushels of your best potatoes at digging time and from this lot pick your exhibits for the show.

Here are some of the suggestions offered by A. C. Lytle, secretary of the show.

Dig potatoes by hand. Wrap in field before they are taken to the house. Select potatoes that are uniform and true to type. They should be the same size, color and shape. Select only varieties 7 to 9 ounces, late varieties 8 to 10 ounces.

Be sure they are free from disease, such as scab, black scurf, black leg, fusarium wilt or blight rot.

See that they are physically sound, clean, firm, bright, ripe, free from growth cracks, checks or mechanical injuries.

Pack in a dark, cool dry place for a week or so before wrapping and packing for shipping or delivering to the show.

Do not wash potatoes to remove dirt, clean with a soft brush or soft woolen cloth.

Dr. E. L. Nixon of Pennsylvania State College and C. M. McCarty of the Michigan State College will be the potato judges this year.

Apple growers should also keep the show in mind at picking time. The premiums offered in apples will be much larger than in previous years and with Charlevoix county in the Association this year, the competition should be keener.

Exhibit apples should be smooth, regular in shape and typical for the variety.

Select apples medium to large in size for the variety, overgrown or undersized apples are undesirable.

Select apples of high color and typical of that variety.

Try to get every apple to look exactly alike as to form, size and color. See that they are free from blemishes of all kind, whether mechanical or due to insects or disease.

Wrap each apple in paper and pack firmly to prevent bruising in shipping.

Mr. R. W. Rees, Horticulturist for the New York Central Lines and H. A. Cardinell of the Michigan State College will judge the apples this year.

"HARD TIME" PARTY EVENT LAST FRIDAY

Eleven Couples Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wextaff

Mr. nnd Mrs. Arthur Wexstaff were host and hostess at a very enjoynble "hard time" party, held last Friday evening in their barbecue quarters adjoining the West End Service station.

Eleven couples were present to participate in the fun. An array of costumes, funny beyond expression, caused much merryment. Dorothy See, dressed as a winsome country maiden, was prize winner, while Fay Bradley employed all the feminine wiles of the modern age in his get-up as a haughty flapper.

The party danced to old-time music furnished by Novotney brothers and the popular airs played by Mr. and Mrs. Wextaff. Delightful refreshments were served by the host and hostess and the affair was indeed a merry one.

COUNTY FAIR BEST IN YEARS

GOOD WEATHER, GOOD EXHIBITS, GOOD ATTRACTIONS

F. R. Bulow Elected President, Chester Shepard Wins Grand Prize, Studebaker Auto

The Charlevoix County Agricultural Society's 43rd Annual exhibit came to a close Thursday night, and with it closed one of the most successful all around fairs ever held on the grounds at East Jordan.

Exceptionally good weather helped swell the gate receipts and the amount received went considerably over the amounts taken in at the gate in the few previous years.

Excellent Exhibits

Every division was well filled, division J—fancy work—leading with the greatest in the history of the fair. The fact that it took two competent judges the better part of two days to go over the exhibits in this department—when as a rule in the past it took but a few hours, attests to the number of articles entered.

One of the surprises was the large assortment of excellent fruit, vegetables and grain on exhibition. With a backward spring and the prevailing dry weather during July and August, it was thought these departments would not come up to the average.

The exhibit of fruit by Eveline Orchards of East Jordan, in charge of Prof. Taft, was exceptionally fine and brought forth many favorable comments. Several Granges vied with one another in excellence of displays, and there were many fine individual exhibits.

In the live stock barns, all were well filled and the various exhibits were up to the average in these departments.

In the display of merchants and manufacturers, the East Jordan Lumber Company store had a most excellent exhibit in their building near the Floral hall. There were several 1928 automobiles on display and there were many other exhibits by merchants and manufacturers.

$2,000 Prize Winners

This feature was one of considerable interest, and all holding tickets were present either in person or by proxy when the drawing for the grand prize was held Thursday afternoon.

Chester Shepard of East Jordan, held the lucky number and won the Studebaker nuto, on the second number placed on the bulletin board.

Iva Kent, a 14-yenr old girl of East Jordan won the pony and outfit.

Mrs. Billie Frank of Advance, won the registered Holstein cow.

Marshall Gridin, Jr., of East Jordan, captured the $20.00 gold piece, after several hours drawing numbers.

Grange Winners

Winners among the various Grange exhibits were as follows:

Fruit—Rock Elm, first; Deer Lake, second.

Vegetables—South Arm, first; Deer Lake, second.

Grains—Deer Lake, first, South Arm, second.

Canned Fruit—South Arm, first; Deer Lake, second.

Election of Officers

S. E. Rogers, who has served as president of the association for a number of years, "did not choose to run" nnd a little contest was held between R. F. Bulow and Henry Korthase for that office, Mr. Bulow winning by some 20 votes. For director H. A. Craig replaces R. S. Shapton. Officers and directors elected are as follows:

President—Fenton R. Bulow, East Jordan.

Treasurer—Frank F. Bird, Charlevoix.

Director—David Vaughan, Boyne City.

Director—Frank F. Bird, Charlevoix.

Director—H. A. Craig, Charlevoix.

Railroad Picture Reminds Conklin of Hitching Days

It may be fun to steal rides on top of freight trains, but it's dangerous and will put white hairs on any man's head.

That advice comes from Chester Conklin, Paramount comedian, who once took a flyer atop one of those sixty-mile-an-hour express trains running between Omaha and Nashville.

The adventure was brought to mind when Conklin resumed his railroading during the filming of "Tell It To Sweeney," which will be at the Palace Theatre Monday and Tuesday, the Paramount comedy which introduces him with a new comedy teammate, George Bancroft.

Entire Circus Works a Month For "Spangles"

The longest engagement ever played by a big circus within sight of its permanent winter quarters took place during the filming of "Spangles," the Universal-Jewel to be shown at the Palace Theatre Friday.

To furnish the setting for this picture, which features Pat O'Malley and Marian Nixon, one of the country's largest circuses, the Al G. Barnes Shows, was taken over for a month, and the "big top" set up near the winter quarters at Culver City, ten miles from Universal City.

"Hula" Gives Clara Bow Best Role Since "It"

"Hula" brings that lovable madcap of the screen, Clara Bow, back to the Palace. It will head the program at the Palace next Wednesday and Thursday.

As "Hula" pet of the Calhoun plantation, Clara is said to have her best role since "It."

Clara Bow reaches the Palace Theatre Saturday and Sunday in her first starring vehicle for Paramount since "It" the highly successful Elinor Glen production. Her new picture "Rough House Rosie" is the tale of an east side girl who "treats 'em rough." For instance, when sweetie, a professional prizefighter, tries caveman tactics, she gives him a "right to the head" and—he falls unconscious.

OVERLAND WHIPPET MAKES WONDERFUL RUN

Covers Grand Rapids to Petoskey in New Record Time

A Whippet Collegiate roadster driven from Grand Rapids to Petoskey in three hours, 32 minutes, a distance of 219 miles, is the new record established for the route. Piloted by Chick Murray, noted Willys-Overland stunt driver, the Whippet rolled up to the doors of C. Smith, Willys-Overland dealers early in the morning, completing the sensational run in record time. Murray then drove through here stopping at Wyers & Smith, local Willys-Overland dealers.

The speed test was made under the official observation of a Grand Rapids newspaperman who accompanied Murray in this thrilling ride and attested to the time and mileage.

To motorists of this section of the state who have traveled over the route traversed by the Whippet, the remarkable time record is considered one of the outstanding accomplishments in the light four cylinder field. Scores of dangerous curves were encountered along the route, but the Whippet fairly hugged the ground because of the low center of gravity construction of the car. This fact with the additional safety factor of 4-wheel brakes gave the driver every sense of security in his record breaking dash between the two cities.

Time after time Murray had the Whippet speeding along mile after mile at 65 miles an hour nnd not once did the engine falter. No stops were made for repairs or adjustments, according to Murray and his official observer.

When the gruelling race against time was completed mechanics at the Smith establishment made an examination of the car and found it to be in perfect condition. Murray refuelled and immediately began the return trip to Grand Rapids.

Making Money From Pigs

How to Keep Pigs Healthy

By Edgar W. Cooley

When our pigs are on pasture they will get plenty of exercise. If for any reason, we have to shut them into a lot, we will put their feed at some distance from their house, so they will have to walk a ways to get it. The lack of exercise causes what is known as "thumps."

When we wish to fatten pigs for market, we shut them in a small lot so they will not exercise the fat off.

Here are some pig ailments:

Scours—Unsanitary conditions—dirty feeding places may give pigs "scours" and cause them to cough. Keep the pigs in clean quarters.

Worm—Sometimes we say pigs are "sorry-looking." They do not seem to be doing well. They dump around. They do not grow.

Perhaps they are troubled by worms in the intestines. Worms are especially likely to occur when pigs are not well cared for. Filthy yards, dirty troughs, hog "wallows," impure water and poor feeding favor worms.

Pigs with worms become weak and poor. They have no strength, no vitality, and they sicken easily.

A little turpentine once a month in their feed, following the next day by the same amount of coal oil for a physic will rid pigs of worms.

Did you ever taste turpentine? Is it good tasting? Do you suppose the pigs like it?

We may need to work some kind of a scheme in order to get pigs to eat it. Can you think of anything to do?

How would it do to let them go without their feed over one feeding time, then fix up something which they like especially well—milk, bran mash or corn meal, or something of the sort, and mix the turpentine into this food?

Up to the time pigs are two months old, a teaspoonful of turpentine once a month is the right kind of a ration, and the same amount of coal oil the following day.

After pigs weigh 200 pounds, they can take a tablespoonful of these remedies.

OVER 17 MILLION JARS USED YEARLY

FINDS WALLET CONTAINING OVER $2600

Imagine Sensation Picking Up This Amount of Dough

Imagine the sensation of picking a wallet up from the street and finding that it contained over $2600 in currency and liberty bonds. Hardly seems possible in this day and nge, but such was the experience of A. C. Crapo of Mt. Pleasant.

As Mr. Crapo stood on the walk in front of Johnston's shoe store, something lying a few feet out on the pavement caught his eye. On picking it up he found it to be an old bill-fold tied shut with a shoe string and open ign it found that it contained a large amount of money. Mr. Crapo took it into his office and on close examination found that the contents in currency and liberty bonds totaled over $2600.

The only clew to the identity of their owner was an I. O. O. F. receipt for lodge dues paid to the Ithaca lodge and made out to Charles Lyon. Mr. Crapo was just about to call Ithaca to try and locate the owner when an old gentleman and his wife came in the office and excitedly inquired whether he had seen anything of their pocketbook. The man gave a most accurate discription of the contents, even to the receipt, and assured that he was the owner Mr. Crapo gave him his property.

The liberty bonds were of the first issue and none of the coupons had been taken off. Many of the bills had been carried so long that they were stuck together. When asked why he did not deposit the money in the bank, Mr. Lyon said he did not believe in banks. After this close call to losing what probably represented his life's earnings, however, he was persuaded by Mr. Crapo to at least rent a safety deposit box in which to keep his valuables from now on.—Mt. "Not always, son. He may be a press agent," replied his dad.

Fastest Four in America Proves Its Claim to Title ~ ~ ~

Dodge Averages 67.35 miles per hour in Beating All Other Fours in Atlantic City A. A. A. Race

The Atlantic City (N.J.) Speedway Association, without Dodge Brothers instigation or knowledge, bought a Dodge Brothers Four and entered it in a Labor Day race for Four cylinder stock cars. Four cars of other makes also competed. All were strictly stock cars as required by the rules of the association.

The race was for 25 miles—to determine which was "The Fastest Four in America."

The Dodge won.

Its average speed for the entire race, from a standing start, was 67.35 miles per hour (officially timed by A. A. A.).

Generous confirmation, to say the least, of the modest claim of "Mile-a-minute Performance!"

Even more remarkable than the speed, however, is the fact that the car had been driven only 10 days and yet was able to withstand this difficult test without once stopping.

Thus the race not only offers conclusive proof of the Dodge's superiority in speed, but stands also as a glowing tribute to the rugged materials and excellent workmanship that go to make it—

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

Suggests a Telephone Night for the Young Folks Away at School

You can experience the pleasure of talking regularly with the son or daughter attending school, although they are far away. Establish a certain night of the week as Telephone Home Night, where they can place a call for the home telephone number.

Such a call is known as a Station-to-Station call, and costs appreciably less than a call placed for a Particular Person. It is the kind of call to make when you are reasonably certain the person to whom you wish to talk will answer the telephone or can be called to it quickly.

In placing a Station-to-Station call, if you do not know the number, say to the Long Distance Operator, for instance, "I want Mr. John Smith's residence, 250 Sayre Street, Lansing, Michigan." Be sure that you do not specify to the operator that she call any particular person. A call placed for a particular person is known as a Person-to-Person call, and costs more than a Station-to-Station call.

There are reduced Evening rates on Station-to-Station calls, from 7:00 p. m. to 8:30 p. m., with further reduction during the Night rate period, 8:30 p. m. to 4:30 a. m.

"Here's our chance to put one over on Mr. Hudson's Bay," chuckled Skene. "He must have a proposition to make, or he would have kept away from us. He's got nerve, I'll say. Joe told me he'd shoot him if he met him on the Island."

Shortly the old Indian, the fur hood of his caribou capote pushed back from a shock of raven hair, sat in the warm cabin with McDonald and Skene. His story, told through the interpreter, for he said he spoke no English, was brief. Yes, as they had been told, he was Trusty Chief of the Elkwan Crees, and had been sent by Guthrie to attempt to hold the trade until the strait closed. But the Hudson's Bay company had a cold heart. It always had given the hunters little for their fur, and now when others came to trade, and threatened to take the fur from the old company, its heart was still cold, and it offered less than the new traders. He, Souci, a chief, had been promised reward if he saved part of the trade and brought it to Elkwan; but what reward? It was the pay of a squaw. "His two sons already had three black fox pelts and eight silvers—worth double what the factor at Elkwan had promised for his winter's work. Now, he had great influence with the Cree hunters—was a shaman, and many of them would wait until the strait closed and go to Elkwan. What would McDonald Ha! Hn! offer for the services of Souci, Chief of the Elkwan Crees, to bring the northern hunters to the schooner at Christmas?"

"Well! I'll say he's a cool one," laughed McDonald. "He comes right inside our wire to our trenches and wants to bargain. The Hudson's Bay probably haven't offered him much. But he's trying to sell us what we'll get anyway."

"What's his price?" demanded Skene.

The interpreter talked rapidly with Souci, then replied with a grin: "He say he want t'ree rifle, t'ree goose-gun, and trade-good' for ten prime black fox. Hees own fur he trade, ni-so."

"Ten black fox—two thousand dollars in trade-goods? Nonsense!" McDonald scowled fiercely into the bony face of the old simian with its leather-like skin, mapped with lines. The beady eyes of Souci, unwavering, gave look for look. For a space the cold blue eyes probed the black inscrutability of the Cree's stare. Slowly the caliber of Saul Souci rose in appraisal of the white man. Here was an Indian of parts—nerve, brains, power. As a medicine man, of use, if his service were needed. But his price was ridiculous—his help not necessary. They had Joe Mokoman. It was enough.

"Suppose, by chance, the strait should close this year?" threw out Skene.

"It never has, so early," McDonald thought a space, then turned to the interpreter. "Offer him the guns and the value of five black fox."

The face of old Souci darkened as the interpreter communicated the offer. He shook his head in anger.

"Well, that's our limit," said McDonald, rising. "Tell him we don't need him, but we'll pay him a good price for his fur if he'll bring it in at once."

Silent in his disappointment, Souci went on deck, followed by the others. Freeing his impatient dogs, the old chief turned to the men watching from the rail and said quietly in English: "Bo'-jo'! Tomorrow I tak' de fox to Elkwan."

"Goin' to fly or swim?" laughed Skene, joined loudly by the group on deck.

The lean face of the dog-driver framed in its fur hood was wooden in its placidity, as he coolly said: "De strait freeze hard two sleeps back." And cracking his long whip, he leaped on the trail of his toboggan and was off.

"What! The strait is closed?" gasped McDonald, seizing Skene by the shoulder. "Frozen solid, he said? Hallo, there, Souci!" cried the excited trader to the fast traveling dog-team. "You, Pierre; Get after him and bring him back! Tell him we'll give him his price. Strait frozen! H—l, Skene! Now we've got to fight for that fur!"

Skene was over the rail with the shrieking interpreter and running toward the sled, which had come to a stop. Slowly the old man turned his dogs toward the schooner.

"The clever beggar!" exclaimed McDonald in admiration. "Played us like a salmon. Waited to spring his trump card, and got his own price without a haggle! Knew he was shrewd—nervy! Speaks English, too! The old wizard! He's the chap we need now. One little job is to stop a stampede across that ice for the Christmas feast that Guthrie has promised the Crees at Elkwan."

Skene swung over the rail and announced to his chief: "Souci says he'll start north at once and agrees to hold his relations and most of the rest, on the terms he offered. He wants to bind the bargain with you, personally."

"Good!" And McDonald vaulted over the schooner's rail, followed by Skene and Breault.

"The strait was closed two sleeps back? Where?" he demanded of the Indian.

"Owair de shoal at Breg point."

"You saw it?"

"I cross to de Elkwan."

"What? You've crossed the ice to the post?"

The Indian nodded, his stone-hard features an enigma to the men who sought to read them.

"What did you learn?"

"Dis Guthrie know de ice set, and all de Cree cum to Elkwan. He say he geve me not'ing to work for heem." Saul Souci grinned into the gaping faces surrounding him. "Dnlee Saul Souci get you all dat fox from de nord, now."

McDonald thrust out a red, mittless hand. "It's a bargain! You bring that trade here and you get three rifles, three shotguns, and the value of ten prime black fox in trade."

Dropping his rabbit-skin mitten on its neck thong, Souci took the extended hand of the trader. "Klyam ap-jowlya. It ees good," he said, solemnly. Thrusting his hand into the hanging mitten, he cracked the whip of plaited caribou thongs over his lead dog's ears, and again started for the shore, leaving behind him on the ice an arguing group of mystified and excited men.

CHAPTER VII

The morning subsequent to the nights of withering frost which clinched the grip of the ice on the west coast, Garth and Etienne, muffled in blanket capotes and fur robes, drove their five-dog team, hitched to a runner sled for ice-work, out of the closed delta of the Elkwan and down the coast. Inland, the wide marshes reached the ripples of drift, like a white sea, to the outguards of the space, or bay, parti-colored patches of dead grass brushed of snow, splashing the white levels with ochre and dun. Splitting the frozen shell of the strait broken by pressure ridges and heaps of shattered ice, a streak of black to the east marked the still open channel. Beyond, the hidden sun, breaking from the bay, rimmed the barrens of Akimiski with fire.

But it was to the south, where the great point of the island pushed its bulk into the strait that Garth hoped to find that the abnormal December cold had built a bridge of ice to Akimiski. Over the easy going of wind-hammered snow and shore ice, the dogs romped past the frozen beaches. At a sandspit strewn with boulders Garth stopped. With a hand from Etienne, he reached the top of a large rock and inking his binoculars from their case, studied the miles of ice-shenthed shoals which followed the thrust of Big point toward the mainland. As he looked, his lips moved in a muttered note of surprise. Could it be that luck had come to Elkwan—to Garth Guthrie, in the shape of a road of ice from Akimiski before Christmas?

"Come up here, quick!" he called to the man at the sled. The half-breed scrambled to the top of the boulder. "I can't make out open water over there," said Garth, excitedly. "You take a look. It was a mile wide the day before the blow."

Dropping his mittens, Etienne took the proffered glasses. Until his hands reddened with cold, he stood as if hewn from the boulder. Then, when the column of his frosted breath misted the lenses, he handed the glasses to Garth, his eyes snapping with excitement. "De ice set nyale dem bay; I can't help dat."

"No, you can't," agreed Guthrie, watching Etienne's native lead. "Well, we'll have just about enough to cross in, so we'll start."

As the dog-team hurled over the wind-brushed shell of the strait, broken by drifts and hummocks, still by tide cracks, free clear with crushed ice masses lifted into pressure ridges, the eyes of the men on the light sled were focused far out on what, the week before, had been impassable black water. Eight miles out, half way across, its drift ice, thrall to tide and wind, had threatened with swift ruin the eggshell of a canoe, which challenged its barrier. But now, over the shoals, the channel had been sealed. As the dog-team reached the newly frozen gap, Etienne and Guthrie went ahead to test the ice with axes. In defiance of the tide, the fierce frost had set three-inch ice. Anxiously the men swept the width of the channel with glasses. There were no breaks. So, led by the scampering huskies and Guthrie, with Etienne driving the huskies from the tail of the sled, they took the crossing on the run.

A half-mile out when fear of thin ice had left him and he swung along with Shot in front, Garth suddenly felt the ice vibrate beneath his moccasins. The sled with the dogs would go through, unless they came with a rush. Turning as he ran, he waved to Etienne—their agreed upon signal for speed.

"Marche! mes enfants!" The long caribou thong cracked on the lead dog's ears. With a surprised yelp Castor, sprending his feet, came with the team at a wild gallop. On they rushed, straining, slipping huskies, nails scratching the ice for footing, and swinging toboggan, urged on by Etienne, for a break through meant swift drowning for the dogs from the drag of the sled, and freezing in the stinging wind for the driver, if he reached firm ice.

A hundred yards of mad scramble and the second dog slipped, slid sideways, jerking the leader off his feet. The sled swung in a wide skid. Passing his thrashing huskies on the run, Etienne called them to follow. Before the sled stopped its swing, the dogs were up and hard on their master's heels. A hundred yards and they reached the heavier ice—minutes of suspense, and the lead was crossed.

The two friends gripped hands beside the panting dogs.

"Did you feel it?" cried Guthrie. "Thought I was going through! Felt like running on stretched canvas!"

"I saw it geeve undair you, and crack to whoop before you turn. We go t'ree een dat channel, and pouf! We t'ree air care eet, McDonald Ha! Ha! get de fur or not, eh?"

* * * * * * *

Somewhere north of Big point in a valley sheltered by the tundra from the winds off the ice fields, the sons of old Souci had a base camp. But the Indian had given Garth no rendezvous in case he managed to cross the strait before Christmas, for Souci carried a roving commission, and his work lay where he found the Elkwan hunters. To Garth the Island was unknown country, but Etienne had trapped there and they started up the shore ice, bound for the mouth of the Ptarmigan, a river which headed deep in the interior, confident of learning Souci's whereabouts from the first Indian they met. For news of the coming of the old chief to the island would be passed swiftly from hunter to hunter, valley to valley. And now the closing of the strait had greatly enhanced the value and importance of Souci's embassy to the Crees. Those loyal to the old company could cross for the New Year's feast at the post, bringing their pelts; those wavering in the direction of the trade goods of McDonald could not now meet Saul's appeals with the objection that a barrier of open water, running with floe, would crush their canoes. But the longer he dwelt on the attractions of the schooner at the cove, the less confident he grew of saving patch of the fox trade. Few of the fickle Crees would resist the blandishments of the free-trader's agents. Then, with a start he realized that he was ignoring the scheme the old chief had outlined to Etienne, and wondered if the magic was working—if the mad medicine of the sorcerer had conjured a tabu against the schooner. In the valley of the Ptarmigan they would find a camp and learn.

As the huskies trotted smartly up the coast of the island while Shot, free lance, ranged widely along shore in search of adventure, Guthrie's thoughts temporarily deserted his mission on Akimiski to dwell—now that he had, seemingly burned his bridges—on his status at home. For it would not be foreign to his brother's egotism and reverence for the conventions to read Garth out of the family, since he had written refusing to return. The gossip following his failure to join the staff of the Guthrie Steel company and lead Ethel Falconer in all her blond loveliness to the altar, would be gall to the palate of the recently knighted head of the Guthries. The neglect of his express command to the exile to shake the mud of James bay from his seniskin boots and assume the responsibilities of a family man and a man of family would, in all likelihood, mean that on his return to Montreal there would be no position in the works—no brother's house open—to the rebel. His personal means, inherited from his father, were modest. Charles' fortune was the result of his own efforts—and a fortuitous war. That was why Charles demanded wholesome respect and absolute obedience from his younger brother. At the thought the younger brother smiled in his fur hood, ringed with rime from his frozen breath. From the man who had led his platoon cross the ice to you when McDonald will pay more for their pelts?"

Guthrie's face reflected his irritation. "Graham, I'm employed to get fur—not smoke by the stove and wait for it to come in. As Cameron expects this letter, and Christmas is only ten days away, I'll thank you to start a team with it at once."

The victim of Guthrie's sarcasm reddened under the ruthless characterization of his sedentary tendencies, but his pension was near, and the risk of a dash over the young ice was Guthrie's, not his, so he magnanimously overlooked the thrust.

"I'll send a team, yes, if that's Cameron's orders. I'll say you're a fool, though, to cross. A good wind will break up that new ice and cut you off. It's never in my memory closed before January. Still, it's your job, not mine. Go ahead and get yourself drowned, if you want to."

"Some of your people winter there?"

"Oh, yes! Six or eight families. But

ALL-YEAR RESORTERS

Charlevoix offers a winter sports campaign suggestion in its corporation of a Charlevoix Winter Sports club composed, not of the usual booster group of home property owners and business men, but of residents plus summer resorters with the summer resorters in positions of chief authority and interest.

The president of the Charlevoix Club is a St. Louis man; vice presidents are residents of four different states represented in the summer colony. No better nucleus exists for making an all-year recreation place of a summer resort than the people who already spend their summers there.

Nearly every resort has its resorters association. Instead of concentrating on organizing the home talent it might be well for other places to take Charlevoix's lead and make winter sport enthusiasts of outside people already "sold" on the localities by years of summer residence and familiarity, and owning or renting docks and cottages and summer hotels. Naturally they are the best "prospects" imaginable for the building up of a winter "season."

If they can be "sold" on the proposition they form a splendid advertising organization in other states. This ready-made sales extension group needs to be filled brimful of the Michigan winter recreation idea. —Grand Rapids Press.

A PLEASANT PRESCRIPTION

Those who are "on a diet" or have been advised to go on one may be interested, if not instructed, by the conclusions of the medical correspondent of The London Times who has been looking into the subject. His belief is that dieting often does more harm than good, since it usually consists of omissions of what the system has been accustomed to, and his advice is that the foods you like are likely to be those that will do you the most good. Conversely, he argues that what we do not want will never do us any good.

He reminds that the records are full of discredited and discarded diets. Even theanti-diabetic theory of withholding sugars and starch foods is trembling in the balance. It is a debatable point whether there is an excess or a failure to assimilate properly. There is therefore danger of starving rather than improving, which he urges would be akin to changing the fuel of an engine instead of righting it, with the likely result of its running worse.

Having got this far, he boldly charges that many cases of rapid loss of health have been traced directly to dieting, which he brands as "a mixture of prejudice and pseudo-science." Yet he thinks we eat too much. But, ceasing to overeat is safer and very different from radical changes in diet which may not only lessen the nourishment, but lower the defensive power of the system. "Most men on strict diets," he concludes, "look ill, look anxious, as though their minds were not at ease, as if they were engaged in a risky experiment, and their apprehensions are justified."

POWER OF COURTS ENLARGED

The good old days of the criminal class in Michigan seem to be over. The easy loopholes through which they edged their way to freedom have been closed, and now once in the clutches of the law they are going to find the way to liberty a long hard road.

Under the new criminal code judges will be given much wider latitude, with power to comment on the testimony of material witnesses and point out discrepencies where they are satisfied that prejury has been committed. They may also comment on the character of witnesses. Heretofore they were limited to an impartial review of the case before the jury. Courts may also insist on the speedier trials, and may even refuse to grant continuance of a case where they are satisfied that delay is being sought in order to allow time for material witnesses for the state to disappear and thus weaken the cause of the state. And in other ways have the powers of the courts been strenghened. Waivers of trial by jury may now be had and judges are permitted to hold trials without a jury—something that has always been guaranteed under the constitution of the state. However, if the defendant or his attorney insists, trials by jury must be had. It looks as if bad days for the crook were at hand.

ROAD TO SUCCESS

In the attainment of solid, well founded success there has been found no substitute for honest labor with hands or mind. The ages have recognized this as an immutable truism, yet every age, including the present, has had its skepties, its unbelievers, its seekers after fame and fortune without paying the price in work.

Some sage has said that to attain success use half as much effort as you would exert attempting to seek success without work. There is much wisdom in the axiom that it takes less mental effort to climb to legitimate success than to climb to an illegitimate success. Legitimate achievement requires no fortifications, no protection. Illegitimate achievement demands more in its retirement than in its attainment.

It is gross injustice to humanity to say that if there is any one thing more than another, that enlists every much of the attention, time and effort of the people it is in scheming and planning to get something of value for nothing. The number of society's parasites is large but the number of honest, hard-working pillars of society is preponderously larger.

BRADY'S SPEED BOAT SOLD LAST FRIDAY

"Miss Charlevoix" Purchased By Party From Muskegon

The "Miss Charlevoix," holder of the world's record for 725 class hydroplanes, will no longer tear up the waters of Roond Lake and Lake Charlevoix. The pride of Charlevoix's speed boats has been sold to outside parties and was taken away last Friday.

Aecording to M. Roy Brady, owner, one trial run around Round Lake was enough to convince T. H. Joslyn of Muskegon, that the boat could run, and she will hereafter do her "stepping" on Mona Lake, near Muskegon.

THIEVES ENTER KORTH MARKET SUNDAY NIGHT

Enter Building By Taking Screen From Rear Window

Probably the same bunch of sneak thieves who have been operating in the city for some time past, are responsible for breaking into R. C. Korth's grocery store late Sunday night.

Monday morning when the store was opened for business, it was discovered that someone had entered the building by tearing the screen and some slats from the rear window. The cash register was found open but no money had been left in it. Nothing else was reported stolen.

OPENING GAME SATURDAY AT BOYNE CITY

Local Squad Shows Considerable Strength In Practice

Charlevoix high school football team will open the 1927 season at Boyne City, Saturday afternoon, September 24th. Boyne City won their opening game with Gaylord last Saturday and are hopeful of adding another victory to their list.

Coach Buchen has a promising looking bunch of material for this year's team and a glance at the boys in practice show that they are in good condition and are working for the opening encounter with plenty of pep and enthusiasm. The game Saturday will give local fans a chance to measure the strength of the local aggregation.

SENATE RACE TO BE A KEEN ONE

POLITICAL POT IN MICHIGAN IS NEAR BOILING POINT

Many Candidates May Enter the Race—Vandenburg of Grand Rapids a Candidate

The following United Press dispatch from Lansing tells something of the senatorial situation in Michigan:

"With the state administration forced to prematurely close its plans for the 1928 fall election, an unusual amount of political maneuvering is under way for this time of the season.

"The United States senatorship held by Woodbridge N. Ferris, Democrat, is the stake at large.

"Persistent rumors that Governor Fred W. Green was contemplating breaking an alleged agreement to back someone else for the senate and run himself forced the governor to announce recently that he would run for reelection.

"Barely two weeks after this, Arthur S. Vandenburg, Grand Rapids publisher, was publicly endorsed at a Kent county G. O. P. picnic by Attorney General William W. Potter.

"The governor himself was not at the gathering, but spent the night preceding it in Grand Rapids. And as Potter is one of his right hand men, the endorsement is taken to mean Vandenburg is the administration's choice. Vandenberg endorsed the governor heartily in a speech the same day.

"The drys in Michigan have vigorously expressed themselves as dissatisfied with enforcement of the Volstead Act in Detroit, and at least one of their leaders, Congressman Grant H. Hudson, of the sixth district is prominently mentioned as a candidate for the toga. Chas. S. Osborne, a former governor, of Saulte Ste. Marie, is another, whose name is reported in the ring.

"Should these two run with Vandenberg, friends of former governor Alex J. Grosebeck, bitter political opponent of Governor Green, point out that the race would develop into a three-way dry battle. This, they assert, would make a logical opening for Groesbeck, figuring he would be certain to start with the nucleus of a solid wet Detroit vote behind him.

"Groesbeck is not an avowed wet. He would be handicapped probably by the fact that the other U. S. senator, James Couzens, is also n Detroiter.

"George M. Welsh, of Grand Rapids, Groesbeck's running mate last fall in the gubernatorial race, also may enter the contest, with or without his former chief. Welsh polled n strong Detroit vote and might split the Vandenberg vote outstate.

"Meanwhile the administration appears not to be aware of what is happening. Governor Green some time ago openly declared himself in favor of the pre-primary caucus at the Republican spring convention, with leaders pledged to accept the convention's choice.

"It is considered significant that Vandenburg has chosen not to publicly declare himself as accepting the nomination.

"I have served as a private in the ranks" he said, answering Potter's endorsement, 'and I am willing to continue to do so. I consider my first duty to the party to see that the (senate) seat shall be returned Republican as it rightfully belongs. Personalities are secondary.'

"If the administration can continue in the saddle at the spring convention and force the pre-caucus pledge, it will have won one major battle."

BEWARE OF THE PEDDLERS

All peddlers or house order takers who are touring the smaller communities should have painted across their hats in plain letters "Community Wreckers." They serve no good purpose. They sell nothing that cannot be purchased at the local stores. Their prices are usually much higher, considering the quality of the merchandise. Their guarantee means nothing for tomorrow they are gone. They pay not a cent to local tax or community funds, and have no interest in your community except the dollars they can garner. The dollar spent with the home merchant and deposited by him in the home bank, is the same dollar you borrow when you come to the bank and want a loan. For your own welfare, if for no other, discourage the peddler and order taker, the "Community Wreckers," and spend your money at home. The local dealer is always here, ready to stand back of his merchandise. He deserves your continued support.

CONSTITUTION DAY

Please note on your calendar that September 17, 1927, will mark the 140th anniversary of the completion and signing of the Constitution. Those who have been following the news during the past few months, and especially the news from Massachusetts, will do well on that day to make a special effort to show their faith in the Constitution and their loyalty to that immortal document. In his farewell address delivered on September 17, 1796, the 9th anniversary of the completion and signing of the Constitution, George Washington expressed the earnest hopes "that the Constitution may be sacredly maintained—that its administration in every department may be stamped with wisdom and virtue—that the happiness of the people of these states may be made complete by so careful a preservation, and so prudent a use of this blessing as will acquire to them the glory of recommending it to the applause, the affection, and adoption of every nation."

He also expressed a solemn warning that we should "resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretext. One method of assault may be to effect, in the forms of the Constitution, alterations which will impair the energy of the system, and thus to undermine what cannot be directly overthrown."

PROBLEM OF THE RURAL CHURCH

That the rural church is doomed, unless drastic measures are taken for its rehabilitation, was the theme of an address by Rev. C. E. Hoag, superintendent of the Lansing district, in an address before the Methodist Episcopal church, which has just closed its annual session at Battle Creek. The speaker declared there had been a loss of 5,000 rural members in the Methodist denomination alone in the state during the past five years, and that this continued loss would mean the wiping out of the rural church so far as that denomination was concerned within the next twenty-five years.

Contrary to the accepted theory, instead of affiliating with churches in the larger communities this membership has been lost to religious connections. As a social contact the rural church was the greatest leveling influence during the pioneer days, not even exceeded by the power of the little red school house. The decline of the rural church is a problem not given to the average layman to solve. Even the efforts of the extension department of Michigan State college has not met with success. Such mechanical efforts never can. The only hope for the rural church lies in the rural communities themselves. If they can find in the rural church the right kind of a social center, the influence for the community development that met the needs of the pioneers of old, then the rural church of tomorrow must fulfill those needs. All America is interested in this question—for with a decline of the splendid benefits received from the rural church will come a decline in the glorious standards of American citizenship.

TOO MUCH INDUSTRY

The average cow in Michigan produces less than 150 pounds of butter a year.

The average cow should produce twice that much. Yes, and more, too. The dairy industry should set the eventude standard at 500 pounds and that is within reason.

One good cow will produce more net profit than a half dozen poor and average animals. A good cow eats more than a poor one, but outside of that she isn't much more trouble. Yet scrub stock will still continue to exist.

The trouble with the farmer who has poor cows is that he is too industrious. He should get a lazy streak in him. He should say to his poor cows, "I'm getting tired of looking after you, get out." It is said that most labor saving machinery has been invented by those who wished to avoid work and yet had enough industry to work out the plans to save labor.

Of course the dairy business is confining. There is nothing particularly romantic about it. It consists of hard work and constant application, for the cow must be milked both night and morning. But the dairy industry with poor and unprofitable animals is a curse and a delusion. And it isn't necessary.

FRESHENING BREEZES

How many can remember when a rain barrel full of wigglers was a part of every household equipment?

The most that can be said of a big city hotel bath tub is, you can leave it for the chamber maid to clean.

With vacations out of the way, isn't it time that somebody suggested that we all get back to work again?

at the Soinne and his battalion in front of Andens, the dignity and swiftly made fortune of Charles commanded no deference and little respect. On his return—his return? He had committed himself to making good at Elkwan for his employers—for his own self-respect. What he had started he would see through. There might be no return—unless a certain letter in the Christmas mail should—. Then his thought, until the dogs swung off the seashore and into the broken going at the mouth of the Ptarmigan, were of three swift days at Elkwan and two on the coast—of eyes, abstracted, perplexed, at times wistful, and a dark head silvered with moonlight, on the high shore above the Albany.

As the dog-team left the coast and followed the rough river trail into the hills, its toil began, and Etienne's wisdom in bringing a toboggan instead of a sea sled equipped with runners was vindicated. For once under the lee of hills, they found snow deep on the shell of the river and in places, where wind eddies had dipped into the valley, new drift, through which they broke trail on snowshoes for the sled, while the dogs, who had galloped over the brushed sea-ice, wallowed to their traces. From the river fringe of willows and alders the black spruce scrub reached back up the slopes to fade and disappear under the shoulders of the barrens. There low junipers and hardy Labrador tea alone survived the hammering of the winds on the undulating miles of blueberry heath and caribou moss, swept, over exposed areas, of all snow.

Suddenly, as they rounded a bend which had shut off all view upstream, Etienne, who was ahead breaking trail, shouted and stopped, pointing in the direction of some thick scrub in the distance.

"Camp up dere!"

Rising in the still air of the valley, a wisp of bluish smoke hung against the background of black spruce.

"Good! Now we'll get some news of Soucl."

Spurred by the quickened pace of the trail breaker and the call of Garth, the five huskies threw their shoulders into the collars. Then, further on, a stretch of wind-packed snow gave them footing and the yelping team, led by Shut, raced to the tips of the hunters' camp.

"Kequay!" called Etienne, approaching the tipis half buried in the snow for protection from the wind and circled by the usual debris and paraphernalia of a winter camp. Turning to Garth he said: "De men are on de trap-line wid de dogs."

Again he called, and, after a space, a shawled head was thrust through the door flap of a tent.

"Where's your man?" asked Savanne in Cree.

"On the lines. Who are you?"

"We are from Elkwan." And, as the woman emerged from the tipi followed by another and two children, Etienne saw that he was talking with Indians from the lower rivers—strangers.

"Have you seen Saul Soucl, the Elkwan Treaty Chief? Where is the camp of his sons—what river?"

The wary faces of the Cree women showed a cheery scrutiny of the half-breed. Surprise, doubt, appeared to struggle there as they looked at the questioner and the stranger. Then, not each other's black eyes in a quizzical look; the latter said: "Soucl, the Chief, we have not seen. His sons are said to camp north of here on the Rabbit river."

The active brain of Etienne strove to solve the riddle of the squaw's secret abouncement. At last he decided that Joe Mekoman had won over their tash to the free-trader, but why Soucl had not appeared on the Ptarmigan was a mystery.

"Do you know the strait has closed? You can cross to Elkwan for the New Year's feast," he hazarded.

The women replied: "We go to the trader at Soucl cove with our fox pelts," said the old squaw. "There we get honest prices for fur—from the trader who always laughs."

It was evident that here Joe Mekoman had done his work well. Then Etienne cautiously began his counter-mining. His dark face set in a look of surprise and horror. "Did you not hear?" he cried.

"No."

"Why this trader brought that face from the land of demons across the Big Water? He angered them. He is a sorcerer and bewitches those who bring him their pelts." Etienne hastily interpreted the conversation to Guthrie as he watched the effect of his bombshell on the startled faces of the squaws.

"He makes bad medicine?" gasped the women.

Savanne gravely nodded his hooded head, then added: "He has bewitched Joe Mokoman to betray the Cree hunters and bring them to his boat. Those who go will never love their wives and families again," he remarked with finality.

At the last the faces of the squaws visibly grayed. They chattered together excitedly. Etienne's explanation of the cause of the mutilation of McDonald had struck deep into the marrow of their superstitions. He hastily drove his advantage home.

"Saul Soucl will tell you that the trader McDonald Ha! Ha! is a friend of demons."

"Saul Soucl?" cried a squaw in protest. "He is a shaman and friend of the trader who laughs."

It was the turn of Savanne to have his mental balance jarred. Soucl the friend of McDonald? What could they mean? But he was equal to the emergency.

"Soucl, the friend of McDonald Ha! Ha! Mokoman tells that tale to the hunters because he fears Soucl the shaman."

Disturbed though she was, the Cree woman laughed in Etienne's face. "Mokoman was here this morning—there are his sled tracks. One sleep ago he says Soucl was at the schooner of the trader and they shook hands. Soucl is the friend of McDonald Ha! Ha!"

"Mokoman lies!" stormed the startled half-breed, but the germ of a suspicion of the old conjurer's loyalty quickened in his brain. "Are there camps at the head of the river in the barrens?" he asked, keen to catch the Ojibwa and old Saul, the traitor, at their work.

"Yes, you will see them before the light dies, and there are more on the north fork."

"Remember," cautioned the puzzled half-breed, as he turned to his dogs, "the boat at Soul cove is full of demons—bewitched. Those who go will never look again with joy on their wives and children." And with this parting shot, the shrewd Savanne called "Ba'-ja'!" and joined his chief.

As they again took the river trail, from here on ice-hard from constant use by the teams of the hunters, Etienne gave Guthrie the gist of his talk.

"Old Saul—at the schooner? It's only a lie of that Ojibwa," objected Garth, unable to reconcile the old man's simplicity and directness with this deceit. "A lie to weaken the effect of Saul's coming to the Island to work for us."

"Maybe so, but I think something ver' [illegible] Dere camp ces near de shore—why has Saul not come here?"

"They may have fled. He may have been here," suggested Garth. Etienne shook his head. "No, he never-re come here or dey talk more 'bout heem. He ees resident man and de squaw would talk mooch eef he eem."

"Well, let's see what the people above here say. Then we can compare the stories and judge better what to believe, and what our next move is. If Saul has turned yellow—we're surely done."

Facing the man riding behind him, Etienne nodded. "Eef Saul work for de schooner, he weel tak' de Elkwan Cree wid heem." Then the lean features of the half-breed tightened. His small eyes closed to slits, as he viciously cracked his whip. "But dat ol' shaman weel mak' hees las' medicine," he rasped.

The look in the face of the dog-driver was so intense that Garth objected: "You can't shoot him up for that, you know. It would only rebel on Murie and the children, and us too."

Etienne's mouth curled in an inscrutable smile. "No one but Saul Soucl weel know who meet heem on de trail."

"I guess you'd be capable of ambushing him for this, but we're not dead yet. Let's see what the hunters at the head of the river say."

In the scrub running the shores of the first lake from which the tundra undulated in the skyline, the two in quest of Saul Soucl found the tipis of the hunters. It was a camp of three families and smoke from the supper fires already lifted above the spruce when the arrival of the dog-team raised a general alarm from the huskies fastened in the scrub.

"Kequay! kequay!" called Etienne, and a shock of black hair was thrust through a door flap, as a curious Cree emerged to meet the strangers.

"He's not from Elkwan," dropped Guthrie disappointed, as the Indian approached to shake hands.

"Aho, Achille!" And Etienne warmly gripped the hand of the Indian, who then greeted Garth. "Achille Laguerre from Kapiskau, and me, ol' fr'en'," announced the patently pleased head man to his chief.

We'll learn something now, thought the factor, as they drove the dogs into the spruce. Ted them their frozen whitefish, and chained them separately to trees. As the December sun was long down and their tent lashed under the toboggan cover, Etienne accepted the hospitality of Laguerre's smoke-filled tipi. There, with eyes weeping from the unaccustomed smoke, Garth ate boiled rabbit and lake-trout from the copper kettle hung above the fire, from which the wife and numerous children of Achille gorged in common. But the appetite sharpened by the ride up the valley in the keen air was impervious to the informality of Cree table manners and Garth's tin cup went back to the steaming stew and the ten pail with the regularity of his smoke-tanned host and hostess, until his belt warned of surfeit.

Etienne Accepted the Hospitality of Laguerre's Smoke-Filled Tipi.

He passed to each of the Cree a twist of company nigger-head, and pipe smoke swiftly added to the opaqueness of the tipi air. Then Etienne, who had avoided the subject of Soucl and the schooner in his gossip with the curious and perplexed Laguerre, opened with:

"You know de strait ees fruze?"

Achille, who spoke English, gravely nodded. "You cum-to de Island. Eet taus' be so."

"Oou, mon ami. We are here. Eet ees enough. Why, Achille Laguerre," he went on, probing the small, half-shut eyes of the half-breed, "do M'sieu' Guthrie and I, Etienne Savanne, cross de ice to mak' talk wid you?" Etienne paused and blew a cloud of smoke along the stem of his pipe, which his teeth gripped.

Achille grinned widely. "You cum to mak' fight for de fox," he chuckled.

"You are mos' smart man, ma fr'en,' but you mak' beeg meestake. We cum to tak' de fox back to Elkwan wid de peopl' fur beeg tam at la bonne annee, New Year."

"Ah-hah!"

"You go to Kapiskau, Achille?"

The Indian slowly shook his head. "I go to de beeg boat. He pay beeg price for pelt."

Garth leaned eagerly forward to hear the counter stroke which Etienne was waiting to launch.

"Ah-hah!" For a space, the crackling of a spruce knot was the only sound in the tipi. Then Savanne began: "You not ver' smart man, Achille. You beseen to dat 'Ibwa Wabeno, Medaman. Ah-hah, you not so smart man. . . . We tak' heem to de Island Mid ebi Soucl. You know why?" Etienne paused dramatically to relight his pipe. "So McDonal' put de devil into heem."

Nervously twisting her hands, the squaw of Achille stared at the speaker from owl-like eyes. The stolid features of the half-breed reflected curiosity, doubt—but no fear.

"I put dat Mokoman mahir de ice up de Elkwan—he mak' trouble for us; but we weesh to have devil put from heem by McDonal' Ha! Ha!"

"Mokoman was here," dryly countered Achille.

"Was Soucl wid heem?" snapped Etienne, as a dog a bone, and Garth's pulse quickened as he waited for the reply.

You Never See Gasoline

RED CROWN ETHYL GASOLINE

It goes into your tank through a hose—you take it on trust. You can't examine it. Only a chemist can analyze it. The brand and the company back of the brand are all you have to go on.

If you buy unbranded gasoline, you buy a product which no company vouches for. You may save a few pennies in the purchase price, but it will cost you more in the end.

It is wiser to buy a known product—a branded product—with the backing of a company with a reputation to sustain. Your car represents a big investment. It is worthy of your care. It requires dependable fuel.

You are protecting your car investment to the utmost when you buy Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline or Red Crown Gasoline. The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is back of them. It is proud to claim them and proud to assume responsibility for the way they work in your car.

Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline makes the engine quick to obey, powerful, speedy and smooth. It costs a few cents more but it "knocks out that knock".

Our famous economy fuel, Red Crown Gasoline, will give you a maximum of power at a minimum of expense without the anti-knock factor.

It pays to buy brands known for dependability—Red Crown Ethyl and Red Crown.

NEW PETOSKEY HIGH SCHOOL STADIUM

Petoskey's new high school stadium, erected in the Morgan Curtis Athletic field on U. S. 131 in the south part of the city, is to be dedicated with the Harbor Springs game on October 7, celebrating the completion of what is said to be one of the finest high school fields in the state. The stadium, built entirely of re-inforced concrete, will seat 1500 persons, with underneath commodious steam heated quarters and 10 shower baths for home and visiting teams.

This stadium was built by the Petoskey Statium association, a non-profit corporation composed of members of the board of education and Rotary and Kiwanis clubs. Exclusive of the site, which was donated by Mr. Curtis, the field and stadium represent an investment of more than $30,000. Of this amount, $25,000 wns secured from un issue of notes which was quickly subscribed by local citizens.

The field also has an excellent quarter-mile cinder track and is enclosed with a substantial wire fence. A flag pole is located near one end of the field and each game will be preceded with n flag raising ceremony in which Petoskey high school's uniformed band of 65 pieces will play an important part.

CHARLEVOIX JOINS DEBATING LEAGUE

HIGH SCHOOL WILL TAKE PART IN CONTEST

Orginization Open To Any City In State—First Battle To Be November 18

Charlevoix high school is again a member of the state debating organization and will take part in numerous contests with other schools this year.

The Michigan High School Debating League, organized by the Board of Regents of the University of Michigan in 1917, this year begins its eleventh year of activity.

Any four year high school in the state may become a member by sending a fee of two dollars to G. Densmore, manager, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Applications for membership will be received up to and including October 22nd.

Debates are sponsored by the league, and each school will participate in the four preliminary debates. Those schools winning the highest records in the preliminary debates will enter the elimination series which will be successive debates reduce these schools to two which will go to Ann Arbor for the stute championship, April 25th, 1928.

The dates for the preliminary debates will be as follows:
First, November 18, 1927.
Second, December 9, 1927.
Third, January 13, 1928.
Fourth, January 27, 1928.

The question that will be debated this year is:

Resolved, that the direct primary System of Nominating Candidates for Public Office in the United States Should be Abolished.

Enrollments for the League are coming in rapidly. Many new schools, never before in, have applied for membership. The enrollment today is ahead of the enrollment a yenr ugo today, and it is expected that the enrollment for the year will exceed the total enrollment for last year which numbered 235 high schools.

Last year these schools held over five hundred debates in which over a thousand high school pupils participated. The attendance at all of these was over one hundred thousand.

In the final state championship, held at Ann Arbor on May 11th, last, Ann Arbor high school won first honors and Albion second honors.

The audience assembled for the championship debate numbered three thousand people, representatives of the different high schools of the state, which is the largest audience that ever attended a championship debate. Eighty-one high schools of the state were represented by one or more delegates.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY STATE TAX $36,544

Is $8,378 Higher Than That For Last Year

Twenty-one counties will have to pay more than their mathematical share of the state's $24,500,000 tax levy, Auditor General Fuller revealed today.

When the levy was spread over the rolls it was discovered that there was a deficit of 21 cents in the total. Forty-two counties drew half-cent apportionments. The auditor general had to stick 21 counties with the extra halves.

Since the levy was an increase of $6,800,000 above that of 1926, each county has been apportioned a larger tax. Wayne, with an increase in its portion of $3,544,600, bears the largest share. Both Kent and Oakland counties graduated into the million dollar tax puyer's class.

Among the apportionment list, with last year's tax included, were the following:

Charlevoix	$ 36,544	$ 28,166
Cheboygan	29,844	22,625
Emmet	45,680	34,862
G'nd T'v'se	50,248	35,785
Kent	1,142,015	861,164
Leelanau	19,795	15,006
Manistee	51,771	39,248
Missaukee	13,095	10,158
Wayne	12,029,210	8,484,666
Wexford	48,725	36,939

Roscommon and Oscoda counties, each assessed $6,090, and are the lowest on the list.

WINTER SPORTS PROGRAM READY

NINETEEN CITIES REPRESENTED AT PETOSKEY LAST TUESDAY

D. T. McHugh Represented Charlevoix Sports Club—Plans For Winter Are Ready

Northern Michigan's campsign for starting a grest winter sports program was given added impetus and gained much moral and physical support st a meeting of officers and members of winter sports cluhs from nineteen lower peninsula cities at the Cushmsn Hotel, Petoskey, last Tuesday night.

Representatives from Detroit, Lansing, Grand Rapids, Manistee, Cadillac, Traverse City, Beulah, Grayling, Gaylord, Cheboygan, Harbor Springs, Harrisville, Greenhush, Evart, and East Jordan were present at the meeting. Charlevoix was represented by D. T. McHugh, vice president of the Lake Charlevpix Winter Sports Club. Arthur Stace, former Grand Rapids newspaper man; Dr. Hugo Stratman, Detroit; H. W. Boehme, a former ski champion; and P. H. Hoffmaster, superintendent of the State parks, were present and addressed the meeting.

Skiing, skating and coasting are three standard winter sports which each individual city elub within the Michigan Winter Sports Association will be asked to include definitely in its program for the coming winter senson. This progrsm was adopted by nssociation officers and key man at a conference at The Cushman, Petoskey, last Wednesday, with Arthur Stace, Michigan expert on winter sports. Addltional sports which the clubs will be asked to foster will be snow shoeing, hockey, ice boating, horse racing, motor skiing, fishing through the ice, dog sledding and tobogganing.

Rules formulated for the year include one that each club must be prepared to furnish equipment for transients. The iden back of this rule is that hundreds of visitors will come to the various cities having winter sports, and that few of them will come prepared to enjoy the sports. Only by having them actnally get right out into the sports can the communities really make winter sports enthusiasts of these visitors. Clubs will be officered by persons really actively interested in these sports.

Chairman of sport departments is another thing believed necessary for the individual clubs. The rule calls for a chairman of tobogganing, another skiing, and still another for skating, etc. Each chairman will pick his committee from those who are most enthusiastic for this individual sport.

Boys and girls clubs are to be encouraged and helped and if found, oest indivjdual headquarters will be maintained for them. Women's clnbs will be eacouraged to join in the movement, either as clubs or as individual members.

The committee adopted one community activity for the winter, that of great "tobogganing days" on Elmira Hill, south of Boyne Falls on U. S. 131. The plan is for enthusiasts of the entire region to gather tbere on certain days and enjoy the nine mile ride. Trueks will take tents for use as rest rooms and warming stations, eating rooms, etc., and cooks and food will be hauled there for these dsys. At eertain hours the highway will be closed to other traffic, and the great steel toboggans weighing a tnn and a half each will begin their trips down the hill. Trucks will hsul the passengers snd toboggans back up again. All Northern Michigan is being asked to join in this and train loads nf city visltors invited up for the sport.

Elmira Hill is one of the longest on the open winter rosd in Northern Michigan. The Pennsylvania railroad makes 27 reverse eurves in going up this grade. The state depnrtment of onservation and the stste highway departments are expected to co-operate in the movement.

Individual clubs will have "hills" all of their own in their own cities, where their clubs will msintain toboggan slides but the community sport will be at Elmira. If the state club's plan works out successfully. There seemed a lot of enthusiasm for the plan at Wednesday's meeting and a large number of boosters promised to help put tbe idea over in a big way.

BOND STATE TO SAVE WILD GAME

THIS IS PLAN OF UPPER PENINSULA SPORTSMEN

Northerners Declare Prescot Fund Too Small to Make Much Headway

The Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association was on record last Wednesdny in favor of floating a $10,000,000 state bond issue to develop state owned forests, game preserves nnd public hunting grounds.

In a resolution adopted at the final session of the annual convention the Upper Peninsula sportsmen asserted present funds were inadequate to cnrry out "an effeetive conservation program for the state of Michigan."

Establishment of a bass hatchery in Northern Michigan also was urged "to prevent extinction of the species in the Upper Peninsula." They recommended the bass senson open July 15 instead of July 4.

Bag limits and shortened seasons have not proved sufficient to check inroads on the wild life of the state, the sportsmen held. Nothing short of large game preserves and refuges developed by the state can meet the situation, they said.

A resolution thanking the state conservation commission for its action in rescinding the short season on rabbits was adopted.

Officers of the organization re-elected were Peter Trudell, Jr., Negaunee, president; M. G. DeGabriele, Negaunee, secretary; Floyd W. Marble, Gladstone, treasurer, and presidents of members clubs as vice presidents of the association.

ANNUAL MEETING WED., OCT. 5

HOLLAND, MICHIGAN, PICKED FOR CONVENTION CITY

Developmeot League Officials Will Meet With Michigan Tourist aod Resort Association

Directors and members of the Development League of Western Michigan will meet in Hollsnd, October 5, during the annual convention of the Michigan Tourist and Resort assoeiation in that city, according to notiees being received by members of this eity.

The meeting is being called in Holland because most of the directors and members of West Michigan's new publicity and internal development organization are also connected with the Tourist and Resort association. The time and place of the league gathering will be announced later. The Development League, in the field only since the first of this year, has opened many ehannels which offer opportunities for giving West Michigan publicity as a summer and winter playground, particularly through newspaper stories and pictures, magazines that deal with subjects closely related to vacation interests and motion picture newsreels. It has also taken a decided interest in making the region more desirable for the thousands of tourists and resorters who spend their vacations here through urging such progressive steps as in renaming the lakes and streams to do away with present misleading duplieations, impressing the need of fire proteetion for summer home communities and similar civic problems that arise with West Michigan's ever expanding resort business.

The League was also the first Michigan promotion organization to take an sctive interest in the promotion of winter sports on a commercinl scale and it is primarily a result of its work that the Michigan Winter Sports association has been estahlished and West Michigan cities are taking a leading part in activities of that new organization.

ESSAY CONTEST IS FOR ALL STUDENTS

VALUABLE PRIZES OFFERED TO WINNERS

Essays Must Be In School Commissioner's Haods by October 25th

Announcements were sent out this week to all the schools in the county announcing the Essay Contest that is held each year in conneetion with the "Top O' Michigan Potato and Apple Show."

The school ebildren of the county have come to look upon this contest with as much anticipation as the older folks who exhibit their best hand picked potatoes. It offers them an opportunity to win some of the prize money awarded by the Bloom company of Detroit and to be the guest of the potato show on Friday, November 4th, the last day of the show, which has been designated Boys and Girls Day.

This year the subject of the essay has been changed from the formal "how I would do so and so." The officers of the show have decided that inasmuch as this is the fifth anniversary of the show and that outstanding results are being shown, that an appropriate subject to write about would be "What the Top O' Michigan Potato and Apple Show is Doing for Northern Michigan."

Prizes will range from fifteen dollars for first place down to three dollars for fifth, a total of forty dollars being offered for the eontest.

Rules for the contest as received from A. C. Lytle, secretary, are as follows:

1. Candidate must be enrolled in school. All grades below the 9th will be eligible.

2. The length of the essay must not exceed over 1000 words.

3. The essay must be written in pen and on smooth office paper about 8½ x 11 inches.

Any child desiring to enter this contest should consult their teacher who in turn will receive complete instructions from the county school commissioner or the secretary of the show. All essays must be in the hands of the county school commissioner by October 25th.

Judges this year will be Burt Wermuth, editor of the Michigan Farmer; Milon Grinnell, editor of the Michigan Business Farmer; and Fred Henshaw, of the Detroit News.

MEET DEFEAT AT CHEBOYGAN

LOCALS TO LOSE TO NORTHERNERS BY 43 TO 0 SCORE

Schools Should Not Depreciate Purpose of Athletics When Met By Reverses

From the point of view of victory, the 43 to 0 defeat of Charlevoix's football team at Cheboygan last Saturday was disastrous. The average rooter for the team could hardly imagine such a let-down after the team's opening performsnce at Boyne City a week before.

However, from the point of view of the purpose of athletics in the school, the defeat was not disastrous. To the public and average fan, the team is only successful when it wins victories. That attitude is probably the most unfortunate phase of modern athletics. When athleties was first introduced to the schools, the argument was physical development, sportsmanship, teamwork, moral courage, punishment without whimpering, fighting spirit, leadership, loyalty, quick thinking, etc. Victory was only secondary. However today with intense rivalries having been developed by athletics itself, its very purpose and sole aim has been changed to victory. Unless victory, it is total failure.

It is common knowledge that athletic material ebbs and flows in schools. During the past few years our school has had very creditable teams as far as victories were concerned. But now we have come upon lean years. Graduation has left us with no men of outstanding athletic ability. No coach can take green material and in three weeks fashion a winning team. Whether we win any games this year remains to be seen. But that doesn't argue that athletics are useless and of no account. In such cases it is all the more valuable, for the boys need the training that much more. Athleties is primarily for the good of the individual player, and secondarily for the glory of the school and town.

As for a football team playing for points, Charlevoix was fairly and badly beaten by Cheboygan. They met a better, heavier and more superior team, and the score showed it. But, this is no discredit to them.

Another week of strenuous training will see developed ability and a better showing. The real test of sportsmanship, the ultimate value of athletics, comes when the team is losing. It is easy enough to keep up courage and continue fighting when the victories come, but it is a much finer and more valuable thing to do the samo in the face of defeat. The boys deserve support and encouragement as never before.

Let's everybody boost. The team goes to Traverse City on Saturdny of this week.

FERRY TRAVEL NOW NEAR 100,000 MARK

PASSENGERS CROSSING PASSES THE 361,000 MARK

August 18 Was Peak Day of Season When 1,120 Cars Crossed Straits—Figures Astonisbing

The following information concerning traffie across the Strsits of Mackinaw was taken from the St. Ignace News, and will prove interesting to Courier readers:

When the lsst line was made fast Monday night, September 19th, at St. Ignace and Mackinaw City, the state ferries had csrried 76,895 vehieles across the straits and transported approximately 361,000 passengers.

The peak day of the season was August 18, when the St. Ignace and Mackinaw City carried 1,120 cars between sun-up and quitting time at night.

According to the estimate of Chief Purser C. E. Walker, 151,368 young Americans of school age have visited the upper peninsula this year. Young America crosses free on the Michigan state ferries.

The two boats have carried nearly 135,000 fare-paying passengers, not including the drivers of cars who travel free. This has produced nearly $34,000 additionnl revenue to the state thus far this season, and with little or no protest from those who paid. The larger part of the howl of woe came from the persons who have never seen the smoke of the boats and who have shuddered at the idea of charging anyone 25 cents for n seven mile boat ride, Purser Walker declares.

In April, 1926, boats were not in operation because of ice. This year the season opened earlier and 1,393 cars were carried in April. In May, 1926, 2,629 cars were carried, and in May, 1927, 5,755 were transported. In June last year the boats carried 6,602 cars and in June this year they enrried 7,892.

In July, 1926, 17,290 cars were carried and this year 22,230, a gain of nearly 5,000 cars for July. In August, 1926, 25,913 cars crossed and in August, 1927, 30,851 made the passage, a gain of nearly 5,000 over the year before.

During the first 19 days of September this year, 10,362 crossed which is nearly 200 cars more than were carried during the entire month of September last year.

Based on the 1926 figures for September, October, November and December, during which period nearly 23,000 cars were carried, the total cars carried this year will run considerably over 90,000. With open weather and the added annual inroad of hunters from sections south of the straits, the figures probably will reach the 100,000 mark with considerably over 400,000 persons carried.

BEAR MUST BE ON THE INCREASE NOW

State Has Paid Over $2,000 for Sheep Killed By Bruin

Editor Al Weber of the Cheboygan Democrat, seems to sense the same feeling of doubt as many others relative to the number of sheep killed by bear since the state legislature made it possible for sheep owners to be reimbursed by the state for animals killed by Bruin. His recent aricle on the subject follows:

"It is to be nnted that the state has already paid a sum in excess of two thousand dollars for sheep sapposedly killed by hear. This report would indieate tnnt Bruin is getting pretty numerous throughout the sheep raising section of the state, but if the facts were known we believe not five per cent of the claims are honest and fnir. We haven't heard of nny bear raids on Herb Reynolds' flock as yet this fall, and Herb lives in the most bear infested section of the state. He frequently has a sheep killed by a bear, and he sometimes loses sheep that are credited to the bear thnt mayhap find their way to mutton hungry humans, but it seems sheep killing bear have become very fashionable since the legislature made it possihle for sheep to become lost in that manner and as a consequenco sheep killing dogs are getting a rest."

Men Marooned by George Marsh

The sled-load was untoucbed. Etienne had had but one thought—to save his dogs. So Garth slushed the frozen lashings and reached a grub-bag, tea pail and kettle; then started for the camp, following blindly the dog who nosed out the trucks of the team. The dull glow of the fire through the blur of snow led them over the last yards. There, on his knees, Etienne was working over his huskies' legs.

"Grub and a pail!" shouted Garth, as he scooped up snow for ten. "Good old Castor! You feel better now?"

The husky, sprawled near the blazing logs, lifted his tail in response.

"Der moccasin save der feet," said Etienne. "Good ting dey cut feet on de bush so we got on de shoe."

"But how did you get them up to follow you? They were close to frozen when we left them."

Etienne grinned as he plucked and rubbed a pair of hairy paws. "De husky ees ver' smart feller. Dey were all tire out—but not start to freeze w'en we left dem. Een leetle tam, dey so tire and hungree, dey freeze. But Etienne tell dem dat supper start soon, and dey come to life, tonte suite. Den I drag dem here."

"I'll go back for blankets," said the much relieved Guthrie, and with Shot, went to the sled and returned with robes, and the whitefish for the famished huskies.

Later, snug before their fire in the wind- oak of the timber, two men and six dogs slept the sleep of exhaustion, while the norther drove across the white tundra.

• • • • • • •

Although the wind ceased and the snow ceased by noon of the following day, the crippled dogs held Guthrie to his camp. With his glasses he located the smoke of cooking fires in the scrub across the basin, and in the early afternoon Etienne slipped his moccasins into the thongs of his snowshoes and started for the camp of the hunters, while Garth, whose knowledge of Cree was limited, stayed with the dogs.

As Garth watched a boiling kettle of salt water, and bannock baking in a tilted frying pan, the dogs announced the return of Etienne through the dusk. Much depended upon what the head man—had learned, and Guthrie probed the immobile features as the half-breed thrust his shoes in a drift and stepped to the fire.

"Well, what news?"

From the gravity of his expression it was clear that Savanne was struggling with a problem difficult and baffling.

"Ver' queer t'ing—ver' queer!" was the unresponsive answer as Etienne dropped his mittens on their neck thong to warm his hands at the fire.

"What is?"

"What dose Cree tell me. Dere are eight hunter wid camp een dis valley here; some from Elkwan and some from down de coast. I talk to dem all. W'at dey say ees ver' strange."

"Well, for heaven's sake shoot!"

"Soucl has been here two—t'ree day back. He invite dem to the Canoe Riviere w'ere he mak' de heeg medicine."

"Did he get them to promise to take their fur to the schooner?"

"No! Mokoman, he talk to dem strong, too, hut dey not know w'at dey do w'en I say de strait froze. Dey have much fox—silver, black and cross."

"They are going to Soucl's powwow?"

"Yes, and hunter down de riviere—all weel go."

"How far is it?"

"Not far—ten mile—mebbe more, ovair de hill."

Garth's mouth shut hard. "Well, Etienne, we haven't been invited, but we'll surely attend that party."

Etienne nodded. "But dees Soucl, w'y he tak' de troubl' to do dees t'ing?"

"He's going to tell the hunters that the spirits are the friends of McDonald and they must take their fur to the schooner."

"I feex dat for heem. I tell de Cree ovair dere dat you and I watch da schooner at night, an' see fire come out of her an' de devil dance on de mast. I scare dose squaw so bad, one had de fit."

"How about the men?"

"Dey wait to see Soucl—but dey are scare."

"Where is this Mokoman?"

"He has gone to de Canoe. He was not wid Soucl."

"Well, we head for the Canoe at daylight. Will the dogs be able to travel? If not, we go without them."

"Ah-huh, de dogs can walk to de Canoe."

"We may not persuade the hunters to cross the ice with us, but we can make it hot for sorcerer Soucl when he tries his mumbo-jumbo. Will he dare make his medicine when he sees us?"

Savanne scratched his head before replying. "Sumet'ing ern dis dat ees queer. Dey say Soucl has not met Mokoman, an' he was here on de Islan' long time. Dere was trouble, too, wid French companee, down de Rabbit."

"What kind of trouble—fighting?"

"Ah-hah! Dis Blackbeard run de French Cree ovair de ice—drive dem off de Islan'."

"He did, did he? Well, that will cook McDonald's goose for next year. The government will have the police up here waiting for that schooner on her return. Run 'em off the Island? Good! I only wish he'd try that with us. I wouldn't mind meeting up with Monsieur Brequit of St. Johns."

Etienne drew a long skinning knife from his inside sash. "I would lak to cut dem whisker wid dis—ver' short, een de neck."

"I'll bet you would, you old knife-fighter! Like the job you did on One-Eyed Louis, up at God's lake."

Etienne squinted along the edge of the knife—then ran a thumb over it.

"Breault insult ma femme," he said quietly, and returned the knife to its sheath.

In the blue dawn the dog-team pulled out of camp bound down river to the west fork, which would take them north through a gash in the barrens to the watershed of the Canoe. The norther had left much drifted snow and the stiff legs of the huskies cut the pace to a walk. Shot, exuberant after his two days of enforced idleness, ranged to the front and flanks in search of ptarmigan, rabbit and mouse. Along the river, the broken-out drift in the old trail marked the hunters on their way to the rendezvous on the Canoe. It was evident that the Cree trappers in the north of the island were bound for the medicine lodge of the old shaman. Twenty to thirty hunters with a catch of at least one hundred foxes would gather to witness the necromancy of the conjurer. On the power of the old man's magic would depend the destination of twenty thousand dollars' worth of fox pelts. Whether Elkwun or the schooner at Seal cove was to enjoy a rich Christmas trade would be determined by the ability of Saul and his spirit coadjutors to nullify the superstitious fears aroused by the sinister rumors of the crafty Etienne. It would be a battle worth watching, thought Garth, keen for the meeting in the lonely valley of the Canoe between the grasping Cree who had betrayed him and the resourceful Savanne. But one condition he had imposed on the half-breed—that there should be no bloodshed. They had come to Akimiski to save the trade, of the future, as well as the present, and under no circumstances was the head man to abuse or threaten either Saul or his sons. He, Guthrie, would have something to say concerning the long arm of the company in its future dealings with the man who had deserted to the enemy; but the command was—no fighting.

"W'at you do with dat Mokoman?" had demanded Etienne with a grimace.

"If he shows up at the pow-wow, and interferes, I'll leave him to you."

"I tak' good care of heem," granted the other.

At the fork they left the main river trail to follow the branch leading north.

"Dey all go to Soucl's party," mouthed Etienne. "Four, five team pass here dis morning."

As the tender-footed huskies drew the sled at a walk or slow trot, Shot revealed in the game sign of the scrub along shore. On a foray into the timber, the trail of the snowshoe-rabbit, which had first lured him, was crossed by that of a more enticing fox. Keen with the lust for the hunt, Shot followed the trail back through the scrub and out into the open barren on the shoulders of the valley. There, far from the river, he stopped. Before him the webbed imprint of snowshoes cut the fox tracks he followed. The dog sniffed curiously, but it was a vague, unfamiliar scent that the fresh trail carried. Slowly at first, then at a lope, he followed it down through the timber. As he neared the river the voices of Garth and Etienne drifted faintly in from the ice. The dog was puzzled. From his rigid war training he had learned silence when business was afoot. And this seemed business. By the hour he had watched shell holes—from trenches—had patrolled forest, as at present, in absolute silence. In some occult way the keen-witted dog seemed that again, there in the white north far from Flemish battle fields, he was at his old trade, guarding with quivering nostrils, eyes and ears tense, the safety of the man out there on the ice.

On he went, weaving in and out of the thick scrub, relentless as a wolf. Suddenly the airedale stiffened, hair rising like brush bristles along his spine. Near the shore in the thicket ahead was something dark, motionless.

The war dog froze, stiff as the spruce above him, one paw suspended in air. A vague scent reached his working nostrils. Then, like a lynx through the dusk, the airedale drifted up the trail.

Out on the river ice the voice of Garth called, "Here, Shot!" But the head of the dog did not turn. His small, terrier eyes never left the

As We Grow Older

Proper Kidney Action Is More Than Ever Important.

AS we grow older, there is apt to be a gradual slowing up of bodily functions. The kidneys are the blood filters. If their action becomes sluggish they do not thoroughly cleanse the blood of poisonous wastes. This tends to make one tired and achy, with often nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizziness. A common symptom of imperfect kidney action is scanty or burning excretions. Elderly people recommend Doan's Pills. This tested diuretic is endorsed the country over. Ask your neighbor!

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

You Need Never Change Your Oil if You Own a Buick

Last year Buick said: "Change your oil only four times a year." Buick tests at that time had shown that oil changes would never be necessary, with the Oil Filter to remove impurities, and the Crankcase Ventilator to prevent oil dilution.

Now, more than a year has passed, and Buick owners in every section of the world—under every climatic condition—have also proved that you never need change your oil if you own a Buick—replenishment and inspection of the Buick Oil Filter only are required.

OUR PERSONAL LIBERTIES

The enjoyment of our personal liberties depends on ourselves. The constitution protects us against being made slaves, but no law can protect us from making slaves of ourselves. If we become slaves to our own fears, prejudices, ambitions, appetites or misguided desires, the laws of nature may serve us but the laws of society, that guarantees our liberties, can do little or nothing for us.

The constitution guarantees us equality before the law, but the guaranty merely protects the right. We must assert ourselves to enjoy the privileges of equality. The law makes provisions for us to maintain our right and enjoy equality before the law, but laws benefit only those who obey them. Neither can the law prevent one from seeking less than one's just rights, although the law can block one who seeks more than his just personal right.

The individual has a right to expect the law to protect his rights to property, but the law cannot prevent us from being wasteful or making foolish investments. The law does not guarantee that the individual shall have property, except his share in the common property of the community. The law is under no obligation to provide property for those who do not acquire it. The enjoyment of property is a personal affair. The law merely establishes and protects the principle of individualism as against communism, collectivism or socialism.

The constitution guarantees liberty of conscience, but the law cannot make one's conscience free in all respects. The law merely assumes the responsibility to protect the members of American society from coercion, that would deprive them of the right of following their own consciences, but the individual cannot enjoy unlimited freedom of conscience nor hide behind the constitution when he violates the laws of society.

DEMANDS ON MANAGEMENT INCREASING

Never before has ingenuity been quoted at a higher premium in the market for human services. With the main course of commodity prices downward while wages stay up, the demands upon management become increasingly great.

The drifters, who were carried along by the tides of inflation and easy prosperity in other times, are in wholesale number entering the list of commercial casualties, as the large rewards are going increasingly to men of imagination and commanding personality, who are able to show profits for their concerns in the face of heightened competition.

American business has never given more to the public for each unit of expenditure. Profits are found currently not through profiteering, but through eliminating wastes through lessening friction, and through obviating unnecessary motions. The trend toward efficiency constitutes a silent revolution in production and in distribution. Business is becoming structurally sounder than in the past, and accordingly is less sensitive to the shocks of adverse episodes in the news.

Though American business has not begun to reach the structural point, it has attained a stage where each factor must fight intelligently to maintain its position in the field. With productive facilities adequate, there is no fear of shortages, which justifies the continuance in business of the lame and the inefficient. The trend is toward the competent, who by dint of superior service, more economically rendered, are increasing their hold on markets. In the process, though business units become larger, ownership is becoming more widely diffused than ever in the past. Each year the great corporations are adding the tens of thousands on their rolls of shareholders.—From the Executive.

SPEED UP JUSTICE

William Howard Taft, chief justice of the supreme court, called our system of court procedure a disgrace to civilization. He said:

"If there is anything in our whole government that justifies an attack on our present system of living, it is the delays in our judical procedure."

The twenty years which have elapsed since Justice Taft made that statement have not lessened its truth. This year in Collier's he complained of the plunder which encourages "every possible delay to confuse and obstruct the course of justice."

The oil scandals involving Secretary Fall and Messrs. Sinclair and Doheny came to light in 1923. Their cases are still dragging wearily through the courts.

Yet the authorities agree that swiftness and certainty of punishment do more to prevent crime than the most drastic severity.

Justice is slothful because of the endless opportunities for court delay.

It is assumed in every trial that there will be an appeal. Of course there ought to be an appeal if substantial injustice is done. But a miscarriage of justice is not necessary to the upsetting of the verdict reached in a criminal court. The ingenuity of lawyers and the length of the purse of the persons on trial account for most of the delay.

Theodore Roosevelt once proposed a law denying the right of a court to set aside any judgement on merely technical grounds.

The states, and not only the federal government, must act. The American Bar Association has a great opportunity to point out the ways in which justice may be intelligently quickened.

The senseless delay which the only man who has been both president and chief justice of the supreme court called a disgrace to civilization will remain a disgrace until it is changed. —Colliers.

DOLLAR INCREASES IN VALUE

Since December, 1925, the purchasing value of the dollar has increased nearly six per cent and now stands at this highest point since July, 1924. The dollar now is worth 61.7 cents as compared with the 1914 dollar. It was lowest in July, 1920, when its purchasing power had shrunk to 48.9 per cent of the prewar dollar. Declining living costs were given by the board as the reason for the increase in the dollar's purchasing power.

COURSE IN RURAL ELECTRIFICATION

Believing that the farmer will better understand electrification when explained by men who know the farming business as well as engineering, the General Electric company has inaugurated an eight-months course in rural electrification at the Schenectady plant. Five men, born and bred on farms, have been selected for this training, the first of its kind fostered by a large electrical manufacturing company. The course will be carried on under the supervision of the sales training department at Schenectady, established for many years, the facilities of which for teaching both theoretical and practical work are those of a veteran educator in electrical matters.

Cost More to Record Papers

Under the provision of a new state law persons filing legal papers with the register of deeds must henceforth pay slightly more than heretofore. Instead of the usual price of 11 cents per folio, persons filing papers must now pay 15 cents per folio. The register of deeds submits a list of prices on certain documents, the chief of which follow: Warranty deed, short form, $1.20; warranty deed, long form, $1.40; mortgage, short form, $1.25; long form, $1.80; discharge of mortgage, $1.60, other papers 15 cents per folio.

Boyne Trims Harbor Team

Harbor Springs football team fell before Boyne City on Boyne's field Saturday, 13 to 6. The victory eame in the elosing minutes of the game when Boyne forward passed her way down the field for a touchdown. Boyne has always fought well when behind and always fought hard until the final whistle, no matter what the odds. The two teams were evenly matched, giving the region several teams of about equal ability. The Saturday previous Boyne and Charlevoix tied, 6 to 6, and the week previous luck favored Boyne and she won, 19 to 12, from Gaylord. There seems little to choose between these teams. Petoskey won from Gaylord in a comfortable way. Harbor Springs plays at Petoskey Friday in the Petoskey field dedication game.

The Epworth Ladies' Aid will serve a chicken pie supper at the Hilton school, Friday night, Oetober 7. Bill 50c.—Adv. 40-t1

MANCELONA HAS "SPEEDWAY" WHERE THEY BURN DUST

Petoskey Meat Man Arrested for Failing to Clean Up Place—Boys Run Away From Home

The 20-Miles-an-Hour Law

A serious accident has occurred on west State street this week—on what the residents along that street have long called "Mancelona's Speedway."

East State street has also laid some claims to being such a race course, and residents between here and Antrim insists their streets is the only real fast track in this section.

At any rate, within the corporation limits the state law places a maximum speed of 20 miles per hour, outside of the business section where the rate must not exceed 15 miles.

Local officials have tried to be nice, and not be unnecessarily strict. They see no harm in going over the limit a little when the streets are clear. But, as usual, their leniency and good nature has been taken advantage of by a number of young fellows in particluar.

It seems now as if a few examples should be made, and excessive speeding stopped within the village limits.

In this connection it might be mentioned that any citizen can swear out a warrant when too much speed is shown, and when there does not happen to be an officer around to take cognizance of it.—Mancelona Herald.

Petoskey Meat Dealer Fined

Louis Galinski, local meat dealer, is to be given a hearing tomorrow before Justice W. H. Harris on a charge brought by John E. Koon, special investigator of the state department of agriculture. He was notified on September 8 to make certain changes at his slaughter house and clean up the surroundings and he failed to comply with these demands, Mr. Koon alleges. He paid a fine for a similar offence in June, 1924.—Petoskey Evening News.

Start Out to See the World

Three young lads out of school concluded their home life was too tame and porsy so they jumped on an outgoing train one day recently and hied for somewhere, they knew not where, just anywhere to get away from home restraints and be offered an opportunity to battle with the big and pulsing world. The parents were all wrought up as most parents are when the youngsters do not chalk up at the usual hour and in consequence a search was instituted by which the local police officers took a prominent part. All cities in the state were communicated with and it was joyous news for the home folks when the flash came back that the wanderers had been detained at Pontiac and were being held for the home folks. The boys were sent for and will be back home and in their classes again Monday. No doubt after missing several home meals, the protection of the parental roof tree and divers other things kids are accostomed to that they don't seem to appreciate until they are deprived of them they will be happy to realize that dads and mothers cared enough to send for them and save them the humiliation of sneaking back home the best they could.—Cheboygan Democrat.

Who Were the Goats?

Let the city dwellers laugh at the country dwellers for knowing nothing if they wish, but he who laughs last laughs best. Two weekenders from Detroit came to spend some time at a cottage on Bois Blance Island. The natives seriously told them tales of the terrific and fierce rampages of wild goats at large on the island menacing the lives of all. Next morning the city dwellers had deserted their home on the island, leaving for parts where goats would not harm them. Question—Who were the goats?—East Jordan Herald.

Stolen Car Spotted By Carter McGregor

A stolen auto was recovered at the state ferry dock last Friday afternoon. An Auburn sedan, with loot valued at about $2,000, had been stolen at the Soo by Wesley Rider of Flint.

The Soo news report gave credit to State Trooper Keune for the capture, but it was Carter McGregor who noticed the car as the one concerning which a hue and cry had been sent out from the Soo, and he tipped off State Trooper Swann. Rider has been returned to Ionia to complete a sentence of five years, from which he had been released on parole.—Cheboygan Democrat.

Watch Out for These Fellows

Police officer Sullivan reports that short change artists are busy this week in Northern Michigan and warns gas station proprietors, store folk, etc., to be on the lookout. A Boyne Falls merchant reported yesterday having been jipped out of $5.00 in making change for the pair. He reports one man is large and one small and that this pair is traveling in a green Chevrolet coupe.—Petoskey Evening News.

Hard on the Bootlegger

Bears are getting so plentiful around here it is reported they have destroyed two batches of mash at one of our local plants; we don't know what happened to the bears.—Germfask cor., Manistique Pioneer-Tribune.

AT THE MOVIES

New Griffith Comedy Fast and Furious Fun

Hailed as one of the mile-a-minute type of comedies that established Raymond Griffith as a star, "Wedding Bill$" his new Paramount picture, comes to the Palace Theatre Thursday and Friday.

The story opens up with Griffith sound asleep at a friend's wedding but from that point on little sleeping is done as Griffith labors furiously and uproariously to save his best pal from the machinations of a blond vamp and to win a charmer of the same preferred coloring for himself.

Harry Langdon a Real Student of Humanity

Critics and audiences are slowly coming to the conclusion that Harry Langdon, the screen's outstanding comedy star, puts something besides laughs into his pictures.

Just what this certain something is remains a matter of opinion, but the consensus of opinion calls it a "big idea."

In "Three's a Crowd," latest of his super-laugh epics, the sap-eyed star is said to have the greatest thought, and likewise the greatest story, in his entire film career.

He has surrounded the thought with chuckles, and interwoven it with laughs, and camouflaged it with hysterical roars—but the thought is there, just the same, for those who will make the little effort to unmask it.

Just what Harry's thought is will be disclosed Tuesday and Wednesday when "Three's a Crowd" is seen at the Palace Theatre.

First National, who released the film, concede "Three's a Crowd" to be the wide-eyed Langdon's greatest screen achievement, both in point of laughs and in point of story-entertainment.

Let Adlerika give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing and see how much better you will feel. It will surprise you! F. J. Fessenden, Druggist—Adv. 40-t1.

WINTER SPORTS PROGRAM READY

Individual clubs are being urged to start now the work of building for their skating rinks and ski jumps, slides, trails etc., and their hills for coasting.

With the experience gained from last winter's successful three-day winter sports carnival, and the enthusiasm shown by summer visitors in the Lake Charlevoix Winter Sports Club organized recently, Charlevoix is going ahead with her plans for this winter's activities with confidence and assurance that her program will be well patronized by local residents and visitors alike. D. T. McHugh, who heads the winter sports activities in Charlevoix, states that a definite program is being arranged and that he has a large list of people who have announced their intentions of visiting Charlevoix during the months of January and February.

FEEDING A NATION

Today 86,000 refrigerator cars are busy night and day moving fruit and vegetable crops from producer to storage and from storage to market. The Interstate Commerce Commission's figures show that over 1,000,000 carloads of perishable fruits and vegetables are moved annually in the United States. The average haul is 1,500 miles. Truck haulage is tremendous. Los Angeles, for instance, received 17,500 carloads by truck and 15,000 by rail in 1924, and motor traffic is growing.

The refrigerator car has led to the development of the fruit and vegetable industry so that this nation is now the best fed in the world.

CAUTION

If only caution were observed by every driver, there would be no need of other devices for safety. Many of the victims are not themselves responsible for accidents but sacrifice themselves on the alter of someone else's carelessness. Human nature being what it is, the time will probably never come when every driver is careful and unless there is someone about to prevent it, a certain percentage of drivers are going to "step on it," with no regard for the consequences.

shape on the snow. He knew that the lean, brown barrel thrust before the dark body was a rifle—a maker of fire and death.

Three—four steps nearer, then gathering beneath him the steel springs which were the muscles of his legs, the airedale leaped. As Shot's fangs ripped into the shoulder of the Indian's capote, the rifle exploded. A bullet ricocheted from the frozen sled cover and whined away over the river. Two men dropped behind the sled, as the team stopped. Reaching up, Etienne wrenched his cased rifle from its lashings and fired twice below a shred of blue smoke hanging in the spruce, where an enraged dog silently grappled with an unknown enemy. But his fire was not returned. There, under the trees, an Indian frantically fought to turn his rifle on the maddened brute who had ripped parka to ribbons and hurled him backward to the snow. Parrying the snap of punishing fangs with a blow of his gun butt, the Indian gained his feet, to meet another lunge before he aimed his gun. Again the dog leaped, carrying the man with him. Fangs slashed at bared throat—a choked cry—the airedale's jaws shut on dark flesh—ripped—and the would-be assassin lay on the snow with a torn throat.

There Garth and Etienne found them, the airedale lying beside his kill. Etienne bent to stare, with an oath, into the features, knotted in their death grimace, of—Joe Mokoman.

"Ambush us, eh?" snarled the half-breed. "You do fine job, Joe Mokoman." And he spurned the body with the bow of his snowshoe.

"So he meant to get that fur if he had to bury us in the snow?" said Garth, turning from the ugly picture to his dog, still whining with the heat of battle. "Good old Shottie!" And the man hugged the hairy shoulders of his friend. "You tracked him down for Garth, didn't you, old comrade of mine?"

"He dam good dog, Shot, eh?" cried Etienne, slapping the shaggy back. He know more dan some men; he know Joe, he hunt us."

"He thought Joe was a German sharpshooter, didn't you, Shot?" And seated on the snow, Garth rocked to and fro, rubbing the ears of his dog, soothing his excitement in the low notes of a language none but the wriggling airedale understood.

"Wal, we buree dis skunk een de snow and let m'sieu' fox deeg him out."

"That's all we can do. He must have heard from the traveling Indians we were bound for the Canoe and decided to stop us. Do you suppose that McDonald knows we are here and sicked him on us?"

Etienne shook his head. "He idn ap dis end de Islus', so de hunter say."

"I'm sorry this happened," said Garth. "There's no telling what kind of a tale they'll make of it. I wish a sled would show up so we could show our evidence."

"Ef we stay on Island after Mc Donal' hear hees dam ees dead, we have to fight for sure."

"I'm not afraid of McDonald," laughed Garth, "but I don't want the Indians drawn into the fight. We're here for fur, not trouble, and I'll have to answer to my superiors for what happens. That's why I want you to be careful when we meet Souel. No fighting—understand?"

Savanne nodded. "De hunter know Etienne Savanne," said the half-breed with finality. "Dey weel not start trouble' wid heem."

"All right! Now let's make tracks for the Canoe and that medicine lodge of Souel's."

With their snowshoes, they heaped a mound of snow over the body of the skulker in the spruce, to be found by the lynx and foxes, and started. At noon the team turned down into the valley of the Canoe.

In the windbreak of the spruce on the shore of the frozen river, the men from Elkwan found the tipis of the hunters. From north and east and south had come the fox trappers with their families for the great medicine making of Souel, the shaman. The wigwams hummed with gossip of the crossing of the strait by the fall factor of Elkwan to fight for the trade with McDonald Ha! Ha! From valley to valley Mokoman had traveled, urging the hunters to go to the schooner. Black Breault, too, and Skene had visited many of the camps, but as yet the wily hunters had sold little fur, hoping by their seeming reluctance to obtain higher prices. Also, in the last few days, rumors, vague terrifying, had been adrift. A hunter from the Ptarmigan claimed he had been down to the hills above Seal cove and seen fire dancing on the masts of the boat at night; that black magic was being made by the man with the face of a mad wolverine. Another swore that his cousin, trapping on the Calling river, had been to the schooner and heard devil music from a box. An old squaw had already planted panic among the women with a story that bewitched hunters would leave McDonald's ship to desert their wives and children.

All this and more the industrious Etienne gathered from the gossiping Crees from the Elkwan while Garth made camp and fed and chained the dogs. His seeds, planted with such care in the camps of the Ptarmigan and Rabbit, had indeed sprouted, were in fact already bearing fruit. The Crees were ill at ease—suspicious of these strangers who had come to the Island with their smiles and trade goods, and in the conjury of old Saul, that night, they hoped and waited for the advice and assurance that it would be safe as well as wise for them to carry their fox pelts to the schooner at Seal cove.

As for the old shaman, Etienne learned that he was camped downstream, beside his medicine lodge, alone, preparing himself for communion with his confreres, the spirits which, that night beneath the stars, he would summon with his magic to speak to the Crees, and remove from their hearts the doubts and fears which harassed them.

Permanent streets are a good investment—not an expense

Don't Let Your Community Make the Same Mistake

Within recent years many communities have made the mistake of paving their highways at what they considered a "bargain price." The taxpayers thought they would save thousands of dollars.

In many instances the maintenance has not only wiped out the hoped for saving, but has exceeded original cost. And in many cases also it has been necessary to build entirely new streets—of permanent construction.

There are communities, however, which know the cheapest is not always the best. Many of these also built streets several years ago. And they built for permanence with concrete.

Those concrete streets, built in accordance with approved standards of highway construction, are in as good condition today as when they were built.

Which of these communities will yours be?

Ladies' Nutrition Project Starts

Nutrition for all ages is the theme of the home nutrition project for extention groups of women for the winter. The first training meetings have just been held at Boyne City and East Jordan for leaders from surrounding communities.

Under the direction of Miss Muriel Dundas, extension nutrition specialist, Michigan State College local leaders are receiving instruction in nutrition which they in turn will give to their community groups. Miss Dundas, formerly a county home demonstration agent in Allegan and Oakland counties, has just returned to the extension staff at M. S. C. after a year's study at Columbia University from which she received her Master of Arts degree in June.

Training meeting for leaders will occur once each month for six months. The second annual achievement day for the county will be held at the conclusion of the project. Many of the groups represented at the first meeting have been enrolled in the foods project given last spring by Mrs. Bernice Wells, extension specialist. Several new groups were added to these meetings and it is expected that others will enroll befor the second training meetings, November 10 and 11. Any group which desires to send leaders may do so by conferring with B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent, through whose efforts the work is available to the women of the county. Similar projects are being carried on in Emmet and Antrim counties.

The course as outlined will include the following topics:

1. Relation of Nutrition and Right Living to General Health.
2. The Health Fortune Telling Game.
3. Eating for Health and Efficiency.
4. Building the Body House (The protein foods.)
5. Building the Body House (Minerals-phosphorus, Iron, Lime.)
6. The Growth Promoting and Protective foods or the Body Guards—(The vitaniuns iodinc.)

In addition to the discussion, exercises for health, posture and for the feet will be included in the course. Menu planning to meet the requirements of all ages and conditions, care and protection of the teeth and bones, and the health score for the individual will be stressed.

The home nutrition is to be supplimented by the school nutrition series which will be sent to teachers who wish to have it for their schools. The school series includes stories, one to be given each month stressing the formation of proper food and health habits. Such as drinking milk, eating fruits and vegetables, proper sleep and rest, brushing the teeth, eating three good meals daily. A nutrition and growth creed for school room is included with the first month's story. The children are to be weighed and measured at the beginning and end of the project and their progress checked according to height and body build.

The music appreciation project which is a feature of the state home demonstration program will be given at each training meeting.

Members of the local groups were invited to attend the lecture "Food Makes a Difference" given with slide illustrations at the afternoon session.

SCHOOL NOTES

SENIOR CLASS

The Senior class of Charlevoix high school chose for their sponsors this year, Mr. North. We are all sure our class will be a success this year with his help and also the help of our class president, LaRue Higman. Of course we should mention how dignified we feel this year and it is quite hard to keep our places, especially when the teachers are not on duty in the halls and we would like to slide down the bannisters. But that "Senior feeling" won't let us.

Leaving all fooling aside we hope to accomplish a lot this year. Watch for the announcement of the Senior play which we hope to be able to give in the new high school auditorium. This will be the best play of the year and we hope we will have lots of support from the town and the school.

JUNIOR CLASS

Noreene Moran and Maxwell Novak

We, the juniors, expecting to graduate in 1929, hope to accomplish much this coming year, in fact we know so and are planning on it—and why? Look who we have with us, one of the nicest, sweetest little sponsors you would ever wish to meet. Miss Tower. Miss Tower seems to have a great interest in our class, which, alone being one of the main factors of any class, inspires us and we are able to do so many things.

We have been real busy of late in ordering our class rings, and really, if like the samples, they are going to be real "classy," so now, everyone must be alert with wide open orbs on the slender fingers of the "dignified" Juniors, for then you see, we shall all be flashing our fingers here and there and our hearts going 60 per.

In our next week's column, we wish to bring forth some real, clever original jokes, that is if we can possibly manage to jot them down in class without hearing the teacher's dainty wee voice, (seeing our pens moving so rapidly) announcing an hour after school for writing notes in class. They always do suspect us poor Juniors of doing that ugly thing, wonder why? We never do such things—never did—and never will.

Now, the last and most important feature of the program is, our football team of course. We are just hoping and praying that we win next Saturday, and how can the town as a whole inspirit the game? By being out to the field, boosting with every ounce of pep from each member present.

SOPHMORE NEWS

The Sophmore class held a meeting September 23, the purpose of which was to elect the following officers:

Pres., Margerite Gimble.
Vice-pres., Anna Tuhy
Sec'y., Joe Smith.
Treas., Neva Webster.
Reporters, Dorothy Withers and Billy O'Niel.

We also elected Mr. Coleman as our sponsor.

The Sophmores as yet have not decided upon any definite way to raise money, but in the near future we expect to have a candy and baked goods sale. We hope that the people of Charlevoix will patronize these sales for the good of the Sophmore class.

In our next meeting we expect to choose our class flower, color and motto and we hope to hold these during the rest of our years in high school.

FRESHMAN CLASS

The Freshman class held a meeting last week and elected their officers as follows: President, Billy Novak; vice president, Richard McCann; treas., Mary Lou Parker; sec., Mary Simmons. Robert McCall and Dorothy Struthers were elected reporters for the class. Miss Thomas is class sponsor.

Frank Winick was absent from school last week. Wonder what is the matter with Frank? Maybe he is taking another vacation.

Billy N.—"I wish I had a hundred dollars!"

Victor S.—"If you did would you lend me a five spot?"

Billy—"You lazy thing, why don't you do your own wishing?

PEP MEETING

On Friday afternoon, September 30, a general assembly was held the last period of the afternoon. Our new yell leader, Valera "Johnny" Ripley, took charge of the meeting. At first the students gave some yells that nearly brought the building down on our heads. Then they called on the football fellows to give speeches. They all said that they were going to "Bring Home the Bacon" from Cheboygan. When you see them standing up in front of the assembly they look so bashful that you wouldn't believe they had any sight in them. But O—— come out to the games and find out.

DEBATE

Mr. North called a debate meeting Thursday after school. There are eight out for debate, and they all look to be promising. We all hope they do as well as the debate team did last year. And we are pretty sure of it seeing Mr. North is coaching them. The question is, Resolved: "Direct Primary Be Abolished."

THE CAMP FIRE GIRLS

The first meeting of the Oteyokwak Camp Fire, was held at the school September 21. Meeting was called to order by our president, Marion Smith. We sang "Burn, Fire Burn," after which new officers were elected for this year. After being elected president Lila McMillan took charge of our meeting and continued the election of officers which are as follows:

Vice-pres., Florence Smith.
Sec'y., Evelyn Seymour.
Trens., Beverly Loskot.

We voted to have our meeting once every two weeks and to collect five cents dues from each girl at each meeting. Plans were made to have a weenie roast on Monday night on Lake Michigan beach. Then the meeting was adjourned. Miss Helen Wilson, Guardian.

By Evelyn Seymour, Secretary.

"FOOTBALL"

Charlevoix will play Traverse City at Traverse this week. The team needs lots of support, so everyone try to get to the game even if it means riding a bicycle. The team will play lots better when they have your support. So let's get out and boost!

SECOND CAMP FIRE MEETING

The second meeting of the Oteyokwak camp fire was called to order by the president, Lila McMillan.

We opened the meeting by singing "Mammy Moon," our favorite campfire song. We decided we would have a weenie roast Tuesday evening, on the beach of Lake Michigan due to the fact that last week's roast was postponed because of rainy weather.

We voted to subscribe for the "American Girl" and also the "Guardian. The meeting was adjourned.

CONGREGATIONAL MEETING PERIODS CHANGED

Those With Attendance Records Banquetted Last Friday

All members of the Congregational church school who had been present ten or more Sundays during July, August and September, were banquetted last Friday evening by the Woman's Missionary Society. The average attendance of the school for the quarter was 71 and about forty qualified for the banquet.

An enjoyable program of short talks, recitations, charades, etc., was given. "Hot Weather Brigade" buttons were the souvenirs of the occasion. It takes a real effort to attend during the resort season, and many are unable to keep up their record or else drop out altogether for the summer.

The hour of meeting changed from 9:30 a. m. to 12 o'clock last Sunday which was observed as Rally Day and a pageant entitled "The Summons" was presented by the Elementary division.

The third quarter's lesson will begin next Sunday, all classes are supplied with competent teachers and the prospects are good for worthwhile religious instruction for all who avail themselves of it.

The officers and teachers are as follows: Supt., A. F. Bridge; Sec'y., Walter Alexander; Treas'r., Robert Rife; Librarian, John Burns; Pianist, Mrs. Webster; Chorister, Mrs. Stelter; Teachers, Mesdames Rife, Burns, Mattson, Kelderhouse, D. H. Wood, Bonthron, C. Wood, Saltonstall, Webster, Dean, Miss Armstrong, Mrs. VanAllsburg, Mrs. Wexstaff, Misses, Georgia Kelderhouse, Anne Jardine, LaRue Higman; primary supt., Mrs. Allen Campbell; cradle roll supt., Mrs. B. L. Harrington; religious education committee, Mesdames Cross and Mattson and Mr. Alexander.

BAPTIST CHURCH

The pastor will preach at 10:30 a. m. and at 7:00 p. m. next Sunday.

Bible School will meet at noon and the B. Y. P. U. at 6:00 p. m. Mid-week service at 7:00 p. m. on Wednesday.

The Ladies' Mission Circle is meeting today with Mrs. Henry Hamlin on Burns street.

Attention is called to the fact that all evening services begin one-half hour earlier since October 1st.

On the 16th and 23rd insts. the pulpit will occupied by Rev. W. C. Osborn of Niles, Mich. It is very important that every member hear him and the public is also invited.

The annual meeting was a delightful social occasion and the reports indicated that progress was made along all lines of church work. It will give courage for another year of service.

WALTON LEAGUE HAS PROGRAM

OUTLINE GIVEN BY PRESIDENT MICHIGAN DIVISION

League Stands Four Square For Leading Principles of Conservation and Protectioo

With the opening of the hunting season in Michigan attention is once again directed toward the interests and pleasures of the sportsmen. Some of the aims and principles for which the Izaak Walton League of America stand, have been outlined by H. A. Savage, president of the Michigan Division, as follows:

The Izaak Walton League of America is an Altrustic Organization, Pledged nnd Dedicated to the Conservation, Protection and Perpetuation of tho Big Open Spaces, Our Forests, Lakes and Streams, the Wild Life in the Forests and the Auquatic Life in Our Lakes and Streams.

The officers and directors of the League, both National and State, receive no compensation other than the satisfaction of knowing that they are rendering n service to ourselves and all others who enjoy life in the open. Your children and our children and the boys and girls that are to follow.

The League stands four square for the following principles of conservation and protection.

First—Conservation of our forests for wild animals and birds to live in.

Second—Stringent laws prohibiting the further pollution of our lakes and streams and the stopping of all present pollution as rapidly as possible.

Third—Passage-ways around or over all dnms thnt will permit the free passage of fish up or down all streams. Present so-called fish ladders are inadequate and in many instances useless.

Fourth—No further permits for the building of dams in our streams unless and until it can he clearly shown that such dams will not interfere with the free passage of fish up or down or the natural living place of fish, either above or below the dam.

Fifth—Reasonable open season for the taking of game animals, birds and fish.

Sixth—More stringent enforcement of the laws protecting wild animals, birds nnd fish during closed season.

Seventh—More strict observance of the laws pertaining to the taking of game animals, birds and fish during open seasons.

Eighth—Absolute prohibition of the use of gill nets, spears, and the setting of night lines in any of the waters of our state.

Ninth—State control or state ownership wherever possible of what there is left of marsh lands and swamps that form natural living places, nesting and breeding places for wild game animals, birds and fowl.

Tenth—An effective campaign of education along conservation and protective lines.

Eleventh—More game and more fish.

Michigan is u wonderland of lakes and streams. It is the Mecca of thousands who are seeking a cozy corner on some lake or stream to locate a summer cottage. It was once a paradise of wild game and fish. And there is quite a consideable number of each left, but there should be more. The IZAAK WALTON LEAGUE insists that there be more and with your help there will be.

On our cut-over lands where fires have not raged for a few years, nature is fust reproducing young forests which are beginning to form excellent cover for game. More care must be taken to prevent fires and the state should have a more effective system of fire prevention.

Secretary Hoover says, "thnt probably not more than 3 per cent of the young fry planted in the open waters of our lakes and streams by the State or Federal government survive long enough to reach good size fingerlings." Ninety-seven per cent wnste in our hatchery production, we must develop some method that will bring a much larger per cent of the

THE D-O-N-'-T-S FOR HUNTERS THAT ARE WORTH WHILE

DON'T rest on the muzzle of your gun.

DON'T 'hog' all the game. Leave some for the next fellow.

DON'T drag a gun under a fence with the muzzle pointed toward you.

DON'T use a cheap gun. It is apt to explode when a heavy charge is used.

DON'T rest the muzzle of your gun on the ground. A gun muzzle clogged with dirt or mud is dangerous.

DON'T climb over fences with your gun, or lean it against a tree until you get over. Put it through the fence and on the ground, business end before.

DON'T hunt with a careless companion, carelessness, with three and a quarter drams of powder, and one and one-eighth ounces of shot, is inviting death.

DON'T load your gun until you are actually ready for business. Keep your fingers off the trigger until you are looking down the barrel at your game.

DON'T get excited and shoot without making sure of your object. When you see a rabbit make sure it is clear from both the man and the dog.

DON'T violate the game laws. It is not only unsportsmanlike and criminal but may be very costly. The state may confiscate your gun and even your automobile.

REDUCTION IN OUR STATE TAXES

TAX PAYERS NOW FACE $24,500,000 LEVY FOR 1928

Budget Insludes Deficieocy Appropriation of $4,000,000—Report Filed With Governor

The prospect of paying $24,500,000 in general property taxes in 1927 faced state residents Tuesday according to the tax levy recommended by the finance committee of the state administrative board.

The report of the finance committee was filed with Gov. Fred W. Green last week just an hour before the administrative bourd was to meet formally to instruct the auditor general concerning the amount to be spread on the tax rolls of the state for the year.

Ingham county will pay $624,300.92, or approximately 2.55 per cent of the totul levy.

The state tax levy is approximately $3,000,000 less than the total amount of tax clause-bearing appropriations passed by the 1927 legislature and signed by the governor. Yet every such appropriation will be paid and honored, administration officials said.

The saving of $3,000,000 to the general tax payers of the state is brought about by two moves, one on the purt of the auditor general, O. B. Fuller and the other on the part of the finance committee of the administrative board.

The deficiency bitl, as passed by the legislature, was for approximately $5,000,000, which was the estimate, at that time, by administration forces, of the true state of the the overdraft in the general fund. The exact amount of the deficiency bill as passed, was $4,660,072.81. The actual deficiency later shown by the auditor general, was $4,014,510.72, which is $645,562.09 less than was estimated.

This was the first amount shaved from the tax levy. The second amount was deducted by the finance committee. It was $2,446,486.10, and this amount will be paid out of the proceeds of the corporation tax, fees and other sources of income other than property tax. From these sources there is an income estimated by the auditor general of $14,000,000. Non-tax clause bearing appropriations are usually paid from these funds, if there is sufficient money for that purpose.

Telephooe Company Crew To Start Work October 1st—City's Share Already Begun

Charlevoix's main business thoroughfare, Bridge street, is due for a general "overhauling" and will present a far more attractive appearance to our thousands of summer visitors when they arrive next summer.

Work has already commenced. All telephone, telegraph and electric light poles will he removed, as will also curb signs, gasoline pumping stations and any other nbstructions on the street. This includes everything from the bridge to the intersection of Bridge street and Hurlbut avenue at the top of the hill.

All wiring will be run under ground in conduits. Poles will be moved into the alley behind husiness places and wires for telephones and lights run to the rear of all buildings. The Western Union Telegraph company will run their wires through the telephone company's conduit to their office on Bridge street.

The city of Charlevoix's job will be confined to the east side of Bridge street, where a similar program will be carried out. Poles for the new boulevard street lighting system have been received and are being placed along the street. The city will start their job as soon as the conduits arrive here.

In all there will be 44 new light poles of hollow-spun, reinforced concrete and granite. They are 12 feet from the base to the top of each pole and when placed and assembled the 600 candle power globe will be 13 feet from the sidewalk. The poles will be set from 80 to 100 feet apart, according to the length of the block

DEER TAKEN TO BEAVER ISLAND

ELEVEN REMOVED FROM NEAR SAGINAW BY WARDENS

Twelve More Expected Will Make a Herd of Twenty-four On New Preserve

Eleven deer were taken from Charlevoix to Beaver Island last Friday ahoard the boat Rambler, and were given back the liberty taken from them Thursday when they were rounded up with much difficulty on the estate of Otto Schupp, Saginaw banker.

Schupp "presented" the deer to the state on the condition that the state come and get them. It seemed that the deer had been ruining the vegetation on the land and had killed a number of trees by ripping off the bark.

Three northern Michigan game wardens and a prosecuting attorney, including Ed. Deuel of Boyne City, Henry Fike of Boyne Falls, and A. L. Fitch of Charlevoix, undertook the task. The deer did not take kindly even to temporary captivity and the hunters got plenty of jolts before they were able to catch their quarry, largely with the aid of fish nets.

The deer were crated and brought to Charlevoix hy train, after which they were loaded on the Rambler for their trip across Lake Michigan to the island. There they were taken hy truck to the best cover of the island, the south end, near Fox Lake, and liberated. Wardens expect them to disappear into the thickets with lightning speed, and state that their new home provides everything n deer should need in the line of cover and food.

According to Ed. Deuel, district game warden in charge of transporting deer, twelve others are expected here soon and will also be taken to the island, which will make a total of 24 deer taken over, including the fawn brought down from the upper peninsula earlier in the summer. This gives them a fine nucleous for a herd and with proper protection and care they should thrive nnd increase rapidly.

The state is endeavuring to make the woods on the islands just west

STUDENTS TOLD TO GUARD AGAINST THESE

Six Vices Listed in Book Given Out at Madison, Wis.

The six vices of which the college student must beware are listed with comments on each in a pamphlet to be handed each student entering Wisconsin university at Madison, Wis., this fall. Dean Scott K. Goodnight is the author. The book says.

Loafing—A very pernicious habit.

Smoking—A treacherous nnd insidious habit.

Profanity—A useless, insane habit which stamps the habitue as of low and vulgar mind.

Gumbling — A facinating vice which consumes time, money und moral tissue.

Drinking—A most vicious practice which has, unfortunately, been popular among college men in recent years because of the difficulty and danger attendant on procuring liquor.

Lewdness—Nothing more speedily stamps a student in a co-educational institution as an undesirable academic citizen than lack of high regard for womanhood.

ED. D'NEIL IS BADLY BURNED

FRIEND STRUCK MATCH WHILE FILLING GAS TANK

Shower of Burning Gasoline Ignited Clothing When Excited Man Threw Hose

Edward O'Neil, owner of O'Neil's Bus and Taxi Line, was seriously burned at about 10:45 Thursday night in a peculiar and unfortunate accident which occurred when he was filling the gasoline tank on a car in front of his place of business.

Ed. had been visiting with J. A. Atkinson, of Alpena, representative of the United States Tire & Ruhber company, who was in Charlevoix on one of his regular calls, and who also was a very good friend of Mr. O'Neil's. Before leaving he wnnted the gas tank on his car filled and the two went out to the pump, Atkinson holding the hose while Mr. O'Neil turned the handle. Desiring to look at the gauge on the tnnk, Atkinson struck a match. It is thought the match broke in two pieces and the lighted end lit in the tank, for it immediately caught fire. Atkinson pulled the hose out and the flames followed the nozzle. At this point he evidently became excited and threw the hose into the air, with the result that it hit Mr. O'Neil on the shoulder, showering him with gasoline which ignited wherever it lit.

In a frenzy to put the flames out and with nothing near to smother them, Mr. O'Neil rushed down the street to the Min-Evn restaurant where his son, Louis, was eating lunch with Vane Smith. Seeing Mr. O'Neil's plight, the two boys rushed out to help him, and with much foresight, Louis took off his jacket and threw it over his father's head, smothering the flames.

Ed. was then rushed to the local hospital, where it was found he was severely burned on both sides of his fnce and down his chest. Deep burns were also inflicted on one hand and leg. Although very painful, hospital attendants stated Mr. O'Neil would recover from his injuries.

Burning gasoline on the sidewalk in the front of the taxi office set fire to the building and it was necessary to call the fire department to put out the blaze.

MICHIGAN HAS THE CLIMATE

TOPOGRAPHY AND FASCINATING WILDERNESS SETTING

Development of Winter Sports Can be Made on Bigger Scale Thao Adirondacks or Canada

Digest of address to be given by Arthur W. Stace, director, Michigan Committee on Puhlic Utility Information, before the winter sport development meeting at Cadillac, Michigan, Tuesday noon, September 27, 1927.

"Northern Michigan with its sub-Arctic snow and ice, its bracing air, its hills, its forests, its frozen lakes, its chances for ski-ing, coasting, sleighing, wilderness auto touring over open roads, fishing throught the ice, dog-sledding, and hosts of other opportunities for red-blooded fun ia ideally equipped for the development of winter sports on as large a scale ns they have attained in the Adirondacks and in Canada.

"Michigan has the climate, the topography, and the fuscinating northern wilderness setting. It has too, nearness to great centers of population. Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Toledo, Cleveland are only a night's ride away from the upper part of the lower peninsula and only slightly farther from the upper peninsula. Under the new Michigan system of snow removal, the trunk lines are kept open for winter auto travel, the highways being as clear and as smooth as in summer.

Under these conditions Michigan is in an ideal position to become a favorite winter play ground for millions of persons who wnnt a taste of boyhood fun and exhilaration.

"But Michigan to develop itself ns popular winter sports territory with the people of the cities and the warmer sections must organize itself for service to its winter guests. Each section must develop its own winter sports, providing programs of fun for personal participation and for watching that will keep visitors entertained every minute of their waking hours. It must provide comfortable hotels, good meals, and all the other of accommodations desired by city folks accustomed to all the conveniencies and luxuries of modern life. They must make the fun of the visitor easy and pleasant. The visitor should not be obliged to put up with the hardships of a pioneer life. When he goes sleighing, he should have deep body, snug sleighs, not the open body type; when he goes fishing, he should have a warm shack; when ho goes coasting or skating, he should have heated rest rooms where he can thaw out and have refreshments; on hikes he should be able to find shelters, tea rooms and the like at convenient intervnls.

"All these things northern Michigan must provide, if northern Michigan is to make itself as popular with the winter sports lovers of the cities as northern Michigan deserves to be. These it must provide, too, if it is to capitalize upon the tremenduous winter recreational resources which nature has provided—resources that with proper development promises to make northern Michigan an all-year-round playground of the nation."

STATE MOVES TO TIGHTEN ITS LAWS

Fourth Offeoders to Get Life Terms Under Changes

Criminals who have been convicted four times of committing felonies and now are in prison will become life-termers under a plan being considered by Judge Arthur D. Wood, commissioner of pardons nnd paroles.

The rommissioner has asked tho attorney general if it is possible to prosecute this plan under which such cnnvicts would be paroled to county officials nnd prosecuted as habitual criminals. Such a conviction would result in a life-term sentence.

Under the same plan, convicts now serving sentences who have been convicted of three felonies are subject to life-terms if again convicted, would be paroled to counties where charges are pending ngainst them.

Several requests for interpretation of the vnrious phases nf the habitual criminal code already have been received by the attorney general from circuit court judges.

The Congregational Ladies' Aid Society will serve their annual harvest supper October 5.—Adv. 39-tl.

Try Breakfasts that "stand by" you

Say Business Heads If Draggy Mornings Hold You Back—Quaker Oats Widely Urged

RECENT commercial investigations show that almost 70% of the day's important work in offices, stores, etc., falls into four short, before-luncheon hours. Likewise, 80% of the day's important classes in nearly every school and college in America fall, too, into the same period.

Thus breakfasts of well-balanced, complete food—food that "stands by" you through the morning—are being urged widely today by experts.

Quaker Oats, containing the excellent food balance of protein, carbohydrates, minerals, vitamine "B" and the essential laxative "bulk" of oats is ideal food for that purpose.

No other cereal grown compares in food balance. Delicious and enticing, Quaker Oats corrects the mistake of inadequate breakfast eating.

Start now with Quaker breakfasts. Note then your mornings. Grocers have Quick Quaker (cooks in 2½ to 5 minutes) and regular Quaker Oats.

Opposite Post Office — Petoskey, Michigan

"No, Soucl ees ovair de hill, nord."

"When you say Saul was at de schooner?"

Again Guthrie leaned to catch Achille's return.

The half-breed waited, spat into the fire, then said: "You hear dat?"

Etienne nodded. Now he would learn the truth from a friend who, in the old days of their comradeship, had never lied; but, in his extremity, he himself launched brazenly into outrageous fabrication. "We sen' ohl Saul to de schooner to talk wid de devil of McDonal'."

The self-possession of Achille fell from him like a leaf from a tree. "You sen' heem dere?" he demanded excitedly.

Etienne was relieved. He had pierced the armor of his friend—was at last making progress.

Amazed and delighted at the resource of his chief man and wondering where his astounding imagination would further lead him, Garth watched the changing expression on the dark features of Achille.

"Ah-hah!" casually assented Etienne. "We know dis McDonal' Ha! Ha! mak' bad medicine an' de pore Injun who go to hees bout nevaire love dere familee any more, but travel far away and leave dem to starve—"

"Ahiah! ahmah!" wailed the terrified squaw, and launched in Cree a delirious outburst of entreaty and appeal.

Achille's attempts to sooth her hysterics succeeded only in increasing the lamentations of the superstitious woman. At length she calmed to a low moaning, which was joined by the wailing of the awakened children.

Under cover of the dusk of the tipi, sinewy fingers gripped Guthrie's stockinged foot. With the skill of a sorcerer, Etienne had planted the seeds of superstitious terror in the tipi of his friend. The work of Saul and Mokoman was rapidly being undone by the shrewd Savanne. Then voices outside announced the coming of the hunters from the neighboring tipis. Crowding through the doorflap of the snow-banked tent, three Indians from the Kupiskau river entered and sat down.

The fire was freshened and briefly Achille explained the situation which had aroused the fears of his wife. With the faces of stoics the men smoked, while the story of Etienne was repeated, but when they heard that Mokoman had been brought to the island with Saul because of the witchcraft of McDonald, they, too, lost their gravity and their calm. For that this mutilated stranger should be the intimate and crony of the spirits of darkness was not beyond the credulity of the impressionable Cree. And did not Achille vouch for this Savanne, his old comrade, from Elkwan? It was true, they argued, the big man with the unspeakable face offered high prices for fox pelts, but if he were in league with devils—as he might be with that leer, which never lied—of what use would he the trade goods he bartered to those who left the ship mad with the medicine. And now that the women knew, there would be no peace. Still, Soucl would know, and tell them. They would go to Soucl, the shaman, who, camped with his sons over the big barrens to the north. So it was left; and two gratified men from Elkwan rolled into their blankets in the tipi of Achille Laguerre.

CHAPTER VIII

The stars pierced the blue dusk forerunner of the stinging dawn when a dog-team pulled out of the black spruce and dwarf tamarack rimming the headwater ponds of the Pturmigan and followed a trap-line trail up into the tundra which billowed away to the wind-whipped backbone of the island. On they hurried, the team and the wide-ranging Shot, for somewhere in the valleys of the Rabbit or the Canoe, Mokoman and the renegade Soucl were seducing the hunters from Elkwan. And Christmas was but six days away—Christmas, with teams from the three winds drifting down the valley into Elkwan for the trade and the feast at New Year's.

There was little time to be lost if they were to win the hunters of Akimiski and lead them across the strait. So the five dogs took the uphill work at a trot, while the men trailed the sled.

In the middle of the morning the men left the trap-line and breaking trail ahead of the dogs, slowly climbed the last rise of the barrens. In places the lack of snow on the brittle heath made the work of the dogs heart-breaking. While the flat toboggan slid over the frozen tundra, the huskies, seeking a footing, constantly broke through. Shortly, their bleeding feet forced a stop while moccasins were lashed to their legs. But at last, panting dogs and men stood on the roof of the island.

Through the glasses Garth made out the white delta of the Elkwan, and his thoughts drifted to two women who had once shared his quarters there—two women who did not shrink at scars.

But it was bitter cold on the open ridge and the dog-team turned down, seeking the valley of the Rabbit, masked by intervening hills. Over the tundra the snowshoes packed the trail for the sliding toboggan, while the dogs ran, where the hard snow on the heath gave them footing, and slaved, where they broke through the low bushes of the brushed barren when they threw their weight into their collars.

As the day advanced, the frost strengthened. A veil of haze slowly curtained the low-swinging sun, and the dog-team hurried on, for the night would fall in early afternoon, and to be caught on the high tundra by a wind meant swift freezing.

Still before them the endless hill lifted to the horizon with no indication of the break of a low valley where timber would give them shelter and a cooking fire. At noon it was evident that Etienne was worried. Never before had Garth seen his head man use the whip on his dogs as he used it that day; never in their journeys had the fur-lined hood, circled with ice and rime, turned so often while the slit-like eyes of the half-breed consulted the horizon.

"Beek blow comin', Mooch anow, she full soon."

"It can't be far now," said Garth. "We've surely made the twenty miles. The Rabbit must head over that hill."

"Eef we don't get off dees high countree before de win' blow, we nevaire get off," was the quiet rejoinder.

"It's colder, already." And Garth took in the belt of his parka.

"De dog weel not travel mooch more. Dere feet are cut to pieces on dis frozen bush."

On up the next ascent the limping dogs, with breath trailing behind like ribbons of smoke, followed the trail breakers. Gaining the backbone of the ridge, the men stood with startled eyes looking north. Instead of the wide basin of the Rabbit headwaters with its scrub-fringed lakes, they looked across a treeless barren.

The grave eyes of Etienne met Garth's puzzled look.

"Those Indians lied."

"No," objected the half-breed. "We travel ver' slow. Eeet ees ovair dere." And he pointed to the far ridge.

"It will be dark when we hit it."

"One hour more light and de win' rise," muttered Savanne as he patted Castor, who lay at his feet, his steaming red tongue hanging from a mouth hung with ice. "You ver' tired, Castor? You mak dat ridge?"

The powerful leader got to his sore feet and whined as if he understood, but the listless team lay sprawled on the trail.

"It's come," announced Garth, as a curtain of snow drifted in from the northeast.

"We go! Up, mes enfants! Allons! Marche, Castor!"

An hour later, five dogs sheathed in white, plodding slowly behind two ghostlike shapes, reached the rim of the basin of the Rabbit headwaters. Dimly below them, through the pall of snow and gathering dusk, the men traced the scrub edging the lakes with shadow. As they stood in the rising wind as the dogs rested, night shut down, wiping from their eyes the goal they sought, as a sponge wipes clean a slate.

"I've got the compass direction, north, northwest," said Garth.

Etienne shook his snow-crusted hood. "Keep de win' on right cheek. So long cheek froze, we land right for de timber." He turned to the dogs, white as the snow they lay on. "Marche, Castor, mon brave!" And snapping his whip, he tugged at the harnesses until the reluctant brutes got to their feet.

Facing the drive of the wind, the team fought its way slowly down over the frozen tundra. With night the frost stiffened, and the needle-pointed barrage of snow crystals stung the faces of men and dogs like the lash of myriad whips. Heads down to avoid the agony, men and dogs swung away from the thrust of the wind, until the half-breed, straightening again, felt the bleat of the blizzard on his right cheek, and changed their course.

Often, unable to face the burst of edged torment on their noses, the dogs lay down, backs to the drive, refusing to move. Then, Garth and Etienne, lifting them to their feet, dragged the team and sled until the huskies again leaned into their collars. Blindly into the murk wailing them in plunged the tireless half-breed, leading the way to the shelter of the far timber and food. With face frostbitten from exposure in feeling for direction, hands numb from untangling with mittenless fingers the frozen harness of the dogs, Etienne plunged down the sloping tundra. His face buried in his hood and constantly fighting to save his numbing fingers, Garth followed. There flushed through his mind tales told at the post of Crees caught, as they were, on the high barrens, and found stiff in the snow. But, as he doubled against the drive of the blizzard, blinded, unable to see the man ahead; often swinging off the trail while, holding true, the canny lead-dog passed him with the team, Garth Guthrie never doubted that they would win to the timber and shelter.

Two grinding hours of slavery on lacerated feet into the pin-poluted fury, and turning in their harness, the spent dogs lay down, refusing to move. Numb to threats or urging, the heart-broken huskies, crusted with ice, had made their choice. Rather than the torture which flayed their faces, they would lie, backs to the barrage, while the withering wind slowly stiffened them to ice.

There was nothing the men could do. The dogs were done.

"I turn dem loose. We hunt da timber," Etienne shouted into Garth's hood. With his knife he slashed the dogs from their frozen harness, but the huskies lay while the snow beat over them, refusing their freedom. Shot, white-coated from nose to tail, gingerly muzzled the motionless

Always Stiff and Achy?

Too Often This Warns of Sluggish Kidney Action.

LAME? Stiff? Achy? Sure your kidneys are working right? Sluggish kidneys allow waste poisons to remain in the blood and are apt to make one languid, tired and achy, with often dull headaches, dizziness and nagging backache. That the kidneys are not acting right is often shown by scanty or burning secretions. If you have reason to believe your kidneys are acting sluggishly, use Doan's Pills. Doan's stimulate the kidneys and thus assist in eliminating waste impurities. Users everywhere endorse Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

SELLING THEMSELVES CHEAP

The other dny wa saw a man beating a bill. He owed something over four dollars and deliberately refused to pay It. The amount was too small for the creditor to use. In looking over the list to put out by n collecting agency we find there are hundreds of people in this community who owe small nmounts that they could pay and do not.

Call any one of these bill beaters a liar and he will fight. Tell him he is a crook and you insult the honor of his family. Call him a man without character and you make an enemy for life.

Yet there hundreds of people in any county or large city who will sell their repntntion, which is the public conception of character, for a five dollar bill or less. It would surprise you how many there are who would deny reflection on their honor and yet sell their reputation for honesty for a few dollars.

Money is not the yardstick by which men should be measured. Sometimes it is. The man who beats a bill, who cheats for the sake of a few dollars, is the man who is too small to be trusted with anything beyond a few dollars.

Some people have no respect for themselves.

THE HAPPY MEDIUM

First of all, we must observe that in nll these matters of human action and the too little and the too much are alike ruinous, as we can see (to illustrate the spiritual by the natural) in matters of strength nnd health. Too much and too little exercise alike impair the strength, and too much meat and drink and too little both nlike destroy the health, but the fitting amount produces and preserves them. So, too, the man who takes his fill of every pleasure and abstains from none becomes a profligate; while he who shuns all becomes stalid and insusceptible.—Aristotle.

An American girl drops a message in the sea that she is being detained as a captive aboard a rum ship. We know a lot of boys who wouldn't consider that any hardship.

HIS INFLUENCE WAS SHORT LIVED

Conservation Ideas of Curwood Now Being Ignored

There is no question about the influence of James Oliver Curwood, late state conservation commissioner being short lived and after the pugnacious writer and dreamer laid down his work, because at the first meeting of his board after he hnd "passed in his checks" that body set about to undo most of the things he had apparently forced upon them, and we look for still greater changes to be brought about the more hard headed business practices replace theory and visionary whims.

The rescinding of the anti-spearing law pnssed hy the last legislature, applying to lakes and streams in the southern part of the state is not a commendable move on the part of the new conservation commission from our point of view. We realize the agricultural element in southern Michigan think it is the farmer's inalienable right to go into his pet stream or lake and catch fish to his heart's content with spear, regardless of the destruction wrought the sport of fishing by that means, and it will require a long period of years and the almost depletion of those lakes and streams of the finny tribe before those people will come to see that their lakes are the great magnets that are bringing so much new money and new business into our state every year, and unless they are stocked with fish their pulling powers are reduced to a great degree. We believe they would have been serving Michigan better had they closed all lakes and streams to the bloody spear. We are pleased they have put the rabbit senson back to its old period instead of shortening it in the upper peninsuln. The great pressure brought to benr by fur denlers have caused them to renig somewhat on preventing catching of rnts and we anticipate the rat cntchers will be nllowed certain times of the year they can ply their trade again, whether the rat species is depleted to only those enclosed in rat farms or exhibition.

RUNNING TO FIRES WILL BE CURTAILED

Unlawful to Park Within a Block of Scene of Blaze

Inasmuch as the general public has the habit of jumping into automobiles and any kind of conveyances that will hurry them to a fire every time the nlarm is sounded it might be advisable to become familiar with some very drastic provision that will be found in the new speed laws which went into effect in our state September 5.

"On the approach of fire or police department vehicles thnt nre giving an audible warning by means of whistle, siren or bell, all other vehicles shall move to the right hand edge of the road nnd stop and remnin standing until such police or fire department vehicle shall have passed.

"No vehicle shall follow fire apparatus within 500 feet when such apparatus is going to a fire.

"No vehicle shnll be driven or parked within one block of where the fire apparatus has stopped in answer to nn alarm of fire.

Under the traffic code passed by the 1927 legislature, the following equipment is either required or prohibited:

"No vehicle except fire and police department vehicles and ambulances may be equipped with a bell, siren or exhause whistle."

The penalty for the first offense is a fine of not less than $25 for the violation of any of the above provisions.

LOCALS TIED BOYNE CITY LAST SATURDAY

Seventy-five Yard Run By Marshall Featured Game

Taking advantage of the opportunities that availed themselves, Charlevoix's Red and White football team, held Boyne City to a 6-6 tie at Boyne City last Saturday afternoon in the opening game of the season for the local squad. Although Boyne was the aggressor throughout the encounter, they could not muster drive enough at crucinl moments to put the ball across for a touchdown.

Charlevoix's lone touchdown came early in the second half after the first two qunrters had ended with neither team counting. Marshall, right half, made the counter on a beautiful 75-yard run after catching Boyne's punt on his own 25-ynrd line. This run featured the game, which was otherwise marred by many fumbles. Beaudoin failed to kick goal for the extra point.

Boyne also scored in the third quarter on a beautiful end run by VanHoesen, left tackle. The try for goal missed. This ended the scoring for both sides, and although Boyne was within scoring distance on two occasions in the fourth quarter, they were unable to put the ball across.

Capt. Bleha, Swartout and Novak proved the best lineman on Charlevoix's squad, while Williams and Beaudoin carried the heavy part of the ball-toting locals. The team as a whole showed up far better than last year's squad and with hard practice will give a good account of themselves in future games. The team goes to Cheboygan Saturday for their next encounter.

The Coming of Lake Charlevoix

* * * * * * * * * *

Oh! Beautiful Lnke Charlevoix;
Thou sure was not to blame
That a bunch of public spirited men
Saw fit to chnnge thy name.

Of our long beloved Pine Lake
Once spanned by the Indians' canoe;
Now traversed by sail and motor boat
O'er the same water so blue.

And we are going to love thee
As though it had not been done.
We'll bathe and boat, and swim and float
Through spring rains and summer sun.

We'll love thee in the morning,
When the sun reflects its rays.
Into the quiet water clear
In the balmy summer days.

But thou are lovliest in the evening
With the moon beams falling nslant,
Over the rippling wavelets
Our very souls to enchant.

Thy silent depths are just as blue
Thy shallows just the same;
There's the same dreaded channel bank
We must not forget its gnme.

For we'll find Thee just as cruel
As our old beloved Pine Lake.
Of the careless and unfortunnte
The same as she, thy toll thou'lt take.

SAVE YOUR CORN FROM THE FROST

FARMERS IN TRENCH WAR TO SAVE VALUABLE CROP

Dig "Pit Silos" to Avert Loss—Fear 25 Per Cent of Northern Crop Will Suffer

Farmers, armed with shovels and scrapers, are digging trenches and pits to save this fall's corn crop. In the midst of the terrific torrid wave which recently swept the country they started to prepare for the usual frost invasion, which farmers predict will capture 25 per cent of the northern crop by October 15th, unless it is protected from the inroads of Jack Frost.

It is estimated that only 25 per cent of the corn north of a line drawn from north west Oklahoma to Philadelphia will ripen before October 15th—the average date of the first killing frosts in autumn. If frost catches 25 per cent unripened corn crop, millions of dollars will be lost, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute of Chicago, which declares this will happen in a frost invasion, unless silos, pits or trenches are provided to store that part of the crop which cannot be harvested or ripened as ear corn. It would be impossible to make enough "above ground" silos before October to hold all the unripened crop, if 25 per cent is caught by killing frost, the institute says.

A silo for use in this emergency is a circular, well shaped, plastered hole in the ground 15 to 20 feet deep and 12 feet in diameter. A trench silo is an excavated trench not unlike a root cellar, with the walls sloping outward to prevent caving in. Either style is not as good as a wooden, concrete or cement block silo built above the ground, but the below ground type is inexpensive and easy to fill and will preserve either the entire green corn bundles as they are hauled from the field or the green corn in silage, according to the institute.

It the soil is clay and clay deep enough, a satisfactory pit silo can be built, but first a test should be made for deep sand veins and water. If ground water is struck, give up the pit idea and make a trench silo. The problem of hoisting out silage does not seem to bother the farmers who have already built these silos. Many use a windlass and heave up good sized loads. Others use a simple pulley and raise small amounts at a time. The populnr depth of the pit silo is 20 feet, and the dinmeter 12 feet.

To huild a pit silo a circle 12 feet in diameter is marked off and the space within this area is dug out to a depth of about eight inches. Then, a concrete collar is made within the circle to form a strong collar for the top of the pit by mixing one part cement, 2½ parts sand and 4 parts pebbles or crushed rock. When this collar is set firmly the digging is continued to a depth of five feet below the collar. Five feet is about as high as it is convenient to reach for plastering. Before plastering, wet down the dirt walls by throwing water on with a brush or broom. Next the top of the collar is put on. A wooden collar can be built high enough to keep children and live stock from tumbling into the pit and to keep surface water from running into the silo and to allow silage to be piled higher for settling. When the second plaster coat is set up, and just before it drys off, apply a coat of cement. This done, another five foot depth can be spnded. This section is plastered in the same way as the first, and so on down.

A trench silo is different—14 feet wide nt the top and 10 feet wide at the bottom; seven feet deep from the ground level nnd built up another foot in height with a one foot fill atop the ground level. This type does not preserve the silage as well as a pit silo, but it offers storage space for the farmer at low cost. A hillside makes an excellent location. The trench has many advantages, however:

1. Labor is the only necessary cost.
2. It can be built immediately—without waiting for material to be shipped and hauled to a farm.
3. It can be located in any place where a house basement could be dug—any place with sufficient drainage.
4. It is the simplest form of construction.
5. It can be built any size necessary.
6. It is easily filled. Man, beast or tractor can do the packing.
7. It will preserve silage in cold and warm climate without spoiling, if thoroughly packed down and then covered with straw and boards.
8. It can be built, filled and used without cash outlay for material.
9. It cannot blow down or burn.
10. If the walls are scraped down and trimmed each year, it will last for as many as seven to ten years.

If the farmer hasn't a commercial silo—the "above ground" kind—or cannot afford one, then let him have silage stored away in some kind of a hole or stack for next year's feeding, anyway, says the institute. An acre of corn silage is equal to one and a half acres fed from the shock. That alone should persuade the farmer to make preparations for the invasion of Jack Frost.

WALTON LEAGUE HAS PROGRAM

fry to mature size or fishing will very quickly become a memory only.

Automobiles and good roads are constantly making the once far away open spaces easily accessible. Where a few years ago there were hundreds of people hunting and fishing, there are now thousands. We should not prevent any from enjoying the privileges and pleasures of outdoor life and in order not to prevent we must find ways and means to rapidly multiply the number of both fish and game.

The Izaak Walton League of America was organized five years ago in the city of Chicago. Its first and original membership numbered forty-eight, its membership now numbers nearly 200,000. The originators of the League were all men who loved to wander out in the open spaces where they could commune with nature. Year after year through eyes filled with sorrow and regrets those men could see nature's beauty spots fast disappearing. They could see our game animals and game birds becoming less and less each year, largely on account of the wanton and un-necessary destruction of their living, nesting and breeding places. They could see that private individuals and corporations, our states, cities, and villages, all emulating the characteristics of the American people to go along lines of least resistance, were rapidly turning our lakes and streams into big open sewers, thereby polluting the waters to such an extent that only such auquatic life as that which basks in filth could live in them. The waters of our rivers through the pollution and poison that is being dumped into them have become a menace to the health of our people. Cities and villages have been compelled to establish artificial swimming and bathing pools for our boys and girls, chiefly because we had poisoned and polluted the pools nature had provided for us.

The League is a National organization with the state divisions nll united back of the movements to save and perpetuate the joys and pleasures that nature bequeathed us out in the open spaces. The Michigan division is one of the units of netivity. Many local organizations working independently could not accomplish much, but all working under one general head, we can and are accomplishing wonders.

shapes. Castor, alone, resented the act by a feeble snap. Lifting their heads, and shaking them, Garth in turn called their names, but the numbness of the white death already was in their blood. Gently he lifted Castor to his feet, but the leader sank limply to the snow.

"Good-by, boys!" he called to the white shapes by the sled. "You gave us all you had. Good-by!"

"Dey vee! freeze in ten minute—nevair feel eet now," shouted Etienne, his voice breaking as he turned from a last word with his favorite Castor.

Shelter and fire! All thought of the food frozen under the sled cover had left them. The windbreak of the spruce meant fire, warmth, life—but how far was the timber? With the ax from the sled the two men started. Shot at their heels. A hundred yards and Etienne stumbled, stopped—while Garth lunged into him.

The man on his knees turned to the other. "De spruce—eet ees here!" His snowshoes had fouled a dwarf spruce on the edge of the timber. Swiftly now they plunged ahead, seeking the heavier growth. In a hundred yards they were in thick bush.

While Guthrie scraped out a fire-hole with a snowshoe, Etienne gathered dry spruce twigs and started a fire; then slashed down saplings and soon had a comforting heat in the snow-hole behind the wind-break.

With the Warmth the Men Rubbed the Circulation Into Numbed Hands and Faces.

With the warmth the men rubbed the circulation into numbed hands and faces. But out on the tundra in the drive of the blizzard, lay five loyal friends, stiffening under the drift.

Leaving the fire Garth and Etienne started to backtrack to the sled. Guthrie, with Shot alternately plunging ahead and returning to find his master, had gone but a short distance into the blackness with its choking hail of fine snow, when he found that he had drifted away from the half-breed. Too dark to locate tracks in the snow which filled at once with drift, he kept on with the wind on his left shoulder. Suddenly he missed Shot. He stopped and shouted, hoping the dog was near, but the already dead, was he? or had left him. Why?

Continuing down wind, counting his paces, at last Guthrie knew that he had passed the sled in the blind mark, so circled. Etienne had said the dogs would freeze in ten minutes—and he had missed them; lost the chance to save the huskies who had given him their all that grim December day—. Then a white body shouldered into his legs—Shot!

"Where did you go?" he shouted into the dog's ear. But the excited beast left him to plunge into the storm—then returned to seize Garth's mittened hand.

Following the dog for a space he stumbled against a mound in the snow—the sled! He groped for the heaps that marked the frozen dogs, but in vain. They were gone, Etienne? He had got them up into the spruce.

In his joy Garth knelt and hugged the ice-sheeted body of the great airedale whose tongue found his master's face.

Superlatives Inadequate Describing "Metropolis"

"Metropolis" Paramount's cinemericale, reaches the Palace Theatre next Saturday and Sunday. Here is The New York American's review.

The German motion picture again scores with "Metropolis" at the Rialto. Colossal of sets, fantastic of theme and exquisite of photography, this latest offering from the UFA Studios, which was two years in the making, tops any film we have thus far imported from Berlin, the mecca of the movie angles.

Even superlatives seem inadequate to describe the originality of the story, which deals with the problems of the visioned "Metropolis," the city where once man made machinery and now machinery makes man. The story is reminiscent of "R. U. R.," a romance of Robots, which graced our speaking stage several seasons ago.

"Held By the Law" Gripping Mystery Coming to Palace

All the sadness and tragedy of a great prison, and the horror of an execution are shown with striking dramatic effect in "Held By the Law" by Edward Laemmle which comes Friday to the screen at the Palace Theatre.

The climax of this fascinating mystery melodrama takes place within the prison walls, and as a proper setting for the sequence, a large portion of the enterior of Sing Sing prison was reproduced with painstaking fidelity at Universal City.

Featured Player in 'Marriage Clause' Recalls World's First Comedy

"Ever since the serpent went out of his way in the entertainment has been a serious one," said Warner Garden of Eden to do his stuff for Eve, the business of Oland, famous character actor, during the course of a banquet tendered him by the California League of Little Theatres.

"From time immemorial, kings and rulers have had their own exclusive jesters, buffoons and harlequins," Oland continued. "Traveling troubadours and wandering minstrels have been made famous in song and story. Through every vicissitude the entertainer has emerged triumphant.

Oland has had considerable stage experience and he appears on the stage again, although this time in a motion picture. It is "The Marriage Clause," a Universal-Jewell, starting Wednesday and Thursday, at the Palace Theatre. The photoplay was adopted by Lois Weber, who also directed it, from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Technic," by Dana Burnett.

CHURCH OF GOD

The most strenuous period in the business life of Charlevoix for the year being past, and as we do not intend to let any time or opportunity slip by unimproved, we are able now to put forth more special efforts in the work of the Lord.

Seeing the "Whiteness of the Harvest," and feeling the "push" of the "greatest things in the world," we take this opportunity and means of announcing to the people of this vicinity that there is "something doing" at the little Stone Chapel on west Hurlbut avenue.

All the regular services are on the increase and we expect to begin a revival meeting Oct. 2.

Wednesday, October 5th, will be a Sunday school convention of northern Michigan. A very interesting and helpful program has been planned for all day. Some able speakers will take part and those not present will miss something good.

Meetings every evening after October 2nd. Good preaching, singing and something of interest to everyone.

All are invited and cordially welcomed.

An Open Letter to the Editor

From the President of General Motors

LAST SPRING I wrote you that my belief in the country newspaper had led us in General Motors to decide to advertise our products together in the small-city press of the country.

The returns from the series of the messages recently published have justified that faith; and we shall continue to advertise in your community through your newspaper this fall.

It occurs to me, however, that some of your readers may be asking: "What is General Motors?" and "Why is General Motors?" These are fair questions and I should like to answer them as frankly as I can.

General Motors was organized some years ago on the theory that a group of large companies, working together, could render a better service than they could separately. In this we simply applied to industry a principle that is as old as civilization as regards the human family and human progress.

Original members of the General Motors family were Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Oakland and Oldsmobile, together with the Delco-Light Company and other well-known companies manufacturing automotive equipment. By joining together their resources, we were able to establish great Research Laboratories, a 1245-acre Proving Ground and the GMAC Plan of credit purchase; to effect vast economies in purchase and manufacture and distribution; to assure and maintain the quality of every product in the General Motors family.

Has the General Motors family principle proved itself in practice?

The best answer, I think, is to compare the Chevrolet, Buick, Cadillac, Oldsmobile and Oakland of today with the models of five or ten years ago.

Then add Pontiac, a General Motors creation. Add LaSalle, another General Motors creation. And then consider how General Motors has developed these cars into a complete line, within which any family may find a suitable quality car at the price it plans to pay: "A Car for Every Purse and Purpose."

Another example is Frigidaire, the electric refrigerator. General Motors had the resources to spend millions to develop a satisfactory refrigerator, and then to apply to its manufacture the same processes which have increased the utility and lowered the cost of the automobile.

We believe that this record justifies General Motors as an economic institution. Its products are quality products, first of all. Their prices represent the economies of united effort passed on to the purchaser. In the last year one in each three automobiles chosen by the public has been a General Motors car. The service of Delco-Light electric plants has extended to more than a quarter million homes, while Frigidaire has become the world's largest selling convenience of its kind.

We believe also that the values now offered in the current General Motors products (which are listed below) prove anew that "many minds are better than one" and that a family of companies, working together, can produce results which are decidedly in the public interest and of increasing benefit to the individual family.

Very truly yours,

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President

METHODIST PASTOR TAKES OVER PULPIT

Rev. John E. Lockyer and Family Arrived Here Saturday

Arriving in Charlevoix last Saturday evening, from South Lyon, Oakland county, in the Detroit conference, Rev. John E. Lockyer, newly appointed pastor of the First Methodist church, preached his first sermon here last Sunday.

Mr. Lockyer is an Englishman by birth and began preaching in that country in 1909. He came to America in 1911. He holds a Bachelor of Arts degree for DePauw university, Greencastle, Indiana, and a Bachelor of Divinity for Garrett Biblical Institute at Northwestern university, Evanston, Illinois.

He went from DePauw university into the United States army as a private and graduated later as 1st Lt. Chaplain from Camp Taylor chaplain's training school at Louisville, Ky. He served during Centenary campaign of the Methodist church in the Rocky Mountain states as field secretary of Methodist Minute Men under the direction of Dr. Christian F. Reisner of New York City.

Mrs. Lockyer is also English born and is professionally a hospital nurse. She nursed Canadian soldiers for a time on Salisbury Plains, England. There are three children in the family.

Charlevoix extends a cordially welcome to Rev. Lockyer and his family.

DOINGS AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

TWO SERIOUS ACCIDENTS AT CENTRAL LAKE

Boy Fires Air Rifle at Passing Car in Spirit of Anger—Heavy Grain Traffic

A Ford car, driven by Victor Robinson, ran into a large Cadillac sedan owned by Howard Nelson of Cleveland, Ohio, which was parked on Main street in front of the W. L. Darling grocery store, last Saturday night.

The Ford struck the rear of the big car and pushed it upon the walk. Very little damage was done to the Cadillac but the speeding car was somewhat damaged. According to eye witnesses the Ford was going at a good clip.

A great deal of speeding has been noticed by local citizens of late and it would be a good thing if those in authority should see to it that the traffic laws are enforced.—Central Lake Torch.

On Friday night a car driven by Harris Sage ran into the drinking fountain on Main street and damaged it to the extent that it took Joe Blakely a day in building a solid foundation around it.

The car came down Maple street, struck the sidewalk and ran into it. Several local citizens, including two members of the village council, claimed to have seen it.—Central Lake Torch.

The country club at Cadillac has just been valued at $30,000 and plans started for much improving during the autumn and next spring. A special drive for new members is now on and additional stock is being sold. The membership fee to be advanced to $75 in November, the closing month of the drive.—Cadillac News.

Because a passing automobile raised a cloud of dust, Raymond Gariepy, age 11 years, of the Soo fired his air rifle at Merlin Hewitt, the shot hitting the latter near the right eye and burying itself into the skin. Gariepy has been turned over to the juvenile court at the Soo. He has confessed he fired the shot in a fit of anger.—Soo News.

The Cadillac city council has acted favorably on a request of the Cadillac Winter Sports club that ski jumps, skating rinks and toboggan slides be allowed on city park property. The club has completed plans for these three sports and will furnish money for the building of the the equipment, the city furnishing tools for the work and the land.—Petoskey Evening News.

Grain movement is still too negligible to make any noticeable effect on the freight traffic through the locks of the St. Mary's Falls Canal. Sunday 66 steamers passed through the locks, 29 up and 37 down, carrying 417,128 tons of freight. Saturday 73 steamers, 31 up and 42 down, carried 397,056 tons of freight. From midnight until 10:00 September 21 19 steamers passed, 9 up and 10 down. Heavy rains September 21 followed by crisp weather brought an end to all evils, smoke and fog, on St. Mary's River. Forest fires were put out while temperature of the air and the temperature of the water became equal or nearly so, thus ending the formation of fog. —Soo Evening News.

BURNS FATAL TO MRS. F. EVERTS

Deceased Clarion Woman Well Known in Charlevoix

Mrs. Julia Esther Younce Everts, wife of Floyd Everts, died Thursday from burns received last Sunday evening in an explosion at her home, 912 Baxter street, Petoskey. She was endeavoring to kindle the fire in her kitchen range, using kerosene. There was a blinding flash and the woman's clothing was set on fire. Her body was badly scorched. For a time it was believed she would recover, but the injury proved too severe for her to overcome.

Mrs. Everts was born March 9, 1902, at Clarion, and married Mr. Everts May 31, 1923. Surviving besides the husband are two children, Beryl, aged 3, and Eunice, aged 1; her mother, Mrs. Lula B. Younce; a sister, Mrs. Laura Young, and a brother, Lucius Younce, Clarion.

The funeral was held Monday from the Clarion Methodist church with Rev. G. C. Guilliat, pastor of the Petoskey Mennonite church, in charge.

WELSH-FINUCAN MARRIAGE LAST SATURDAY

Couple Leave Next Week To Spend Winter In the East

It is with the greatest of pleasure that we announce the marriage of Miss Mary Finucan and Dan Welsh, which took place at 6 o'clock Saturday morning, September 24th, at St. Mary's church.

Surrounded by relatives and close friends, the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Fr. Odelo. Mrs. Robert Morse, Jr., sister of the bride, acted as bride's maid and John Hallett as best man. Following the ceremony at the church the wedding party went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Gaskin, where the hostess served a very delightful four-course wedding breakfast.

The newly married couple need no introduction to Charlevoix people. Mrs. Welsh's genial countenance and sunny disposition has graced the local post office for the past 10 years and has won her a multitude of friends. Mr. Welsh employed as secretary at The Inn and has been coming to Charlevoix for over 12 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Welsh expect to leave Charlevoix for the east some time next week. They will visit at the home of Mrs. B. W. Edwards at Buffalo, N. Y., and also Mr. Welsh's sister at Cambridge, Mass., before going to Southern Pines, N. C., where they will spend the winter. The Courier extends them the heartiest congratulations.

Dr. Leahy the Optometrist, will be here again Monday, October 3. Call early as he will be here but one day. —Adv. 38-t2.

 OF INTEREST TO FARMERS ***
By B. C. Mellencamp

As a result of the favorable comment occasioned on the last visit of Mr. Gregg, and the many requests for more information in beautifying the farm and city homes, we are pleased to announce that a series of three meetings will be conducted on the 4th and 5th of October by O. I. Gregg, specialist in landscape architecture of M. S. C.

The first meeting will be held at Charlevoix on Tuesday afternoon, October 4th, at 2:00 slow time, in the court house; the second at East Jordan, on Tuesday evening, October 4th, at 7:30 slow time, in the high school auditorium; and the third at Boyne City on Wednesday afternoon, October 5th, at 2:00 fast time in the basement of the library.

All home owners are always interested in making their homes as pleasant and attractive as possible and yet hesitate to make the start, many times feeling they do not exactly know how to tackle the problem, then again not knowing what flowers, plants and shrubs to use, and thirdly anticipating that the cost will be excessive.

Mr. Gregg in his discussion will give you such a complete and yet simple plan to follow you will wonder why they have not made your home more attractive long ago. Many excellent shrubs and bushes grow in our swamps and make beautiful additions to the home surroundings, and yet are never used. The cost is small and beautiful surroundings will make happier days.

Remember the entire public, both rural and city are cordially invited to attend these meetings and receive the fundamentals of home beautifying from an expert who has had wide experience.

BAPTIST CHURCH

The Ladies Aid is meeting today at the pastor's home on Hurlbut avenue.

The Sunday services will be as usual except that after October 1st, all evening services will begin one half hour earlier.

The pastor will speak in the Eastport school house at 2:30 p. m.

A cordial welcome to all who come.

Attended G. A. R. Encampment

Mrs. Harris Pierce of Norwood, entertained her sister, Mrs. Etta Slick of Superior, Wisconsin, last week. Mrs. Slick came here from Grand Rapids, where she had been attending the National G. A. R. Encampment as national delegate for the auxillary of Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War from Superior, and as past commander of the National Daughters of the G. A. R. She also visited her brother, Frank D. Brown of Charlevoix route 4.

Card of Thanks

We, the bereaved loved ones of Mrs. Julia Everts, wish to thank the church, neighbors and many friends for their deeds and words of sympathy and their many beautiful floral offerings in our recent bereavement.
